We are tearing down the hall; we collide with two innocents rounding the corner, and leave them stiff and thoroughly frightened clinging to the bulletin board; we then do a nasty conga through the package line, forward line, and returning line. We DO make the door marked "Out"; so, we dash in, elbow our busy little old selves almost to our box when—wham!!! Oh, well, we're peaceable creatures, our left eye can still be used in place of our former two. Diving into the midst of chaos (did it hurt?) our right arm is slowly moving in for the Bill, while our left arm plays defense. It won't be long now; those three girls in front don't suspect we plan to "circle the ends and plow through the line." (We are only HOPING we have some mail, as our visibility has been ceiling zero) Success ! ! ! the plan worked, we . . . whoof! . . . "excuse me!" "Oh, sure!" (the last in icy tones, because who looks attractive flattened against the mail boxes) With snake-like movements we draw our treasure back to our waiting arms—wait, we're ahead of ourselves, that was just a loose post Pushing hard, we take thumb and fore finger, and gingerly twist the dial L-7-R-4 . . . ha, ha, (grrrr) Well, whaddya know? It doesn't open! Arrghduff!! Try again. Oh, yes, yes, L-7-R-2, that's what we said before, didn't we? (stickingly sweet voice) The tiny door swings outward; we put in our hand and ummm, we love life—six letters What a haul -u-cough, we mean, "why how NICE!" Let's guess who they're from. One from Martha; one from Don; one from Patsy; one from Don; one from the jerk—oh—boy in Texas; one from Don; one from the cute boy we met on the train. Now let's see, this one's from—pardon, for our roommate, this one's for our roommate; this one IS from the character in God's Country; this one's for our roommate; this is from the Dean; this one is from—eeekk! Don!!! Life is worth living again, he came through Oh, happy day. We don't even feel the blows, nor acknowledge the pardons as we float out the door marked "IN".

Basketball Won By Sophs, Seniors

Final Games Played This Week

The final games for the round-robin tournament in basketball were played Monday and Tuesday March 12 and 13. The Sophomores and Juniors compted Monday afternoon with the Sophomores coming out with a lead of 29 to 19 as final score.

Gallopin' Gunshot! Where does the time go? Before we know it, it's March, and now before we know it, March is half gone. The weather improves with age, though, so you don't find us complaining about how times flies.

SCOOPS!

You wanted news, you're gonna get it. It seems some of our worthy jocks feel slighted at the lack of mention, so we supersnooped with vengeance this week and hereby pass the results on to you.

First, let's relieve the mind of Mole. Joyce doesn't have a mad on . . . we're SUPPOSED to report to the infirmary If and when we ever fall off! Cinnamon merely took a fast corner a little too sharply, and Mole couldn't keep up. No harm done past a swollen ankle, and we're sure Mrs. Packer fixed that up in no time.

A little late, but ever news, B. Bibb's man, John-Willlam, took off on the Colonel one day last week, and had a fine time . . . we hope. What these wonderful males won't do to be faithful! Don't think we don't appreciate it, though, fellas . . .any ol' time!

Snowball proved his worth lately, too . . . with Jodie and Joyce doubling on him for a nice long ride. Jodie was a bit stiff the next day . . . no one asked Snowball how he felt. Just in passing, Sudie thinks it should be SLOW-ball!! And while he's making news we might add that the old fellow tried a jump or two, just for excitement, with Jean Sauerwen up and doing the urging. He jumped but he didn't like it. Looked rather as if it hurt his pride, we understand, but at least he cleared the poles. After all, you can't tea h an old dog new tricks; why impose upon a hoss?

ACROBATIC ANGLE

Shirley Gibson and the Colonel pulled a fast one, too . . . involving not only the nice jumping Colonel did, but the trick riding Shirley tried, practically standing on her head in the saddle. It was like a still print of an action shot . . . with no ill effects.

Vocal acrobatic honors go to Gwen Ackiss. Each time her mount of the moment breaks into anything faster than a trot (canter, gallop, or buck!), she in turn breaks into a howl of glee that sends anyone else along off into the famed stilches which usually ac ompany violent mirth. No screech of fear is that warwhoop! She really enjoys the unexpected. Hang on, Gwen, we're right behind you!

Anna Stuart and Gypsy had it out the other day. Anna was practicing up on her forward seat, with results that happened so fast that even Joyce didn't see 'em. And speaking of fast happenings . . . who wants a steeple chase when we can have a race like they had last week? With Sue Steele, B. Bibb, and Gwen flying around in circles, Jodie and Shirley and Joyce holding fire from jumping, and a mad dash to see who could out-gallop who . . . that's all the excitement we need for one day. We don't know who the odds were on, but that's all right; we don't know who won the race, either!

TID-BITS

We're still full of news, of lesser value, perhaps, but no less amusing. First, we played barbershop Saturday with Joyce trimming fetlocks, and any and everybody clipping beards. The trim results are worth the trouble . . the horses are looking good. Friday, the group settled down to good serious ring-work. If you don't believe it, ask Mary Sterrett . . . Joyce jumped the colt, too. but that's one bit of news we didn't get from her! . . . Ducky, Anna, and Duff had a minor pillow fight with the shavings out at the stables. This went on into some definite hay pitching until the Madame had to resort to shovel and rake to regain order among the fighters, as well as on the stable grounds . . . Sudie took her first jump Saturday. We're all proud of her! Also, there will be a new rider soon, who is more than eager to be "learned" "how"! . . . The gang explored Sunday, after taking off to Longwood for a mad dash around the circle. Crossed the Richmond highway and found Bush River In a very unexpected spot. It was easy to follow the river . . . but kinda hard on somebody's cornfield! Incidentally, an old friend turned up with a visiting rider . . . .and even old Nelle was a welcome sight — after she was saddled.

See? We warned you we had a lot to say. This is our last write-up for this quarter, come on and ride next quarter and make us some nice news! Good luck on your exams . . . if you're riding for credit, watch the Madame! She'll get you to do lots more than just . . .

Stay on the bit!

10 Girls In Last Telegraphic Meet

The second and last Telegraphic swimming meet was held Saturday afternoon, March 11, at 4 p. m. Officials at the meet were Miss Olive T. Iler, Miss Mary Dabney, swimming instructor, Mary Walker Watts, Eleanor Bisese, Louise Blane, Eleanor Wade, Dot Owen, Betty Ellis, Margaret Lohr, Kitty Wright, Bobbie Scott, Dorothy White, Jean Bently, Margaret Orange.

Swimmers in the meet were Phyllis Watts, Nancy Wagner, Mildred Shepherd, Robin Lear, Kitty Kearsley, Virginia Younce, Pat Maddox, Jean Smith, Elise Hume, Betty Lou Hayward

The final timings in the various relays, swimming strokes, etc., will be sent in to Duke, who acts as hostess this year for the competing college teams.

Betty Ellis' On the Ball

The sports schedule is up to date today with both basketball and volleyball behind us, but next quarter's schedule should be even more interesting. Softball will be the main event, and practices begin as soon as examinations are over. All Green and Whites and Red and Whites, come out for practices and let's make this plenty of competition for the color cup.

FRESH AIR!

With exams coming this week, getting outside in the fresh air is the best way to clear a tired brain. Though walking in the rain is not the best health habit to have, it will not hurt you to bundle up and take a turn around the block. This is advice in case the weather is as rainy as it has been, but the sun should finally decide to come out from behind those dark clouds, take a long walk before supper each night. It not only will improve your appetite but it will make it easier to get back to the studies.

Along with this fresh air advice goes the suggestion that you get plenty of sleep. Plan your schedule so that you won't have to study into the wee hours each night. For that extra hour's sleep will help lots more than another hour of hard cramming to pass the examination. These health aids should go for all times also, because a healthy mind is a brighter mind.

SQUARE DANCING

There is a regular square dancing class scheduled for Spring quarter under the direction of Miss Emily Kauzlarich. Hampden-Sydney sailors will come in at various times during the quarter to dance with the members of this class during the regular class period.

Square dancing is the original national dance of America, just as the Highland fling and the Irish jib are typical of those countries. It originated with our pioneer grandparents, and has become a tradition especially in the South and West. The square dancing in the West is much more vigorous compared to the Virginia reel and quadrilles of the South.

ATHLETIC IDEAS

So you want to be an athlete? Not everyone is built for that, but there are many who have tried and succeded in doing some sport well, because they did try. Practice, practice, practice keeps running through your mind, but that is exactly what you have to do, if you expect to get somewhere on the tennis courts, hockey fields, riding ring, basketball court, or other sports activities.

Trying out for a class team does not mean just coming down to the gym, sitting around, and watching the other girls play; it means going out on the court and working just as hard as the rest of them. You might be afraid at first if you happen to be teamed up for the afternoon with all physical ed majors, but you will find that although they may have had the sports, they don't all excel in them!

Try to learn the rules, and stick by them. Watch closely when you are not playing, and see if you can find a foul or penalty as soon as the umpire or referee does. When you are in the game, remember you are a member of the team, and there are other girls playing tennis, golf, or riding a horse, which calls for individual work, try to make yourself work hard as though you were being directed instead of just practicing by yourself. A good player on any team or in any game always trys to be in practice at all times, use that as one of your rules toward becoming an athlete. So long, and don't forget to stay in the game.

Spring Hats Vary From Veils, Bands To Felts, Satins

Get a sailor for spring! You can take my words literally, because the newest and most attractive hat idea for spring is the familiar sailor. The sauciest and gayest little sailors you've ever worn! It takes on a new charm, with a wider, flatter crown and narrow brim, so reminiscent of the "bloomer girl" era. Your sailor may be as tiny as you wish, or as large as a cartwheel. Straws, both rough and shiny, fur felts and gayly striped satins are some of the fabrics that make the sailor fit so well into the whole costume. Of course, the flower decked sailor is perennial at this season!

If you are not in the mood for sailors, try a flower hat. These vary all the way from a bunch of flowers and a swab of veiling with a narrow band to hold it securely over one eye, to substantial felts with flowers as trim. Surprising what one of these gay little dollies can do for a costume.. They really look like spring!

The trim and tailored hats still hold their own, and they appear in many new and appealing guises this season. The topper with its high, wide crown and narrow brim is a universal favorite of college girls. It seems to fit perfectly with the boxy coap and give balance to the wide shoulders. These can be found in many soft pastel shades in felt or straw.

Choose your new bonnet to fit your costume, keeping in mind a close harmony between lines of the suit and lines of the hat. Remember to balance the whole effect by picking a small hat for wide and square shoulders, a large hat if you are tall and slender, etc.

Select your hat in front of a full length mirror, while wearing the costume it is intended to complement. Choose it for becomingness, because the American look is the pretty look!

Bull Session Has Important Place In "College Life"

Some of them are studying, some of them are reading, some of them are writing, some of them (how fortunate!) are away for the week end, and some of them are grouped around in one room, chatting away on various subjects. We had an idea (wrong again) that these gals always had bull sessions for the sole purpose of tearing down and building up the opposite sex, but they don't.

Hold on! Guess what these little frails do gab about! For instance two pretty freshmen were arguing fact and furious about fatalism. We just had to stop, stare, and drop our lower plate about three inches when different views were aired as to whether or not Fate was Life's leading lady.

Once we even overheard some jean clad figures vehemently discussing the pros and cons of the German post-war problems. These late hours and heavy current subjects were too much for us, we vote to "carry on", but here are some really typical S. T. C. "debate" groups.

These girls argue from 11:00 on whether or not "Robin Hood" is better arranged by Prima or Brown; if this shade of lipstick is brighter than that shade; if John's picture should grace the desk, or if Dick's wasn't better suited; if this withered little apple is hers or yours; if this chair could be moved over there instead of leaving it in the position it's in.

Sounds silly, doesn't it. All these absurd and trivial disagreements, but we've seen it happen. Do you know what we mean. It all comes under the title "College Life" and we love it! No two girls can stand each other for nine months and not even become disgruntled when one beats the other to the hot water after supper or gets a bigger slice of cake in the dining room.

And everyone has her roommate!

★ SENIOR ★ PERSONALITY ★

MARTHA HIGGINS

Shh! Shh! Quiet! Get those lights out! Shhh! These words will serve to identify this week's personality, Martha Higgins, retiring president of the House Council.

Known to one and all as just "Little Higgins" or "Fats", she has wound her ways around the halls and into the hearts of all at S. T. C. not only because of the capable manner in which she has handled the duties given her, but also because of her personality. We marvel that so much energy could be packaged in such a small body.

Martha has certainly caught the spirit of S. T. C. in her four years here. She has been active in all class performances, has danced in most of the productions, and has helped with or been in the class circus stunts. Her leadership abilities as shown by her work on government and as president of the house council were recognized by Alpha Kappa Gamma last fall.

Her favorite pasttime is eating and she is particularly fond of Southside's French fries and Triscuits. Dancing comes second on her list of "likes", especially when Roland is around. (We couldn't write about Martha without mentioning Roland) She doesn't like noise on the halls, lights after bedcheck, and weekends at Farmville when the Coast Guard does not dock.

Hailing from Portsmouth, Martha is an all-round good girl, and we will remember her for her cooperative spirit, her vitality, her never-ending patience, and for her own "cute" self.

Home Economics Club Plans Fashion Show

Ella Stone Smith, freshman; Judy Reick, sophomore; Betty Deuel Cock, junior; and Alice Lee Davis, senior; were named as the committee to be in charge of the Home Economics Club program to be held on Tuesday night, April 10 in the small auditorium. The program will consist of a fashion show, and the plan now is to have girls model clothes from the local department stores.

Serving on the refreshment committee will be Edith Bryant, Jane Glenn, and Martha Sours.

Just Looking, Thanks

By ANNE BUCK

New rules about leaves or furloughs couldn't hold some weekenders at school. If a few little people don't watch these three-day passes, etc., they may be put into the guard house. It's a good thing we don't have K. P. for punishment around here.

The week-enders having their "Mid-Summer Night's Dream" in spots on the map larger than Farmville were Barbara Ellen Crowther, Frances Flynn, Esther Mae George, Margaret Harvie, Betty Lee, Jean Prosise, Berkley Richardson, Janet Sollenberger and Helen Wilson in Richmond.

Absorbed in the dreams of Lynchburg were Christine Bunch, Kathleen Blankenship, Mary William Calvert, Mary Moon, and Virginia Cox Travis.

Wedding bells drew Beatrice Geyer to Washington, D. C. (incidentally, someone else's wedding.), Others in Washington were Ruth Jones, Isabel Key, and Doris Smith.

A dream-man attracted Judy Connelly to Petersburg (as usual).

The dream of Camp Pickett, nearby or otherwise inspired Kitty Parham to visit Kitty Sue Bridgforth in Kenbridge.

A navy blue dream drew Shirley Cruser and Doris Ballance to Norfolk.

The dream of something different (a sailor) attracted Cholera Richards, Patricia Swan, and Ann Summers to Hampden-Sydney.

McKenny was something desides a nightmare to Kitty Saunders, Jean Tucker, and Louise Rives.

Those seeking dreams nearby were Jane Glenn, Evelyn Moore, and Helen Apperson in Prospct; Monterey Twiford in Amelia; Mary Ellen Temple in Dinwiddie; Lucy Manson Sharpe in Blackstone; Anna Lee Blanton and Elizabeth Maxey in Cumberland; Caroline Moon and Katherine Tindall in Pamplin; Eva Cobb in Buckingham; Carolyn Hardy and Rosa Hill in Victoria; Helen Williams and Claudine Guthrie at Sunny Side, and Norma Soyars at Rice.

Going to Upper Marlboro, Md., was Jeanne Sauerwen.

Others with their heads in a cloud were Mary S. Cowherd in Cartersville; Nancy Dickerson in Spout Spring; Alice Lee Davis, Evelyn Hair, and Virginia Parrish in Danville; Virginia Elmore in Canson; Mary Eames in Providence Forge; Ruth Fleming in Chase City; Julia Agnes Foster at Guinea Mills; Sarah Hodges in Nchols; Wilda Hunt in Nathalie; Elizabeth Kiser in Abilene; Gladys Lankford in Charlottesville; Jackie Pardon in Portsmouth; and Daphne Pittman in Hatton.

Also Mary Emma Allen at Ford; Madelyn Ayers in Roanoke; Jean Babb in Ivor; Fulmer Baker in Abilene; Dorothy Blair in Java; Alice Davis in Phenix; Lois Boone in Cannsville; Shirley Connelly in Glade; and Anne Charlton in Ashland.

Having a dreamy time in South Boston were Martha East, Mary Wyatt, and Shirley Reaves.

Our dreams are turning into nightmares as examinations are fast approaching and so until next time, goodbye and good luck.

Lady's Pocketbook Has Everything Except Kitchen Stove In It

Now tell me this — what can hold everything except the kitchen stove and usually has a picture of that? Takn't but one thing—a lady's pocket-book!

We have done a little inquiring into pocket-bookology and while we can't be sure of this beginning, we can be sure a man is in this deep dark past. It seems that Moo-boa-hee, a nomadic Arabian herdsman, one fine Spring morning many centuries ago said, "Wifie, dear, (American translation—can't speak Arabian) my heart has a yearning for the mountains. Pack your tent and vessels while I a-stride my steady steed and we'll be off. In other words—let's scram, lamb."

About that time a bolt struck somewhere near and the wifie got the bright idea to put the entire wares inside the cloth tent, tie it at the top in a big bow, sling it across her shoulder and hit the road. Thus we have the meager beginning of woman's most useful article. Of course, now, pocket-books have been developed into a fine art.

In our wide search we have found these miniture (?) luggage pieces are divided into three different classes according to the way they are carried. The first is the purse with strings and is to be carried with the handle entrined between the fore, middle, and index fingers. Now this type has not the chic streamlineness of some of the others, but is most useful especially to housewives with multiple ration books, shopping lists, points and keys. Also, ample room for horse shoes.

The second class are smooth rectanglar shaped and to be carried under the arms only one at a time. Now the important item of these contraptions are the loading or should we say packing. This should be done with great care so as to get each end to balance, otherwise, it will keep falling front ways to be tripped over or backwards to be forgotten.

And finally, a newer addition but most kin to their beginning—the shoulder bag. This as the name implies has an extra long strap which is swung across the shoulder leaving the hand and arms free. The only objection to this variety is that it either get tangled up with you or your next door neighbor, or it keeps slipping off and hitting the floor with the gentle sound of an exploded charge of T. N. T. But woe be to the man who tries to snatch this lady's pocet-book 'cause he gets the lady, too.

As for a man's point of view on these kits—I guess next to hats he finds these most disagreeable. He fusses and ravs—just doesn't see any use in them but just let him pick up a little parsol on the way down town. Eventually, it will end up in his date's bag with her lugging it—these big, strong men! But they get a big kick out of teasing us about them and their usual powder, comb, lipstick contents. The other day when one of the girls ran in to get her pocket-book her date was inquired as to her whereabouts and was told, "Oh, she forgot her face!"

And as far for the contents of these things, we won't even bother to try to name all of them. Rotunda would need an extra edition, but while there are pocket-books, and more pocket-books, I think we here at school prefer wallets—So there!

Bisese, Ellett, and Brooks Named Class Presidents

Other Officers Chosen Last Night

Eleanor Bisese, Norfolk; Margaret Ellett, Jennings Ordinary; and Peepsie Brooks, Farmville, were elected presidents of the incoming senior, junior, and sophomore classes at class meetings held last night.

Elected as vice-president of the incoming senior class was Anne Summers, Hampden - Sydney; while Lillian Elliott, Farmville, was re-elected secretary; and Virginia Shackleford, Gloucester Point, was named treasurer. Betty Brothers, Suffolk, and Shirley Cruser, Norfolk, were elected as government representatives. Representing the junior class on student standards will be Lucy Bralley, Richmond, Ruth Brooks, Farmville, and Rosa Hill, Windsor.

Eleanor has been the president of her class for the past two years, is a member of the college war council, Alpha Kappa Gamma, and is at present secretary of Pi Gamma Mu.

Grace Loyd, Lynchburg, was elected vice-president of the incoming junior class; Betty Bibb, Lynchburg, secretary; Anna Headlee, Norfolk, treasurer; and Martha Russell East, South Boston, and Kitty Parham, Petersburg, government representatives.

Margaret has been president of her class since coming to Farmville, is a member of Alpha Phi Sigma and Boerc Eh Thorn.

Julia Booher, Abingdon, was elected vice-president of the incoming sophomore class; Anna Kucera, Vinton, secretary; Mary Lou Bagley, Suffolk, treasurer; Virginia Tindall, Hatton, and Alice Ann Abernathy, Dinwiddie, government representatives; and Peggy Cabaniss, Farmville, and Alice Hannah, Suffolk, student standards representatives.

Peepsie was elected president of the freshman class last fall and has also been active in Alpha Phi Sigma work.

Grabani, Richner To Appear Jointly As Guest Artists

At 8 p m., April 3. Benjamin Grabani, baritone, and Thomas Richner, pianist, will appear jointly as the last one of the artist series presented on the campus this year.

Mr. Grabani has appeared in concerts, oratorios, operas, operettas, festivals, with orchestras, and on the radio. As a result of his natural ability, acquired style and technique and extensive experience, Benjamin Grabani stands out in the singing profession as a truly great artist.

Thomas Richner, pianist, has taken part in concerts, festivals, operas, and on the radio. Born in Pennsylvania, he began to study the piano at the age of five. Since then, Mr. Richner has become one of the leading pianists of his day.

The program scheduled includes Perl's Ophans' Invocation; Gounod's Valentine's Aria from "Faust"; and De Falla's Spanish Dance Song; sung by Benjamin Grabani, baritone.

Thomas Richner's numbers include Chopin's Nocturne in F Sharp Major, and Ravel's Toccato.

Among other guest artists programs on this campus during the current session have been a program of string music provided by the Hart House Quartet, which was a quartet of Canadians, and a program of vocal and instrumental music by Janet Bush, contralto, and Gertrude Hopkins, harpist.

Frosh Production Changed to April 4

Home Ec Majors To Make Costumes

Because the music arrived too late to be sufficiently rehearsed for the Freshman production, the date of the production has been changed from March 27 to April 4. The opening number on the program will be a waltz by Betty Epperson and Betty Scroggins.

Hidden talents are found in Betty Lemon, Terry Fuller and Mary Hunting Rattray, chairman of the freshman production.

Mary Lou Graham, who provide one of the big surprises of the evening. Colorful costumes for the production are being made by Home Economics majors. Back stage singing will be done by members of the Intermediate A'Capella under the direction of Norma Howard.

Emurian Will Spak In Chapel, April 11

Rev. Ernest K. Emurian, pastor of the Madison Heights Methodist Church, will be the YWCA chapel speaker for Wednesday April 11.

Mr. Emurian will also lead prayers Wednesday night.
and the open association meeting of the Y on Wednesday afternoon.

Having done much work with young people throughout Virginia, Mr. Emurian led the Religious Emphasis week services on the Madison college campus last winter.

Another Y speaker slated for the spring quarter is Miss Fern Babcock, Y. W. C. A. program secretary of the southern region, who will speak here on April 16 and 17.

Founders Day Fund Donations Total $676

Approximately $676 was contributed by the faculty, administration, student organizations, student body, alumnae, and friends of the college on Founders Day which was held on Saturday, March 10.

The custom of contributing money to the school on Founders Day originated as an effort to help finance the erection of the Student Building on this campus. When that project was finished, Dr. Jarman asked that the contributions continue to be added to a fund for the improvement of the college, and as a result of this request, contributions are made annually to the Founders Day Fund.

Madame Jonniaux, World Traveler, To Speak Tonight

Lecturer To Talk On World Unity

Madame Alfred Jonniaux, world traveler and international observer will speak tonight, March 28, at eight o'clock in the college auditorium. She is the wife of Alfred Jonniaux, the distinguished painter to the Belgian Court.

Madame Jonniaux was born in England, lived for a number of years in France, traveled in many countries, and is now a resident of the United States.

She and her husband were in France at the time war was declared. They lived in Paris until June of 1940, when they escaped just four days before the Nazi armies took that city. After that they went to what was then known as Free France, and remained there for nine months. Upon the intervention of American friends, the Jonniaux's were permitted to leave, coming to America via Spain and the clipper.

Madame Jonniaux is touring the country to lecture for the cause of world unity. She is a true internationalist and cosmopolite. Both by background and experience, Madame Jonniaux is singularly qualified to bring to the lecture field a timely message.

Conductor Arrives Here April 11

Dr. Noble To Lead All Music Groups

Leaving New York on April 10, Dr. T. Tertius Noble, internationally-known organist, director, and composer, will arrive in Farmville in time to rehearse Wednesday night in preparation for the concert which is scheduled for Thursday night, April 12. Dr. Noble will direct the college choir, choral club, and A'Cappella groups in this concert.

Other guest artists appearing in the concert will be Robert Nicholson, baritone, and James Montgomery, lyric tenor.

Accompanying Dr. Noble to Farmville will be his son, Philip Noble, who will present technicolored slides on New England and give lectures on these slides in the large auditorium Friday evening at 8 o'clock. Receiving his education at Harvard and Princeton, he travels all over the U. S. showing slides and giving lectures.

Having served as chairman of the hymnal committee of protestant churches for a number of years, the renowned organist will speak to the students on hymnology during the chapel hour on Friday.

A former organist of the New Minister Cathedral in England, Dr. Noble is the recently retired director of the St. Thomas choir school, the members of which form the largest church choir in the country.

Born in Australia, Robert Nicholson of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has sung with the National Broadcasting Company Symphony Orchestra, with the New York Philharmonic, and is at present a soloist of the First Methodist Church of Mt. Vernon, New York.

A New Jersian by birth, James Montgomery has sung in every medium and in every field, and has appeared from coast to coast as the leading tenor of Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

Seats will be reserved for the concert on Thursday night, but not for the lecture on Friday

Buck, Chase Slated To Speak on Campus Thursday, April 5

Dr. J. L. Blair Buck, director of teacher education, State Department of Education at Richmond, Virginia, will speak on "Opportunities for Qualified Teachers in Virginia During the Next Five Years" in chapel Thursday morning, April 5. Program is sponsored by the F. T. A. Forum on Professional Relations.

At 4:00 p. m. in the little auditorium the pledging of new members for 1945-1946 and the installing of new officers will take place. Mr. Francis S. Chase, executive secretary of the Virginia Education Association, will speak at this time on the subject, "The Virginia Education Association and the F. T. A. in Virginia."

Panel discussion of Farmville State Teachers College Plan of Rating Student Teachers will be held at 8 p. m. in the little auditorium. The discussion will be led by Dr. Fred M. Alexander, supervisor of secondary education, State Department of Education, Richmond. Members of the panel are J. P. Wynne, Mary Ann Jarratt, Margaret Barksdale, Lucy Adams, C. M. Bussinger, T. J. McIlwaine.

All members of the junior and senior classes who have taught, are teaching, or intend to teach are expected to attend all of these meetings. Only exceptions consist of those who have to miss the 11 o'clock meeting because of student teaching. The students involved are excused from classes and other group meetings which conflict with the afternoon meeting and evening of the F. T. A. Forum.

Members of the freshman and sophomore classes and other members of the student body who wish to do so are invited to attend the evening meeting in the

AKC Will Sponsor H.-S. - S.T.C. Quiz

The annual quiz contest between the Hampden-Sydney boys and local girls will be held sometime during the month of April, according to an announcement made this week by Lucy Manson Sharpe, president of Alpha Kappa Gamma, leadership society which sponsors the yearly quiz.

ADD TO EMURIAN

Try-outs were held on this campus last night, and from this group of people, a team will be selected to represent this college in the contest.

A silver cup will be awarded the winning team, and after three years, the cup becomes the property of the winning side. Since Hampden-Sydney won the cup permanently last spring, a new cup will be awarded this time.

Committees named for the contest are entertainment, Marilyn Bell, chairman, Pat Maddox, Hackie Moore, and Sara Bird Williams; Publicity, Virginia Treakle, chairman, Martha Higgins, Dora Walker Jones, and Jane Waring Ruffin; Questions, Eleanor Wade, chairman, Shirley Cruser, Nancy Harrell, and Helen Wilson; Staging, Ann Martin, chairman, Mary Ann Jarratt, and Sally Robertson; and tickets, Frances Lee, chairman, Eleanor Bisese, and Ophelia Whittle.

B. S. U. Will Present Pageant For Easter

Presented by the B. S. U., a pageant, Challenge of the Cross, will be held in the small auditorium Friday night at 9 o'clock. Those taking part include Mary Ellen Petty, Josephine Bailey, Ellen Ward, Frances Jennings, Dorothy Daniels, Kathleen Cage, and Irene Colins.

The following committees were appointed to do work in connection with the pageant. The properties committee is made up of Evelyn Hair, chairman; Ellen Bailey, and Geraldine Joyner. Ella Stone Smith, chairman, Carolyn Collie and Virginia Toby comprise the publicity committee. The costuming group includes Lois Lloyd Shepherd, chairman, and Nell Ray Fleming; Virginia Treakle, chairman, Rachel Brugh, and Kathleen Cage make up the staging group.

Service at Sunrise Slated for Easter

Sunrise services, sponsored by the Freshman Commission, will be held at Longwood on Easter Sunday morning. Ann Martin, Pat Moddox, and Jean Freeman, will help with the program.

Those who plan to go are asked to meet in the Rotunda at 6:15 on Sunday morning.

Knapton Announces Spring Colonnade To Appear This Week

The spring issue of the Colonnade, which is the last edition appearing under the present staff, will come off the press this week, Jane Knapton, retiring editor, revealed Monday night.

Included in this issue will be three stories which won honorable mention in the short story contest held last fall. "Our Casualties Were Few" by Naomi Piercy, "Despite" by Alice Nichols, and "Rondeau" by Virginia Dale.

Other short stories appearing in this edition will be Sara Moling's "Metamorphosis" and Fay Johnson's "Not Even a Divine Nose."

Following up the articles "Sketches of Brazil" by Julia Braga, which appeared in the winter issue of the magazine, will be Eneida Costa's "In Brazil", which describes that country's school system. Betty Cock presents a poem, "Goodnight, Couples."

Mr. C. G. Gordon Moss has written for the magazine an article on teaching, "A Professional Creed."

The feature of the edition is Mary Lou Dondley's "Know Your Faculty", with cartoons and a quiz, the results of which will show your familiarity with the faculty.

Pictures of several S. T. C girls modeling new spring fashions from Baldwin's will also be presented in this issue.

Notice

Last fall when the score card for the Rotunda was made, an Easter holiday had been scheduled, and so no paper was slated to come out on April 4. Even though no holiday is being given because of an ODT request, there will be no paper next week.

Swan Song

With this issue we turn the publication of the Rotunda over to a new editor and a new staff, and having written "Thirty" to our last article, we lay aside our journalistic pen. Truly, "the old order changeth, yielding place to new."

We of the retiring staff are grateful to the Fate that made possible this year on the paper and all that it has meant. So valuable has been the experience and so great the pleasure that even now we write our Swan Song with much regret. At the same time we breathe a soft sigh of relief, for we have completed a hard assignment and we pass on to the new staff no easy task.

Before we retire we take one last backward glance at the year. Our memories of the work on the Rotunda will be pleasant ones mingled with recollections of agonizing moments before the deadline. We never got over being thrilled as the first copy of each issue rolled off the presses and we'll never forget that thrill. Somewhere along the line we got newspaper ink behind our fingernails and it found its way into our bloodstream. We shall be eternally grateful to Mr. Samuel Holton, our adviser, and to Mr. Harry Lancaster at the Herald Office, without whom we should have been hopelessly lost from the beginning.

Throughout the year we have endeavored to keep a middle course, to steer clear of radicalism or favoritism. We have endeavored to be the voice of the entire student body and not of just a few. We have strived to bestow praise where it was deserved and to place condemnation fairly. We have printed nothing that violated our conscience or sense of justice.

We have had our chance, we have done our best, and now our work is over. We turn over to the new staff, more able and better prepared than we were, our paper, our joy, almost our very life, to work on, to struggle over, to experiment with, to gain from it the same valuable experience we have had.

We envy the new staff the year ahead of them, and we wish them the same cooperation and the same keen sense of enjoyment we have known. We look back with pleasure and and without regret, and we look forward with confidence.

"Thirty."

Participate In Activities To Develop Abilities

Once more we have felt it necessary to say something about the extra-curricular activities in these columns. We of the Rotunda staff are not advocating that every student in this school take part in two, three or four activities in addition to her regular classwork. We are, however, saying that we think that every student enrolled in this college should take part in at least one activity outside of the regular classroom work. No student should, of course, accept so many responsibilities that she is unable to meet her class obligations. On the other hand, there is time in each curricular in school for every student to have time to be interested in something outside of classes.

Extra-curricular activities develop personalities, habits, and attitudes which are not only necessary for school life, but also for the life that is beyond the four-sheltering walls of college. They help to give students an insight into the future in addition to making the present more worthwhile.

Another valuable purpose of our activities is their part in helping students determine their vocations. Through these channels, hidden talents are often revealed and may, in some cases, determine one's life work.

Then, those who are planning to enter the teaching profession should certainly be prepared and efficient sponsors and advisers. A teacher never knows just what sponsorship duties might fall to her, and she should be prepared to meet them as satisfactorily as possible.

Of course, our interests differ, but with the wide variation of activities available, it seems that every student in school, could find the activity or activities which meet her needs most effectively. It was never intended that all of us should be interested in all activities, but each of us should be interested in one or more activities. Perhaps that is the reason we have so many different types of organizations on the campus.

Maybe you have heard the story of the college student who decided not to do much in college because he wanted to save his strength and abilities for the days when he would be called upon to make his own living. Those of us who have sane minds realize that there is no logic in his thinking whatsoever. Our strength grows and our abilities increase only as we invest these in work.

Our college days are days of preparation to meet tomorrows needs. First of all, we must study hard that we may do well in our classes, and then second, we must branch out into one or more extra-curricular activities that will help us to develop a wholesome personality. Then we will be on the path that leads to a fuller, more-rounded life.

Gleanings

By Alice Nichols

* * * *

The Rhine has now been crossed by four of our armies and the big push is really on. The First Army is within four miles of Coblentz, the third is expanding its beachhead north of Worms, and the "greatest single airborne operation in all history" is a success. Thousands of allied paratroopers have been dropped on the East of the Rhine, and have established a bridgehead five miles deep.

* * * *

The Red Army has renewed its drive on Berlin after breaking through German defenses along the Oder River line. Berlin is only 30 miles away. The new offensive has put Russian forces within 40 miles of Austria and 81 miles of Vienna.

* * * *

Our carrier planes carry the glory in the Pacific attacking Japan practically every day. Twenty percent of Tokyo's productive facilities have been knocked out. Japan's industrial cities are now getting a similar treatment of Pearl Harbor.

* * * *

In the Philippines American's have taken Naguilian and its airfield on Luzon. In Burma the British are striking south of Mandalay. In China the Japanese have open a new offensive northwest of Hankow with 60,000 troops. In the U. S. A. the fighting is about the curfew and twlight hour.

HEARD AFTER

BEDCHECK

With many a weary sigh of relief, the spotlight shifted from the agony of exams to the big event of the week, Pan-Hellenic dance. New spring dresses, dates, and corsages floated freely around campus.

Three hours of waiting is "purty" tiresome—but it was worth it! That green convertible that Dody's and "Poocy's" dates brought along realy made the week-end perfect. Some big time operators, aren't they?

What's this we're hearing about Shuffle? It seems that Ed's visits are becoming more and more frequent. We'll have to admit that that's attraction enough for anyone.

And we really missed Lulu. Too bad Uncle Sam picked such an inconvenient time to shove off.

We can't overlook the most popular man on the floor. It was none other than our own Mr. Moss. Maybe some people call it apple polishing, but if you ask me it is just personality plus.

And how about those blind dates? Kitty Sue, Nancy, and Marjorie really hit the jackpot! It seems that their G. I.'s were so impressed they can't wait to come back.

Bea Jones' Joel is really getting to be quite the familiar thing at S. T. C. Maybe, there's more to this than we thought. It's quite the gay life with Charlie during the week and Joel on the weekend.

The building was the scene of Homecomings this week-end. It was just like old times seeing Dugger reigning on the tennis courts, while Vivian Gwaltney, "Cheese" and Titmus hashed over old times.

We all fell in love with Paisley. Better watch out, Martha Russell!

Weddings bells will ring for Margaret Walton on Thursday. Here's wishing her the best in the world.

Peepsie's tall, good-looking Bill Wall danced circles around that gym. The snake line (excuse me, girls) I mean stag line trailed him all night.

Did you see a blurred streak heading towards the Eastern Shore this week-end? In case you were doubtful of the identity, that was Queeky traveling at a 2:20 clip to see Bill.

Goodness! It's after bed-check. Must get my beauty sleep. Meanwhile, let's not get scorched on the roof for cinders are no pretty sight—

So long for now.

The Y

By MARGARET HARVIE

A Sunrise Service will be sponsored Sunday morning at Longwood by the Freshman Commission. Those wishing to go will meet in the Rotunda at 6:15 Sunday morning. This is to be one of the loveliest services the "Y" has. As this season of the year draws to a climax, it would be well for each of us to turn our minds and our heads toward the true significance of Easter.

Go-to-Church month is almost over, and we hope that many girls have gotten back in the church-going habit and will continue to attend services.

This is Holy Week, and Union Services are being held at the Methodist Church every night at 8 o'clock with both visiting and town ministers.

Congraulations to the new minor officers!

Rev. Ernest K. Emurian from Madison Heights Church will be the guest of the "Y" on April 11. He will speak in chapel, at an open association meeting, and at Prayers. We are looking forward to have him with us.

Read the new "Y" books in the Browsing Room.

The Methodist girls are looking forward to having the Randolph-Macon Glee Club in the near future.

The subject for Prayers this week will be posted on the bulletin board.

FRESHMAN CAVALCADE

We Speak of Russia--A People With the Past Rediscovered

Let us rediscover Russia—her past. It is futile to superimpose the thoughts and ways of other lands on Russia. She must be seen in terms of her own history, her own age-old sordidness, her own untamed wildness.

The period between Ivan the Terrible and Peter the Great, nearly two centuries, was marked by a gradual expansion of the country into Asia, an expansion which was carried on largely by peasants and Cossacks, adventurous frontiersmen who led the vanguard of this territorial penetration and carried the influence of the established church and the czar clear to the plains of eastern Asia. This enlarged Russia was essentially oriental in character its customs and habits being Asian rather than European; and so all its people, even its Czars and nobles, for generation after generation were looked upon as barbarians by the rest of Christendom.

It was Peter the Great who made the contact with Europe; the story of his reign is well known how he gained power by revolutionizing Russian society and establishing a numerous nobility out of the army and those devoted to his person. These nobles he placed in complete domination over the great mass of the people, who were reduced to a state of serfdom not far removed from slavery. Frustrated in some of his political objectives, Peter acquired a passion for introducing into Russia the crafts and sciences of Western Europe; even though he realized his people were not ready to receive them.

Catherine the Great extended the territories of the empire and made Russia a power in the world. Her general policies followed the trend which Peter had established. Between them, these two monarchs set the peculiar pattern of Russian civilization which lasted into the twentieth century, when it was finally overthrown by the Bolsheviks.

After a quarter of a century of Sovietism and fighting the most crucial war of their lives and of their history the people are much changed. They are not like the people they were in 1917. In 1923, in 1928, hardly even like the people they were in 1936, the year of the adoption of the new constitution. This new Russia has rediscovered her past, reappraised her present and future. And, whose people are ready to die—old and young, men and women—rather than to foreswear their newly fashioned identity and their immediate and remote destiny.

Editor's Note: Since the May Day this year is based on a Russian theme, an article on Russia will appear in this paper each week between now and May 5, the date set for May Day. This is being done in order that the students may better understand Russia, her people and her background.

Excitement, Confusion Noted As Cavalcade Gets Under Way

by Helene Griffin

" . . . . . first this side; then that side," a human revolving door no less, as she gesticulates, and gives forth with the recitation of the year. She didn't know we were watching, and her performance was perfect, except for an occasional, "ah . . . er", and a look to heaven for guidance, with those big green eyes. "Man! What was that?" 1-2-3 kick! 3-2-1 kick! (breath . . . . "I'm counting for you, N. J.") "No, not hop, KICK!! I said kick, and kick HIGH! Hey, Hill-billy! See what's making the end line look like a sick permanent wave. Ah! The chorus kicks!! An endless stream of commands, and pleadings shower down upon the gals as they kick, step, and kick again. "We'll try the first step once more, and this time hold each other up, if it'll help! (Aside: They're doing O. K., aren't they?)

Owoooooooo!!! Well, guess we can identify THAT call, and as we wander around the stage and trip over,—CENSORED—we track down the "why" for that overrated wolf call. Gals, it's a mysterious looking "man" strolling nonchalantly through the midst of an astonished group of chorus cuties. Shrieks of the modest maidens are heard as the gentleman parades across and through the temporary dressing rooms. We're right behind him, but he somehow eludes us, leaving us gaping at the Frosh "singers" doing some strictly reet harmonizing, and following with glazed eyes the dipping and swaying hands of Norma.

"Timber!" . . . a mad scramble for safety. Ho, hum! Just another prop fell. The poor staging group dashes over to the scenery, sets it up, and fervently prays it will stay put. Jerry and Mildred look like fugitives from a salvage warehouse as they stagger in, loaded down with alarm clocks, bottles, rifles, GI hats, and Another week, another quarter, another column. Two weeks of news to be related in one column . . . we'll try anything . . . once a week!

PAST HISTORY

Think way back, jocks . . . way into last quarter . . . all the pretty rides we had during off days of exams. No regular classes, just sign-as-you-can, and the things that didn't happen!

Take for example, the Sunday ride during exams. The class was full, and the troup as a whole wended their merry way across the highway and to the Bush River. It was Elise up on Cinnamon, who first ventured into the water to give her mount a drink. The whole group followed, staying close to the shore in the shallow cooling water. But it was also Elise who suddenly looked down, and to her amazement saw absolutely NO legs on Cinnamon! With a sickening thought she realized the tale Joyce told of how easily a horse once broke a leg by merely stepping into a tiny hole, and with a sickening twang of the conscience, Lightning was head sure she had been the cause of about four broken legs on one mare. It wasn't that serious . . . Cinnamon had merely slipped on a mossy under-aqua log, and gone down to her knees in the water. But the expression on her face was too much for J. Carter, up on the pony, and she began to simply howl at the sight . . . until the pony began to roll, and J. Carter found herself boots-full of H2O, waist-deep under water, and quite minus one stirrup and a strap! She did a quick dismount in midstream and waded in to shore, disgusted with horse-kind in general. It was Sudie who literally dove in and came up with the stirrup and strap and all in all, it was just a bunch of drips who oozed their way home through the setting sunlight!

SPRING QUARTER

At last reports, classes are literally all full. About sixty girls have signed up to ride this spring, whi h is, for an average, a pretty good number. In fact it's too many with the limited number of horses we have, even if (we're trying not to boast) even if we DO have a new horse! The third gentleman to join the family is one Robin . . . only four-gaited, because he sees no point in trotting . . . and quite a beauty to our way of thinking. He's tall and well built . . . sorrel and carries himself well. Joyce will have him back in the swing again before long, and if he stays, he'll be, indeed, a nice addition to the stables.

NEWS BITS

Monday and Tuesday were nice calm uneventyful rides last week. It was Friday, though, that Miss Black tried herself . . . doing a beautiful imitation of a one-horse merry-go-round. M. Sydnor was up . . . the jumps were lowered to 2 1-2 feet, and she cleared them all nicely the first time around . . . we think. Then, as 'twas told to us, it seems she speeded up, took a jump, went through a jump, all around until all jumps were down and she was flying around and around the ring and right through the jumps for five times. When she was at last stopped, and tried again the performance was repeated . . . four times around this time, gathering speed all the while. Curb bit, too, which explains the new chain we're seeing on Miss Black! Saturday she tried again, with far nicer results. It was Saturday, too, that Geena and Barbara started jumping the pony, with fairly nice results. The Colonel has been jumping nicely for J. Souerwein, too.

AMONG THOSE PRESENT

Among the beginners we found Virginia Terrell, Frances W. Gayle, "Teddy" Bear, Mary Walton Rucker, Martha Lee, and Shirley Didlake. Others, too . . . we'll be hearing about them later.

SUNDAY ANTICS

It was 12:30 when they left Sunday . . . it was 5:30 before the horses were put away! Nine strong, off they went . . . with canteens and knapsacks and food galore. Over the highway and down the new dirt road, out beyond the 200-year-old farmhouse, and down to the shady stream. Then, horses tied to the trees, sweaters cast off and bare feet in the water, for an hour or more they nibbled sandwiches, cakes, oranges, and the usual picnic variety. It was a lazy afternoon with just a few exciting things such as the four bits of controversys between Ingle and the pony. But all in all, 'twas a jolly day, and one we hope will be repeated.

Just for fun, did you see Roy Rogers and Trigger doing their bit at the Hollywood Canteen? When we can train Snow-ball to dance to "Don't Fence Me In", that will be an accomplishment!

Stay in the saddle!

52 Students Attend Choreographic Drama At Randolph-Macon

Friday, March 23, at 5 p. m., members of the Fundamental Dance classes, Orchesis, and others interested in dance, filled the waiting buses and journeyed to Randolph-Macon Women's College at Lynchburg to witness the first experiment in a completely choreographic drama to be presented by the Dance and Drama Departments of the college.

"Murder in the Cathedral," by T. S. Eliot, was the story of the killing of Thomas A. Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury, staged at the Cathedral in Canterbury in 1170, at Christmas time. Accompanying the play, before and between the scenes, was the original music of Henry Hallstrom, head of the Music Department of the college. Excellent lighting effects modified tenseness of the highly dramatical scenes, while speaking dancers portrayed with skill the parts of Priests, Tempters, Knights, Women of Canterbury, and Archbishop.

Red & White Wins Volley Ball Meet

The round-robin tournament in volley ball ended with red and white teams victorious and winning five points towards the color cup. The Freshmen defeated the Juniors two games, the Sophomores and Seniors tied, the Freshmen defeated the Sophomores and the Seniors, and the Junior-Senior games were a tie with Juniors winning one game and Seniors winning one.

Much class spirit was shown in all the games, and each class was well represented by a cheering section which helped them on to victory. Volley ball is a sport which requires a number of players thus increasing the interest within the individual classes. It gives many people the chance to prove their athletic ability.

10 Girls Receive Bids To Orchesis

Receiving bids as Orchesis Apprentices were Bitty Bibb, Margaret Ellett, Helen Fuller, Dorothy Haile, Lorrine Haynes, Ann Kingdon, Betty Minetree, Anne Motley, Nancy Parrish and Doris Ramsey. The bids were issued at supper Monday, March 26.

The apprentices must serve a term of apprenticeship which consists of participating in two of the Orchesis productions before they will be initiated as members. These apprentices will be initiated in May with the fifteen other apprentices that were taken in just after Christmas.

Orchesis has definitely set the date of its recital for May 11, on a Friday night. At the moment the club is working on May Day. Some of the girls will have featured roles, while others will be in group dances. Some of the girls are also in charge of teaching dances to the folk groups of May Day.

Officers of Orchesis are Betty Ellis, president, Edith Lovins, secretary, Betsy Caldwell, treasurer, Frances Lee, costume chairman and Jean Carter Smith, historian.

Fatal Days Are Over! Peace Reigns Within S.T.C. Halls

So—the fatal days are over! Peace reigns again within the halls of STC. And has anyone ever seen such a sudden change of atmosphere? Virtually overnight laughter is heard again, echoing through the corridors; the sun shines; birds sing; hair is curled; language is modified; Van Johnson again eclipses Browning. All is well—anyway, for the intelligent uppercrust. (Oops, Editor says we can't get personal.)

Anyway, many solemn vows have been made—no more cramming! We've said that before, of course, but this time we mean it! Gone are the days when Caesar and Rasputin slept peacefully on the shelf, surrounded by the Fundamentals of English Grammar, and the Geography of Chile, awaiting the arrival of the night before a you-know-what. Yes, sir, from now on they come down periodically for serious perusal (All this, understand, should be written in very small print. But doesn't it sound lovely?)

Now, everybody knows that there are exams and exams. One spends fifteen minutes on this one, maybe an hour on this one, possibly two on this one, but, oh—that one! For that little terror one collects cokes, notes, volumes, cheese sandwiches, optimism and will power, and one adjourns to a secluded class-room with three or four fellow crammers. Once there, the serious problems of the moment is attached. "Well," (we quote), "was he cute?" "West Point? Oh—Hargrave." "Um-m, and then-n what?" And so on, far into the night.

Sooner or later, however, the inevitable moment arrives. When it becomes necessary to desert the Subject, and concentrate on the Exam. And here we are—right where we started about four hours ago.

Once the ball really begins to roll, we learn the most amazing things. For instance, did you know that "Heredity means if your grandfather didn't have any children, then your father probably wouldn't either, and neither would you, probably?" Or that Booth Tarkington assassinated Lincoln? Oh, yes, and that the moral of "The Ancient Mariner" is "obey the Fish and Game Laws"? (Old, but, we fear, typical).

And so the conversation moves on. "That man Napoleon! Why, oh why was he born? He's been peaceful and undisturbed on my shelf for three months, and now he comes down to haunt me. Anybody got a dust rag?"

Swim Meet Returns Wired To Dabney

Miss Mary Dabney, swimming instructor, received a wire March 18, revealing the winners in the annual telegraphic swimming meet. In this year's meet Florida State won first place, Duke University, second, Woman's College, University of North Carolina, third, Sophie Newcomb, fourth, and STC fifth place.

On Tuesday, February 27, at 5:15 in the swimming pool, the first part of the telegraphic meet was held. Swimmers in the meet were Mildred Shepherd, Kitty Kearsley, Jean Smith, Elise Hume, Betty Lou Hayward, Phyllis Watts, Anne Summers, Virginia Younce, Carol Jenkins and Frances Lee.

Swimmers in the second meet were Phyllis Watts, Nancy Magner, Mildred Shepherd, Robin Lear, Kitty Kearsley, Virginia Younce, Pat Maddox, Jean Smith, Elise Hume, and Betty Lou Hayward. This meet was held March 10, Founders Day, at 4:00.

The telegraphic meet is usually held all in one day, but this year it has been divided into two sections. The final timings in the various relays, swimming strokes and other events were wired into Duke, who acted as hostess this year.

On the Ball

By MARY HARRISON

Ah! Spring, time to play out from under the roof again! The sport schedule is full of suggestions for you from now until the end of the college year. Why not stretch those muscles on the tennie courts, or knock the little white ball around (golf of course), or swing into a softball game, or try your luck and better your archery form? The pool is open to you, come on, use it!

TENNIS

The season for tennis is almost in, least those blue skies say so. The courts have been under the weather during those cold months, but they seem to be in good condition now. The main way to lose some of that excess weight, believe me, is not only to go on a small diet, but to get in a bit of exercise also. Tennis is the surer way of losing weight, and also to cook up a smooth STC tan.

The spring tourney will be held soon, so get in some good practices now, and support your class when the tournament starts. One sure thing, no one can be a genius in a week or two, it takes a lot of time, so be patient with yourself and get in the game. Of course there is a small mattter of balls, but surely you can find some that still go by that name.

SOFTBALL

Now that basketball and volleyball games are behind us, join a softball class. The question may be, "Oh, I can't play that stuff," yes you can. It's excellent exercise and fun too. The weather is cool and inviting, leave your knitting, and bring the roommate down to the field. There are chances that you'll learn how to throw a right corner curve. The team needs your support and you can give it, with a little practice.

GOLF

The class of golf is one for you to enjoy. You can always use your

Many Colors Used In Spring Cottons For Work Or Play

By EVELYN GRIZZARD

It's time to trot out your cotton dresses, girls! Now that ole So' works overtime, skirts and sweaters can be lovingly packed away in moth balls until next fall, and cotton dresses can be pulled out and given a pressing.

If you are one of those individuals who wail that they don't have any cotton dresses, just stop fretting right now.

Just run down the street and look over the collection in the shops in town. You can find some cute numbers with practically no sleeves, low necks, and with fitted waists and gathered skirts. These are very attractive on the roof-tanned girl and oh, so cool and comfortable.

You may find cotton dresses in solid colors, in plaids, in stripes, and in two tone combinations. Some have dainty eyelit embroider for trim, or contrasting rickrack braid around the hem, or saddle stitched in a contrasting color. Some open down the front like coats, some open to the waist, and some have gay buttons at the side instead of a placket.

Don't worry about the colors. You are sure to be able to find a color that is becoming to you, because there is such variety in colors this spring. All shades of red and pink are popular, as well as the familiar blues, yellows, pale greens, and white.

If you find the prices too steep for your allowance, just pick out an easy pattern and some pretty material and set to work, and make you own. Charlotte Grizzard, Frances Treakle, and Betty Scroggins pictured above, found this the remedy for their spring urge for something cut, cool, and new in COTTON!

golfing ability when the boy friend comes "home for keeps", or on your next visit home to the family, learn to play and you'll be able to teach "the Dad" a couple of new srokes. Golf can give you added poise. If you can play, come out and improve your form. If you can not, come out and learn how. The athletic field is an excellent place to practice short drives, just don't knock out the windows over in the laundry.

Until next week, play a good game and be a good sport!

Other officers elected were, vice-president, Evelyn Grizzard; secretary, Carolyn Bobbitt; treasurer, Lorene Thomas; worship chairman, Dot Cummings; recreation chairman, Louise Harrell; world friendship, Charlotte Grizzard; community service, Peepsie Brooks; membership, Dawn Holcombe; and publicity chairman, Nancy Robbins.

2 Sororities Gives Tea, Formal Banquet

Gamma Theta members held their annual banquet for the pledges in the college tea room on Friday night. Besides the members, guests included Miss Ruth Gleaves, Miss Grace Mix, Mrs. Boyd Coyner, Miss Alpha Lee Garnett, and Dr. J. L. Jarman.

Theta Sigma Upsilon members entertained at a tea on Tuesday afternoon, March 20, honoring Mrs. Anne Kelley Bowman, one of the founders of the sorority.

Invited guests included Misses Alice Carter, Helen Draper, and Lucille Jennings.

$1,721.81 Donated To War Chest Drive

$1,721.81 was the total amount contributed by the faculty and administration, and students to the War Chest Drive, Shirley Cruiser, chairman of the drive has announced. The amount given exceeded the $1,000 goal.

The annual campus drive began February 14 and ended February 21. The money contributed went to the Red Cross and World Student Fund. The Red Cross money was turned over to the War Council who gave it to the Red Cross. The World Student Service Fund money was added to the contribution to this drive from other colleges and universities in the country. The Student Service money is to be used for war students interned here in American as well as for those interned in other countries.

Fatal Days Are Over!

Well, we labor diligently amidst a mighty shambles of empty coke bottles, sandwich remnants, and weary roomate. We get up the following morning, take the exam, return to our rooms, and happily collapse. Keats? Infinitives? Caesar? The Amazon Valley? My goodness, we never heard of 'em. But such is cramming—an institution within an institution. It just wouldn't be STC without it.

In closing, we have the classic!

"As I was laying on the green
A small English book I seen

So I left it lay in the same position."

Someday, maybe we'll do it, too. Just for fun, of course.

★ SENIOR ★ PERSONALITY ★

FAY BYRD JOHNSON

A threatening sign on her door protects the privacy of her room, but we knocked, and this week the senior spotlight is turned on Fay Byrd Johnson.

Possessing great charm and grace, Fay is definitely an individual, and will long be remembered as such. When she believes a thing she believes with all her being and no power on earth can change her. A lover of psychology and psychoanalysis, Fay turns "mystic" now and then and dips into the future by reading character and palms.

Her friends tell her she can't carry a tune but this doesn't affect her love for music and she collects records by the album. Along the collecting line, she also has quite an array of minute bottles, particularly perfume bottles, of every imaginable and unimaginable shape and form. She has taken a great fancy to modern dance this year and was recently bid to Orchesis. An avid reader, Fay also enjoy talking, and if she's in the mood, will continue a bull session way past the wee small hours. She'll walk for interminable miles, and likes to hike in tennis shoes.

Fay has been participant in many of the extra curricular activities since she came to Farmville in the fall of '41. She was elected to represent her class on government her freshman year, has been a member of the staffs of both the Rotunda and the Colonnade, and this year served as chairman of the Student Standards Committee. She is business manager of the Dramatic Club and has had parts in the plays, "The Cradle Song" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream." She was elected as giftorian of the Class of '45.

Shoes and cats are passions with Fay. She also claims partiality to Marlene Dietrich and Hildegarde. Extremely fond of both music and poetry, she has tried her pen successfully with the latter. She likes sauerkraut, yeast cakes, and tea—hot and iced, but she doesn't like chocolate or cokes and nabs.

Next year will probably find her teaching in Haiwaii, and we'll bet she has a cat with her!

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

What do you want the Easter bunny to bring you?

Quickie Trower: A one- way icket to Richmond.

B. Ellis: Already bought it! Aqua suit and red accessories.

Mary Walton Rucker: A good report card.

"Teddy" Bear: A horse of my own!

Mary Sterrett: A maid! I'm sick and tired of cleaning up.

Louise Blanc: Freedom from oppression! (I could appreciate any kind of freedom!)

Helen Savage: Don!

Gin T.: A man!

Helen Wilson: A ride home.

Caroline Huddle: A tall, dark and handsome man, with a convertible.

Jean Prosise: Tom!

Va. Parson: Good luck with my teaching.

Va. Lee Abernathy: Offer of a good teaching position next year.

Rosa V. Hill: An Easter basket.

Kitty East: I want him to stay himself, 'cause I like wabbits!

Boots Brailey: A good Egg! Fried, scrambled, stewed or otherwise!

Anne Gray Bell: Some baby chickens!

Izzie Key: Some flowers from Hawaii would be mighty nice.

Anonymous: Jelly-Beans!

Bowling Will Head Future Teachers

Lucy Bowling was named president of the Future Teachers of America organization by secret ballot last week. Other officers elected were vice-president, Betty Adams; secretary, Katherine Prebble; treasurer, Anna Headlee; and librarian, Martha Ellen Jones.

Dr. J. L. B. Buck, Director of Teacher Education of the State Department of Education, was the first speaker on the F. T. A. Forum on Professional Relations that was held at S. T. C. April 5. His topic was "Opportunities for Qualified Teachers in Virginia". Dr. Buck spoke during the chapel period in the large auditorium. At 4 o'clock in the little auditorium, the officers were installed and the new members pledged. Mr. Francis Chase, Executive Secretary, V.E.A., spoke on "The Virginia Education Association and the F .T. A. in Virginia".

There was a panel discussion on Farmville State Teachers College Plan of Rating Student Teachers in the small auditorium at 8 o'clock. This discussion was led by Dr. Fred M. Alexander, Supervisor of Secondary Education of the State Department of Education. Leaders of the discussion were Dr. J. P. Wynne, T. J. McIlwaine, C. M. Bussinger, Miss Lucy Adams, Mary Ann Jarratt and Margaret Barksdale.

Glee Club To Appear On Campus April 21

On Saturday, April 21, the Randolph Macon College Glee Club, under the direction of William Troxell, will appear on campus in a concert sponsored by the Wesley Foundation of S. T. C.

The Glee Club consists of 26 male voices singing in four part harmony. Miss Gladys Courter will accompany them on the piano.

The program will be divided into two parts. The first being a group of songs by the Glee Club; the second a variety show.

Sunday morning, April 22, the Glee Club will sing at the Methodist Church in Farmville.

Stokes Will Head College Red Cross On Local Campus

Agnes Stokes has been elected by the Student Body to serve as chairman of the Red Cross College unit. Marjorie Hewlett has been elected to serve as vice-chairman, and Betty Adams is the new secretary - treasurer. These girls will replace Oheplia Whittle who acted as temporary chairman and Nancy Harrell as temporary secretary-treasurer.

AGNES STOKES

Agnes, a junior from Kenbridge, has recently been elected to Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary society for leadership. She has been active in the Y. W. C. A. and is the newly elected treasurer of the association. Marjorie Hewlett, junior from Richmond, was vice-president of the junior class and has recently been elected as vice-president of the House Council. Betty Adams, junior from Richmond, is president of the Debate Club, and is the Dining Room hostess for next year.

Mrs. Boyd Coyner is the general adviser of the committee. The four committee chairmen working with her are Miss Leola Wheeler, recreation; Mrs. Sophia Packer, blood donations; Miss Sprunt Hall, home nursing; and Miss Elizabeth Burger, first aid.

Mrs. Davis Speaks In Chapel On Peace

Sponsored by the Commission to study the Organization of Peace of the American Association for the United Nations, Inc., Mrs. Harvey N. Davis spoke to the students at the chapel hour this morning.

A noted educator, lecturer, writer and student of history, Mrs. Davis was connected with the Spence School of New York City for many years, serving as headmistress from 1929 to 1932. She is the wife of Dr. Davis, president of Stevens Institute of Technology in New Jersey. She has been a member of the Board of the League of Nations Association and chairman of its National Committee from 1925 to 1940.

Mrs. Davis has travelled extensively in Lebanon, Iraq, and Syria and is the author of many articles and research studies on the Near East.

Gibson, Linder Will Perform Thursday; Philip Noble To Show New England Slides

Lecturer Appears For Second Time

Arriving in Farmville this week, Philip Noble will present lectures and slides on New England in the large auditorium on Friday night at eight o'clock.

Mr. Noble has traveled over the United States presenting colored lantern slides and motion pictures of New England. He has appeared in Virginia at Madeira School in Fairfax County and in Staunton at the Foxcroft School and Stuart Hall. Among his engagements in other states are the University of Wyoming; State Teachers College, Plattsburg, New York; Columbia Institute, New York City; the Academy of Arts and Sciences, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; The Cleveland Museum of Fine Arts; the Harvard Club, Boston; and the Geographic Society, Chicago.

The son of Dr. T. Tertius Noble, Mr. Noble received his education at Harvard and Princeton.

This is his second trip to Farmville, his first being during the session of 1942-43, at which time he presented slides and a lecture to the student body.

There will be no reserved seats for this program.

Babcock To Speak In Chapel Tuesday

Miss Fern Babcock, program chairman of the National Y. W. C. A., will be here on the S. T. C. campus April 16 and 17. She will speak to the Y Cabinet at 4 o'clock, April 16. She will lead Prayers Monday night and will be the speaker in chapel April 17.

Miss Babcock was past secretary for Civic and Social Responsibility of the National Student Council of the Y. W. C. A. Prior experience also included work as Y. W. C. A. secretary of the University of Arkansas and as regional secretary for both the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. in the Southwest.

She is the author of A Program Book for Student Christian Associations, Direction for Everyday Living, and Strategic Vocations for Enduring Freedom.

Rev. Ernest K. Emurian, pastor of Madison Heights Methodist Church was Y speaker Tuesday, April 10. He spoke in chapel, at Prayers, and in an open association meeting.

Scott, Cock, East Named Church Heads

4 New Members Tapped By AKG

Girls Recognized In Chapel March 29

Minnie Lee Crumpler, junior from Suffolk; Lillian Elliott, junior from Farmville; Jackie Parden, junior from Norfolk; and Agnes Stokes, junior from Kenbridge; were tapped in chapel on Thursday, March 29 by Alpha Kappa Gamma, regional honorary fraternity for leadership in womanly service.

Minnie Lee was recently elected president of the Y. W. C. A. She was freshman counselor for the Y her sophomore year and treasurer her junior year and is also a member of the college choir.

Lillian has been selected editor-in-chief of the Virginian for 1946. She has been secretary of her class since her sophomore year and has been active in the dramatic club.

Jackie is the new president of the student body for 1945-1946. She was chairman of the U. S. O. committee last year.

Agnes is past president of the Westminister Fellowship, and freshman counselor for the Y. She is also a member of Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society for education.

The four-fold purpose of Alpha Kappa Gamma is to foster high ideals and to set up high standards for those women who have proven themselves most eminent in constructive leadership; to promote coordination of various college activities; to preserve the ideals and traditions of the school; and to bring the faculty and students together on a basis of mutual interest.

7 New Girls Enroll For Spring Quarter

Seven new girls enrolled at S. T. C. this quarter, according to an announcement made this week by Miss Virginia I. Bugg, registrar.

They are Mary Elizabeth Bowen, Lynchburg; Judith Rebecca French, Sunny Side; Grace Poole, Sacramento, California; Frances Hobson, Richmond; Frances Lee Smith, Emporia; Anne Willis, Culpeper; and Marion Wittkamp, Richmond.

Concert To Begin At 8:15 O'Clock

Beginning at 8:15 o'clock in the college auditorium on Thursday night, Dr. T. Tertius Noble, famous composer, director and organist, will direct the college choir, choral club, a'capella choirs and madrigal singers in the annual spring concert.

Gertrude Gibson, lyric soprano, and Lloyd Linder, tenor, will appear as soloists for the program. These two artists will replace Robert Nicholson and James Montgomery who had to cancel arrangements because of government work.

The program will be divided into two parts, and in each part, the soloists and student groups will participate.

Among the numbers scheduled are "Silent Worship" by Handel, "Belmonte's Aria" by Mozart, "Jubilate Amen" by Bruch, "Linden Lea" by Williams, "Sweet Little Jesus Boy" by MacGimsey and "Easter Allelulia" by T. Tertius Noble.

A choir master emeritus of St. Thomas Episcopal Church, New York City, Dr. Noble is a former organist of the New Minister Cathedral in Yorkshire, England.

While on the campus, the internationally-known organist will speak to the student body on hymnology Friday at the chapel hour.

All seats in the auditorium will be reserved, and there is a limited number for college students, as faculty members, some parents and friends of the college are expected to attend the concert.

This concert resembles the one held on the campus last spring at which time Dr. Noble directed the major oratorio, Brahm's Requfem. This same oratorio was presented and nationally broadcasted by the Duke University and S. T. C. choirs under the direction of Dr. Noble in New York in 1943.

Crumpler Announces Committee Chairmen For YWCA Cabinet

Committee chairmen, who with the recently elected Y officers, will compose the new Y. W. C. A. cabinet have been announced by Minnie Lee Crumpler, recently elected president of the Y.

Rachel Brugh, sophomore from Roanoke, was named chairman of the Church Cooperative Committee to succeed Margie Hewlett, and Connie Ozlin, junior from Chase City, will serve as chairman of the Library Committee, succeeding Jane Anderson.

The Membership Committee will be led by Ruth Brooks, junior from Farmville, who will succeed Virginia Treakle. Virginia Tindall, freshman from Hatton, will succeed Connie Ozlin as Music Chairman.

Charlotte Grizzard, Drewryville, will lead the Prayers Committee to succeed Mary Wyatt, and Margie Hewett, junior from Richmond, will serve as chairman of Public Affairs, succeeding Shirley Cruser. The Publicity Committee will be headed by Anna Headlee, sophomore from Norfolk, succeeding Sara Moling, and Patsy Dale, sophomore from Homeville will head the Service Committee, succeeding Rachel Brugh.

Hilda Bennett, sophomore from Bedford, will lead the Sing Committee, succeeding Betsy Fox and Kitty Maddox, and Virginia Mar-

Use Your Opportunity; Hear Finest Music

Music of the highest and finest quality will be presented tomorrow night at which time the choral groups will perform under the direction of Dr. T. Tertius Noble.

As college students, we need to have an appreciation of the finer and better things of life. Especially should we appreciate and enjoy music, the foundations of which were laid by medieval men.

These concerts have become one of the outstanding events of college life and are eagerly anticipated by students, faculty, and friends of the college.

Looking back over the years, we find such notable groups as Harvard, Duke, University of North Carolina, University of Virginia, University of Richmond, Washington and Lee, Hampden-Sydney College and other choral groups appearing with the College Choir in this yearly event. Because of the war and prevailing conditions throughout the country, it has been impossible to bring a male group this year.

However, the return visit of Dr. Noble is one of the highlights on the program. Not only is he known internationally as an organist and conductor, but his anthems, organ compositions and solo numbers have gained for him wide recognition. He is considered one of the world's leading authorities on Hymnology and has acted as chairman in the selection of hymnals for many Protestant churches. Quoting our beloved President, "Dr. Noble's coming last year was a benediction" and we know that his return visit will be equally inspirational.

The Rotunda staff joins the student body in an expression of sympathy for Rev. Philip A. Roberts in the recent loss of his wife.

This Is Your Paper; Lend A Helping Hand

With this issue of the Rotunda we, the new staff, "roll up our sleeves," half bury ourselves in yellow copy paper, and begin to work. We ask you to remember that this is your paper. It's about you and for you, so roll up your sleeves a little way and "give us a hand."

The job that lies ahead of us can not be done by just the staff members. If we must meet the deadline, we need your help. Someone that is careless about keeping an appointment with a reporter causes a lot of people a lot of trouble, more work, later burning of the midnight oil, and more grey hairs. Remember there is a deadline!

We have a great task to keep to the standard of good work that the last staff has left. They have left us a goal for which we must strive and with your cooperation, we are reaching out for the goal.

Often people that don't have their heads buried so far under copy paper can see where there is room for improvement more easily than we can. We're open for suggestions, so let us in on some of your good ideas. We share our ideas with you.

Don't forget that after a few weeks or a few months that this is still your paper, but keep your sleeves rolled up and remember we're working to print the Rotunda for you.

Gleanings

By Mildred Altice

On the eastern front this week, the Russians have reached the outskirts of Vienna. Concerning the diplomatic phase of the news, the Russian government denounced the Peace Pact between Russia and Japan. However, some administration leaders in Washington warn against a too optimistic interpretation of this act.

* * * *

On the western front as this week draws to a close, the British under General Montgomery are approximately eight miles from Bremen, the second most important port in Germany. About 200,000 Germans have been captured or killed by the British and American Armies during this week. The eastern and western fronts are said to be approximately 188 miles apart as this week ends. General Patton's Army captured a salt mine which contained large deposits of gold, deposits of German, French, and British money, and a large collection of art treasures. General Eisenhower warns that there will probably never be a formal surrender by the Germans.

* * * *

In the Pacific early this week, Marines invaded Okinawa Island with surprisingly little difficulty. At the end of the week a great air battle ensued in which the Japanese lost 294 planes, and we lost three destroyers. The air battle was followed by an important battleship and three destroyers sure of loss while three others were probably lost. As the week closed, a new cabinet took office with promises and apologies to the Japanese people.

* * * *

The picture presented by the war is wholly optimistic; however, that presented by the peace planning in addition to planning for the San Francisco Conference wavers between pessimism and hopeful optimism.

HEARD AFTER

BEDCHECK

In the cold chill of early morning we wrap our scanty p. j.'s a trifle more snugly and set out to make our initial plunge into the icy realm of the columnists. Our stroke is not sure enough to Perlerize, but we surely are not hunting to have our modest efforts treated in a cavalierly fashion. (Whether you know it or not, this is going to be "Be-kind-to-your-dumb-friends-week" at STC, and you might as well start it right now!) Furthermore, we want it clearly understood at the outset that any living columnist is purely coincidental to this resemblance. (In those days we were known as Ghosty.)

Drifting about the campus this week several items came to our attention.

We can't remember the girl's name who voiced the query, but it stuck in our cranium and irritated like a burr in bed: "Why the close affinity between certain residents of Richardson and H.-S. Collegians?" Do the rest of us live on the wrong side of the main drag or is there a power at work holding boys to running up steps and knocking at a girl's door? Come on, gals, divy up.

We wonder why the girls must run up and down in the hall over the auditorium during a lyceum? Seems to us that visiting dignitaries would carry away a better impression if they were not interrupted quite so violently.

And while we're criticizing we might express mild disapproval of the person who, about six weeks ago, dropped a jar of mayonnaise on the sidewalk in front of Main and it has yet to be cleaned up.

(We didn't drop it, we don't run over the auditorium, and we don't live in Richardson . . guess who?)

A goodly sprinkling of the gals turned out to freeze at H-S for the Lynchburg game. We saw Lucy give some civvy in a red hat a dirty look when he kidded her about a certain pitcher. Wonder why . . .?

Star Dust's fragrant melody is haunting us tonight . . . at this hour the stars have a personal appeal. Maybe 'tis because they too are brooding over complexities that flood our lives these days . . we wish that they could impart some of the wisdom that the ages have given them to us—we could use some of it.

Now to get a bit poetic—"In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love" and as a result, Lou Davisson and Judy Light are the proud wearers of diamonds and wedding bells have rung for Luverta Joyner. Our own Jean Freeman has been chosen to reign as queen of a Kappa Tau dance at W. & M.

Short story of this week has as its characters Lieut. and Mrs. Carl Van Putnam, who stopped on their

The Y

By ANNA HEADLEE

Last Thursday night at Prayers the new "Y" cabinet was installed.

The Methodist girls are looking forward to the coming of the Randolph - Macon Glee Club next week-end.

Sunday night the Canterbury Club enjoyed a social at the rectory after their regular business meeting.

The new B. S. U. Council will go to Longwood this week-end for the spring retreat. The new officers will be installed during the church service on Sunday morning.

After the election of officers by the Newman Club, the officers of the various church groups will have been elected. The "Y" is looking forward to a very successful and cooperative year as it works with the five denominational groups on campus, the B. S. U., Canterbury Club, Newman Club, Wesley Foundation, and Westminster Fellowship.

Reverend Ernest K. Emurian spoke in Chapel and at Prayers yesterday. He also spoke at the open association meeting in the Y Lounge on "Our Practical Faith.' He was inspirational, humorous, and thoroughly enjoyable.

Miss Fern Babcock will be the special "Y" speaker next week.

The theme for the week in prayers is "Finding God in Our Hearts". There will be a special musical program tonight.

SPRING COTILLION

Question of the Week

What did you think of the Freshman Cavalcade?

"Ebbie" Perry: A little shady in spots, but at least it was different.

Frances Lee: Some grand ideas, but a little risque.

"Poddy": Sharp!

Cab Overbey: Rather suggestive, but one of the best.

Kitty Sue Bridgforth: 'Twas good, but I've never seen anything like it at S. T. C. before.

Barbara Montgomery: It was rare.

Anonymous (1): Kinda like a double exposure, but plenty good

Mary Harrison: It was snitchyipe! Those jokes!

Margaret Wilson: It was a land mark in S. T. C. history.

Dot Bennett: It was super.

Lou Baker: It tickled me.

A Freshman: I thought it was darn good.

Joan of Arc: I didn't see it, but they tell me I missed something.

Dot Owen: I think we oughta have more like it.

Joan Davis: Amazing, with a superb show of talent. Really an "F. S."

Heidi Lacy: Look out Broadway!

Mar Kent Stevens: They've got what it takes . . . (Wonder how it was taken?)

Grace Loyd: Naughty, but nice!

Ruth Rowe: Very, very entertaining.

Eleanor Wade: I like catching Bridal Bouquets.

Anonymous (2): Wheeee!

The Questioning Minds Asks What Is Russia's Religion

The religion of the mass of Russian people, irregardless of what happened before and after the Revolution, is nominally orthodox Christianity as taught by the so-called "Holy Orthodox Church" or the "Greek Orthodox Church." It was introduced into Russia from Byzantium at the time when the rivalry between the Eastern and Western sections of the Christian Church was near its breaking point.

One of the peculiarities of the Russian Orthodox Church, by which it was marked from its very inception, was its close organic relation to the State and to the patronage of the Crown. Another peculiarity of the Russian Church is the fact that the Christianity it adopted at the close of the 10th century was the religion of a declining State, rapidly losing the once glorious traditions of the Byzantine Empire. Finally, being imposed upon the people by order of a despotic ruler, it was simply grafted upon the existing paganism, much of which has survived to this day in the religious cult and the customs of the people.

Under the Tsar, there was no aspect of church life, which was free of state control, and in many respects the clergy performed the functions of State officials. This close union led to an inevitable and eventual complete abolition of secular privileges of the Church and its incorporation into the framework of governmental institutions.

The teachings of the Russian Orthodox Church emphasize the static aspects of religion. Western Christianity elaborates theology and doctrine and formulates moral principles and rules for social behavior, especially in Protestant Churches. The Orthodox Church emphasizes worship. Ritual, symbolism and emotion are central in Eastern Christianity. To attend worship resembles participating in a drama. The Eucharist (the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, the central rite in the church) is the emotional exercise in the East. The Sermon as instruction in doctrine and exhortation to morality is the intellectual exercise in the West.

In Russia, more than medieval Europe, the icon (an image or representation, as in painting bas-relief or mosiac of Christ, the Virgin Mary, or as saint) had to replace books. In its images, it had to relate graphically, episodes from the Holy Scriptures, the lives of the Saints, the meaning of holidays; in fact, all that might interest the pious people in the domain of religion. Thus the icon became the Bible for the masses. Next to icon worship; the doctrine of prayer for the dead is of the greatest importance in the practice of the Orthodox Church.

The clergy never has become as learned as that of the Protestant or Roman Catholic church. There is no need for it since no new truth is to be discovered. There exists some scholarship to perpetuate the traditional theology and guard against heretics who might undermine the Orthodox faith. The Russian Church, unlike the churches of the West, has developed no institutions of secular learning. Church colleges and universities never developed in Russia. Thus, because of the absence of learning, the Russian Church was not only unable to develop further the religious ideas she had received, but she was even unable to preserve them unchanged.

The revolution took the Church unawares. This, of course, was quite natural view of its previous history. The immobility of dogma, the prevalence of administrative activities over the Spiritual, the ritual of the services and the masses and their indifference towards the spiritual contents of religion, placed the Russian

Orchesis Recital Given Up for Term

May Day to Contain Modern Dances

Orchesis has given up its recital for this year because of so many activities being given in the spring. The girls voted to put off the recital until next year, with plans being made already to put it on fall quarter of next session.

Those girls who are apprentices to Orchesis will fulfill their apprenticeship by participating in May Day. This year's May Day contains more modern dance than it has in previous years. The entire first section is made up completely of modern dance.

Some of the girls have been given leading roles, while others are participating in a folk dance, as well as the masses of the first and second section.

Officers of Orchesis are Betty Ellis president; Edith Loving, secretary, Frances Lee, costume chairman, Betsy Caldwell, treasurer, and Jean Smith, historian.

Afternoon Classes Slated for Tennis In Spring Quarter

Now that spring is really here the tennis courts are always occupied. A number of girls are playing tennis to make up their third periods. Every afternoon there are regular scheduled classes at 2:50 and 3:50 and on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 1:50 and Mondays and Wednesdays at 4:50. So many of the girls are taking their daily exercise by playing tennis that it is necessary to sign up for a definite time to use one of the courts. Everyone come on out to the tennis courts. You can have fun, make up a third period, and get a good sun tan.

Every Monday and Wednesday nights at 9:00 and on Saturday nights from 9:15 until 10:15 recreational swimming is in session. You may get in your third periods for swimming or also for seasonal sports.

Cotillion Members To Hackle Goats Next Monday. Tuesday

Cotillion Goat week will be on April 16 and 17, the Monday and Tuesday following the dance. The general rules are,

1. You may not go to the post office until after chapel.
2. You must address all Cotillion Club members as Miss.
3. You must carry a supply of matches for Cotillion Club members.
4. You must attend all meals.
5. You must convene in front of the Colonnade at 12:30 and after lunch.
6. You must carry your books on a green and yellow stick over your shoulder—hobo style.
7. You must present the school with a gift before lunch on the second day.
8. You must not go off the campus in this attire.

FIRST DAY

1. Impersonate some famous person that you would like to be or that you admire. Dress like that person. Speak like that person. Act like that person.
2. Make up a four line song to the tune of "Accentuate the Positive", explaining whom you are impersonating.

SECOND DAY

1. Dress to represent some nursery rhyme. You may get together in groups if your nursery rhyme has more than one character.
2. Prepare a 2 to 3 minute skit showing your rhyme.
3. Talk in baby talk.

Church in a totally different relation to revolutionary ideas from that which existed in seventeenth-century England, where the revolution of religious ideas preceded and was closely connected with the political revolution.

Moreover, traditionally the Russian Church had been a tool of the State and was made to follow a definite policy, which in itself rendered the church a natural and inevitable opponent of the revolution. With the passive attitude of society and the masses towards church affairs, the part played by the church was never questioned and was accepted as a fact. But by degrees, as Russia entered the revolutionary period of her history and the state increased efforts to suppress the opposition, the conservative rule of the church become more and more apparent. Immediately before the resolution, during the most intense moment of the struggle, the state applied to the church seeking its spiritual support and justification as a substantiation of its own material force. Thus, to its misfortune, the Russian Church entered the revlutionary field in a militant role.

Anne Taylor was elected vice-president of the Canterbury Club, while Mary Catlett was named secretary, and Virginia Butler was chosen treasurer. Acting as program, worship, and social chairmen will be Margaret Verell, May Ballard, and Sara Ballard.

Christine Shiflet was elected vice-president of Westminister Fellowship. Connie Odlin was chosen secretary, and Lucy Bowling was named treasurer.

Left Lead

The big day has been set, Jocks, and it's May 19. Mark it up on your calendar right this very minute, and don't let anything . . . not even your scheduled week-end(?) keep you away from Longwood that day. Why not? 'Cause that's the day of the Horse Show, and that's something that just isn't to be missed!

JOB-GETTERS

The Riding Club had a meeting last Tuesday night . . . record attendance and surprising results. Just a few committees have been appointed, but work has already begun. In charge of making the ribbons is Betty Cock, with Jody Davis, Kim Kimmerling, and Nan Ingle on her committee. Chairman of the programs committee is Shirley Gibson, and assisting her will be Mabel Weaver and Betty Tom Andrews. Jean Sauerwein heads the prizes group, with Mary Sterrett and B. Cock to help back her up. Later on we'll hear the moans of those appointed to the White-washing Committee (all volunteers will be gratefully grabbed up at a moment's notice!) and we'll know about those in charge of food and parking and things by the next meeting. If you missed the meting and are interested in helping out on any of the committees, just see Joyce, and there's plenty of room for you in whichever group you feel you can do your best.

JOB-DOERS

Already the ribbons have been cut and they're waiting now at the Printer's office for the next step. Ribbons are a little smaller this year, but none the less impressive. In fact, with the slight change in style, they might even be more desirable than ever . . . whether blue, red, yellow or white . . . just so's it's a ribbon!

The program is all lined up, too . . . with twelve classes, including those limited to S. T. C. and those open to any entries; standard things like Junior-beginners on up through advanced, and the old faithfuls like the pairs of riders and the Old Virginia Riders . . . and the knock-down - drag - out final event, the Costume Class. This early, even, several of the horses have been already spoken for, so you'd better think up something quick, and get your name on the list while there's a chance. We've had everything from Spanish Cavaliers to S. T. C. "Night Riders", so lift your imagination into a canter and do some fast thinking.

There have been a few changes this year . . . one is that there will be a small admission to the Horse-Show. Ten cents for students and fifteen for town-people . . . but we know for sure that won't scare the crowd away. Also, in addition to their Blue Ribbons, first prize winners this year will be awarded small gifts contributed by the local merchants.

TRAIL-HITTERS

Sunday afternoon called for high-ridin' in zoot-suits, so it was off to Hampden-Sydney for six S. T. C.'ers and their trusty steeds, with a picnic lunch spread on the green of somebody's shady front lawn. One of the nicest features of the ride was (now, now . . . we weren't going to mention the sunbathers in front of Cushing!) the hospitality of the place. We even tried a swift canter around that inviting track of theirs, and nobody said a word. Perhaps that was because nobody could catch us, but we didn't linger, at that!

TID-BITS

We bet you liked Thunderhead! And just wait til you see "National Velvet". And just incidentally, both of those books are to be had for the reading . . . try them some time.

Stay on the bit . . .

PEGASUS

Betty Ellis'

On the Ball

Greetings again sports fans! Have been taking a small vacation from this column, while the girls who are trying out for the sports staff take their chances on a wee bit of fiction in the sports world, but it really feels good to be back in the ole accustomed swing of things.

SOFTBALL

Softball becomes the number one sport on the activity calendar for spring quarter. Right now comes the urgent request to get in those eight practices to support your class colors by becoming a member of the team. The time is drawing nigh, when those last few points will mean an awful lot in deciding who will have the color cup this year.

Practices are being held every afternoon except Friday, and even though you attend those practices, gather up the gang, and get some workouts in the evening after supper, and on Saturday and Sunday afternoons when you haven't any classes. As the old saying goes, "practice makes perfect," and getting in all kinds of practices, running, pitching, catching and others help to make you a better player. The more versatile you are, the more capable you will be in helping to make yours a winning team.

ARCHERY

With spring, comes the twang of arrows as they sail through the air towards the bullseye. This is a sport that develops strength, accuracy, skill and coordination. It isn't an easy sport, either, for it demands all of the above to make you an expert with the bow and arrow.

This sport first developed as an essential need in the life of a primitive man, and today finds it one of the most popular sports on campuses and in everyday life. As in other sports, you have to learn the knack of the thing to really enjoy it, and once you have, it is really exciting to see how many times you can come close to the bullseye, and how many times you can really hit it. This is an activity that requires being an individual, and it is up to you alone to make the best of it. Get those practices in so that when the time comes for the archery tournament, you will be capable of entering without any fears or qualms as to whether you are good enough or not.

GOLFING

"Hole in one", it is really unbelievable, as you turn to your friends with a smile, but that can really come true, for the more you play, the more expert you become. The golf links at Longwood are something we are very proud of here at STC, and here's your chance to take advantage of them. A round robin of nine or if you're brave eighteen holes can be both exciting and interesting.

There's no reason for begging out of playing golf, because you don't know how, for you may take golf as a class, or make up your third period with it. A capable instructor is perfectly willing to lend a helping hand, and losing golf balls won't be so bad after a few lessons, for you really won't be losing them anymore.

We can't classify golf as an old man's sport anymore, for many are the sore arms and backs after using muscles unused before. Learning to drive and putt really isn't hard at all, and next thing you know, you might even be another famous Bobby Jones.

TENNIS

"Please don't step on my face," is the appeal sent up from the tennis courts, as a pair of high-heeled shoes starts their way gingerly across the alley. Please remember to wear your tennis shoes when you play, and as a spectator, stay off the court unless you are wearing rubber soled shoes. It is not fair to ruin the courts, and we are proud of them, for they are some of the best in the State.

On rainy days, postpone that match until the sum has had a chance to come out and dry up the courts thoroughly. If you help to care for the courts, it makes it easier to keep them in the best condition possible, so that there won't be unnecessary waits for the courts to be rolled.

Until next week, stay in the game, and come out for your class teams.

way through Farmville last Thursday afternoon just to say hello. Mrs. Putnam is the former Florence Whiting Lee, of Hampton, an S. T. C. graduate. It was, however, Carl's first visit to Farmville, and he not only took in all the scenery of the campus, but braved the dangers of the dining hall for supper before they left! We understand Lieut. Putnam is being awarded a special campaign ribbon and a citation for outstanding achievement outside the line of duty!

The limelight for another "outstanding achievement" points to Ann Kingdon. For details, go to her . . . all we'll say is that she SWALLOWED her K. A. pin!

We wouldn't be bragging, but even the anonymous author of bed-check must long since have gone to sleep. However, we can't see who might be reading over our shoulder so we won't spill anything on our colleague. Our spies are everywhere but as yet they tell us nothing. Ho! Hum! We're running down . . .

20 Students Attain All A's For Winter

Twenty girls made straight A's for the winter quarter according to an announcement this week from the registrar's office. Of this group, ten are seniors, eight are juniors, and two are freshmen.

The girls who made straight "A" are Elizabeth Adams, Richmond; Jean Akers, Gladstone; Mildred Altice, Rocky Mount; Margaret Barksdale, Java; Marilyn Bell, Richmond; Anna Lee Blanton, Cumberland; Carolyn Bobbitt, South Hill; Carolyn Booth, Wakefield; Nancy Dickerson, Spout Spring; Eula Belle Doggett, Isle of Wight; and Annette Grainger, Farmville.

Also, Nancy Harrell, Emporia; Martha Hite, Blackstone; Kitty Maddox, Lynchburg; Sara Dailey Moling, Winchester; Myra Anne Motley, Danville; Jean Prosise, Wilson; Virginia Treakle, Farmville; Eleanor Wade, Charlottesville and Mary Franklin Woodward, Barhamsville.

STC-ers Entertain Veteran Soldiers

A group of S. T. C. girls, chaperoned by C. G Gordon Moss, went to Camp Pickett Sunday, April 1, and entertained convalescent overseas veterans.

With Betty Ellis acting as mistress of ceremonies, they gave their performance in three wards in the afternoon, and before a large assembly that night.

Among the entertainers was a trio composed of Pat Maddox, and Julia and Lucy Messick. Margaret Brace and Ann Masloff each sang a number of solos. Betty Ellis and Doris Ramsey danced a special jitterbug number and Betty did a Spanish dance alone. Gin T. Pullen was accompanist for all these numbers.

Another group of girls, chaperoned by Miss Leola Wheeler of the college U. S. O. committee went down Saturday night, April 7, and acted as junior hostesses in Service Club No. 3.

On both occasions, the girls were enthusiastically received and arrangements are being made for more students to go in the near future.

Home Ec Club Gives Style Show April 10

The Home Economics Club presented a "Style Show" last night in the large auditorium, at 7.00. The program was open to the student body, and included the modeling of the dresses and tailored suits or coats which the girls have made during the school years.

Feature of the program was a humorous set of contrasts given at the beginning of the program, including examples of how- and how-not to go to breakfast, dress for a date, leave for a week-end, appear at lyceums, dress as a teacher, or loaf around the dormitories. Introductions in verse added to the amusement of the entertainment. In charge of program, were Alice Lee Davis, Alla Stone Smith, and Betty Deuel Cock.

After the style show, the members of the Home Economics Club met for a social meeting and election of officers. Edith Bryant was in charge of refreshments.

SHANNON'S

★ SENIOR ★ PERSONALITY ★

PAT MADDOX

From the time she first sang "My Man" at the '41 freshman party, Pat Maddox has been a personality of the present senior class. Now vice-president of the choir and leader of the Madrigal group, she is still active as a senior in her "first love", music.

Best known for her musical contributions, the senior who holds the spotlight this week has shown her versatility in other activities. Being managing editor of the '45 Virginian which she more often calls "the good book," has revealed her literary talents. Any old time she might be found struggling with the elements in the chemistry lab, for that is her major subject and problem.

Chief among her likes are "tea room breakfasts" and the cold wave permanent that needs no nightly "rolling up." Her pet peeve is "belated checks" from home. Pat's friend call her "Piem", derived from her initials, P. L. M.

Class productions and circus stunts would never have been complete without Pat's song. Her services, however, have reached beyond the school, for she has sung for the various civic organizations in town and for the college U. S. O. entertainment at Camp Pickett.

Recognized by Alpha Kappa Gamma in her senior year, Pat Maddox has truly enlightened four years with service to her class and college.

Presidents Succeed Wade, Sharpe. Fox

Ann Martin, Suffolk; Dorothy Overcash, Hampden - Sydney; Agnes Stokes, Kenbridge are the newly elected presidents of Alpha Kappa Gamma, Pi Gamma Mu, and Kappa Delta Pi respectively to succeed Lucy Manson Sharpe, Betsy Fox, and Eleanor Wade.

Other officers of Alpha Kappa Gamma are vice-president, Shirley Cruser succeeding Sara Bird Williams; secretary, Virginia Treakle succeeding Jane Waring Ruffin; and treasurer, Elcanor Bisese succeeding Harriette Moore.

Succeeding Nancy Harrell as vice-president of Pi Gamma Mu is Emily Carper. Eleanor Bisese was re-elected secretary, and Betty Adams was elected treasurer to succeed Caroline Huddle.

Betty Adams is the newly elected vice-president of Kappa Delta Pi succeeding Alice Nichols; Katherine Prebble is secretary succeeding Mary Franklin Woodward; and Jane Anderson is reporter-historian succeeding Mary Preston Sheffey.

Peebles To Head Campus USO Work

McKenry, Prebble Elected Officers

Beverly Peebles, junior from Hampton, has been selected chairman of the College U. S. O. committee to succeed Jackie Parden. Lucie McKenry from Manassas was chosen to succeed Kay Lynch as vice-chairman, and Katherine Prebble of Lynchburg succeeds Ophelia Whittle as secretary-treasurer.

Also serving on the committee are Mary Jane Bond, Anne Baer, Nancy Duncan, Kay Lynch, Jackie Parden, and Virginia Tindall.

The College U. S. O. works with the special service officer at Camp Pickett and with the hostesses in the service clubs there. A group of one hundred students was asked to one dance at Pickett this year, but at present there is no demand for large numbers of girls. Groups of twenty-three girls have on two occasions attended small parties at a service club. They acted as junior hostesses and talked with and entertained convalescent overseas veterans.

MARY PRESTON SHEFFEY

Students To Give Final Speeches

Girls Interested In School Clubs

Sara Dailey Moling, of Winchester, has been named first honor graduate of the class of 1945, according to an announcement made by Dr. J. L. Jarman last week. Sara will deliver the valedictory address at commencement exercises in June.

Mary Preston Sheffey, of Marion, who was named second honor graduate will deliver the salutatory address.

Sara has been active in extra-curricular activities since transferring to this college from Beihaven College in Mississippi her junior year. She was chairman of the publicity committee of the Y during the past year, was poetry editor of the Colonnade, a member of the Rotunda staff, and of Boerc Eh Thorn. Sara has been cited in Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges.

A transfer from Marion College, Mary Preston was president of the Spanish Club during the past year, reporter of Kappa Delta Pi, and publicity chairman of Westminister Fellowship. She, too, has been cited in Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges.

At a recent meeting of Kappa Delta Pi, national honorary society in education, four girls were elected to membership. They are, Mary Armistead Catlett, junior from Wicomico; Dorothy Cummings, junior from Charlottesville; Alice Burks Davis, junior from Phenix; and Edith Jones, senior from Holland.

These girls will be initiated on April 24 at which time the newly-elected officers, Agnes Stokes, president; Betty Adams, vice-president; Katherine Prebble, secretary, Anna Lee Blanton, treasurer; and historian-reporter, Jane Anderson, will also be installed.

Retiring officers of Kappa Delta Pi are, Eleanor Wade, president; Alice Nichols, vice-president; Mary Franklin Woodward, secretary; and Mary Anne Jarratt, treasurer.

Macon Glee Club To Give Program

Wesley Foundation Will Sponsor Group

Beginning at 8 o'clock on Saturday, April 21, the Randolph-Macon College Glee Club will appear on campus in a concert under the direction of William Troxell. Mr. Troxell is professor of music at Randolph Macon College and has been a director of music for twelve years. Before coming to Randolph Macon, he taught music at Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg. Mr. Troxell has also directed major plays and entertainments.

Sponsored on this campus by the Wesley Foundation, the Glee Club consists of 26 male voices, singing in four part harmony. Miss Gladys Courter will accompany them on the piano.

The program will be divided into two parts. The first, a group of well-known songs sung by the Glee Club; the second, a variety show. The show will be done in typical minstrel style, consisting of several quartets, trumpet solos, jokes, dancing, and starring Ernest Deitborn, magician. Mr. Deitborn has entertained in several Army camps and has traviled over the country with various camp shows.

The Glee Club will sing in Chapel Saturday morning and will present a program at the Methodist church Sunday night.

Glee Club officers are Ernest Deitborn, president; Sumpter Priddy, business manager; and Robert Eldrid, librarian.

Cooperation Urged For May Day Program

"In order to have a successful May Day program, we need the cooperation of not only the upperclassmen but the underclassmen as well", Dody Jones said this week in discussing the plans.

Dances have been started, and dance fundamental students as well as other girls in school will perform. The five Russian folk dances include Arkon, Hopak, Katerina, Kolomeyka, and Holiday Walk. Under the direction of Lucy Manson Sharpe, the home economics majors are working on costumes for the various dances.

Dody Jones is the general chairman of May Day assisted by Frances Lee. Serving as business manager is Catherine Trower, while Betty Ellis is in charge of dances; Connie Oslin, music; Carol Diggs, staging; Margaret Orange, transportation; and Lucy Manson Sharpe, costumes.

Wynne Emphasizes Rule For Teaching

"A Collegiate Professional Certificate shall be required for all beginning high school teachers after July 1, 1946," according to a statement in the "Manual of Administration for High Schools of Virginia, 1942."

Dr. J. P. Wynne, head of the education department, has stated that this should be called to the attention of all freshmen, sophomores, and juniors in college who plan to each so that they may arrange to do student teaching.

Issued by the State Board of Education, the manual further states that all teachers in accredited high schools shall be properly certificated for subjects which they teach.

This regulation means that a junior, sophomore, or freshman who is enrolled in the college can not secure a certificate to teach in high school unless she does her practice student teaching. So far as she is concerned, the old Collegiate Certificate that has, in the past, been awarded to straight B. S. and straight B. A. graduates is worthless for beginning high school teachers.

Officers Installed In Alpha Phi Sigma

Incoming officers of Alpha Phi Sigma were installed recently at the regular meeting in the Honor Room. The newly elected officers are president, Virginia Tindall; vice-president, Dorothy LaDue; corresponding secretary, Lucie Addleman; recording secretary, Tucker Wynn; treasurer, Audrey Lee Davis; reporter, Annette Grainger; and chaplain, Faye Wolfe.

Retiring officers are president, Patsy Dale; vice-president, Mary Stuart Buford; corresponding secretary, Rachael Brugh; recording secretary, Ann Carter; treasurer, Paige Cook; reporter, Dorothy Turley; and chaplain, Anna Headlee.

T. Tertius Noble States His One Wish To Again Give Recital In Yorkminster

Conductor, Organist Born In England

The appointment was made for 3:30 in Mr. Strick's class room, but we of the press, ever mindful of many things arrived at 3:25. No, Dr. Noble had not yet arrived . . . for the room was full of a weird combination of H. S. clarinet, and its H. S. owner, and an S. T. C. pianist who was adding to the general confusion. Of all the music we ever heard, we at once voted that as least apt to be a successful lullaby. Even a few seconds was too much, so on out the front window we went, copy-paper in one hand and pencil behind the ear, only to find our victim perched on a bench with one eye on his watch and the other on the passers-by. The greeting was unanimous . . . "Shall we sit here instead of interrupting the concert in there?" . . . and so under the spreading cedar tree we took our places, and the interview began.

Dr. T. Tertius Noble was born in England, and lived there until the year 1913 when he came to America. ("My lucky year!" he smiled.) It seems that he was under the average age to have had a cathedral appointment, for whereas most people who had been given cathedral appointments rarely received them until they were in their late thirties or forties, "being, then, at the ends of their tethers, so to speak," Dr. Noble had accepted his at the age of twenty-four, and even after 20 years of cathedral work, he was still so young, and "so full of awful energy" that he needed "more room to kick." America seemed to him just the place wherein he could find this kicking space, and so to America came one of the greatest men America has ever known.

We went from here, for it was hard to keep him on the subject of himself instead of music, into a discussion of hymnology. Dr. Noble doesn't favor many of the "lovely old tunes,' neither here nor in England, for the simple fact that while many of the melodies are lovely old tunes, indeed, the words which were supposed to fit them were so often misfitted that they actually had a nonsensical rhythm, which made for incorrect accentuation, ruining not only the hymn, but the idea behind it.

"The words", said Dr. Noble, "should be the outstanding part, and the melody should fit the words, with the rest of the score a back-ground, filled with pleasing harmony."

He went on, "The Victoria era, you see, was a bad one for the Church. All kinds of art went to pieces, especially music. Both England and United States had a number of amateur composers who were hard at work writing the wrong kind of hymns." This he illustrated in his talk Friday night.

"Nothing but rubbish was being written," he continued, "but there was nothing that anyone could do to stop them. The majority of people liked these trite songs, and the publishers knew that they would sell, don't you see?"

Dr. Noble said that there is only one way to eliminate this poor type of work, and that is to keep it away from the young people. He has been very active in trying to do this, having been on several committees, and being at present, or as he says, he "happens to be" president of the Hymn Society of America. He says that in the Sunday Schools especially, there is great opportunity to give the young people the beautiful tunes which are being written. Instead of the "jingie tunes", as he calls them. Dr. Noble served on the committee which revised the Episcopal hymn - book last year, and for many of his ideas, so frankly expressed, he jokingly admits that he had become very unpopular with many of the Episcopal clergymen in America, especially those of the south, and those of the lower church.

Dr. Noble goes back to Eng-

In Memoriam

Today we mourn the loss of our President who slipped quietly and swiftly to his final rest last Thursday evening. The magnitude of the calamity that has befallen this nation at this hour no one can measure. It will only be seen in the long perspective of history.

The entire world mourns with the United States, for Franklin Delano Roosevelt was known all over the globe as a defender of freedom and liberty. He was known and loved by the little people of the world, the unknown native in India and the countless thousands in China; he was known and loved by the big people in the world, the rulers of the great nations of the world who mourn not only the loss of a great statesman but a personal friend.

The smiling face of our late President, his quiet assurance, his easy voice, were one to the world with all that our country stands for: liberty, personal freedom, and peace. And he gave his life in war as surely as the soldier on the front line. The new President, Harry Truman, has fittingly asked that the name of Franklin Delano Roosevelt be placed at the head of all service honor rolls in the nation.

In great dignity the body of the late President was laid to rest in his ancestral home on Sunday. And all over the world flags still fly at half mast in silent tribute to his memory. The radio networks and the newspapers of this nation paid an unprecedented tribute on Thursday night and Friday following his death when they devoted hour after hour and page after page to the life and the accomplishments of Franklin Roosevelt.

Already the new President has begun his gigantic task. And he began it by pledging to the people his word that the great works begun by Franklin Roosevelt should continue, that the war should be carried on to completion on both fronts and that peace plans would continue. We must have faith in this man. We must have the same faith that had Franklin Roosevelt when he said to this nation more than twelve years ago that "we have nothing to fear save fear itself."

Franklin Delano Roosevelt has gone to the first peace that he can have known since he took oath as President in the troubled year of 1933, and we of the present can know that history will deal with him as the greatest American of his time, perhaps of all times.

Session Almost Over; Live Life To Fullest

As we come within approximately six weeks of graduation, it would be well for us to take a backward look on past happenings and then a forward look on scheduled events for the future.

Recalling past experiences and activities throughout the year, we should mention the Dramatic Club plays, concerts and lyceums, the special speakers, and the curricular and extra-curricular activities. All of these things go to make up that thing called college or college life

Even more important to us than looking back, however, is the process of looking forward. The days and weeks that are ahead will be filled with May Day practices, spring picnics, classes, and examinations. There will be more things for us to do than we can possibly do. We must decide how we can live these weeks to the fullest in order that our college days may be most meaningful. It is too late now to make up for things undone throughout the year. There is time left, however, in which you may enter into the true Farmville spirit as you live together with fellow students on the campus.

To the seniors who will be leaving the sheltering walls of college to go out to a world of conflict and chaos, we could not emphasize too much the importance of living these days to the fullest. Then to underclassmen, you must realize your opportunities on this campus and make the most of them in order that you will be prepared to do your part and to live your life effectively in the community in which you may find yourself.

The next six weeks ahead of us have been made possible in a number of cases through parental sacrifices. It is our duty to live them to the fullest.

Gleanings

By Mildred Altice

The British and American armies are on to Berlin and also toward a union with the Soviet Army.

* * * *

The Russian Army completed the capture of Vienna on Friday. At the end of this week Marshal Stalin announced that Commissar Molotov would come to the San Francisco peace meeting.

* * * *

The Marines on Okinawa underwent a slight setback, but as the week drew to a close they were in possession of one half of the island.

* * * *

On Thursday the world was shocked and saddened by the news of the President's death. When the news became fully realized a great many Americans, both in civilian and military life, grieved the loss of a personal friend. The world mourns his death because he was a great and sympathetic leader; we mourn his death because he was our friend.

So characteristic of Franklin D. Roosevelt are these words from his Jefferson Day speech: "The only limits to our realizations of tomorrow will be our doubts of today." As a memorial to him, then let us give sincere and active support to our new President, Harry S. Truman and, above all, to the San Francisco Conference.

HEARD AFTER

BEDCHECK

Biggest flash of the week end—and I mean flashy is Judy Connelly's frat pin. Her beaming face tells the whole story.

The most talked of event was Helen McGuire's date—with none other than the Buddy Hubbard. No wonder she was all aflutter. She's been floating on air all week.

Say, why doesn't Betsy Dillard move to first floor senior building- She must get mighty tired of walking down all those steps to the telephone.

S. T. C. was well represented at University of Virginia this week end. Ask Anne Willis about her birthday celebration. Dance or no dance, Wells and Minetree sallied forth once more for Virginia. By the way, where do you girls go to school?

Lois Lloyd's "man" celebrated his going into the air corps by sending her an orchid this week end—more power to her.

One of Jo Beatty's men arrived on the scene this week end. You're just too "d. b.", Jo.

Why so sad, Mary Anne? "Bo's departure couldn't have anything to do with this, or could it?

Blind dates plus a picnic provide fun galore. For further details see Fay Johnson and Sara Moling.

That "Georgia" man raised Marguerite's blood pressure at least 10 points. Sounds pretty serious when she starts planning for him to meet the family. Better keep an eye on him though.

Dotty, when did your dates get the idea they must ask Betty's permission? And just when is this young man going to make his appearance.

Cutest couple seen around campus this week end was Virginia Shackleford and her Uncle Dick. Of course, it's all right, Virginia, since his wife is away.

The title of "Travel Queen" goes to Sy Leech. Did Johnny present her with a season bus ticket?

Johnny got pretty excited about that H. W. R. It's nice to find out your future husband's life history before you meet him—but Johnny, remember Ouija isn't too trustworthy. For any further information not revealed after bedcheck see Madame Ouija in room 37 CH.

Last Sunday the Methodist girls entertained the Presbyterian young people at a supper followed by a very interesting program. The new officers of the Wesley Foundation were installed Sunday night.

Don't forget the Randolph-Macon Concert Friday night sponsored by the Wesley Foundation!

The Baptist girls report that a wonderful time was had by all who attended the spring retreat held at Longwood last week end. The local B. S. U. will be represented at the state retreat in Harrisonburg this week end by its president.

The new officers of the Canterbury Club have been installed and have started to work on the plans for the new year.

The Newman Club has elected its officers for the coming year.

Saturday, April 14, was convention day for all Y. W. C. A.'s who are members of the National Conference. Due to war restrictions, there was no special national meeting. Our Y cabinet met and had a very interesting discussion on world affairs.

Miss Fern Babcock, national Y. W. C. A. program secretary, spoke in Chapel Tuesday, April 17. The old and new Y cabinets and all the church councils met Tuesday afternoon at 3 with Miss Babcock.

The theme of the week for Prayers is "The Inner Conflict". Tonight the topic will be "God, the Bread of Life". Tomorrow, the topic will be "God Is With You".

Rise up, O men of God!
Have done with lesser things;
Give heart and soul and mind and strength
To serve the King of Kings!

PING-PONG TOURNEY

Letters to the Editor:

Dear Editor,

We think that the time has come for something to be done about the chapel behavior. Throughout the year many have complained of this, but we feel that the lack of respect shown at the Memorial Service, Saturday, was the CLIMAX!

It is true that there are not enough hymn books in the rear of the auditorium for the girls to be able to sing, but they should have enough respect to stand while the hymns are being played. We are almost ashamed to mention those girls who talk, study, read or write letters, and read newspapers in chapel.

It has come to the point that is seems necessary for the monitors to have the authority to give "call downs" for misconduct during the chapel exercises. It certainly wouldn't hurt to try this.

Sincerely,
Beatrice Bruch
Patsy Dale

Dear Editor,

In the humble opinion of this writer, when a concert ranges from Old English ballads to Latin Melodies, when they are sung not only by our own College Choir and Choral Club, but by two well-known singers, and when the whole concert is under the direction of such a renowned musician as Dr. T. Tertius Noble, with the able help of Mr. Strick, then that concert just has to be a good one.

The annual spring concert which was given Thursday night fulfilled all these requirements, and it was very good indeed. It would be safe, I think, to say that everyone who attended enjoyed it.

Taken all in all, the concert was a success and though I don't wish to be trite, a few orchids should go to the Choir and Choral Club and to Mr. Strick for making this concert another big occasion in the series of spring concerts given at this college.

Is Russian Art Reproducing True Picture of a Nation?

(Editor's Note — This is the third in a series of articles on Russia in order that the students may better understand the May Day festival on the campus this session.)

A nation with so many and such confused elements in its history naturally suffered many changes in the style of its art. In so far as architecture and painting are concerned, the golden age of Russia was the 15th century, when artists copied more or less closely the work of Byzantium and produced some real masterpieces in a style, such as the Kremlin or the Cathedral of the Assumption in Moscow.

During the period of European penetration — the 17th and 18th centuries—the prevalent styles of France and Italy were copied and imitated. Peter the Great fostered the building of extensive and palatial structures in the classic modes of Europe. For a great, great, many years he turned Russian taste against all native and national effort in art.

Russian music consisted of two types—that from the church and that of the folk. The church in its seclusion actually persecuted folk song. There was no secular music in Russia as late as the 17th anod 18th centuries. Western Europe again set the factor for the Russian mold.

Glinka's (1804-57) appearance marks the same stage in the history of music as that of Pushkin in the history of literature. Each inaugurated a period of independent creation at a time when the old epoch of imitativeness had not yet become history, and consequently they were both equally misunderstood. Music and literature had just begun to free themselves of court patronage, but the new surroundings were still not congenial. Neither the composer nor the author had yet found his public.

It was not until the Russian writers of the early 19th century, stimulated by the rise of a distinctly nationalistic mode of expression in other lands, began to turn their attention to the history of their own people that anything distinctive or important was produced.

Pushkin, already mentioned, was the first who used folk theme and did not hesitate to discuss the abuses under which the common people suffered. Gogod, Turenev and Dostoeviski were three other outstanding prototypes. It seemed as if it were not until these artists had established contact with their native God and found beauty in the spirit of their own people that they were able to assimilate the great traditions of European culture and produce works that are comparable with those written in other lands. Nineteenth century Russian literature is a unique admixture, produced by a combination of western European influences, Byzantine thought, native strength, and a peculiar pre-occupation with the sorrows and sadness of humanity's common lot.

Today—there exists in Russia—a new creative force, a new trend in the arts — namely, literature, painting, and music which reflects

Lucille Jones Places First In Annual Ping-Pong Tourney

Lucille Jones, junior from Staunton, Virginia, placed first in the annual ping-pong tournament for the third consecutive time. Lucille, a Red and White player, won five points toward the color cup for her class colors.

This year fifteen girls were entered in the tournament, managed by Phyllis Watts. Jean Bentley was placed second with a close score. Players in the tournament were Lucille Jones, Jean Bently, Frances Lee, Ophelia Whittle, Phyllis Watts, Margaret Orange, Nellie Smith, Dorothy White, Joyce Johnson, Louise Blane, Mary Walker Watts, Rebecca Tomlinson, Regina Portinero, Bobby Scott, Nancy Parrish.

Annually, the ping-pong tournament is played and counted for points toward the color cup. Red and White has held the title for the past three years; Green and White four years prior to that.

Girls Retire On Roof Garden To Simmer Slowly But Surely

With the annual coming of spring, birds, blossoms, and bees tra-la, comes the grand opening of Ye Old S. T. C. roof garden. Donning—uh—shorts, baby oil (Johnson's), freckle keeper-offer, and an occasional dash of vinegar, we ascend the precarious heights of the fire escape. Once having reached the summit, we deposit blankets, cotton, books (The Case of the Creeping Claw variety), and now and then even a text book—by way of soothing consciences. These, however, are understood to be merely for the sake of appearances.

Well, we are here for a purpose—a purpose with which our grandmothers evince no sympathy. The day of the Lily-Whiters has gone. The day of the well-baked dirty-browners is at its height. The recipe is simple. We mix aforementioned oil (bout a third of a cup), a dash of vinegar, a large amount of fortitude, and a reliable clock. We then bake slowly for thirty minutes on each side. Still not well done, but by this time a little bored, we rise and gaze around at the landscape, which can be very interesting at times. There appears to be a bridge game in progress over here, and judging from the rapt expression, that must be a fairly good love story she's reading over there. (Well, we can dream anyway!) Yes, on the whole, we're a pretty contented lot.

Of course, we have that fiendish character—the camera shark. This menace to peace and quiet is the creature who lopes around recording for posterity the various singularly unlovely poses in which we find ourselves. Blackmail seems to be the compelling motive, and we fear that collections are increasing as the number of garments decreases.

Oh, and we mustn't forget the Aimy Air Corps. Daily reconnaisance over the area keeps everybody amused. Maybe we'd better modify the well-known comment—nothing can stop the you-know-what except S. T. C. Boy, that last one had blue eyes!

And so, despite the wails of Mrs. Packer, the raised eye-brows of the faculty, and the moans of distraught families, we continue to simmer slowly through the lengthy process of acquiring a tan. Besides—we think it's pretty!

Left Lead

Bet you a sack of feed there won't be any mistake about the height of the jumps any more . . . we just met the Madame heading for the ring with a yardstick in her hand and a gleam in her eye, and if we know the Madame, she'll have those poles measured to the fraction of an inch.

BUTTON, BUTTON

Who's got the button? The ribbon committee, 52 of 'em . . . and they're all covered. From now on, all process is delayed merely by the printers, who have the short ribbons now, and that's all we're waiting for before finishing up completely the whole set of prize ribbons for the Horse Show. Four ribbons for each class; twleve classes, one of which is the Pair Class, and there you have fifty-two chances of riding out of the ring with one of those ribbons hooked to your horse's bridle. Better start making up your rides if you've missed any, and practicing hard when you go. May 19 isn't too far away.

TRADE?

There were rumors . . . nice ones . . . that we were losing Darky over to Mr. Taylor, who was trading us a nice little saddle mare, sometime this week. Up to this point, we still have Darky, but we still have hopes. The little black has been on her better behavior lately, anyhow, and by way of passing, we'd like to state that B. Tom Andrews has suffered absolutely no ill effects from her fall last week. No broken bones, no injured innards, no nothin', except a bit of a scare and perhaps a bruise or two. Made us think of "grip with your thighs" (even at a walk) . . . and the little poem, "Your knees a crab, your back a whip . . . ready for buck or sudden shy." Yep, we have a lot to learn . . . and we can find more every day.

LOST . . .

One committee chairman, Jean Sauerwein left last week to go home to a doctor about a "jumping" eye. It seems she may not be back for a while yet, perhaps not even this quarter, but she does have hopes of at least getting here for the Horse Show. We're awfully sorry . . . miss her already, but Mary Sterrett has been substituted as chairman of the prize committee, so we won't worry along that score.

PLAYAWAYS

The Saturday morning class went beautifully, according to Joyce. It was hot naturally, but a pause by the spring on the way home did wonders for the morale. But the Saturday afternoon sun didn't seem to slow things down a bit. The 'Dusty Boot-ees" went down the trail at a mile a minute, kicking up dust, eating dust, disappearing into dust . . . just one big happy cloud being all the Madame could see. No ill effects . . . those Two-by-Fours can really take it.

Sunday it seems the cooled-off atmosphere and gray-ness were quite a relief after all, so the Sunday ride was more than successful. K. Edst and B. Bibb both gave rolli king accounts of two hours at Longwood, and Sarah and Sudie and the Pony made a combination no one will forget any time soon. Joyce worked Robin in the ring with satisfying results, and everybody was gay about everything.

TID-BITS

All those famous people we saw about on Monday really knew their clothing styles. With Kim as a captain in the calvary, and all those cowboys and Indians, anybody might have mistaken Goat Week for Horse Week or something . . . Mr. Jacobs gave us a treat Saturday when he came by the stables on his little chestnut . . . a beautiful little gaited fellow, and really a pleasure to see . . . Little Flicka is looking prettier than ever with her winter coat gone, and she just prances up to the gate whenever she has visitors . . . If you want new breeches for the show, dash down to Davidson's while the stock is still in. Mr. Padgett is looking out for us as usual, and there's a good choice in grey or brown . . . in reasonble sizes.

'Til next week, save your saddle soap for the show, and Say on the Bit.

Monogram Club Initiates 4 Girls

Officers Chosen For Coming Year

Margaret Lohr, sophomore, Betty Parrish, sophomore, Peggy T. Ross, junior, and Phyllis Watts, junior were initiated into the Monogram Club Monday, April 16. The Club takes in new members in the fall and the spring.

Margaret Orange was electcd president, Louise Blane, vice-president, and Phyllis Watts, secretory-treasurer. They replaced Eleanor Wade, president, Bobbie Scott, vice-president, and Mary Walker Watts, secretary-treasurer. Miss Olive T. Ller is adviser of the Monogram Club.

Goodman Will Head S. T. C. Spanish Club

Evelyn Goodman, sophomore from Roanoke, was elected president of the Spanish Club on April 17 to succeed Mary Preston Sheffey.

Selected as vice-president was Annie Gay Wood, junior from Gladstone, while Thelma Diggs, sophomore from Norfolk, was named as secretary, and Helene Griffin, freshman from Roanoke, will take over the new dutles as treasurer.

Plans were made for a spring picnic on May 9 at Longwood with Lelia Holloway heading the food committee, Sue Hundley, the entertainment committee, and June Cregar, the "K. P." committee.

On the Ball

Hello, sport fans! It looks like o'd man weather is a little on the temperamental side these days. Here's hoping the sun will shine, and the field and courts will stay in ship-shape for the events of the coming week.

TENNIS

The courts have been rolled and lined, and are in good shape for the spring sessions, but let's all remember that wearing regulation tennis shoes will help keep them that way. The courts have been crowded since the first signs of the sun, and we hope they'll stay that way.

The tournament is a week closer, and what is better than seeing everyone out supporting her colors. For those that haven't as much experience on the court as some, don't let that stop you. With a little experience in wielding the racket, sure foot movement, you could easily be on your way to becoming a first class player. Let's get out from behind the four walls of your dorm room, and give it a try.

SOFTBALL

The turnout for the outstanding sport of the season has been great but it can be a lot better. Every girl with or without knowledge of how its done, should be on that field on Monday and Wednesdays at 4:50, or Tuesday and Thursdays at 3:50 to take part. Softball rules are simple, and once you've learned to catch a ball and make the bat and ball connect, you're all set for an hour of good healthy activity.

GOLF

Among the many difficulties of getting what you want these days, is the golf ball situation. The beginner's class is making a wreck out of those fabric balls they've been swinging at for some weeks now. They can't last too much longer. If any of you ardent fans know of anyone who is willing to part with such precious property as some of those little white round things that used to bounce, the Physical Education Department would be charmed to make light your burden.

Russian Art

the vague longing of an entire generation, arising from the depths of the modern European and Russian spirit. We are witnessing the great and significant struggle between two views of life, two diametrically opposite conceptions of the world. In its ultimate demands, religious feeling clashes with the latest deductions of experimental science, and modern art is characterized by three principal elements, mystical content, symbols, and the development of artistic susceptibility, which the French critics call Impressionism. This avidity for that which has never before been experienced is a characteristic feature of the present day Russians. This anticipation of the divine idealism, an unquenchable longing for a new religious and philosophical reconciliation with the Incognizable will come from the people, their church and their state of the not too dim and distant future.

Return of Spring Brings to Students Urge for Barefeet

EVELYN GRIZZARD

With the return of Spring, the urge to go barefoot returns, but since it is not considered exactly decorous by the faculty to exhibit bare feet in class, we must suffer the pains of living in a civilized world and wear shoes.

The modern miss of 1945 will not have to restrict her fanciful longing for cool feet to any great extent, for the new shoes all have one characteristic in common. Nudity! Almost all of them are of the sling type with open back and cut out toe.

There are several reasons for these opened up shoes. They are cool and comfortable, versatile, new looking, and they save leather. There is a large variety in these sandal styles.

The love of the college girl is play shoes. These are colorful, cute, and most of them do not require a precious ration stamp. Some of these are scarcely more than a strap or so, but they really perk up a cotton dress.

Play shoes in red and green go with many costumes and add interest. The quantity of colored shoes will be limited, but the four most popular colors will still be available. Red, green, blue and turf tan will go far in stretching accessory wardrobes. They will come in suede, glazed kid, linen or cotton finishes.

For dressy wear, patent leather pumps are holding their own, and can be worn with almost any costume in your wardrobe. All types of buckles and bows ornament pumps, which can be obtained in high, French heels, or squared and boxy looking heels.

The soft, unadorned flat-heeled walking shoes is a good carry-over from past seasons. There is a good proportion of low-heeled shoes, which are practical for busy women.

Hewlett Selected Gamma Theta Head

T. Tertius Noble

land, or did before the war, every other year for a visit. He says his one wish is to give one more recital in Yorkminster, and his gentle eyes sparkled as he recalled how one stroke of a chord on the great organ there, will re-echo throughout the Cathedral for a full seven seconds. He hasn't been to England since 1937, but has an elderly sister there who keeps him informed in true British style of the first hand war news on his "home front".

As a boy, T. Tertius Noble was an organist at the age of twelve. He has studied music profusely all of his life, both in his country and ours. Besides this, he was a minor in general education! At his retirement he had served 30 years as organist and choirmaster at St. Thomas' in New York city.

Dr. Noble retired against the wishes of all who know him. They begged him to stay on few more years at least, but said he, "I wanted to retire before I got old!" His best tonic, he says, is Young People, and his son, Phillip, is one of the best.

He's a tiny little man in stature, but great in the eyes and hearts of those who know and love him. He is a master in his chosen profession. He has played and sung and composed and conducted. He knows music as no one we know does. He's jolly and gay, and gentle and brilliant, all mixed up together. He's great, but he's modest. But we know, and you know, that Dr. T. Tertius Noble did not just "'happen to be" president of the Hymn Society of America!

Library Collection Features Allied Nations, War Trophies

One never knows what she will see when she walks into the library! In the glass cases, on the bulletin boards, and on the exhibition tables, new books, interesting hobby collections, or souvenirs from the Italian invasion might be prominently displayed.

If some class is studying particularly a certain author, look for an exhibit in the library on his life and best-known works. When an interesting artist visits our campus, he probably would be flattered if he walked into the library, by seeing a big picture of himself and a table arranged with books written by him or articles written about him, along with other interesting bits of information concerning his life or his work.

The war is brought right onto our campus with the exhibits of trophies and souvenirs of returned veterans. (Remember the gruesome Jap sword?)

Dress of people of other lands, which help us to have a deeper appreciation of our neighbors have been on display at various times. The lovely hand work on some of the clothing of our Puerto Rican and Brazilian girls was much admired when we were privileged to view it last year. By the way, have you noticed the Burmese costume currently being displayed over there? Check on that before it's replaced.

You may have been scared half out of your wits when you walked into the library and came face to face with an exhibition case filled with horrible masks. If you stopped for a second horrified glance, you saw that it was only some of the work of our art students. If you looked a third time, you even became sort of fascinated by those weird, grinning faces.

In a nearby case, clay figures of animals and people were resting, and if you really looked at these, you were forced to admit that there really are artists among us. The Mexican bowls and vases looked like the real McCoy, didn't they?

Are you a collector? If you are, do you remember the shoes of all shapes and sizes that were on exhibit last year? Even Dr. Merritt had a chance to show off his huge stamp collection. And what a variety of stamps he had collected!

At present, there is on exhibition a group of juvenile literature books that won the Newberry prize and Caldecott medal for being the best in children's literature. The English classes studying juvenile classics found this a resourceful and interesting exhibition. It is still up, girls, so don't miss examining some of the interesting books displayed.

Also, for the next few weeks, Miss Clark tells me that there will be a series of exhibits under the caption of "Who Are Our Allies". The present one is on India, and there are prominently displayed books on Indian independence, social conditions, and relations with England. Also, pictures of the outstanding Indian leaders and biographies of them. Members of Pi Gamma Mu preparing for the discussions of the coming San Francisco conference will find these displays very helpful.

It takes only a few minutes to stop by and look at the pictures, or thumb through the books, and it is well worth those few minutes. Someone or some group has worked to prepare these library displays for you . . . take advantage of them! Don't forget the Browsing room displays, too. It is here that the art exhibits have been held, including the recent display of the work of blind or partially blind students from Hampton Institute, and the water-color gallery last spring.

★ SENIOR ★ PERSONALITY ★

HARRIETTE MOORE

From the time she presided over our first class meeting our freshman year it was evident that Harriette would be one of the outstanding among us. Possessing the quality of making friends easily will always be remembered by all who have known her for her sympathetic nature.

Past master in the art of a quick comeback and with a ready sense of humor she also has her more serious side, which she has demonstrated in her activities as president of the Student Body Level headed as she is, it is easy for her to get to the heart of a matter and make an intelligent decision. The promising qualities of leadership which we recognized in her freshman year became more evident each year. She served on Government as a representative of her class her sophomore year and as a junior, held the office of secretary. She also was managing editor of the Virginian. For these contributions to her college she was recognized by AKG as a true leader.

Along the line of likes and dislikes we find her very partial to "My Buddie", food, particularly candy bars, and detective stories, the more gory the better. She dislikes whole--heartedly insincerity, to be teased about her pronunciation of "her" as well as slurs on her native state, North Carolina, and shoes with straps around the ankle.

Next year Hackie will probably be found in the Suffolk High School teaching shorthand and typing. We are sure that she will be successful in whatever she undertakes.

Dale Carnegie Lists Six Popularity Helps

To be popular is something everyone desires. There is nothing better than to know you have lots of friends, people who like you and on whom you can really rely.

Dale Carnegie lists the following six points in his world-famous book "How to Win Friends and Influence People" which will help to make people like you:

1. Become genuinely interested in other people.
2. Smile.
3. Remember that a man's name is to him the sweetest and most important sound in the English language.
4. Be a good listener. Encourage others to talk about themselves.
5. Talk in terms of the other man's interest.
6. Make the other person feel important—and do it sincerely.

Smith, Coyner, Wall Visit STC Alumnae

Mrs. M. Boyd Coyner and Miss Virginia Wall attended alumnae chapter meetings and visited high schools in Virginia to interview prospective students from April 5 to 11. Dean Martha Smith-Smith traveled with them until April 8, also attending chapter meetings.

While in Botetourt in Gloucester county, the alumnae chapter headed by Mrs. Edith Estep Gray entertained the seniors at a tea in the home economics cottage under the direction of Miss Lucile Cheatham.

During the trip, the Portsmouth chapter entertained with a tea for seniors at the Woodrow Wilson high school. Miss Beth Johnson, home economics teacher, was hostess, and Miss Mary Rice is the president of that chapter.

Entertaining at the home of Mrs. Dora Lee Peebles, the Peninsula chapter invited members of the senior class of the Newport News and Morrison high schools. Miss Amanda Grey was co-hostess.

On Saturday, April 7, the Norfolk Chapter headed by Miss Lillian Wahab, gave an alumnae luncheon in Ames and Brownley's Club room.

Sixteen high schools were visited during the trip, and in addition to those mentioned above, Miss Wall and Mrs. Coyner visited high schools in Hampton, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Suffolk, Petersburg, and Hopewell.

Riddick Will Speak To Students Tuesday

Dr. Roland P. Riddick, Roanoke district superintendent of the Methodist Church will speak to the students at the chapel services on Tuesday, April 24.

A graduate of Randolph-Macon College and the Princeton Theological Seminary, Dr. Riddick will be in Farmville next week, conducting nightly services at the Methodist Church.

Griffin Will Head Local Newman Club

Helene Griffin, freshman from Roanoke, was elected president of the Newman club on campus recently. She succeeds Beatrice Bruch in this position.

Elected as vice-president was Frances Livesay, Emporia, while Mary McCarty, Richmond, was elected secretary, and Irraida Ramenez, Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, treasurer.

Just Looking, Thanks

By ANNE BUCK

Anything to get out of school. Mother is sick, brother is home, doctor gives orders, sister is getting married, Tech is giving a dance, shopping is essential—as a matter of fact, spring fever is getting me down. Homeward bound we go with joys and troubles.

Richmond is overflowing with exasperating S. T. C'ers such as Audrey Hudson, Dorothy Haile, Thercsa Powell, Martha Webb, Mildred Shepherd, Nancy Blair, Iris Davis, Lucy Messick, Mary Frances Moon, Jean Prosise, Nancy Pitts, Nannie Webb.

Norfolk is the topic of week end conversation for Anna Headlee, Lee Palmer, Shirley Cruser, Marast Ann Ellis, Beverly Boone, Grace Shriver, and Barbara Crowther.

Lawrenceville was a spot of interest for Betty Epperson, Virginia Baily, Lorene Haynes, and Page Vaughan.

Roanoke was out of this world to Anna Kucera, Betty Lemon, Cary Beard, and Mary Ann Dove.

Charlottesville attractions drew Anne Willis, Nancy Magner, Martha Wells, Virginia Naylor, and Betty Minetree.

Dillwyn may be small, but it held big interest for Evelyn Goodman, Dorothy Bennett, Anne Charlton, and Mary Ann Clark.

Alberta is true to the statement "precious things come is small packages", said Barbara Montgomery, Martha Anderson, Lorene Claiborne, and Lena Claiborne.

Hampden-Sydney— (little need to say how exciting the very two words are) drew Dotty Overcash, Poguey Massey, Patsy Swann, and Agnes Stokes.

Blackstone added to its dense population this week end with Susan Fansler, Judy Light, and Jacquelin Hale.

Crewe was interesting to Rose Jenkins, Doris Ramsey, and Virginia Beaver.

Chase City held amusement for Tinnie Bigger, Evelyn Cole, and Arlette Shelton.

Chapel Hill, N. C., can not be competed with—says Robin Lear, Jane Baines, Anne Gregory, and Olivia Meade.

Other places that were inhabited by week end visitors from S. T. C. were Amelia with Ann Hauser and Kitty Saunders; Sunny Side with Claudine Guthrie and Helen Williams; Petersburg with Jean Givers and Judy Connelly; Phoenix with Ann Savage and Alice Davis; Victoria with Carolyn Hardy and Carolyn Booth; Cardsville with Katherine Rainey and Frances Garnett.

Also Carrbara, N. C. with Lucy Manson Sharpe; Hampton with Bev Peebles and Mary Jo Tucker; Portsmouth with Martha Higgins; Washington, D. C., with Peggy Fink; Newport News with Barbara Brown; Bluefield, W. Va., with Virginia Butler; Harrisonburg with Betty Lou Hayward; Staunton with Ellen Higginbotham; and Martinsville with Nancy Snead.

A dance at Duke University was the spotlight for Connie Christian.

More fun next week end when the R. M. C. boys visit us.

Model Conference Presented by PGM In Student Lounge

Summaries Given In Chapel Today

In the Student Lounge at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday, April 24, Pi Gamma Mu presented their model San Francisco conference. The meeting was called to order by Betsy Fox, president, followed by the Star Spangled Banner and Lord's prayer.

Reports were made by the military commission, social and economic commission, organization commission and membership commission.

Some of the questions that arose were whether or not Poland will be admitted to the Peace Conference. This was proposed by Russia. It was not passed. Another discussed question was whether decisions made by the Security Council shall be made by a majority vote instead of a 2-3 vote. This was proposed by Brazil, but it was not passed. France proposed that there should be an international army, navy, and air force. This also was not passed.

A summary of the conference last night, and a solo by Esther Shevick were given in chapel this morning.

Harvie Named Head Of French Students For Coming Year

Margaret Harvie, junior from Richmond was elected president of the French Club at a regular monthly meeting held April 24. She will succeed Alice Green.

At this time business reports for the year were made. Arrangements are being made for a pic-

May Day Dances Will Feature Russia of Long Ago, Today

Nancy Whitehead, sophomore from Kecoughton, and Corrine Baker, freshman from Richmond, will take the parts of the Czar and the Church in the first part of the May Day festival. The first part will feature these two and the nobility as the Trinity which ruled the masses of old Russia.

Edith Lovins, senior from Cumberland; Grace Loyd, sophomore from Lynchburg, and Betty Ellis, junior from Coral Gables, Florida, will be the peasant, the worker, and the soldier of New Russia.

Twelve girls, all members or apprentices of Orchesis, will represent the Nobility of old Russia in the first part. They are Emily Carper, Shirley Cruser, Ann Dickinson, Vivian Edmunds, Lois Fuller, Heidi Lacy, Pat Maddox, Nancy Parrish, Jean Parry, Doris Ramsey, Berkley Richardson, and Frances Timmons.

The Czar, Church, and Nobility show their qualities through movement and gesture. That of the Czar is powerful, arrogant, and pompous with emphasis on a sense of "upness" and expansiveness. The quality of the Church is monastic or religious which is attained through a sense of "down-ness" and display of austerity in opposition to that of the Czar's. The Nobility echo as petty, vain, wordly creatures. The approach here is mainly a satirical one which over or underestimates the gestures of a true noblewoman.

The three dancers representing New Russia show the break away from the old tradition of the Trinity. When the new pattern is set the masses return jubilant, expectant and free.

The masses for both the first and second part are those students taking Dance Fundamentals and Physical Education 244. Seventy-nine girls comprise this group which attempts to show oppression, servility, and humbleness through group movements.

Sinclair Engaged For May Day Dance

Ball To Begin At 8:30 O'clock

Jimmy Sinclair has been engaged for May Day dance which will be given by the junior class on Saturday night, May 5, in the college gymnasium, beginning at 8:30 o'clock.

Anne Summers is general chairman for the dance, and Margie Hewlett will be in charge of decorations. The Russian theme for May Day will be carried out in the decorations for the dance.

Newly elected officers of the junior class are Eleanor Bisese, president; Anne Summers, vice-president; Lillian Elliott, secretary; and Virginia Shackleford, treasurer.

Bell Elected Head Of Granddaughters

Rosa Lee Bell, junior from Kenbridge, was elected recently as president of the Granddaughters' Club to succeed Nannie Webb.

Other officers are vice-president, Betty Woodward, Barhamsville, succeeding Virginia Lee Abernathy; secretary, Hilda Abernathy, Cochran, succeeding Mary Franklin Woodward; treasurer, Charlotte West, Surry, succeeding Dot Bennett; and reporter, Sue Davis, Lynchburg, succeeding Evelyn Grizzard.

24 Freshmen Qualify For APS Membership

Twenty - four freshmen have qualified for membership in Alpha Phi Sigma, freshman-sophomore honor society, according to an announcement made this week by Virginia Tindall, newly-elected president.

These girls will be issued bids some time next week and will be formerly recognized at the chapel services on Alpha Phi Sigma Day which is scheduled this year for May 10. At this time, a scholarship key will be awarded to the girl in Alpha Phi Sigma who has maintained the highest average for the longest period of time.

Miss Mary E. Peck is the adviser for the chapter on this campus.

Notice

All heads of organizations are requested to hand in a list of members, officers, and first and second choice for meeting time to Frances Lee, chairman of the calendar.

Former Librarian, Now In Paris, Tells Excitingly of Meeting Gertrude Stein

(Ed. Note: We found this letter from Mrs. Merritt perched jauntily 'pon the Home Office Mantle, and with little or no revision hand it on to you with thanks to her for so sharing Dr. Merritt's experiences with us, and congratulations to him for his recent promotion in rank from PFC to Technition 5th Grade.)

Dear Editor,

"In the April 16 issue of LIFE magazine there is a report on a lecture given in Paris by Gertrude Stein to U. S. GI's at the Red Cross club. One of the letters which I have received from my husband recently tells more about the lecture and about Gertrude Stein. I'll quote what he says, since perhaps you could use all or part of it for a feature article. The letter is dated April 11.

'Last Saturday, on the last day of the first week of school, Gertrude Stein spoke to the assembled librarians and information and education officers. The Captain and I went to call for her in the morning, not in a jeep, but in a limousine. We were somewhat early, and sat in the car until time, but were surprised to find her rapping on the window as she went by, walking her dog. So the three of us, and Basket, an enormous French poodle, went walking in the Latin Quarter for about 10 minutes before returning to the apartment, where I also met Alice B. Toklas, who went with us.

The apartment is an amazingly light place in the midst of a lot of close-together houses, and is covered with paintings by Picasso, mostly in the abstract perid. The paintings touched me not much, but two chairs, about twelve inches high, and probably meant not to be sat in, which were painted with the same abstract designs were very beautiful. Striking too was a portrait of Miss Stein, commanding the center of the room. It was an interesting five minutes of gazing.

At the school Miss Stein mounted the platform with the dog, and made quite an impression. She spoke, sitting down in a coherent and chatty and somewhat repetitious manner, on Franco-American relations," of which she said there weren't any. Other thoughts were chiefly concerned with the prison psychology of the French. They had hoped the Americans would

McWilliams To Be AKC Quiz Head

HS-STC To Clash Wednesday, May 9

Jim McWilliams, of radio fame, will act as master of ceremonies for the annual Hampden-Sydney-S. T. C. quiz contest, which will be held Wednesday, May 9, at 8 p. m., acording to an announcement made this week by Lucy Manson Sharpe, president of Alpha Kappa Gamma, national leadership society, which sponsors the quiz each year.

Mr. McWilliams, who is now living near Scottsville, needs no introduction to the audiences of this country as his original Askit-Baskit radio program was carried by a nationwide network.

The team representing this college will be selected from tryouts. The winning side wil be awarded a silver cup, which, after three years, becomes the property of the winning team. A new cup will be given this time, since Hampden-Sydney was awarded one permanently last spring.

Stokes Announces Group Chairmen

Committee chairmen for the Red Cross unit on this campus have been named by Agnes Stokes, recently elected head of the group.

Heading the home nursing group will be Janet Sollenberger, junior from Woodstock, with Fay Wolfe, freshman from Roanoke, and Christine Shifflet, sophomore from Churchville, serving on the committee. Phyllis Watts, junior from Lynchburg, was named head of first aid and water safety group. She will be assisted by Helen Boyes Lewis, freshman from Richmond, Va., and Jean

16 Students Pledge Campus Sororities

Rushing Period Held Quarterly

As a result of spring rushing on the campus last week, 16 girls pledged sororities, Jean Prosise, Pan-Hellenic president has announced.

Pledging Sigma Sigma Sigma were Virginia Younce, Mar Kent Stevens, and Helen Page Vaughan.

Alpha Sigma Alpha pledged Jeanne Bently and Mary Lou Bagley; and Claire Wales pledged Gamma Theta; Alpha Sigma Tau pledged Jane Paulette, Virginia Bailey, and Dorothy White; and Theta Sigma Upsilon pledged Harriette Purcell and Audrey Lee Davis.

Catherine Bickle, Nancy Hughes, Evelyn Pierce, Mary Wyatt, and Jackie Dunton pledged Phi Zeta Sigma.

R - M Variety Show Features Men, Magic, Music, and More Good Fun!!

By MARGARET WILSON

Well, the Randolph Macon Glee Club hit S. T. C.—and with the biggest crash we've heard in a long time. So many MEN! Having been lured to the auditorium by the tantalizing samples of song heard in chapel Saturday morning, the student body en masse waited impatiently for the eight o'clock opening. And nobody was disappointed!

Twenty-five trained male voices opened the two hour program with a series of semi-classical selections, notable among which was the show-stopping Shortn' Bread. The audience laughed at that one, sighed audibly through Liebestraum, and swayed slightly to the Fred Waring arrangement of Loch Lomond. The first part of the program was concluded with Invictus, and those twenty - five voices sounded like a hundred.

But the variety show! A precedent has been set that will be hard to break. We feel that to call attention to the art of Sumpter "Frankie" Priddy is hardly necessary. As has been neatly pointed out, the boy gets around. Dogs howled and strong women fainted to the poignant strains of "I Had to Call You Up This Morning to See if Every-y-thi-ing Was Still All Ri-ight". Ah yes—whatever Frankie has, Priddy has more of it.

A goodly portion of the killers glory was stolen by the master of ceremonies, who said the girls scared him, but managed to keep going in spite of the handicap.

We understand also that congratulations are in order for Mr. French. The news of Annie's return gladdened all hearts. It must have come as a very happy surprise to him, and we do hope she made her train connections.

But what we learned about Betsy Fox! It appears that although she used to be satisfied with all-day suckers, she now likes 'em just at night, Betsy!

Now about those jitterbugs. They were a little on the hefty side, but you know the old one—"To see ourselves as ithers see us." And with that sax for inspiration, it could happen to the best of us.

And what about that magic? "What happened to the rabbit?" has become the well-known sixty-four dollar question. Congratulations also go to Betsy Stoner, whose stage debut was a sensation. The audience was as bewildered as she was about that ribbon affair. Maybe someday we'll catch a magician with his hair down and get the facts about these things. In the meantime, now you see it—now you don't.

Which brings us to the end—of the performance, which could

Zehmer To Talk Monday Morning

Minister To Give Sermon Sunday

Dean George B. Zehmer and Rev. A. H. Hollingsworth will be the speakers for the sixty-first graduating exercises to be held June 3 and 4 on the S. T. C. campus.

Dean Zehmer will give the graduating speech on Monday morning, and Rev. Hollingsworth will deliver the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday. Dean Zehmer is director of the extension division at the University of Virginia, Charlotesville, and Mr. Hollingsworth is pastor of the Roanoke Presbyterian Church, Roanoke. He was former minister of the Farmville Presbyterian Church.

As was announced last week Sara Moling will deliver the valedictory address, and Mary Sheffey will give the salutatory speech at the graduation on Monday at which time 131 seniors will receive their degrees.

The senior class officers are Eleanor Wade, president; Marilyn Johnson, vice - president; Mary Walker Watts, secretary; and Sally Robertson, treasurer.

Tyree To Speak Here At Chapel Program On Tuesday, May 1

Miss Nancy Tyree, assistant state supervisor of the Woman's Land Army, will be here, Tuesday, May 1, to talk to those interested in spending a part of their vacation in working on a Virginia farm. This work has been done for several years and is supervised and managed by the Virginia Agricultural Extension Service.

The greatest need for workers is in the peach growing areas around Albemarble, Nelson, and Rockingham counties. Peopic working in this essential phase of the war effort will be housed either in a camp or in a farm home as demanded by the necessary work to be done. Transportation to and from the camps is paid provided the workers agree to stay two weeks or more. The workers are paid by the farmers according to skill and efficiency. Those living in camps will be sent for every morning by the farmers and carried to the farm. Recreation is also furnished. This is a good way to help Uncle Sam preserve the vitally needed fruit crop. Not only that, it provides a healthy vacation, a farm education, and a chance to save fruit that otherwise will waste because of lack of help to save it.

Camper Is Member Of Y Advisory Board

Miss Pauline Camper was elected a member of the Y. W. C. A. advisory board at a meeting of the student body last week to succeeed Miss Grace B. Moran.

Each year one member of the Board finishes a term of office, and annually a student election is held to name a successor.

Other members of the board are Miss Winnie V. Hiner, chairman, Miss Mary Clay Hiner, Miss Frances Copenhaver, Floyd F. Swertfeger, and C. Gordon Moss.

Support Allied Conference

Today marks the beginning of the most important conference that the world has ever known. April 25, 1945, will aways be remembered as the day the San Francisco Conference, the conference that met to work out the final plans for world peace, and world union, began.

Last night we attended a model conference put on by Pi Gamma Mu. When we left we said, "Thank goodness part of that responsibility isnt on our shoulders.' The model conference made us very conscious of the importance of this great meeting of the allied nations.

This responsibility is on our shoulders. The results of this conference will affect us more than it will affect our "Moms" and "Dads". We, the tax-payers of tomorrow, will live to see the outcome of this conference as either a success or as another terrible war, a war far more horrifying than the present one.

"But how does part of the reponsibility affect us," we ask. The responsibility lies on us in that the conferences and the representatives to the conference need our support.

"Why must we support the conference?" We must put our "shoulders to the wheel," because these men can do nothing to establish everlasting peace and to unite the world if the nations don't back them. If our enemies have any hope left, their hope is in the fact that our opinions may be divided on the question, and we will not give our whole-hearted support to the conference. Let's wipe that little hope from their minds.

We can support this conference best by pausing a minute each night this week at 9 o'clock in silent prayer that God will guide the nations in this meeting and that peace may soon reign over this war-weary world.

We, civilians, the grandstand fighters in this war, owe a great deal to Johnny or Jimmy or Ted or Bill who gave his life, the most precious thing in the world to him, that we might have just such a conference as the one that is now beginning in San Francisco. If he gave his life, we can certainly give our support. We will, won't we?

Support USO, Red Cross

In order that this college may be better prepared to meet the needs of the present world condition, two organizations exist on this campus, the so-called "USO" and the American Red Cross.

Active in the college for the past three years, the USO committee is at present emphasizing the importance of contributions which we as a student body may make through campus organizations. Heretofore, this money, which has been donated by organizations in the college, has been used in various projects, among which is the Farmville Recreation Center. We served refreshments at the Center, provided entertainment, and purchased many articles for the suite of rooms. March 1, the Farmville Recreation Center was closed because of the reduced number of service men at Camp Pickett and Hampden-Sydney College. Since that time, Pickett has become a hospital and may perhaps become the largest hospital for service men in the United States.

In this period of transition, there may seem to be disorganization and duplication, but eventually the work will become organized. At present all of the work which we do at Pickett must be financed by us, and each time girls do down, the campus USO finances the transportation and furnishes the refreshments.

Because Pickett is now a hospital, large dances are not in demand, as formerly. Under the Special Services officer, however, a group of 100 girls attended recently a dance for convalescent men, and the first 100 girls who signed up were allowed to do. At present, only small groups of 23 girls have been requested for the fortnightly parties at the service clubs. These parties are not dances, and since the committee members have been doing this type of work for sometime, they try to think straight and act fairly in selecting girls who would be the most acceptable to the service men on this particular night. The girls who are selected are our representatives; they are representing us and the true spirit of Farmville.

We have recently formed a Red Cross chapter in the college, one committee being for entertainment of bed patients and convalescents in the hospital. It seemed better, because of National Red Cross rules, to keep this committee separate from the local college USO committee. Sponsored by this group, entertainment was furnished convalescent men on Easter Sunday by some of the girls in the student body, and transportation was paid for by the USO committee as Red Cross funds were not at that time available.

From the facts above, we realize that it is impossible for every student here to have a chance to go to the Camp this spring, even though we would like to do it. These two groups, the USO and the Red Cross, are ready and willing to do whatever they can, but they need your cooperation and your support not only financially, but in the true spirit of service.

May we now at S. T. C. pledge ourselves to give of our interest, our time, our talents, and the best that we have in every way for our service men to whom we owe so much.

Gleanings

By Mildred Altice

The Russians this week marched into the suburbs of Berlin. Surely no thinking person can begrudge to the Russians that glory after so much horror and hardship.

* * * *

The Anglo-American armies in the West have been pushing on toward Berlin and toward union with the Soviet Army.

* * * *

In the war in the Pacific this week no spectacular achievements were made, but the Marines and the G. I.'s are fighting steadily and relentlessly on to final victory. On Okinawa, Ernie Pyle, the war correspondent, was killed. Through his sympathetic and realistic writings the G I's and civilians felt a deep and genuine affection for Ernie Pyle; thus, his death added new grief to a grieving nation.

* * * *

This week has seen feverish, last minute preparations being completed for the San Francisco Conference. Intelligent, far-sighted people throughout this country witness the end of this week by hoping, praying for success and thinking that the Conference will succeed because it must succeed. It has been called "the last chance"; so, everybody must do his utmost to assure success.

HEARD AFTER

BEDCHECK

The student body swelled considerably this week end beginning early Saturday morning with the steady influx of men. For a moment it seemed that S. T. C. had developed into a co-ed school. However, when Monday morning dawned with not a man in sight, this happy thought was dispelled in short order.

The Freshmen reigned in all their glory with dates galore from Randolph - Macon. Indeed those boys are quite versatile—not only can they sing, but they do have a way with the women!

Carol Jenkins seems to have captivated the hearts of quite a few of these casanovas. Saturday afternoon she entertained not one but eight! Sounds like pre-war days.

Heretofore unknown talent was revealed in Sumpter's version of Frank Sinatra. He seemed to be torn between two desires—Betsy in the audience and the "mike" on the stage.

Our congratulations go to the glee club and others of the R. M. tribe for a grand performance. Let's have more of such entertainment.

Even under these circumstances, the Navy was holding its own. Ann Baer is living up the tradition of her family with her choice of the Navy.

Evelyn's Goodman's handsome blonde provided an added attraction this week end. No wonder she's out of this world.

Just what was all the excitement in front of Student Building Thursday night? The spectators on the porch nearly went wild! Too bad, Mary Jane, they would not let you greet Buddy with a little more privacy.

And who is that planning such a big trip home? Maybe, you are excited about going to Abingdon, but isn't Walter's presence quite an added attraction, Anne? I don't suppose anyone could have missed telling that man of Anne Summers. He wasn't an inch under seven feet tall. She and Bev. must have really been "on the ball" Saturday night at Pickett to get results on Sunday afternoon.

Wonder when Joan is going to come out of that daze. That trip to Lynchburg must have given her no small charge.

Poguey and Carol paid their respects to all the fraternity houses in Charlottesville this week end. Just ask them what's the story about the railroad track. Bracie took to the road once more—destination, University. She'll testify that the University is one knocked-out place.

The Y

By ANNA HEADLEE

The Union Sunday School Services held the fifth Sunday of each month, will be held at the Baptist Church Sunday, April 29 at 9:45 o'clock. Mrs. F. R. Crawford will teach the lesson on "Christian Citizenship."

Westminster Fellowship met last night to name the new council.

The Y cabinet is having its spring set-up conference at Longwood sometime soon. Upperclassmen signed for committees yesterday in chapel, and these students in addition to the freshmen who signed last winter are urged to come.

Dr. Roland P. Riddick of Roanoke is leading the revival services at the Methodist church this week. All girls are invited to attend. He spoke in chapel Tuesday and will speak tomorrow and Friday.

The Baptist girls had their bi-monthly council meeting Monday.

Sunday at 5:30 o'clock the Methodist young people will entertain the Episcopalians at a supper at the Methodist church.

Theme for the week in Prayers is "I Would Be True". Tonight the topic will be "Following Jesus" and tomorrow night there will be a special musical program.

He prayeth well who loveth well
Both man and bird and beast;
He prayeth best who loveth best
All things great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all.

MAY DAY DANCER

Question of the Week

What is your favorite meal in the dining hall?

Gwen Ackiss: Liver, salad, and plenty of cold milk.

Jean Pritchett: Fried chicken, mashed potatoes, and green peas. I love it!

Eneida Costa: That green stuff we have every day!

Faye Wolfe: We have so many good things to eat, I just can't decide.

Louise Pegram: Salads, when we have them!

Heidi Lacy: Cocoa at breakfast and pineapple salad at lunch.

Joan Davis: The banquets!

Jerry Payne: Breakfast, 'Cause I never go.

Nancy Whitehead: It's a hard choice to make.

Lise d'Anjou: Chocolate ice cream. That's just a dream, though.

Betty Minetree: Strawberry shortcake (you know — the kind with strawberries on top.)

Mary Lib Harvey: Pineapple salad, banana salad, those hot raisin rolls, and some more pineapple salad

Mrs. McCoy: I can't even remember what I eat!

Dodie Jones: I don't care what Mary Lib says . . . I like pineapple salad, too.

Martha Watson: Pork, baked beans, tomato and lettuce salad, chocolate cake, and good coffee.

Lucy Messick: Egg salad, pineapple salad and fruit salad. And I like fried chicken, and brown bread with plenty of butter.

Susanne Steele: The fish salad, brown rolls with raisins, and I'd love to have some iced tea.

"K. T." Rainey: Iced tea.

Betty Jane Shepherd: ..Apple sauce, steak, corn and ice tea (am I kidding?)

Carmen Low: Carrots if Buggs Bunny is at the other end.

Shirley Slaughter: Pancakes on Sunday morning, if you can get up that early.

Betty Mitchel: Cocoa!

Does the Individual Person of USSR Possess A Complex of Superiority?

We speak of the peoples of the U. S. S. R. as Russians. They are! But, first they are Slavs and, Russians make up 58 per cent of the population together with the Ukranians and White Russians, the three leading Slav peoples, they compose 78 per cent or nearly 4-5's of the population. The leading language, leading nationality, the leading civilization, now as three ceturies before, have been Russian.

What is essentially a Russian—this man, who so easily leaps from one mood to another, from sorrow to gayety, from wrath to good humor, from peace to war, from war to peace? Wars, famines, epidemics, high infant mortality and many other factors have bred an indifference in them—to death.

A man with so flexible and emotional a nature, such limitless endurance, such an apathy in the face of death, is not easy to subdue, especially after undergoing the inner transformation which the Soviets have brought about. Whatever his grievances against the Soviets, however deeply he may hate the obligations now imposed on him, or the sacrifices demanded and extracted from him, he has become a more complex individual with notions of life, work, and the world about him which he has never before known.

This man is a part of the mass of peasants who are no longer backward, dirty, ignorant, superstitious, conservative in the sense of hating the new and wanting to hold what they had got, and intensely individualistic. Many among them were kindly hard-working and simple. They were still as a whole, a slavish folk, timid and suspicious, incapable of self-government or useful cooperation. They were the people of Russia, they had been told, and who should bind them? The Bolsheviks, the workers, or the soldiers? No!

The war has emphasized the move towards nationalism in Russia. It has established national unity and hastened the change from a proletarian, international workers-of-the-world - unite revolution to that of a national struggle against a foreign enemy.

Nationalism is the strongest of the imponderable forces which move mankind, stronger than religion, even than hunger or love. It is the strongest force of them all.

The Russian patriotism of today is not a matter of Czars and generals. It rests in a far broader base, whether of class or nationalities. It is a corporate resistance of 180-odd nationalities of 17 Republics, everyone of which has the same lively interest in defense of the same common heritage. This was never so before, and is one of the two chief reasons why this resistance is perhaps the greatest of all the triumphs of Russian history. The other reason is the return of Russia herself, no longer as the sole figure in the picture, but as the proud mother of a great family. "We are Slavs, and that means glorious. We are the heirs of the future, although much of our past is dim." Does the Russian have a superiority complex?

Phyllis Watts Named New H2O Club Head Tuesday, April 17

Phyllis Watts, junior from Lynchburg, was elected president of the H2O club at a meeting Tuesday night, April 17. Selected as secretary-treasurer for the coming year was Betty Lou Hayward, sophomore from Portsmouth.

New members of the club are Jean Babb, Peepsie Brooks, Peggy Cabaniss, Carol Jenkins, Nancy Magner, Margaret Orange, Mildred Shepherd, Anne Summers, and Virginia Yonce.

PHYLLIS WATTS

The H2O club is composed of girls who are interested in swimming and have participated in class and telegraphic meets. Next year's plans include a water pageant.

Sports Groups Give Banquet in Tea Room

Tomorrow night, April 26, in the tearoom, the Athletic Council and the Monogram Club will give their annual banquet. All members of the council, both old and new, members of the Monogram Club, and teachers in the physical education department will be guests.

Saturday night, April 28, the Athletic Council and the Monogram Club will spend the night at Longwood. Miss Olive T. Iler, faculty adviser for both groups will chaperon.

Tennis Tourney Begins Thursday

Students Must Wear Regulation Clothes

The doubles tennis tournament will begin this Thursday, April 26. All students are asked to sign up, not just the girls with tennis ability. The tournament will be good experience for those students taking tennis as a class. A red and white, and green and white may play together, as we'l as two green and whites, or two red and whites, but if the red and white, and green and white w|in the tournament, the points toward the color cup will be divided.

Those girls who are participating in the matches may sign up with the name of their partner on the athletic bulletin board. The winning team will rective five points toward the color cup. Fur further questions see Phyllis Watts, manager of tennis.

The courts are numbered I, II, III, IV. Number one court is nearest the laundry. Students who use these courts must sign up and must wear tennis shoes; no other type of rubber soled shoes can be worn. The students must not be on the courts dressed in halters; they must wear shirts.

Left Lead

With a clear conscience and unlimited license we start pecking out the column tonight . . .the Madame has even given her permish to make up something if we run short of news. But we don't think we'll run short.

ALL'S WELL

All's well that ends well, but we sure were worried for awhile there. Shirley Didlake got off to a fine start last Wednesday by boarding the Colonel, but Putney's Alley, or 'Topple Row", is still the Waterloo. It was something that made the Colonel shy that got Shirley off her guard, and his slow canter downhill that possibly caused her to forget her grip. When he shied again at some lively children, Shirley slid off backwards, and unfortunately, to the asphalt surfaced road instead of the soft dirt shoulder at its edge. It was quite a blow, for she struck her head, but we're glad to report that Dr Moore and Mrs. Packer think her past serious danger, and that she's home now in Richmond getting completely clear-headed before attempting classes again, riding or otherwise. By the way, we wish we could thank the kindly gentleman who drove Shirley and J. Carter back to school after the spill. We neglected to get his name, but we thank him anyway!

DAY BY DAY

So much for Wednesday. Thursday was the big day last week. Everyone showed up with boots shined and ties pressed, and hit the highway for a real workout . . . under supervision of the Madame, who was under supervision of prospective employers! Seriously, two members of the Physical Ed department of Randolph-Macon Womans College were here to observe Joyce's teaching, and tension in the ring was as taut as if it had been the day of the Horse Show itself. Miss Iler brought the ladies to Longwood, and the three seemed to be having a very pleasant time. It would be That Day that the Colonlel shied at the onlookers, and that Gypsy, tied to the fence, tried to bite each horse as he went by, and that the Colt, wasn't in the mood to take the jumps for Shirley Gibson, and that Robin didn't particularly want to trot for Jody, but at least things went fairly smoothly, and we're hoping for the best.

Friday it rained. Period!

Saturday only a few showed up, so popular vote won a trail-ride from our slave driving instructor, and over the fields they went to the tune of the usual trail-time jingles, and Saturday afternoon too was uneventful and same-as-usual-ish.

Sunday was The Day. Ask Helen McGuire how it feels to fly through the air, wondering if the horse were still under her and if he were ever going to stop. Anne Stuart and Callie were not doing so badly either, and though the Colonel actually met Miss Black, even Snowball and Anne Searson were well up with the mob. Over gullies they leaped, downhill, uphill . . . jumping every obstacle from ditches and rocks to creeks and barbed wire, and to Joyce and Robin, it seemed more like a hunt than anything they had ever seen without a fox in front of it! All too soon the mad rushers found themselves fenced in and slowed down, and the trip home from there was dull and uneventful! (?) Theme-cry was "Give me land—lotsa— land" to start out with, but 'twas, "Whoah -damya-whoa!" before the end of the run!

Monday afternoon's first class balked at the rain, and ended up in the Madames room listening to several chapters from the Horsemanship book. (It's in the library . . . look it up). However, when the town kids showed up and found no Joyce, they turned themselves over to Small-fry Sudie and Sarah, and off they went for an unconventional work-out in the ring. We may not want for an instructor next year after all, as "the Influentials" are around.

TID-BITS

"Thoroughbreds" is coming to the Lee this week-end, but we'll miss it because it only shows on Sunday. Too bad gals . . . sign up to ride that afternoon instead . . . Sarah, by the way, rode the colt last Saturday, and we are more than proud of her . . . Mr. Todd Smith has sold Hi-Boy and Connie, which makes an irreplaceable dent in the Horse Show hopefuls,

On the Ball

People seem to think that women are the only fickle ones, but Old Man Weather certainly has been taking his turn in changing his mind lately. The weather doesn't stop these S. T. C. sports fiends a bit, every day the classes are full of "Eager Beavers" out to make their class teams.

TENNIS

Have you signed up to play in the tennis tournament? Get a partner and sign up to play doubles. So far only eight people have signed up on the bulletin board to play. The tournament will not be held unless more players participate. The tournament will begin this Thursday and continue through Wednesday of next week.

SOFTBALL

Softball is now leading the season's sports schedule. Classes have been scheduled each Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday ,and Thursday afternoons. During this time quite a number have turned out to join a group in fast and exciting games. The more the merrier, so bring your gang on out to the athletic field and have plenty of fun.

SWIMMING

Last week the pool was closed due to a spring cleaning. Now that it has been filled with fresh, clean water, classes will continue.

MAY DAY

Only a few more weeks before May Day and a lot of work is needed on the different dances. Cooperation is needed from every girl taking part in May Day. Please come to practice when your dance is sceduled. It takes a lot of hard work to give a program of this kind and one person can not attempt it alone. Miss Kay has always given very beautiful May Day programs and has spent many hours of hard work. It's not Miss Kay's May Day, but ours so give up some of your pleasures as she has given up hers and help in any way you can.

Brighten Clothes With Accessories

Jewel, Bag, Gloves, Liven Up Apparel

This is the time that you must get the most out of your clothes that you have on hand. A new jewel, a new bag, bright gloves and pretty jackets will give new life to any dress or suit.

Fabric gloves are particularly pretty when matched with a hat or blouse. Occasion gloves handmade of suede make a costume out of the simplest dress. A touch of crochet or nosegays of flowers add to the daintiness of your spring wardrobe..

The handbag for the outfit can be important as the budget will allow. Bright colored suedes, drawstring types, and over the shoulder bags provide interesting accents. These are a few real leather bags and so take your time to shop carefully and you will find something within your budget limit.

The print or plain colored dresses can be made wearable by extra jackets in bright or pastel wools, and for summer, wear a "shortie" of rayon or cotton fabrics. Linen jackets in white or pastel colors give new life to print dresses or plain blacks.

A few accessories, many of which can be made at home, can do wonders to clothes grown dull.

Mu Omegas Celebrate With Week-End Party

Mu Omega sorority celebrated its 20th anniversary this weekend at Longwood with a picnic lunch and formal banquet on Saturday and a breakfast on Sunday morning. Thirty-six alumnae returned for the week-end, seven of which were founders of Mu Omega.

Invited guests for the banquet on Saturday night included Dr. J. L. Jarman, Dr. Martha Smith-Smith, Mrs. Sophia Packer, Miss Ruth Gleaves, Miss Leola Wheeler, and Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Gordon Moss.

Marilyn Bell was toastmistress for the occasion, and toasts were given by Grace Loyd, Sara Moling, Mary Preston Sheffey, Olive Bradshaw, Fay Johnson, Peggy Barham Wallace and Edith Cornwall Garrabrandt, one of the founders of the sorority.

be more the care-free bunch of immature soldiers they remembered from the last war, and found them to be a much more serious lot, not much good at cheering up the French, who needed it very much.

She pointed, too, to the fact that the French have a way of going about their own business, which was very disconcerting to the Germans, and was no less disconcerting to the Americans who were accepted more or less as a matter of course, with no great deviation from their own way of life and living.

The French all along had the feeling that they would somehow get rid of the Germans by themselves; they still have the feeling; the Americans merely advanced the progress somewhat.

She finished up with the plea that we, the soldiers, should all be more cheerful, smile more, make a flattering remark about a hat, a dress, or a dog to the French we meet. Col. Jimerson, presiding, rose to the occasion nicely when she finished and made a remark about her very beautiful dog.' "

We of the press feel that Farmville is honored in having contact with so many people formerly connected with us—Miss Booten of the Red Cross, Phyllis Pedigo of WORLD fame, and our own Dr. Merritt. We enjoyed this, and are sure you did, too.

Any time, Dr. Merritt — and thanks again!!

★ SENIOR ★ PERSONALITY ★

HELEN WILSON

Hockey? Tennis? Basketball? Volleyball? If you wandered in on an afternoon practice of any of these, you would be likely to see the senior upon whom falls the personality spotlight this week, Helen Wilson, retiring president of the Athletic Association.

Affectionately called "Mother" by all her friends because of her maternal and eternal worrying about them, Helen hails from Petersburg, and plans next year to go almost back home to teach in Hopewell. Her record here has been a remarkable one; in addition to her athletic activities, Helen has been a class officer for two years and has worked on the staff of the Virginian. Her qualities of leadership were recognized by Alpha Kappa Gamma in her junior year, and as a senior she served as chairman of the annual AKG circus.

Her chief topic of conversation these days is her nephew, known to all as simply "the baby." Her current expression is "crowning climax", and her favorite dishes are ice cream, preferably chocolate, and devil's food cake. She is partial to movies, and her favorite Saturday night haunt is the Officers' Club at Camp Lee.

Her pet hate is speaking in public—even to the extent of reading the announcements in the dining hall.

And Helen wears suits—always.

80 College Students See "Winged Victory"

Approximately 80 students went to Richmond Thursday, April 19, to see "Winged Victory". The trip was arranged and sponsored by the Students Standards Committee of which Lucy Bralley is chairman. Chaperones for the trip were Miss Emily Barksdale and Miss Ruth Gleaves.

Also going to Richmond on Thursday were students of Miss Bedford's art classes who visited the Virgiina State Museum of Art.

By ANNE BUCK

It's a cinch, you can't leave school and not miss something exciting. How true this is for those girls who ventured away last week end and missed Sumpter Priddy's (Sinatra) and the R. M. C. Glee Club. The campus looked almost co-ed with the 28 males of Randolph-Macon College.

What has Richmond got that S. T. C. hasn't? Lon McAllister and the rest of "Winged Victory" cast, no doubt—plus Virginia Fry Terrell, Katherine Rainey, Cile Sarver, Mildred Shepherd, Frances Shackleford, Catherine Trower, Martha Watson, Mary Yates, Lucy Manson Sharpe, Madelyn Ayers, Coleen Agee, Mae Ballard, Pauline Barnes, Claire Clark, Juanita Davis, Betty Ellis, Mary Morton Fontaine, Dorothy Gelston, Martha Hite, Martha Higgins, Dorothy Hamm, Frances Hobson, Jewel Hunt, Betty Lee, Frances Lee, Pat McLear, Nancy Magner, Virginia Naylor, Virginia Prince, and Evelyn Rogers.

Adding to the attraction of Roanoke were Betty Jane Austin, Jane Bentley, Dorothy Fultz, Helene Griffin, Marilyn Johnson, and Mary Jane Oyler.

Making Lynchburg a place of interest were Evelyn Scott, Phyllis Watts, Mary Williams, Shirley Slaughter, Virginia Shackleford, Anna Peery, Betty Plunkett, Sally Robertson, Betty Bibb, Joan Davis, Charlotte Hutter, Eleanor Hall, Elizabeth Motley, and Katherine Prebble.

Adding the glamor of Petersburg were Jean Givers, Kitty Parham, Frances Seward, and Helen Wilson.

Going to Palmyra were Freddie Butt, Betty Brothers, Margie Hewlett, and Dorothy Overstreet, while Bobby Brown and Virginia Treakle, visited Charlotte and Evelyn Grizzard in Drewryville.

Putting Kenbridge on the map were Rosa Lee Bell, Lucille Bell, Ann Johnson, and Agnes Stokes.

Charming was Chatham for Ann Bell, Imogen Moore, Ruth Bennett, Geneva Coleman, Ruth Jones, and Isabel Key.

Kindling the flames of Newport News were Helen Apperson, and Barbara Brown, while feasting in Abilene were Fulmer Baker, Elizabeth Keiser, and Doris Newton.

Methodist Official To Speak in Chapel

Dr. Roland P. Riddick, District Superintendent of the Roanoke Methodist District, will speak in chapel Thuesday, April 26, and Friday, April 27. Dr. Riddick is a graduate of Randolph-Macon College, Princeton Theological Semnary, and holds an honorary degree of doctor of divinity from Randolph-Macon College. He is now serving his third year as District Superintendent.

Betsy Caldwell, Queen, and Elise Hume, Maid of Honor, at May Day Celebration.

Caldwell to Reign As May Queen; Hume to Attend As Maid of Honor

Program Divided Into Two Sections, Yesterday's Russia, Today's Russia

Betsy Caldwell, senior from Sweet Briar, will reign as queen of the May Day festival which will begin at 4:30 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, May 5, at Longwood. She will represent the Spirit of New Russia in which symbolism speaks for a people. Representing the Nationality, Elise Hume, senior from Bluefield, West Virginia, will attend her as maid of honor.

The festival is based on a Russia of yesterday and today with a re-discovery of the past and reappraisal of the present and future. The first part of the program represents Old Russia, dating from the time of Peter the Great with a trinity—the Czar, the Church, and the Nobility ruled by the masses. Nancy Whitehead and Corrine Baker will portray the Czar and Church, respectively, while the Nobility will be represented by Emily Carper, Shirley Cruser, Anne Dickinson, Vivian Edmunds, Lois Fuller, Heidi Lacy, Pat Maddox, Nancy Parrish, Jean Parry, Theresa Powell, Doris Ramsey, Berkley Richardson, and Frances Timmons.

Masses Represented

Representing the ignorant masses of people who don't know anything, yet are eager to learn, will be the students from the Dance Fundamentals classes. These masses of people will be seen in both parts of the program.

The second part of May Day will be that of a New Russian in which the triumvirate—the peasant, worker, and the soldier—speaks for the people. Edith Lovins, Grace Loyd, and Betty Ellis will represent these three groups of people. It is at this time that the queen, the New Spirit of Russia, appears, as well as the maid of honor, the Nationality. Members of the queen's court, Marilyn Bell, Anne Blair, Louise Brooks, Joan Davis, Martha Russell East, Martha Higgins, Marilyn Johnson, Mary Jane King, Frances Lee, Jacqueline Parden, Theresa Powell, Berkley Richardson, Lucy Manson Sharpe, Martha Lynn Spryе, Virginia Terrell, Virginia Travis, Mary Watkins, and Nancy Whitehead represent the Republics as a federation speaks through its representatives.

Dances Presented

Jean Carter Smith and Betty Parrish will present a dance duet of the Cossacks, and Hildrian Suttie will give a solo dance of the Chumak.

Five Russian folk dances, Holiday Walk, Katerina, Arkon, Kolomeyka, and Hopak, will conclude the festival.

Dora Walker Jones is the general chairman of May Day assisted by Frances Lee. Serving as

Sinclair To Play For May Day Dance Saturday, May 5

Jimmy Sinclair will set the tempo for the May Day dance to be sponsored by the junior class on May 5. The dance will begin at 8:30 o'clock in the college gymnasium.

According to an announcement made this week by Anne Summers, general chairman for the dance, Lucy McKenry will be chairman of the floor committee; Ester Shevick is in charge of the music; and Lillian Elliott, tickets. As announced last week, Margie Hewlett will head the decorating committee.

Making up the receiving line will be Miss Elizabeth Burger; Eleanor Bisese, president of the junior class; Anne Summers vice-president; Lillian Elliott, secretary; and Virginia Shackleford, treasurer.

The dance tickets will be $.60 per person, and admission for spectators will be $.25. Spectators will pay at the door Saturday night and all admission charges include tax. Red and white decorations will carry out the same theme as that of the May Day festival.

Thirty convalescent soldiers from Camp Pickett have been invited to attend the dance as guests of the junior class.

147 Upperclassmen Sign Y Committees

One hundred forty-seven students signed up for active Y. W. C. A. work last week, Minnie Lee Crumpler, president, has revealed.

Working with Rachael Brugh, chairman of the church cooperative committee will be Carolyn Alphin, Edith Apperson, Ellen Bailey, Elizabeth Bennett, Nannie Crittendon; LaVaunne Curtis, Evelyn Hair, Geraldine Joyner, Shirley Mankin, Margaret Nevins, Neil Scott, Christine Shiflet, Lorene Thomas, Virginia Treakle, and Mary Wyatt.

Signing up for the library committee headed by Connie Ozlin were Katherine Allen, Gene D. Harrison, Martha Holman, and Naomi Piercy.

Under the direction of Ruth Brooks, chairman of the membership committee, there will be Alleyne Alphin, Lovice Altizer, Pauline Barnes, Louise Blane, Carolyn Bobbitt, Kitty Sue Bridgforth, Betty Brothers, Harriett Cole, Mae Cardwell, Ann Carter, Lee Carter, Mary Armistead Catlett, Rosa Chandler, Alice Burks Davis, Virginia Ford, Jane Glenn, Audrey Hudson, Mary Goode, Barbara Kellam, Jean Kent, Margaret Lohr, Mary Ann Loving, Sue McCorkle, Bernice Nichols, Margaret Orange, Jane Page,

Alumnae Executive Board To Meet Here On Saturday, May 5

According to an announcement made this week by Mrs. Ruth Harding Coyner, alumnae secretary, the executive board of the Association of Alumnae will meet here on Saturday, May 5.

Mrs. Louise Ford Waller of Richmond is the president, and other officers include Miss Mary Berkley Nelson, first vice-president; Miss Virginia Brinkley, second vice-president; and Miss Carrie Sutherlin and Mrs. Mary Dornin Stant, directors. Dr. J. L. Jarman, Mrs. Ruth Harding Coyner, Misses Mary E. Peck, Mary Clay Hiner, and Carrie B. Taliaferro are the local members of the executive board. Each officer will either be present on Saturday or will send a proxy.

At the meeting held last fall, Miss Virginia Brinkley of Suffolk was asked to speak to the student body on some phase of teaching at the chapel hour during the spring meeting. All of the board members will attend the chapel service, sometime after which lunch will be served in the college tea room, followed by a business meeting in the Alumnae office.

Class of '05 Gives 8 Books to Library

Eight books have recently been added to the Morrison Memorial Collection in the college library. These books were given by the class of 1905 on Founder's Day and are the first books that have been added out of the $50 that was given by the class. They were selected by the Morrison Memorial Library Committee, headed by Miss Mary Clay Hiner.

The Morrison Memorial Collection of books is a collection started by the Alumnae Association in honor of Mrs. Portia Morrison, former Head of the Home at STC, and is shelved in the Reserve Book Room of the library. Any of these books may be charged to students.

Trinity, Triumvirate Speak For the People In Dance Drama, Folk Festival of Russia

Ed. Note: This is the last in a series of articles on the Russian May Day festival which will be held on campus Saturday, May 5)

Russian Chronicle attempts to explain the contrast between the Russia of today and that of old, when the Czars ruled by forming a trinity of the Czar, Church, and Nobility, who suppressed the masses so that they were mere serfs. There was no right of their own except to believe in God who was high above them. The Church persecuted their own folk expression. Even the land was not theirs. Could such a people persist in our twentieth century?

The peasant led the uprisings long before the Revolutions of 1917. It was he who with the worker and the soldier formed the triumvirate which speaks for the modern Russians of today. Such a contrast is a big undertaking because idealogy with all of its politico—socio-economic factors was so apt to creep in.

The first part or Old Russia was attempted as dance drama. Preclassic forms of music (when the music was written expressly for dance) formed the basis for the compositions of all movement. A Pavanne was used for the Czar figures, a Sarabande for the Church, a Minuet for the Nobility, and a Passacaille for the masses.

The second part was more difficult. As an exposition of Russian dances, costume and folk lore were the primary aims of this year's festival that sufficed for the base from which to stem and contrast today's Russia with that before the Revolutions. After much research everything was uncovered in the school library and from all other Slavic sources of dance in the country) a way pointing the path for the peasant became clear.

For the first time, the masses or peasants are literate. They can read and write! They are not copyists in the strictest sense anymore. They are intensely interested in any and everything American and modern. But, their slavic spirit is turning to a renewal of things Russian.

The Soviet government has done much to further their traditions and customs by stressing native or folk art. The spirit of a people lives through its folk. Imagine yourself completely ignorant of Virginia's traditions and customs.

Then, believe in a people who, for the first time, are groping for a way of life which is new and complicated to them. A world heretofore unknown to them looks to them and at them. Will they point the way for all o now decadent Western Europe to follow?

Is a new spirit, a religion, or a creative urge arising out of Russia? Yes. It is of the people who are speaking for the first time. It is a part of the people who always

We Look to San Francisco

The eyes of the world have been focused on San Francisco during this past week. Newspapers, both state and local, have given much space to this all-important conference, and radios have given daily reports of the happenings. All of this has been done in order that the average American citizen who is interested in the welfare of the world may be better prepared to think and to formulate conclusions.

In one of his messages, President Truman stated "Right has might". This is to be proved by what is taking place in California as those people who are assembled there have respect for justice and law. Of course, all problems will probably not be settled there as the job is a tremendous one. The machinery alone which is being set up at the United Nations Conference cannot prevent wars; however, it has a lot to do with it. At present, it will be impossible for us to know what success will come from the conference as only time will reveal that.

The news which came to anxious listeners on Saturday and the headlines on Sunday were just a little premature; however, we hope that there is only a matter of time before words similar to these will be echoing and re-echoing as true throughout this and other lands.

The Germans certainly brought us to our senses and united us in a resolve for everlasting peace. It does not seem that we can make all of the plans for a lasting peace while we are engaged in war, yet we can be laying the foundation, and that we are doing.

With the war almost over in Europe, we can then concentrate our every effort on the Pacific. This intensified fighting in addition to the universal charter which is being formulated at San Francisco paints a much brighter picture for the world than that of several months ago.

There is danger in our getting too optimistic, and this we must guard against. This total World War is not over, and even when it is over "Over There", our responsibilities for setting up a lasting peace out of chaos and ruin will be the largest problem which we are called upon to solve.

Check on Chapel Conduct

Student government has found it necessary to give the chapel monitors authority to give call downs to students who insist upon disturbing other people during chapel. Call downs will be given for reading, rattling papers, talking, or making any unnecessary noise. Girls who remain seated while a hymn is being sung, girls, other than seniors, who march in while the Alma Mater is being played, or do not march out correctly will also find a mark on their hall president's list beside their name.

No matter how cute the date is that you're going to have for the dance, the marvelous description of him and the long story about how you met him can wait until after chapel. If he is as wonderful as you say he is, you won't forget all the many details in thirty minutes.

We know that it is incorrect for juniors, sophomores, and freshmen to march in while our Alma Mater is being played. Some one has been careless and forgotten this. We would hate for visitors in our school to go away and say that girls at S. T. C. didn't know any better than to walk in to the Alma Mater. We must not give them the slightest chance to make such a remark.

If we continue to be careless about our chapel conduct, we will soon find ourselves confined to campus for one week. Remember three call downs give us a week of campus.

Gleanings

By Mildred Altice

The war in Germany has reached a point at which there is no outstanding organized resistance, but merely a series of many small pockets which still remain to be conquered. This week the American First Army reached a juncture with a Russian Army on the Elbe River some 50 miles from Berlin. Through this week the Russians have been destroying Berlin, and have reduced the larger part of the city to shambles. As the week ended, capitulation rumors came out of Germany.

* * * *

The Nazis in Northern Italy have been crushed so far as organized resistance is concerned. It has been reported this week that Italian patriots have executed Benito Mussolini.

* * * *

The Marines and the infantry are stolidly fighting toward the complete conquest of Okinawa. As this week ends, the infantrymen are within two miles of the capital city of the island.

* * * *

The San Francisco Conference opened this week with a speech from the Foreign Minister of Russia, Great Britain, the United States, and other smaller powers. China's Dr. T. V. Soong, the Foreign Minister also addressed the delegates. Despite the existence of many prevailing differences between the various nations, there seems to pervade over the entire conference a deep and abiding spirit of determination to reach an understanding, and through this, to effect an international organization and a lasting peace.

HEARD AFTER

BEDCHECK

What I want to know is—Do you know:

That Joan went to Lynchburg to see Dick again and had a car full of chaperones AGAIN! (How these new week end rules do cramp one's style).

That Phyllis Watts got a long distance phone call from North Carolina followed by a telegram, followed by a man, followed by (?)

That there was a pipe around this week end with a man behind it and Betty Bibb claimed them both.

That Lulu's love is quite evident in Shirley's room—"One dozen red roses with his heart in beside them".

That Kitty Sue, Jerry Payne and Nancy Harrell are the "campus cuties"—They went to Annapolis.

That Julia Booher went home to see a MAN.

That Jane Page was quite upset the other week end about a certain H. S. boy. Wonder why?

That Queekie has an eye for local talent and cabin parties.

That Ann Baer's Bud would even follow her to Lynchburg for just one date but she's playing hard to get.

That Betty Minetree holds the record for causing excitement in Junior Building.

That Marguerite Stephenson has that glow. She went to Hopewell and came back full of HOPE—with a new pin!

That Ann Tucker is smiling again—she and Bobby are back on the beam.

That Betty Gillespie had a really knocked out week end. If you don't believe it you should have seen her Sunday night.

That Spot Huneycutt got a letter from an "Ardent Admirer", Ha!

That Margaret Ellett is riding on the clouds, Bill was here; she will be down in a few days.

That Mary Jane King and Betty Plunkett are flashing new diamonds.

That Luverta has returned to school after an extended honeymoon in New York and Washington.

That Dee's goodlooking husband has been on campus this week.

That Nell Scott's Ensign Ed is back in the states after being on a sub in the Pacific since last summer.

That there'll be a lot of men here this week end.

That Mary Lou's Ted is coming down with Mr. and Mrs. Bagley this week end.

That Betty Mitchell got a card from "Ches" this week. Have you noticed that gleam in her eyes since?

That I have bechecked UNDER every bed an haven't found a man yet!

The Y. W. C. A. had its annual set-up conference at Longwood this afternoon at which time the committee chairmen presented their plans for the coming year. A great deal was accomplished at this meeting, and it is hoped that this will be a very good year for the Y.

Mrs. F. R. Crawford's talk was greatly enjoyed last Sunday at the Union Sunday School Service. She spoke on "New Lands and New Perils". Mrs. Crawford was at one time a missionary to China and had also traveled in the Holy Land.

Monday, May 7 is the date of the annual Westminster Fellowship hayride and picnic at Longwood. All Presbyterian students and those who have been worshipping at the Presbyterian church are cordially invited. Other announcements will be made later; however, everyone must sign up by Friday, May 4.

The theme for the week in prayers is "Faith in Our Best Selves". There will be special programs tonight and tomorrow night.

"Give us, we pray, thy spirit, too,
Living in all we say or do,
So that our lives like Thine may be,
Beautifully eternally".

MAY DAY QUEEN

Question of the Week

What do you think of war marriages?

Ruth Rowe: If people are in love, I'm definitely for it.

Nancy Whitehead: Darn good—if you can get a man.

"Bunny" Harville: That's a good question.

"Boo" Bond: I haven't had a chance to think.

Grace Loyd: I feel I'll be prejudiced if I answer.

"Cab" Overbey: You know what I think of marriage—period!

Martha Sours: They're O. K. if he's the one.

Heidi Lacy: It all depends on the situation.

Betty Minetree: If the persons are old enough—O. K.

Margaret Ellett: Any marriage sounds O. K. to me, whenever it is.

"Bev" Peebles: O. K. for others but not for me.

Jane Philhower: Give me a chance and I'll show ya.

Betty Burchett: Any time you can get married—get married!

"Phe" Whittle: I don't like 'em!

Kitty Sue Bridgforth: Don't think much of 'em. Depends on circumstances.

Joan Davis: Get 'em while you can!

Allee Hannah: They're all right if you know the boy well enough.

Mary Lou Bagley: They're all right.

Dee Smedley: Marriage is marriage no matter when.

George Anne Lewis: I think it's up to the person.

...Betty Bowles: I don't know, maybe if I were going to get married I'd think about it.

Various Saturday Night Types Noticed by Casual Onlooker

By HELENE GRIFFEN

. . . 6:00! The bell clangs, and into the dining hall pour our S. T. C.'ers. Each of these lovely students has a different way to "spend an evening," or what to do on Saturday night. We shall give you the "dated" type; the "homebody"; the "wanderer"; and the regular Saturday night show girl.

For the one who has a date, dinner is just a habit. She breezes in, is lovely to everyone, asks opinions of what she should wear, tells them who he is, where she's going, and how very happy she is about the whole thing. The others at the table eat their soup through clenched teeth, and try to imagine themselves in the role of this "blessed girl." Old Chemistry and English Abigail shuffles into the dining room, props her book (or magazine, if she's doing something different) on her glass and reads away until her table companions remove the glass to fill it with milk. She then joins in with a few witty sayings, and as soon as supper is over, she retires to her boudoir for a gay evening of learning "why" Chemistry and English! Studying is a ten minute affair with this chick, who is more generally known as the "Wanderer". At 6 o'clock she heads for Table 51 and lets others know of her presence by leaving her letter reclining gracefully across her plate. She's off for Table 58 and then Table 80, and so on. The bell rings and she slithers back to number 51, managing to get her finger to her nose first! After supper, she makes her rounds. Popping in on this one and that one—picking up a little news here, and a bit of scandal there. Oh! What a gal!

"You got a date tonight?" "Nope, just—sigh — going to the movies!" "Whatcha going to see?" "Going to the State!" "But you saw that Thursday." "Yeah, I know, but I gotta do something . . . isn't Joseph Cotten wonderful?" She dazedly sips her soup and gulps her milk, dreaming of 7 o'clock when she can sink down into one of the theater's seats, maneuvering her body until her knees are level with her eyes; chew popcorn with an experienced jaw, stopping only to gaze at Cotten and Rogers in a terrific scene. She and her pals stagger out of the State and push into Shannons or Southsides, where, after an hour or so, they drink their milkshakes to the teary tune of Goodman's sextet playing "Everytime We Say Goodbye!"

There you have them all. We have left but a few unmentioned. We just now saw those gals in the corner writing. Saturday night isn't an exactly exciting night now but it can be fun! We saw some girls dash down to Southside, drink a shake, then come back up to play a fast and furious game of ping-pong, ending this delightful show of skill with half an hour dip in the pool. Eating is always a grand policy and pleasant pastime — as we hear them crunching crackers, maybe that song title should be "Sometimes Saturday Night is the Loneliest Night of Them All."

Tennis Tourney Will Begin May 3

Contest Postponed Because of Rain

Rainy weather postponed the tennis tournament, but it is hoped that it will officially begin this Thursday, May 3. This is the doubles tournament held each spring, and the winners will gain five points for the color cup. Red and whites and green and whites are urged to join up for the tournament.

A red and white and green and white may play together in the tournament, but if they win, the points will be divided between red and white and green and white. Support your class by coming to the games as a spectator.

Just another reminder to wear rubber-soled tennis shoes when you play on the tennis courts. They are in good condition now, and can be kept that way with your cooperation.

AA Council To Set Date For Softball

Softball season will have a definite beginning soon. As soon as the Athletic Council sets the date, the tournament will begin. The tournament will probably be a round-robin tournament similar to the one held during hockey season.

Eight practices are required to become eligible for the team. The colors which win the points for this tournament gain ten points toward the color cup. Softball is the major sport of the spring quarter.

Practices are held at 4 o'clock on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and at 5 o'clock on Mondays and Wednesdays. Practices will start after supper as soon as May Day is over. Don't forget to get those eight practices in.

Afternoon Swims Make A Difference

Have you noticed them? We're sure you have. They're outstanding; everyone stops to turn, stare, and wonder when they pass by. Very obvious, and very, very disturbing to see walking around on campus. Who? Oh, we thought you knew! The girls who take swimming in the afternoons. They are peculiar looking, aren't they? Now, now, don't be hurt, or self-conscious about it, because we think you're cute, and are proving to be a good laugh—but we're simply crazy about you all—really!!

Notice in particular the unfortunate creature who has no natural curl, and who has lost even the last hint of a wave.

The damp mass clings to her head as if fearful to release its firm and clutching grasp. Behind her marches the "Roll-it-up-as-soon-as-she-gets-out - of - the-pool, and put-it-all-in-a-turban, miss," This chick sets the style. Carmen Miranda would shudder at this creature's personal attempt to a Brazilian twist and knot. A stray bobby pin trying to support a floating wisp of hair, falls over the side of the turban attempting one last plunge. We rather get a kick out of the naturally curly hair ones, the water made all their "coils" coil more fiercely than before, and they can't do a thing with it! Such luck! They look like a burlesque of a maestro. Not to be omitted is the "Now that I've a permanent, I don't have to worry". Boy, is she mistaken! Have you ever seen a shave of wood? She has it—quantities—but these are damp and contrary. Poor thing, just give it time, and it'll fuzz back to its original beauty. (As she combs and combs). Some of them are so used to the every day occurrence of plunging in and having their locks take on an appearance of the biology department's latest genus of seaweed, that we, too, have begun to ignore them. We consider them one of us, and are happy they don't feel inferior nor apprehensive about it. They're so cute and we love 'em, don't we? Now don't be mad with us, can we help it if we resemble Neptune's daughters while composing this appropriate feature?

BETTY ELLIS'

On the Ball

Greetings again sports fans! Once more yours truly is back in the familiar rut, and it is nice being with you all again. May Day has kept us all rather busy lately, and sports have taken a backseat, but as soon as May 5 has been torn from the calendar, the tournaments for this sports season will begin in earnest.

MAY DAY

This Saturday brings the long anticipated May Day. Each year this annual event takes the spotlight on the college campus. Through the cooperation of the student body, and the able direction of Miss Emily Kauzlarich, dance director of the physical education department, a fine performance is promised you, the audience. The theme is Russian, and the dances are vigorous ones. Surely you have seen the aching girls returning from practices. They have done their parts, now you do yours by turning out for the performance at Longwood at 4:30 Saturday afternoon.

Each year May Day is presented, and only as the result of hard and earnest work by everyone participating in the program. Next year, why don't you come out for May Day. It takes a little extra time, but after that time is spent, it is well worth the effort, for you have the satisfaction of knowing that you have helped to make May Day a success.

TENNIS

This week the tennis tournament will start with a bang, or should we say with a neat serve. This is one of the most interesting sports on the campus, and everyone can participate. You don't have to be the athletic type with bulging muscles. This is the sport that requires plenty of practices, and it is up to you to get those practices in.

Although the fall tournament leaves you as an individual player, the spring tournament gives you a partner to help you through those games. But here is where cooperation steps in again. You can't play in a doubles tennis game unless you learn to cooperate with your partner. Shall we call this a trick of the trade, but cooperating with the partner will help you to get more balls across the net than you expected to without the cooperation.

This activity brings five points toward the color cup by whichever team wins. So come on green and whites and red and whites, bring out the ole tennis racquet, and practice up on the serve and plays, who knows, you might win that tournament after all.

ARCHERY

Zing! And another arrow hits the target. Not quite a bull's eye yet, but with a little more practice, and better form, making a bull's eye will become a habit. One of the minor sports on campus, archery stands out in the sports world as an athletic game of skill and body coordination. Perfect form must be acquired before you can become outstanding in this activity, but once you have made it, championship is on your way.

As in all athletics, practice at this sport is the only way you can learn to perfect your form and ability. Every afternoon the targets are up, and the field house is open, so if there are no other activities on the field, try to get in some of those practices you surely need. For even a professional player must keep up his practices, too.

Until next time, adios by athletic playmates. Don't forget to stay in the game, and keep up those practices.

Left Lead

There are inspirations and more inpirations . . . when this column first came into being, it was inspired by Mr. Walter Craigie's "Hoof Prints" column, which appears every Sunday in the Richmond Times Dispatch. 'Tis the humble hope of your unworthy writer that she is not being too presumptious in sort of dedicating today's column to Mr. Craigie, and in taking a paragpah or two to explain the situation.

WE HAD THE HONOR

When we quoted Robert Frost's "Runaway", and several other bits of his verse, we certainly never entertained the hopes of actually meeting the famous poet . . . until he appeared on the campus last January, and wildest dreams managed to come true. When we have quoted or referred to the Hoof Prints column, we certainly thought even less, if possible, of ever having the opportunity to meet its writer . . . until Mr. S. E. Treakle made it possible last Sunday. But there we were and with eyes widening and hearts pounding . . . we met Mr. Craigie! He was all man, of course . . . or all gentleman, we should say, and the love of horses twinkled 'way back in his eyes. To Mr. Cragie, the short chat couldn't have meant a thing, but to us it was an honor and then some, and we'll be grateful forever to Mr. Treakle for making the meeting possible.

SUNDAY SHOW

The Mayfield Farms show at Mrs. Mosby's was a success all the way around. It falls to us, not to list the winners, but merely to give mention to one or two of the things we considered outstanding to our way of thinking. Particularly infatuating did we find Mrs. Todd's black pony Darktime Strutter . . . Col. Asher and Damarab . . . Mr. and Mrs. Price's gaited beaut, Black Priess . . . the swift precision of Miss Peggy Sampson's Hellzapoppin' . . . .the perfection of Fred and Tyler Kohlers' riding on their pair of grays . . . "our own" Mr. Hanbury's Admiral Sensation . . . No. 7, whoever the horse was . . . stocky black "stinker" . . . old faithful Huntsman's Pride, Silver King . . . and the adorable pony-colt, safe in the stall with her mother! Virginia Allen and Will Prevail took the top honors, but the side-lines mentioned here were for the most part fully as enjoyable. Again, our thanks to the Treakle family for a most pleasant afternoon, and enjoyable memories of a grand show.

HOME AGAIN

Tid-bits on the home front, include the fact that the ribbons for our own show are back from the printers and on their merry way down the assembly line, progress being fully started at the meeting of Pegasus Riding Club last night. Joyce, as always, has things well in hand up to now . . . the committees doing one super job of backing up.

Regrets go to B. Ellis who had it out with Darky . . . glad there's no lasting harm there. Weather interfered very little with riding this week, and with the show forthcoming, there are logically surprisingly few absences despite May Day practices.

For pictorial proof of that last picnic at Hampden-Sydney, ask to see the now-famed snap of B. Bibb, D. Anderson, G. Ackiss, S. Gibson, and J. Davis with the horses for the background. That's one for the scrapbook!

And despite all the small-talk already along these lines, we can't resist repeating to you our favorite compliment . . . which comes from Mr. Treakle . . . who sez . . . "First thing I read when I pick up the Richmond paper 'Hoof Prints' and first thing I read in the Rotunda is 'Left Lead'." Undying devotion, Mr. Treakle.

Stay on the bit!

The April meeting consisted of a program of original writings of the members of the society. These writings have been submitted to the committee on degrees which will decide whether or not the member is eligible for promotion to a higher degree in the society. The names of those eligible will be announced and voted upon at the May meeting which will be a picnic at the home of James M. Grainger, one of the advisers of the society and head of the English Department. At this time new members will be initiated and the newly-elected officers will be installed.

Retiring officers of the organization are Mary Franklin Woodward, president; Ann Masloff, vice-president; Ann Martin, recording secretary; Jean Prosise, corresponding secretary; Virginia Lee Abernathy, treasurer; and Catherine Lynch, historian.

Many Ways To Fix Old Evening Dress

by Evelyn Grizzard

What could you wear to the May Day dance that will give you a superior rating by the Army, Navy or civilians? It can put one in quite a dilemma! Don't lose any sleep over it though, 'cause "where there is a will, there is a way!"

You can go on a shopping excursion and pick out a darling little number with low shoulders and a frill to serve as a frame for your head and shoulders, or you could find one with a gathered skirt and a round neck and little cap sleeves. There are still lots of cute evening dresses with low fitted waist lines, sweetheart necks and elbow length sleeves. These are always good and always serviceable.

If, after a tour of the town, you return empty handed, get out your entire crop of evening dresses and survey them with a critical eye. There are perhaps many little changes that you could make in last summer's cotton, or in a taffeta or net of the season before. A good laundering and starching can do marvels to a cotton evening dress, and what a difference a bit of new edging or trimming can make!

If you have an evening skirt, consider yourself one of the lucky ones, because your possibilities are many. You can find enough material to make attractive checked or striped tops with no sleeves for your plain skirt, or a new frilly waist may be found that combines pleasingly.

If you have nothing new to wear to the May Day dance, use your imagination and ingenuity to the utmost and remember that it is more important to beat the Japs and the Germans. Wear your old dress proudly!

Dean Gives Picnic Supper At Longwood

Dean Martha Smith-Smith entertained at a picnic supper at Longwood on Wednesday night, April 25.

Guests attending were Dr. J. L. Jarman, Miss Alpha Lee Garnett, members of the home department, old and new Student Council and Y. W. C. A. Cabinet members, retiring presidents of the House Council and Athletic Association and editors of the three college publications.

★ SENIOR ★ PERSONALITY ★

JANE KNAPTON

When we were told to write up the Senior Personality for this week, we were told to write exactly seven and one-fourth inches on a gal who's five feet 'leven inches tall! Scz us, it can't be did . . . there's more to Jane Knapton than we can tell in seven measley inches. As she would say, "Fer cryin' in a beer!"

The first thing you'd notice about Knap, after the height would be of course, the becoming "Harlequin" specs. If she hasta wear 'em, they'll serve for more than lending an intellectual air by gawsh! In fact, they lend more of a Gremlin-ish touch than an air of intelligence, but that's more suitable, anyway. Oh, yes! And don't forget the weird angle at which she sticks that infernal pencil straight up through the front of her hair. Don't let it scare you, though. She's quite human.

Human enough to have likes . . . mostes' that tall Ensign out in the Pacific; cream puffs; fudge sundaes; apples (when eaten in the proper atmosphere) Terry and the Pirates, all W. Disney cartoons; doodling . . . and teaching? And human, too, are her dislikes . . . spiders, short men, empty P. O. boxes, Dominoes, Ramseys, kale, and washing clothes!

Jane's best known for her excellent work as last year's editor of The Colonnade and her excellent artistic touch . . . but she's beloved by all for her quick wit, her easy friendliness, and her stick-to-it-iveness. Curiosity once prompted us to ask why she had the initials "G. L. K." embroidered over the pocket of a favorite white shirt. We asked, and wheeling around to show off the back, she grinned and said, "Lawd, Maud . . . it's Pop's Bowling-team shirt . . . Paper Makers! Confiscated it when I was home, and wear it whenever I run out of clean shirts."

Which, according to above noted dislikes, must be often! Head for the Head Table after you read this . . . and take a look at the shirt!

VOLUME XXIV FARMVILLE, VIRGINIA, WEDNESDAY MAY 9, 1945 No. 27

Tuesday, May 8, 1945, Makes Important Date In History

(An Editorial)

Tuesday, May 8, 1945, marks one of the most important dates in the history of the world. After five years, eight months, and four days of continuous fighting in Europe, the official end of the war was proclaimed; however, not all guns were silenced as battles in Czechoslovakia continued to rage. Once again the flag of freedom flies over the war-torn countries of the West.

Throughout the ntaion yesterday and last night, groups of men and women, boys and girls assembled in churches to give thanks to Almighty God for the victory which had been won. As V-E Day meetings were held, people paid tribute, both verbally and silently to the men who have fought on the battle fields in Europe and to those who are continuing to fight in the Pacific. Many servicemen have made and are continuing to make the supreme sacrifice on the field of battle; these boys and men will never again see the promise of an American morning, and even in death, they have been denied the solace of American soil.

There can be no complete rejoicing in one's own heart until all fighting ceases throughout the entire world. The battle continues to rage in the Pacific, and our boys who are there have not yet seen victory as a reality. Of course, it is true that the war in the Pacific will be hastened by the German defeat as all mechanisms of war will be concentrated from the West to the East.

Here and now, we do join in paying tribute not only to men who have made the supreme sacrifice, but to our men on land, in the air, and on the sea wherever they are and to the women who are wearing the uniform of their country, as they fulfill their duties. We do dedicate ourselves to the task that is before us that those who died "shall not have died in vain, and that this nation of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

Cole Elected Head Of Art Students

Evelyn Cole, sophomore from Chase City, was recently elected president of Gamma Psi, local honor society in fine arts. She will succeed Mary Lou Dondley, senior from Covington, in this position.

Carmen Low, sophomore from Hopewell, was elected vice-president to succeed Virginia Terrell; Glenn Ann Patterson, junior from Winston-Salem, North Carolina, was elected secretary-treasurer succeeding Jane Knapton as secretary and Lucille Winston as treasurer. Elected as poster chairman, succeeding Eleanor Correll, was Sutton Bland, sophomore from West Point.

Helene Griffin, freshman from Roanoke; Norma Howard, freshman from Roanoke; Glenn Ann Patterson, junior from Winston-Salem, North Carolina; and Mary Rattray, freshman from Long Island, New York, were recently made members of the society.

Gamma Psi was established in 1932 to give recognition to those students of the college who show an interest in the field of art and attain a certain scholastic standard; to create and foster these interests in new students; and to render art service to the college.

Nichols Gives Books For Use In Library

Miss Mary Nichols, member of the English Department, has recently made several contributions to the college library. She has given about six volumes of the Eclectic Magazine, which deals with foreign literature, science, and art, covering the years 1849-1851.

The contents are analyzed in Poole's Index to Periodical Literature, which is the nineteenth century guide, predecessor of the Reader's Guide. Containing much interesting material, criticisms, and reviews of Robert Southey's poems, it also has a full-page advertisement announcing the publication of Tennyson's In Memoriam, and an article about Arthur Henry Hallam.

Holman Named Head Of Town Girls Club

Martha Holman, junior from Farmville was elected president of the Town Girls Club at a meeting Monday, May 7. She succeeds Rae Chick, senior from Prospect.

Pan-Hel Installs Grizzard As Head

Evelyn Grizzard, junior from Drewryville, was installed as president of the Pan-Hellenic Council in a joint meeting of the eight sorority groups on campus Tuesday, May 8, at 5 o'clock in the small auditorium. She will succeed Jean Prosise.

Margaret Orange, junior from Richmond, was installed as vice-president; Betty Brothers, junior from Suffolk, as secretary; Dorothy Overstreet, junior from Bedford, as treasurer.

Dr. Stokes To Speak In Chapel on May 5

Dr. M. B. Stokes, professor of Christian Doctrine at Emory University, will be the speaker in chapel, Tuesday, May 15. His subject will be "Some Great Christion Beliefs."

He received his D. D. from Duke University and his Ph. D. from Boston University.

Dr. Stokes will speak at the Methodist church at 4 p. m., and 8 p. m., Monday and Tuesday.

H-S Defeats STC In Quiz Contest

Radio Fame Star Acts as Conductor

Hampden - Sydney defeated S. T. C. in the quiz contest held Tuesday night, May 8, in the college auditorium, with a total score of 264. The S. T. C. team had a total score of 237 points. This is the fifth in a series of quiz programs presented annually by Alpha Kappa Gamma, national fraternity for leadership.

Jim McWilliams, radio star of the famous Askit Baskit program was master of ceremonies. Mr. McWilliams who is now doing work for the USO and has a weekly radio program in Chicago, was introduced by Marilyn Bell, chairman of the entertainment committee for the quiz. He came here under the auspices of the Red Cross to which went the proceeds from the quiz.

Making up the S. T. C. team are Olive Bradshaw, senior from Rice; Annette Grainger, fresh-

Summers Selected Head of Cotillion For Coming Year

Other Dance Club Officers Elected

Anne Summers, junior from Hampden - Sydney, was elected president of the Cotillion Club at a meeting held last night, May 8, in the small auditorium. She will succeed Marilyn Johnson.

Nancy Pitts, junior from Norfolk, was elected figure leader. She will succeed Betsy Caldwell. Katherine Prebble, junior from Lynchburg, will succeed Margaret Pogue Massie as secretary-treasurer. The new business manager will be Peggy T. Ross, junior from Onley, succeeding Catherine Trower.

Anne Summers was recently elected vice-president of the senior class for next year, and is chairman of the recreation committee of the Red Cross. A transfer from Randolph Macon Woman's College, she was chairman of one of the discussion groups for war emphasis day.

Spring Cotillion dance will be held Saturday, May 19, in the college gymnasium. Al Massie will play for the dance which was originally scheduled for April 14, but was postponed because of the death of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Coyner, Wall Visit Students,-Alumnae

Mrs. M. Boyd Coyner and Miss Virginia Wall left yesterday to visit prospective high school students and alumnae in central and western Virginia.

Towns visited on the trip will include Charlottesville, Covington, Clifton Forge, Lexington, Staunton, and Waynesboro.

Several weeks ago, Dean Martha Smith-Smith, Mrs. Coyner, and Miss Wall attended alumnae meetings in Tidewater Virginia. Also during this trip, prospective high school seniors were visited.

"It's Great To Be a Genius" Admits Victorious H-S Team

With Mr. Jim McWilliams as referee, the H. S.- S. T. C. annual Battle of Wits ensued for more than two hours last night, before a packed auditorium, with the team from Hampden-Sydney topping the team from S. T. C. with a final score of 264 to 237.

The quiz rules divided the contest into three rounds. In the first, the teams were alternately asked a question, with volunteers for the answer. In the second, each individual member picked his or her own topic and was asked three questions about the chosen subject. In Round 3, the teams went into huddles over the answers, their response being stated by one designated member.

Mr. McWilliams started things off with a bit of his perpetual quipping and libbing, by saying what a pleasure it was for him to be there "with so much beauty on one hand, and so much eagerness on the other!" He went on to say that in answering, the contestants were expected to respond with their right hands, but exceptions could be accepted in the case of left-handedness.

"How do you feel?" he jovially inquired. "Are you nervous?"

Replied Charles Fox Graham of the H-S team . . . in a muttter . . "Not nervous, I'm dumb!"

And so the battle started. The first query went to the gentlemen, and throughout the evening the questions covered everything from the unequal sides of a scalene triangle to ascending order of winning hands in a poker game. Nursery rhymes entered into it, and when the query came, "Who ran through the town in a white nightgown?" came the audible reply from Miss Garnette in the audience, "S. T. C. girls!"

Yes, everyone joined in the fun. The Quizzes quizzed the Quizzer, and the audience answered a good many of the questions correctly among themselves where the teams failed to impart the necessary knowledge, and Mr. McWilliams out-did himself by crowing and cackling like a Bantam chicken to help the girls in guessing the eight weights of boxing!

It was a grand evening and an educational one. Many thanks to

Russian Winter Adds Final Touch To STC-ers May Day

By MARGARET WILSON

Yes sir, even the gooey weather had its advantages. That Russian winter added the finishing touch to S. T. C.'s May Day. What with Czars and Cossacks and down-trodden masses, a cheerful sun would have been out of place anyway.

Much groaning, stitching, and pulling of hair went into the making, but (pardon our blushes) it was worth it! And, besides, it really was fun. Did you ever do a May dance in January—and like it? The Spartans were creampuffs- grossly over-rated. We Russians can really take it. The cry "To the cabin" was heard only twice at dress rehearsal Friday—and promptly as the last dripping peasant hit the steps, the sun broke through. On the whole, the clouds contented themselves with seeing how black they could get without exploding, so nobody's complaining.

Of course you've heard the theme song:

Drinkin' rum and Kolemyka
One poin to-o Longwood
Both Arkon and Hopak
Working for the ma-ases.

Well, it can be loud. No fooling, the tongue-twister names put everybody in the mood, but it was plenty of painstaking research on the part of Miss Kay that molded the theme and made May-Day Russian in spirit, as well as form. We had Miss Kay and Miss Wheeler—both aiming at perfection, and that's enough said.

The costumes did a lot toward inspiring the dancers. Gaiy colored and strikingly Russian (pronounced as in "you") in character, the massed effect in the finale was really effective.

There isn't much we can say about Betsy except — well, you know—Gosh! Her surprise entrance was a sensation. And Priddy's grin just about stole the belated sun's show. Remember the Chesire Cat? "Lightnin'" made a lovely picture as maid of honor. We're so used to her jodphurs that a gasp was all we could manage. The court spoke for itself. Glamour, we guess!

In spite of strict orders about staying out of sight, we did get a glimpse of the hill-side audience. Relatives, friends, and friends great-uncles were there. Every one saw Dr. Jeffers at once, and almost missed a 1-2-3 turn—but not quite.

The audience liked it, the sun finally came through, Miss Kay broke down and let the masses take off their shoes, in spite of King Mud, and all was well. Long live May-Day!

War Bond Symbolizes Our Gratitude

"The War Bond is at once the symbol of our gratitude and the weapon of our worthiness," Dr. Francis P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University, has said. Our gratitude and our worthiness will soon begin to show in the Seventh War Loan Drive. The drive begins May 14 and continues through June 30. However, colleges may count April sales on their drive objectives.

Americans, students, bankers, carpenters, as individuals are taking on their biggest quota to date, seven million dollars, four million in "E" bonds alone. The Treasury must raise in two drives in 1945 almost as much as it raised in three drives in 1944.

You may be asking, "Why is this such a big quota? Haven't we already reached the peak?" The answer is "The money is still needed for war." The Allied Military Command has said that the war to crush Japan will be bigger, tougher, and larger than most Americans expect. We may think it's almost over, but "G. I. Joe" in a foxhole in the Pacific theater of war knows the Jap, and knows that the Jap fights to the death.

To defeat Japan will take time, heroic effort, overpowering equipment, millions of men and tons of supplies to be sent in the new ships now being built. More of everything will be needed, more planes, ships, guns, tanks and jeeps, more supplies to crush our foe faster, in order that the boy next door or the kid brother may come home sooner.

"And, lest we forget," the sick, wounded, and disabled will require medical attention and care. Millions of dollars will be required to help our veterans get started again in civilian life.

To raise the vast sum needed every American will have to dig deeper into his pocket. We must do our part for our own sake, for our country's. Save for our country, save for yourself. In helping our country, we are also helping ourselves. When the final peace comes, we will need money for education, replacements, for all the little things we've given up for the war. There isn't a better or a safer road to take to reach these dreams than the one entitled United States Savings Bonds. Take your place on the high road, and make your future secure.

May Day Appreciation

One of the loveliest May Day programs ever to be given by Farmville students was held in the amphitheater at Longwood on Saturday afternoon. The entire program showed careful planning on the part of the director, Miss Emily Kauzlarich, and capable leadership on the part of the committee headed by Dora Walker Jones. The hours of planning and hard work came to an end on Saturday as the Russian festival was presented to hundreds of students, parents and friends.

To Miss Kauzlarich better known on the campus as "Miss Kay", we of the student body wish to express our gratitude for the time which she so willingly gave in directing this year's program. Then to the entire committee, Dora Walker Jones, chairman; Frances Lee, assistant chairman; Catherine Trower, business manager; Betty Ellis, dance; Connie Ozlin, music; Carol Diggs, staging; Margaret Orange, transportation; and Lucy Manson Sharpe, costumes; we just want to say "thank you, it was lovely."

Realizing the scarcity of materials and after inquiring as to how the costumes were possible, we found that old sheets were dyed and other articles prepared in the same way under the direction of Lucy Manson Sharpe. Hers was a tremendous task and one of which we were very much aware as we noticed the Russian costumes from the Czar to the humble, ignorant peasant.

This May Day program would not have been complete without the art work done by Miss Bedford's classes. The Russian characters painted on the ladies' skirts added much to the meaning of that part of the program.

We have just selected the people who were influential in planning and carrying ou the May Day plans; however, we are conscious of the fact that it could not have been possible without the cooperation and participation of many of the students.

In closing, may we say that it was a lovely celebration which many of you helped to make possible through your interest, cooperation, and support.

Gleanings

By Mildred Altice

At nine o'clock Tuesday morning, May 8, President Harry S. Truman proclaimed to the American people the unconditional surrender of Germany to the armies of the United States, Great Britain, and Russia. The long awaited for V-E day had come at last! The American people paused long enough from their war jobs to offer a prayer of thanksgiving and rededication. With tear stains of joy on their cheeks and a determination to work even harder in order that the enemy in the east may soon be crushed, the people of the allied nations went back to work this morning.

In the Pacific the Australians initiated an invasion of the island of Borneo. The Marines and the infantrymen are still slowly but surely conquering the Japanese on Okinawa. The Japanese are reported to be quite upset over the German surrender. This is easy to understand since all Americans already know that the war will not be at an end with the conquest of Germany, but only a doubling of the effort which will all be concentrated on the total defeat of the Japanese.

Past events confirm the fact that the task of solving problems when a group, a nation, or the world journeys along an unused road is immense and unromantic. The San Francisco Conference has such a gigantic task now, and requires the utmost patience from all Americans. Without popular support the conference would fail in this task even if it were composed of the greatest men in the world, but with it, it will succeed. This week the United States exerted enough influence to give Argentina a seat. The week ended with five important nations attempting to find a solution for the trusteeship of islands and possessions. The Polish problem was summarily dropped after Russia's announcement of the arrest of sixteen Polish democrats.

HEARD AFTER

BEDCHECK

Not since last year's May Day has there been so much excitement on campus. May Day, with unpredictable "ole man weather" lurking behind a black cloud nearly turned more than one head grey. However good fortune smiled upon us and May Day was all anyone could have hoped for. Orchids go to our very lovely queen, Betsy Caldwell, and her gracious court. Not to overlook all the girls who lent their grace and charm to the dances. A few more orchids to Miss Kay and Dody for their tireless efforts. It was a superb presentation!

Goodness! Such gabbing as followed the dance. Keeping each ear glued to a different keyhole is rather tiring!

Even though Bobby can't be here his gardenias continue to arrive. You're pretty lucky, Elsie!

Maybe John doesn't care for women, but he seems to have fallen hook, line, and sinker for Ann Baer: How 'bout that trip to Lynchburg this week-end?

And just who was Barbara Lee's choice of the cutest man at the dance. Seems as though there was something about an invitation to Cotillion involved.

Speaking of the Navy, Page Vaughan's blond can't seem to stay away! Of all the unfortunate things, he received seven demerits for overstaying on his last visit. Wow! What charm!

No wonder Mar Kent was all astew. Her father insisted upon dancing at one end of the floor and Bob at the other.

Must say that Agnes has an eye for the men! The snakes seemed to appreciate him as well.

Doug Agee was certainly the "man of the hour". Why hasn't Coleen told us these things before?

As for having a big time, Pat Carter did. Hubert does get around.

Let Kay T. tell you the details. Anyway, she got no small charge.

And what's this we hear about those South Boston boys who gave Betty Jane and Joyce such a knocked-out time?

Lo, after these many years May Winn and Betty Repass returned to grace our campus once more. Liked it so well, they're planning another trip in this direction.

And how does Earl manage these extended week-ends, Ginger? I guess this is sufficient reason for that state of semi-consciousness.

Margie, Kitty Sue, and Minnie Rose seems to have the Camp Pickett situation well in hand. More power to you there!

Apply to Cupid Partin (Francis) for any assistance needed. Barbara Jean and Stoney can give the required recommendations.

Flash! Roland has been accepted; in fact, he has enrolled with classes on Saturday and Sunday. Nancy Almond's Charlie has also submitted his application.

The Y

By ANNA HEADLEE

Vesper services will be held tonight in Joan Court, and the topic for prayers tomorrow will be "When Christians Speak."

Attending the Y. W. C. A. conference at Longwood, Wednesday, May 2, at 4 o'clock were old and new cabinet members, the freshman commission, the advisory board, and the town ministers. Plans were presented by the new committee chairman during the set-up conference, and following the meeting, the student body came out for a social hour planned by the social committee of the "Y".

The Presbyterians announce that a most wonderful time was had by all who attended the picnic at Longwood Monday afternoon.

This coming Sunday night, the Canterbury Club will entertain the twelve senior members at a special supper in the Rectory.

The Baptist Monthly Greater Council of all unit organizations of the B. S. U. met Monday at the Student Center. Plans were made at this meeting for a special program to be given at their Y. W. A. meeting tonight.

"Give us, we pray, Thy spirit, too,
Living in all we say or do,
So that our lives like Thine may be,
Beautiful eternally."

Question of the Week

(Instead of having one question this week, there will be questions asked by some of the girls on campus with answers from the inquiring reporter.)

Jenny Colgin: What I'd like to ask is, will they let me off campus to go home this summer? According to our calculation and computations, you will have to stay on campus every summer school for four years to make up for your violations.

Evelyn Goodman: Do we get out June 1? Exams start May 29, on Tuesday, and graduation will be on June 4.

Betty Anne Plunkett: Is Henry going to get fighter or bomber? You tell us—you're an authority on the subject . . . of Henry, not bombers!

Anne Shufflebarger: How can you write a geography paper without working? $100 reward to anyone who can answer this question—we're stumped!

Ruth Jones: Are they just going to allow 100 girls to go home for summer vacations? To answer that would only lead to bloodshed in the stampede for the Dean's office, but confidentially, it's rumored they'll be more than glad to get rid of all of us.

Alice Ann Abernathy: When is Loyd coming home? Now you know that's a military sacret . . . but he'll be there in time enough.

Chris Shifflett: Why does a powder puff? or a side walk? or how long is a piece of string? May we refer you to the Encyclopedia Britannica for a complete discussion of aforementioned subjects!!

Lucille Upshur: Do we get any summer vacation this year? Yes, if we all promise to hitch hike home and not crowd the trains.

Anne Hauser: When will I hear from David? Today.

Nancy Parrish: Why don't we get out a couple of days early this quarter since we didn't get Easter and Thanksgiving holidays? Your guess is as good as ours.

Anonymous: Are they going to put bars across the windows next year? Some reported a man measuring them but perhaps they'll give us Venetian blinds instead of bars! . . . we keep telling ourselves!

Barbara Montgomery: When are they going to start calling the roll for chapel? Any time they can get a double-talk man that can say all our names in half an hour.

Kitty Sue Bridgeforth: What are the new rules for next year? We're worried enough trying to obey the ones we have now!

Louise Rives: Why am I dying to see Joe? If anybody doesn't know the answer to that, just view the picture of the guy named Joe in 32 Annex.

Civilian Tux, Army Khaki, Navy Blue Spotlight Dance

By HELENE GRIFFIN

"All right, now here we go . . . you all be still and don't laugh or I'll foul up your name as sure as anything." After this hush talk, the two couples glide into student lounge, present their dates and travel smoothly down that "long, long line." They're doing quite well until they reach the last figure. Miss S....., this is uh, St. Sackson—er, I mean Pvt. Jackson . . . and Miss S....., may I present "Cpl. Mack Jireau—oh, I mean "Cpl. Jack Mireau." This confusing jangle of words over, the foursome "excuse me" their way downstairs to the gym and so—after a good 20 minutes—to the dance floor. There they gracefully float around for exactly three steps when some unknown yellow gown and navy blues jams into their side. The orchestra is really there, and we are beginning to believe all of S. T. C. is, too! What a dance! What a night! What gorgeous gals and what handsome men! What an orchestra! Man! What a crowd! Jitterbugging can never be an accomplished art in this place—throw your partner out for a twirl and you end up with some strange chick who has a bewildered look on her charming face!

Standing by the orchestra you can get a pretty good idea of what the dance is like! Lots of those lovely black tux; plenty of khaki and blue, with a few gold and silver bars, and gold stripes scattered hither and yon. Nice night for a lockout! (Shame you can't see without your glasses.) Hmmm . . . time out! Lucky, lucky, having two pieces that are dedicated to 'em—is it fair? Yep . . . guess so!

Ten-thirty is when all the gals lose two inches from their skirts. Hard going up the steps at intermission, isn't it? Half of your time is spent going up, the other fourth is spent finding who you started out with, but the nice last fourth is when you can breeze back down around 11:10 by yourselves and maybe sneak a few extra spins and dips in while the orchestra is warming up, and the rest of the crowd is straggling in.

The last hour is the most danced of entire evening. You feel pretty good by now, and when 12 midnight rolls around, you and your man call it quits, and you become the property of S. T. C. once more . . .

Left Lead

One more week . . . If it's a pretty week, we're all right, but if the weather man doesn't make up his mind before long, we'll all be nervous wrecks instead of just the Madame.

DAY BY DAY

Starting out with a visitor, J. Carter's Jimmy, (who is Lieut. Nelss when away from S. T. C.), rode with us first hour Wednesday and took in a tour of the Airport just for variety. Jimmy was a shining example of military trimness . . . until he showed up to ride in the Madam's blue-jeans and Jean Carter's leather jacket.

Second hour Wednesday rode in the rain, but when questioned under strict supervision, everyone admitted she "didn't feel a thing!"

Thursday the rain didn't give anyone a chance, but Friday the weather turned off and on like a cold shower, and between drops, the first hour went out. Joyce, with Duff, J. Babb, Ann Baer, McGuire, and Winnie Fox had just reached Longwood Avenue when came the first downpour, so into somebody's shed went Miss Black and Callie and all the gals, with the other horses tied under protecting trees, and there they parked, right at home, til the sun came out again. Once in the ring, however, came another cold, blinding drizzle with which they took to the woods. Once under the shelter of the tree, though, the sun burst forth scorchingly, and the disgusted riders were dried out before they reached home.

Saturday morning the colt was feelin' fine, so Joyce turned her loose on the outside of the ring. Never a dull moment . . . each time a car drove by, Cokie bucked all over the golf course. Each time the class cantered around the inside, Cokie galloped around the outside, waving her heels and ducking her head, and having the time of her young life. Callie did nothing to admonish her playful 3-year-old, nor did Joyce, but when the time came to come home, it required nothing more than a "'Come here, young lady," and she practicaly walked under the saddle.

Saturday afternoon found Polly Commack Laundon a welcome visitor, and to be honest, she didn't look much bigger on horse-back than did the small fry class she rode with. Mary Kent was out on her pony, and the whole group found themselves rarin' to go at practically a steady canter the whole hour out. That's one class in the Horse Show that will really prove interesting.

Sunday was nearly a horse show in itself. Many of the May Day visitors had just enough watching Joyce and Robin Saturday to make them want to see more, and Sunday afternoon found everybody at the ring who could walk, drive, or thumb to Longwood. Ellis jumped the Colt twice around with no knock-downs, which Jean Carter equalled with Colonel. Sterrett took Gypsy around twice with two knock-downs, Jody took Darky with one. The pairs of riders were practicing, and we think the spectators had a pleasant afternoon's entertainment. As for riders, the day ended with lemonade and cokes for the pause that refreshed prior to going back in.

Joyce Hill and Winnie Fox cantered officially for the first time on Monday and found it wasn't as bad as expected. And one of the most impressive meetings yet came about when the hay-ride wagons filled with Presbyterians on their way to Longwood, met the line of horses on their way in to town Monday afternoon. Pretty sight from either side of the road.

Shirley Didlake is back at school, but understandingly enough, says she never wants to see another horse!

SHOW BUSINESS

The ribbons are finished, the programs are underway, the prizes are pouring in, and the gang is getting excited. If you'd like an advance bit of bait, some of the prizes will be cash, some may be movie passes, there's a beautiful Hunting print from Martin's and a horse vase full of cut flowers from Collins's . . . and that's not all. Better get ready to bring in a blue . . . the prize goes with first place; second, third and fourth being just the ribbons.

Mr. Taylor is lending us his little mare from now on up til through the show, and his stallion for the day itself. Jean Souerwen will be back for the big day, and everyone is up in the air getting ready. (That might be as literal as it sounds).

Mr. J. G. Dickinson of Amelia, has consented to be judge along with Miss Burger, and numbers have already been lettered for arm bands.

Don't miss classes because we said this, but don't miss a single chance to practice between now and next week. Get in your make-up rides before the show, and you will have more chance at those purty ribbons.

Take it easy, though, and stay on the bit!

May 16, Date Set For Tennis Finals

Semi-Finals To Be Played on May 15

Finals for tennis are scheduled for May 16, and the semi-finals are to be played May 15. The doubles tennis tournament, delayed for the past week due to rain, finally started this past weekend. Because of the delay, all players are urged to play off their first rounds by Thursday this week, if the weather permits.

The line-up has been posted recently on the bulletin board, and partners signed to play are Beanie Dudley and Mary Jane King; Kitty Hankins and George Ann Lewis; Lucy Bralley and Spottswood Hunicutt; Eloise Stancell and Lou Baker; Phyllis Watts and Frances Lee; Dot Owen and Grace Lloyd; Mary Harrison and Helen Wilson; Nancy Magner and Jean Bentley; Betty and Nancy Parrish; Peggy T. Ross and Margaret Orange; Bobby Scott and Mary Walker Watts; Ann Motley and Lase D'Anjou; and Ophelia Whittle and Betty Burchett.

MARY HARRISON'S

On the Ball

SOFTBALL

This is just a reminder for all you girls who have missed out on either Monday and Wednesday at 4:50, or Tuesday and Thursday at 3:50, to get those extra practices in.

There will be points for the color cup gained by the winning team, so come out and give your support to your class. Some of you girls seem to think you have to be able to play a professional game. Oh no! Just keep up your pitching, and try for a couple of homers, or either a small one base hit could do the trick.

You owe your support to your class, so be out on the field on one of your free afternoons and give up an afternoon movie in exchange for a hot, fast moving softball game!

TENNIS

Come on fans, the weather seems to be well on the way to spring, who knows tomorrow, we may have snow, but the annual doubles tennis tournament is now being played off. If you aren't on the slate to play, you could come out and be one of the faithful backers.

To you girls who are participating in the game, the gym is an excellent place to practice by hitting the ball against the wall, it's sure to come back. Beware of those numerous windows, who knows you may knock one hard drive through the pane to the pool, result, no window, no ball! Please comply with the previously mentioned rules for use of the courts, and the best of luck to all of you in the tournament.

RIDING

Referring to horses, please. The big day for the riding classes will be held May 19 at Longwood. The horses will be shining and those eager girls who do the riding will also shine. The horse show is an annual event, and under the able direction of Joyce Cheatwood.

One definite fact is the weather is excellent for riding. A quick ride, will assure you a ready appetite, and good exercise. Purchase your ticket soon as they go on sale, and be out with the other "horse lovers", and watch the gala event.

SWIMMING

Splash! A dip in the pool is a sure way to cool off during the hot days we are about to go through here at S. T. C. You girls take advantage of those recreational swim periods on Saturday nights, and who knows you may be well on the way to the H20 Club membership.

HIKING

The sport above may not be on the calendar of athletics, but it is a postive way to get exercise, and leave those four walls behind. Some warm Sunday, get a gang of good hikers, and hit the road, find some field and creek—result, peace in the pink!

When "the man" comes home, he's going to want to do something besides park in the drug-store, you'll have to learn to be an old hand at hiking. Put on your hiking shoes, and have a good long hike, it does wonders.

Until next week, be a good sport, and get in the game.

In Greece civilians must pay $200 for a pair of shoes made of synthetic substance which falls to pieces after five miles of walking.

Week-enders at Longwood Include All From Practical Joker to KP Girls

By REBECCA TOMLINSON

Plaid shirts, dungarees and a blanket roll, and we are headed for the Longwood cabin to spend the night. Each year it is always something to look forward to when you are a member of one of these extra-special trips. Even if you are a member of the clean-up committee, you can't help but start out with a song on your lips, as you head toward the haven of trees and good old out-of-doors.

Finally, we are all here, and begins the organization of making the beds and straightening things out, for a neat camper is a good camper. With a sigh of relief the last bunk is made up, and the food has been stored in preparation for the supper hour, which already seems hours away, that short hike even made you hungry.

Shouts from outside, call you away, and very soon you are engrossed in a softball game, or some tumbling act gotten up by your buddies. This is a perfect way to work up that appetite, and stowing away hamburgers and rolls is really going to make the evening complete.

Finally the cook calls, "come and get it," that long awaited for call, and it is readily answered. Hamburgers, potato chips, salad, hot rolls, coffee and cake taste awfully good to a very hungry camper. Kitchen police is elected, and the havoc of a very tasty meal is put in order.

It is growing dark now, so we sit for awhile under the slowly darkening sky, watching the stars pop out, and singing together the old songs everyone loves and remembers. Someone has started a fire inside the cabin, for the nights grow chill, and it's a good feeling to huddle around the fireplace trading stories, most of which always end up with ghostlike endings. The perpetual bridge players even follow us here, and a hilarious card game keeps everyone in a good mood.

A rousing pillow fight, and a few more songs, and then we are ready to hit the sack as the Navy says, or as a camper would say, roll in our blankets. A few muffled good nights, and quietness seems about ready to cover all, but suddenly there is a scream, and one of our practical jokers has succeeded in making her joke a good one, for the chaperon discovers a small frog in her bed.

At last everyone quiets down, and as you lie there with your roommate already peacefully snoring away, you can't help but think that it's an awfully nice world you live in. Turning over you sigh softly and the Longwood cabin sleeps quietly in a starlit night.

Physical Therapists Recruited In May

Throughout Virginia during the month of May emphasis will be placed on the enlistment of physical therapy aides by the Women's Army Corps, it was announced recently by Captain John E. Brior, who is in charge of WAC recruiting in Virginia.

Due to the urgent need by the Army Medical Department for physical theraphy aides, this enlistment program is timed to tie in with the closing of the college year, inasmuch as only college women are eligible to apply, the captain stated.

College women accepted will take a nine month's physical theraphy course at one of the 11 schools in the country and upon successful completion of the course will be commissioned as a second lieutenant. They will be discharged from the WAC when commissioned and serve as a physical therapy aide in one of the 60 Army general hospitals.

Physical therapy, the Surgeon General's office explained, is the scientific treatment of injury or disease by physical measures, consisting of massage, exercise and treatment by means of water (hydrotheraphy), heat (thermotherapy) and by the use of electrical currents (electrotherapy.)

The first six months of training consists of academic training and practice work. The other three are spent in an Army hospital doing actual physical therapy treatment under supervision.

All applications for enlistment as physical therapy aides are forwarded to the Surgeon General in Washington.

Clothes He Likes Are In Style Now

By HELENE GRIFFIN

At first your heart's putting anything a P-47 could do to shame, because just the knowledge that you'll see him soon after nearly two years is enough to make any girl go into spins. After a few days this horrible, realistic thought flashes into your slowly recuperating mind. What will I wear??? Should you wear the flattering black with the tiny peplum and the two pink roses giving just the right amount of color, or should you wear a suit and look halfway like the gal he left behind?

Well, we decided on the black for his first glimpse of "how you've changed or not changed.' After all, you do want to look your best, and that smooth sheer certainly does something for your "figger". There'll be a dance at the Country club, too. What for that? The new pink jersey? The low V-neck, with the softly draped bodice that tapers down just a hint below your hips to fall into a million perfect, pink, slinky folds—watch out, LL!!

You know from "way back when", that he likes seeing you in sports' clothes. Hmmm, there's the good-looking checked suit, you could wear with a high neck white blouse, or either that drape, T-shirt you picked up last week.

Remember the dark green gabardine he liked so well? You could add some of that plaid braiding on the front panel, the collar and cuffs, and a belt could be made, too. It would add color to that tailored outfit, and he'd love it without knowing "why". There's always "Old Faithful", the two piece rayon gabardine affair, with the cardigan jacket and pleated skirt. You can change that with some skirts, and maybe wear the light blue angora sweater with the skirt . . . O. K.?

By now you're convinced you can keep yourself looking "reet" while he's here, if Mom will only let you buy that black mesh job you saw in Sak's window with the cap sleeves and "straight across" neck line . . . ummm . . . is it fair to him? We think so!! Good luck to you, and we hope the clothes look as good to him as you will!

2,000 WAVES More, Needed Each Month

The Navy has announced that 2,000 more WAVES each month are now needed to keep pace with the acceleration of the war in the Pacific.

About half of this number will be selected for the Hospital Corps, in which 13,000 WAVES are on duty at present along with 120,000 male hospital corpsmen. In order adequately to care for current and coming casualties, the Navy must have more WAVES to assist in the care of patients at naval hospitals. Young women are carefully selected for Hospital Corps duty during the 8 weeks' training in New York which all recruits receive. Those selected for the Hospital Corps receive 2 months' additional hospital training which covers: anatomy, elementary chemistry, hygiene, minor surgery, bacteriology, etc. Trainees selected for duty other than in the hospital corps will go directly from training school to various naval stations for assignment to general types of duty.

The 82,000 WAVES now on active duty are rendering outstanding performance and service, but in order to assure adequate medical care for Navy, Marine and Coast Guard casualties and to assure that shore jobs on which the fleet is dependent are adequately filled, the navy is asking for 2,000 more women each month.

Young women, aged 20 to 36, who have had at least two years of high school, and who have no children under 18 years of age, are invited to visit their nearest Navy Recruiting Station to learn whether or not they are qualified for service in the WAVES.

★ SENIOR ★ PERSONALITY ★

ELEANOR WADE

This week the senior spotlight is turned on Eleanor Wade, president of the class of '45. Characterized by short, curly blond hair, "Ellie", as she is fondly called, hails from Charlottesville, and will be found next year teaching in Fredericksburg, a thing she keenly desires and has wanted all her life.

A capable, efficient leader, Ellie served this year as president of the Monogram Club and as president of Kappa Delta Pi as well as her class. Her service and leadership ability were recognized by Alpha Kappa Gamma in her junior year.

Her keen mind has made her a "straight A" student, and she does her work in a minute, neat handwriting. But she is athletically minded, too, and served as captain on the varsity basketball team this year.

In dancing as in other things, Ellie is a strong leader, and she loves to "jitterbug"—when she is not on a dance floor. Her favorite pastime is eating, and her favorite foods are chocolate ice cream and caramel cake. And she goes to the movies all the time. Among the other things that go to make up her individual and well-rounded personality is the fact that she never wears a sweater without a blouse under it.

She comes way down at the end of the alphabet, but she comes at the front with the students. She's tall, charming, and poised; she's possessor of a good disposition and a keen sense of humor; she's intelligent and athletic; she's a leader; she's "first lady" of the seniors—she's Ellie.

Each Class Offers Different Things

By MARGARET WILSON

One opens a door, enters a room—four walls, covered on three sides with black boards—aims automatically for the first, last or middle row, according to the amount of studying done the night before, and slides into a seat. The process is elemental—part of the daily routine of some nine hundred hopefuls of S. T. C. To the uninitiated observer the same process is followed in entering from four to five of these classrooms per day. Each room looks reasonably like the others—not awfully attractive, but on the whole not too bad. They all look alike alright, but the old S.T.C.'ers knows better. Those rooms are loaded with personality—some positive, some negative. Let's follow ourselves through a day, and let's make it a tough one—we went to breakfast.

Well, it's 8:20 o'clock, so let's start to our eight five classes. We grab a pencil, to write home with, leave our books on the floor, pull our roommate out of bed, and eventually, when we can't find anything else to do, we go to class. Already conscious of the general nature of the room, we arrive at the door, open it boldly, make an entrance, charge through six pairs of feet to our last seat on the last row and go back to sleep. About forty minutes later we rouse ourselves, stagger out, and begin to knock ourselves back into shape. We needed that forty minutes of relaxation, 'cause this nine-five has a double barreled personality. We approach to within ten feet of the door, read that last paragraph for the fiftieth time, pause for a moment of prayer, straighten our shoulders, and enter like the well-known lamb going to the you-know-what. We sit on the first row, put on our interested faces, and fight a losing battle with epilepsy.

Hallelejah, that's over! Now this next one's our meat. It has a nice, substantial personality. We had the stuff in high school anyway, so we can always put up an intelligent front. However, the success of this approach depends largely upon the amount of "bulling" which the subject will take. Facts and figures have a way of vanishing over a period of time. Thus a small degree of review is needed, after which we find it possible to relax, and confidently await developments. Well, that's that.

Afternoon brings a new variety of rooms. With a last longing glance at that beautiful gravel on the roof, we wend our way to the gym—or, maybe to the lab. There amongst basket balls and little green frogs, we conclude our survey of class room personalities. Some are fun, others work, others an interesting combination of the two—but they all have something.

Stohr Will Speak At Farmville HS

Miss Edalene Stohr, home economist for National Livestock and Meat Board of Chicago, will give a demonstration concerning the care, cooking and serving of meat at the Farmville High School lunch room May 9 at 7:30 p. m.

During her demonstration she will tell how to select this essential food at the market which is so difficult to obtain at this time. The demonstration is being sponsored by the Home Economic Teacher Training Department and the Prince Edward County Nutrition Committee.

Miss Stohr received her degree in Home Economics from Iowa State Teachers College. She has had wide experience in many phases of Home Economic work.

Home Economics majors and any students who are interested in this program are invited to attend.

Exhibit Of Arts, Crafts On Display In S.T.C. Art Lab

Public Is Invited To See Local Show

Presented by the Art Department of the college under the direction of Miss Virginia Bedford, and Mrs. Janice Lemen, an exhibit on arts and crafts has been placed on second floor Library Hall. All students and friends of the college are invited to attend the exhibit which is open all hours.

Two murals are exhibited which were done in oil paint on canvass by a class of art majors and minors. Each student in the class made a design, and from these, the designs of Virginia M. Terrell, and Sutton Bland were selected; however, other students, Barbara Brown, Evelyn Cole, Jeane Ganzert, Nancy Robbins, and Nancy Whitehead assisted with the work. These murals, which were framed at the college by Mr. J. M. Hurt will hang in the offices of the two art professors.

Other items on display include figure drawings, landscaping, still life, flowers, birds, animals, and abstracts. All of this work was done in one of these mediums, chalk, pencil, charcoal, crayon, water color, tempera, or oil.

The crafts exhibited include weaving, book binding, pottery, linoleum block printing, stenciling, decorated jewelry boxes, sculpture, clay modeling, marionettes, and masks.

The elementary education class did music compositions to "Waltz of Flowers" and "Chinese Dance" from the "Nutcracker Suite". From this music, inspiration was received for line, color, and mood.

Some of the outstanding work on display was done by Carolyn Bobbitt, Sutton Bland, Aline Boss, Anne Charlton, Evelyn Cole, Eleanor Corell, Anna Cosey, Kitty East, Mary Anne Jarratt, Jane Knapton, Carmen Low, Sara Moling, Jane Page, Glenn Anne Patterson, Edith Sanford, Virginia M. Terrell, Phyllis Watts, and Nancy Whitehead. Freshmen who contributed outstanding work were Barbara Brown, Nell Coleman, Jeane Ganzert, Helene Griffin, Norma Howard, Caroline Painter, and Ting Rattray.

The posters for the display were done by the lettering class.

The aims of the Art Department are to orientate all students in all

Key Winner

Margaret Ellett, winner of the scholarship key which was awarded by Alpha Phi Sigma last Thursday.

Ellett Given APS Scholastic Key

Presentation Made At Chapel Program

Margaret Ellett, sophomore from Jennings Ordinary, was awarded the scholarship key given by the Delta chapter of Alpha Phi Sigma in chapel on Thursday, May 10. This presentation was made to the student who had maintained the highest average for the longest period of time, and this year the recipient has an average of nearer A than B.

There are three degrees of scholastic standing recognized by Alpha Phi Sigma. High school valedictorians and salutatorians are invited to enter as Novices. The Apprentice Degree is attained by girls who have held an average of B for two consecutive quarters, and the Masters Degree is reached when a member makes an average of B plus for two consecutive quarters.

Sophomores who have attained the Masters Degree are Lovice Altizer, Mary Armstead Catlett, Audrey Davis, Patsy Dale, Martha Russell East, Mrs. Anne Graziani, Anna Headlee, Janice Halstead, Agnes Millner, Charlotte West, and Frances Wood.

Four freshmen have attained the Masters Degree in two quarters, Hilda Abernathy, Annette

Senior Chapel Set At 11 A. M. May 18

Honorary Member Will Be Revealed

Following the Farmville tradition, the seniors will march in to the "Alma Mater" for the Senior Chapel service on Friday morning, May 18, at 11 o' clock.

Rev. Philip H. Roberts, of the Farmville Presbyterian Church, will lead the invocation, after which the class will sing their songs. The first number will be dedicated to Raymond French, classman, followed by the ten songs which have been sung by senior classes here for many years, concluding with "Joys We Have Known" and "Farewell."

Dr. J. L. Jarman will make a short talk, followed by a farewell address by Eleanor Wade, president of the class of 1945

Each year it is customary for the junior class to elect an honorary member, and the outcome of this election will be revealed by Eleanor Bisese, president of the Class of 1946.

At the conclusion of the program, the Seniors will march out to "Green and White", and the Juniors will march out under an arch of senior caps to the tune of "Alma Mater."

Choir, Choral Club Give Church Program

The College Choir and Choral Club, under the direction of Alfred H. Strick, presented a program of sacred music at the Presbyterian Church Sunday, May 13.

The program was opened by singing "Our God, Our Help in Ages Past," which was followed by "A Mighty Fortress is Our God," and "America."

Solos were rendered by Kitty East, Anne Blair, and Esther Shevick, and one selection was sung by the quartet composed of Ann Blair, Kathleen Blankenship, Doris Murray, and Ann Shufflebarger.

Annotations of the hymns were given by Dr. James Elliott Walmsley.

The newly elected officers of the College Choir are president, Connie Ozlin, junior from Chase City; vice-president, Julia Mesick, junior from Front Royal. Ester Shevick, junior from Rich-

Spring Style Revue Presented In Chapel

Presented by the home economics classes of the high schools at Farmville and Cumberland, a spring style revue was given during the chapel hour this morning. This show was sponsored by the home economics teacher-training department of which Miss Ruth Gleaves is the head.

Garments were modelled which were made under the supervision of the home economics student teachers as well as Mrs. Jessie Grigg, a member of the Farmville high school faculty, and Mrs. Georgia Putney, a member of the Cumberland high school faculty. Items worn included bathing suits, play suits, coat suits, spring cotton dresses, jumper dresses, and a number of garments made from feed bags.

The purpose of the exhibit was to emphasize the importance of home sewing and to show the financial economy of such work. One suit which was modelled cost $11 and would have retailed at $35.

Elsie Thompson, a home economics senior, presided at the revue and presented Virginia Watson, Farmville student, and Dorothy May Dunean, Cumberland student, who made comments on the work.

A number of the students who appeared in the show will be enrolled as students in this college next fall.

Massie To Play For Spring Dance

Cotillion To Start 8:30 P. M. Saturday

Beginning at 8:30 o'clock in the College gymnasium on Saturday night, May 19, Al Massey will play the opening chords for the Spring Cotillion dance. This dance was originally scheduled for April but was postponed due to the death of the late President.

The receiving line will be made up of Dr. J. L. Jarman, Dean Martha Smith Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Coyner, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. McCorkle, and the retiring officers of Cotillion Club. The chaperones are Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Graham, S. M. Holton, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. T. A. McCorkle, Mrs. Hallie Laing, Mrs. Eva Warren, Mrs. Katherine Tabb, Mrs. Mabel McCoy, Miss Pauline Camper, Miss Alpha Lee Garnett, Raymond French, C. Gorden Moss, and Lt. and Mrs. Howe.

The decorations will be designed by Joan Davis and Carmen Lowe who are co-chairmen of the decorations committee. They will be assisted by the goats. Dorothy Overcash is in charge of the programs.

The figure will be led by Betsy Caldwell. Only the old members and their dates are allowed to participate in this. The figure will be at 10 o'clock.

At this annual dance, no girl in school who is not a member of Cotillion may attend; however, each member may invite an outside guest.

Correction

Hilda Abernathy, freshman from Cochran, has been appointed to the staff of the Virginian instead of Alice Anne Abernathy as was announced last week.

Altice Gives Talk At Chapel Program

"We must be realistic. We must now put everything into our fight to defeat Japan," Mildred Altice, junior from Rocky Mount stated in her message to the students on Wednesday morning, May 9.

Being the day after V-E day, she emphasized the increased efforts to bring the war in the Pacific to an end. In her speech she brought out several problems which will have to be surmounted before we can achieve total victory. Some of these are, first, the immensity of the front; the actual fighting area in the Pacific is huge because it is so scattered. A successful concentration of the force on one vital spot is almost impossible. Second, the method of warfare in the Pacific results in long, tiring campaigns. The Japanese are extremely tenacious and resourceful once they have settled in a spot, and it is most difficult to move them. Third, if we invaded the Japanese mainland there is a great possibility that the government would be able to move to Japanese held Manchuria, where they could keep on fighting.

In closing Mildred states "Russia has not yet entered into the war against Japan, and so far, we have no indication that she will. She may decide to go in with us, but we must feel that we can continue the war by ourselves and push ahead."

GI's Face Perplexing Problem Of Adjustment In American Universities

(Editor's note: The following story does not pertain to this campus except that many of the students here are interested in what the G. I. can expect when he comes back to go to college. This is taken from the Ball State News which is published by the Teachers College, Muncie, Indiana, and comes to The Rotunda through The Breeze of Madison College.)

From the fox holes, battle decks, convalescent wards, and redistribution centers comes the ever questioning and perplexing problem from the GI Joes: "Just how will I adjust in American colleges and universities as a civilian when the war is over?"

There is profound sincerity, yet a ring of pessimism in the letters received from men whose college education was halted by the call to the military services. Many are not waiting until the day of victory to continue their education but are pursuing their professional interest through the U. S. Armed Forces Institute of which Ball State is a participating college.

Without attempting to analyze the administrative duties toward returning veterans other than to say that Ball State is planning in very way to aid and guide the returning servicemen, there is the personal student-to-student contact angle which will be highly significant.

True, returning veterans will be older than many students regularly enrolled, but they will be heartily welcomed back to their alma mater or, for many, to a new college campus. Because of their military training, there will be without doubt a noticeable difference between the attitudes of the civilian and the veteran. Having experienced through actual contact the horrors and brutality of war, plus the suffering of comrades and peoples of oppressed nations, GI Joe will be more likely to play a fairer game of give-and-take than the everyday college students. Those who have spent hours in cramped foxholes or amidst filth, stench, and hunger will have a deeper perspective and a more thorough appreciation of the little things which make life worthwhile, in addition to being able to get along with their fellow men.

Extra curricular activities which virtually ceased when the halls of educational institutions echoed with emptiness in 1942, will help bridge the gap between the veter-

Lovers of Nature Find Relief In Nature's Own . . . Water!

By HELENE GRIFFIN

Up the street they march, three abreast. Are they girls? Those blue jeans, and plaid shirts ARE a bit confusing. (Yes, they're from S. T. C., and girls-natch! One has a box under her arm, the others have only a determined look on their faces. Past Butcher's, past Dr. Jarman's, past—nope, they turned down that tiny, pine-covered path that leads down to the "Whirlpool." On their way down, several trees and bushes are stripped of three or four leaves. Each leaf falls gently into place beside the other in the box one of the girls so tenderly holds. These girls are messing with Mother Nature for sinister purposes, or Dr. Stevens said the leaves have to be in by Thursday.

"Look, do we have this one?" "I don't know, put it in anyway, it looks a little different." "Man, look at this thing. I KNOW we don't have THAT." "Oh, we do so, we got that from the tree where that yellow house was." "Suppose we ought to take this too?" "Good heavens, that's poison oak, I knew we'd do something wrong." (Note: If Biology Lab doesn't show up next week, we'll be found on First Floor Annex, "down under," or some call it the "Infirmary.")

The three frails have now made it to the pool, there they meet three more Biology enthusiasts and proceed to the Hospital ground via the briar studded way of traveling.

"Ouch! Did you HAVE to let that branch fly back in my face." "Sorry! It had thorns on it and I couldn't hold it." "Hey, isn't that the Hospital?" "Yep, let's go down and put our cokes in the stream." They did, much to the disgust of several slumbering crawfishes. Various and sundry species of leaves were found around the creek, the box full, their drinks consumed, their faces dirty, and their poor little lily whites torn by the nasty briars, the six lovers of Nature trudged wearily homeward. Butcher's being the first sight of civilization, the sextet took over and ordered huge glasses of water . . . because

Students Need Better Knowledge of Library

How much do you know about our library? We think that the freshmen, and perhaps the sophomores, juniors, and seniors could stand a little more knowledge about our library. We're not going to give you a lesson on how to use the library, but we are going to suggest a plan.

When we entered State Teachers College as eager freshmen, our orientation leaders pointed out to us the pretty building across Pine street. The next thing we knew our teachers were assigning us lessons to prepare from books in the reserve room or articles to read in old periodicals. Where? What were we supposed to do now? We timidly wandered our way between rows of shelved books, and wondered where we would end. Finally we scraped up enough courage to ask the kind looking lady behind the desk what she thought we should do. Immediately she put us on the straight road, and after numerous other questions, we found out what a useful place the library could be.

Our wasting of time and our many, many questions could be done away with if we had had a better introduction to our library. The librarians have said that they would give of their time willingly to conduct library classes to all new girls entering college. These classes could be arranged either through English classes or through orientation groups.

Some people have been led to think that the girls aren't interested and aren't willing to spare a few hours to learn the stepping stones to a good use of the library. However, we think the students are interested.

There are very few girls in these modern days of time saving that aren't eager to know how to save time, to save energy, and in the long run to get better grades. These classes would not only save us time, but would save the librarians' precious time even though they would conduct the classes.

The valuable information that we could learn about the library would prove more than worthwhile when college days are over. We aren't expected to remember everything we learn in college, but we are expected to know where to find the information that we may need.

Two Down, One To Go

Italy knocked out!
Germany knocked out!

Now Japan. Japan is strong, stronger than we like to believe, although common sense tells us this is true.

The enemy of the Pacific is girded for 50 years of war. Japan's 35 million workers on the home islands are working every day in the week, from 14 to 16 hours a day, turning out war equipment and foodstuffs. Then, too, there are still 400 million conquered Asiatic slaves who are, under the whip and lash, manufacturing untold quantities of material.

We know it took the Marines about four weeks of the hardest fighting in the corps' history to capture Iwo Jima. We know the Japs fought with the determination to die fighting. Altogether we have killed about 100,000 Japs, and taken but a handful of prisoners. Jap soldiers would rather die for their emperor; to do so gives them immediate entry to a pleasant after life, they believe.

This is the enemy next on our list. This is the enemy that attacked Pearl Harbor. This is our challenge. And one of the best methods to meet that challenge and to win is to support the Mighty Seventh War Loan with individual purchases of more and bigger War Bonds.

Set your individual quota according to your ability—then meet it!

Gleanings

By Mildred Altice

In Europe German-dominated peoples have been rejoicing and celebrating their newfound freedom through this week. Some of the German generals and high Nazi officials are being rounded up for trial. Some of them have had press conferences and have lunched with high military officials of the United States which has invoked sharp criticism from people in both Great Britain and the United States.

Already some troops from Europe have been sent to the Pacific for the war against the Japanese. The small island of Okinawa still has not been conquered. The infantry is fighting against stubborn resistance near the capital of the island.

* * * *

Here in the United States the method of demobilizing the men from the Army has been revealed to the public. Naturally, demobilization at this time does not affect the Navy at all.

* * * *

Foreign Commisar Molotov of Russia left San Francisco on Wednesday of this week and British Foregin Secretary Anthony Eden left at the end of the week. Progress has been made toward the establishment of a charter; however, it is becoming evident that relations between the United States and Russia have become very tense. This is just cause for considerable alarm, but it is to be hoped that President Truman and Marshal Stalin will meet at a future date and will effect an understanding.

HEARD AFTER

BEDCHECK

It's pretty obvious what girls have been to see the movie "For Whom The Bell Tolls" by the Ingrid Bergmans around S. T. C. Gee Gee Yonce comes nearer taking the prize than any.

We hear Eloise Stancel got a check this week end from a soldier overseas for a birthday present. We thought your birthday was in November. How about it, Eloise?

We hear that Betty Jane Shepherd made a special trip to South Boston this week end. Did you say Cecil was home, B. J.?

A good time seemed to have been had by all at the Spanish Club picnic last week. Miss Draper and Miss Barksdale seem to be promising baseball players.

Diamonds sparkle again and this time on none other than our own Jane Knapton.

Congratulations, Cat, on your new bracelet from Snuff. He's really back with a bang.

Christine Shifflet must have a priority on men. Where do they all come from, Chris?

Liz Harrell's John has finally come through with that long-overdue letter. Whew! He must be fully aware of the man shortage.

What goes at the Lion's Club! For full explanation ask Corinne Baker and Berkeley Richardson. Nice going, girls.

Ann Dickinson and Louise Rives stormed McKenny last week end. I'll bet "Frank's" was bubbling over with excitement.

"Baby Gammie" took the spotlight at the Gamma Theta picnic last week end at Longwood.

George Bragg is trying them all. What'll it be next week end, George?

Judy Connelly is really going down the family line! It was grandmother this week.

And Sifford, what is this great attraction at home? Every week end sounds good to us.

Virginia Lee Price was off to the University of Virginia for a nice week end, but she was nearly dead all day Monday. Speaking of week ends, Shirley Slaughter went home to visit her family and while there her sister received a wire saying that a special lieutenant fliend who had been at sea for 21 months was arriving immediately. We have heard by way of the grapevine that he mistook Shirley for her sister and what a reception!!!!

Jane Mantiply is all a-glow this week over "A Man" that is coming this week end. We haven't heard the particulars yet, but will let you know.

Adios until next week.

The Y

By ANNA HEADLEE

Union Vesper Services will be held at 7 o'clock Sunday night in Joan Court. If it rains, the services will be held in the Methodist Church. Because of this service which is sponsored annually by the Y, there will be no young peoples meetings at the churches. A fellowship hour will be given by the Episcopal girls at the Baptist church after the worship services at the various churches in town.

Six members of the Y Cabinet atttended the Y Set-Up Conference in Richmond last week-end. Schools represented there were Westhampton, Mary Washington, William and Mary, Virginia Union University, Virginia State College, Hampton Institute, and Farmville. The conference was an interracial one at which the work for the coming year was planned.

The Methodists are looking forward to the last Student Conference of the year to be held at the University of Virginia, June 2 and 3.

The theme of the week for prayers is "Prayer". Tonight the topic will be "Prayer as Guidance"; tomorrow the topic will be "Prayer for Gratitude."

"'Tis not by guilt the onward sweep
Of truth and right, O Lord, we stay;
'Tis by our follies that so long
We hold the earth from heaven away."

"For Whom the Bell Tolls" Hair Style For Girls

By MARGARET WILSON

The echoes of that tolling Bell will long be heard in the halls of S. T. C. It sounded the death knell of the glamorous pre-Bergman hair-do. Dazed from a three-hour exposure to the Cooper whatever-it-is, and still under the spell of that Bergman magic, at least a third of S. T. C. rushed roomward, seized the scissors, and began chopping. Carefully nurtured curls found themselves discarded wholesale in the trash basket. Good old power of suggestion.

It all started with Robert's nod of approval at Maria and her crew-cut. The shadow of approaching events could be seen in the series of speculative tugs and pats which swept the theater. We could almost hear those scissors snip.

Maria's example was given added appeal by the rainy weather of last Thursday, which to say the least, was not the best atmosphere for curls. Before a bedraggled audience lay the ideal solution of a pressing problem. Nobody ever said anything about the length of a woman's crowning glory, and there's nothing particularly glorious about long waves that aren't wavy. All we needed was a precedent—and lo'n behold, judging from Maria's results—it was worth a try.

So—Jodie tried it. Now we saw it—now we didn't. After careful examination of the finished product, and a few nostalgic glances at the forlorn shavings on the floor, we decided favorably. Still not exactly Bergman, but a reasonable facsimile thereof—and so the epidemic was on. Spreading from Gym Hall to Annex, from Annex to Whitehouse, on to Main —and even into the remote recesses of Student—there was no stopping it.

As always, under similar circumstances, a few tears were shed over the spilled milk, or what have you, but after many soothing words, and much twisting and waving, everybody began to feel better. There's just something about a new hair-do that sends the morale jumping. Besides, even if he "might be home any day now", there's consolation. If you don't like it, it grows fast, and if you do—you can always cut it again!

Letters to the Editor:

Dear Editor:

After talking with the girls on my hall, I felt prompted to write this letter to you explaining some facts.

I found that approximately 40 per cent of the students on Library Hall understand the use of the library to the extent of being able to find the material needed. The other 60 per cent, when asked if they knew how to use the car catalog or Readers' Guide, said, "Gosh no! What are they?" or "Nobody has ever explained it to method should I know?"

Of course I understand the library is short of professional help, yet Miss Clark would be more than willing to teach the freshman students how to use the library because it saves time in the long run. Why can't the last two orientation classes be turned over to Miss Clark to help our freshmen learn how to use the library?

If this plan cannot be worked out through orientation classes, would it be possible for each teacher of English 101 to allow her students to have several class periods of instruction under Miss Clark in the library?

I can't imagine a girl leaving this State Teachers College not knowing how to use these two simple library aids.

I understand that a majority of the upperclassmen, too, do not know how to use the library. The only way to correct this deplorable situation is by beginning on next year's freshman classes. Can't plans be started now for this project?

Mary Helmer

Dear Editor:

Upon entering the Rotunda, whether we be a student or a stranger, Joan of Arc is the most conspicuous object confronted. But, as the months evolve into years, we pass her dozens of times a day with possibly an unregistering glance. Tonight look at her closely—if a hat is not placed on her or a twig tossed into her lap, it will only be an accident because as surely as a day passes or a week-end rolls around, there are a few more names scratched upon our Patron Saint. How could anyone actually disfigure her hands by digging into the imprint of her fingernails? Yet someone has. Also, I cannot understand why anyone feels that her name should mar her appearance by being literally carved into her beauty.

Joan of Arc suffered a long time ago, and it was through her fortitude and inspiration that her ideals have lived, and today, permeate the spirit of Farmville. As students the responsibility is with us to honor and to uphold these ideals; therefore, let us see to it that no more uncomplimentary marks are made upon her nature.

The words of John Gerson:

HORSE SHOW

Ellis Re-elected President Orchesis For Coming Year

23 Apprentices Initiated May 14

Betty Ellis, junior from Coral Gables, Florida, was re-elected on Monday, May 14, president of Orchesis, honorary dance group.

Elected as secretary was Shirley Cruser, junior from Norfolk, succeeding Edith Lovins; treasurer, Esther Shevick, junior from Richmond, succeeding Betsy Caldwell; costume chairman, Nancy Whitehead, sophomore from Kecoughtan, succeeding Frances Lee; and historian, Frances Lee, junior from Richmond, succeeding Jean Carter Smith.

Twenty-three apprentices were initiated as new members. Corinne Baker, Betty Bibb, Emily Carper, Claire Clark, Anne Dickinson, Margaret Ellett, Lois Fuller, Helen Fuller, Dorothy Haile, Lorene Haynes, Ann Kingdon, Grace Loyd, Pat Maddox, Nancy Magner, Betty Minetree, Anne Motley, Betty Parrish, Theresa Powell, Berkley Richardson, Doris Ramsey, Hildrean Suttle, Helen Wilson and Nancy Parrish.

Following the initiation, the apprentices entertained at a party the new members, and Miss Emily Kauzlarich, adviser.

Plans were made to begin work immediately next fall for the recital which will be given in place of the Christmas sing program that quarter.

an and the regular college student. It may be difficult for many to settle down to the routine of everyday living; yet athletics, music, art, dramatics, and veteran student government projects will help ease the tension.

Campus veteran organizations that may be established will promote better understanding between the veteran and the faculty-student body, besides offer entertainment, self-expression, and promotion of veteran activities.

While the process of re-adjustment is in store for the veteran, the civilian student faces the same prospects in growing up to the expectations of these men. Giggly Janes and Silly Sals will have a lot in store, too. Some of the antics — destructive, juvenile, and stupid, which many have used to keep themselves amused, will be considered strictly adolescent in the eyes of men who will expect more of young college women.

Refresher courses and different education approaches will undoubtedly help the GI who hasn't forgotten as much as he thinks he has. Probably upon request of veterans, non-essential courses that do not pertain to the profession will be eliminated. Instead of being "old," hazy, and out of touch with education, the servicemen will be richer and keener for his experiences and will have new techniques and skills which could never have been attained in peacetime college classrooms.

Reports from such universities as Indiana and Cincinnati show that returning servicemen rank in the upper ten per cent of scholastic classes, which is undoubtedly true in other American colleges and universities where service men are now enrolled. Old study habits have vanished in the intervening months, but through the steady application and perseverance on the part of the veteran, and with the help of the faculty, fellow students, and administrative officials, there will be eventually a return to peacetime normalcy.

To say that the GI returning under the GI Bill of Rights to higher education will have a definite place in our postwar educational institutions is an understatement . . . students are looking forward and counting on the return of these men to help alma mater take on the semblance of a typical American College.

Softball Tourney Will Begin May 17

Classes Will Play Every Other Class

The softball round robin tournament similar to the tourney held during the hockey season will begin Thursday, May 17. Every class team must play every other class team with the one that gains the most points winning ten points toward the color cup.

Practices have been held every night after supper for the past week to give those girls who haven't enough practices a chance to get their eight practices in, as this number is required before a girl is eligible to became a member of a team.

Betty Minton is softball manager this year, with Jean Bentley as her assistant. Miss Olive T. Iler, physical education instructor, will referee the games this year.

The time is now! Well, anyway, the time is 2:00 on Saturday afternoon, and the place is the Longwood Riding ring . . . and we don't think it's necessary to tell you that the event is the Horse Show!

WHITE-WASH

That's no figure of speech, that's the actual progress which started Tuesday afternoon under capable direction of Nancy Ingle. With the truck loaded up with buckets and brushes and dry white-wash and gals, and the sun beaming down incessantly, it was inevitable that the old fence around the rink should be the target for one more coat of white-wash. How many went to work we aren't quite sure, but there's still time of vounteers. Don your oldest of blue-jeans and bare your feet, and roll up your sleeves and we'll make you feel like Tom Sawyer in two slaps of a paint-brush.

PRIZE-WISE

Mary Sterrett's the smart one in this case. All the prizes are in and distributed among classes. Many thanks to our local merchants who responded so beautifully to our pleas and contributed such nice prizes for the blue-ribbon winners. In several cases where the offerings have been in cash, small gifts of an equestrian nature have been purchased by the committee and will be awarded instead.

RARE PAIRS

Sunday afternoon was another day of hard work for the pairs-class, but much - needed work, and really fun in the long run. What with all the visiting horses out there practicing, it was nearly as exciting as the real thing, and then there were the added attractions of Sunday walkers looking on, and the Longwood buns and lemonade to cool one off in the heat of the afternoon. Mr. McCraw and Sarah were there . . . . Mr. Troy Johnson brought his big gray out for Anna Stuart to practice on . . . people were there aplenty . . . and half-way back into town, when the gang met Botts and Dewey on their way out, the whole line-up did a quick reverse and went back to the ring to watch the Madame put Dewey through his paces. It couldn't last all day, though, and so with some little rushing the whole group was back in time for supper.

Pairs are shaping nicely now. The Pony and Miss Black look really good at any gait; Robin does his best to trot with the Colonel, and Gypsy and Cinnamon can walk and canter nicely, anyway.

It was Sunday, too, that we had the honor of having one, Mickey, along for the ride. He and Callie made a pair all by themselves.

The sports world at S. T. C. is now booming with activities. Tennis matches are being played off, everybody is trying to get in her required number of practices for softball, and the sports schedule is full of all activities.

TENNIS

Have you been out to play tennis yet? Come on out and enjoy plenty of really good fun. The afternoons are crowded with girls playing off their matches. In order to be able to get a vacant court you must sign up for a definite court and time. Since the sun has been showing its face, the courts have been crowded, and we hope they will stay that way. Every day more new girls can be seen out on the courts trying their luck at this popular sport. Why don't the rest of you come out from your hiding places and try your luck too? You will find that a little exercise is very good for you.

SOFTBALL

The outstanding sport of the season is softball, From now till the time for the softball tournament, practices are scheduled Monday through Thursday from 6:45 until 7:30, on Monday and Wednesday at 4:50 Tuesday and Thursday at 3:50. Every girl, even if she isn't an expert, can come out and play for her own team. This spring it seems as if there will be plenty competition for every class team as we have noticed some very good players on the diamond.

Don't Miss All the Good Riders, Beautiful Horses At Longwood Ring

It's a long hard journey with no reward at the end; it's a futile job that receives no pay. It would be a dis-interested bunch of horse-lovers who would work all year if they didn't have the Horse Show in the spring to look forward to as a chance to prove their worth as riders.

The Pegasus Horse Show, which will be held this Saturday afternoon at Longwood at 2:00 is no slip-shod exhibition of the school's supply of horseflesh. Indeed, under able directorship of Joyce Cheatwood, the show this year will have more of a professional air than ever before. For the first time, a small admission is being charged. For the first time, gift prizes are being awarded to those who place first in the twelve classes. And for the first time, we guarantee that you won't be able to tell that the ribbons were handmade by the girls in the Riding Club. Outside entries are being made, and local bets run high between Mr. F. H. Hanbury's Admiral Sensation, and Mr. L. D. Jacobs' Dewey, for winner in the five-gaited class.

Variety runs high. The equitation classes will give the riders the chance to hold their own as "jocks" of the higher degrees. The closed S. T. C. classes will lend keen competition among the girls, while at the same time, the open classes in which the girls compete with the townpeople will have an even keener air of alertness and anticipation. The Old Virginia Riders class, in which the horses are to be kept at any one gait throughout the time limit will lend an atmophere not found in the other classes where the gaits are called by the judges and shown by the group at the specified time. The Pairs of Riders, too, fulfill a personality rating all its own . . . spectators have been heard to call the most interesting of the day's program.

The Hunters will naturally interest those who desire a little more exciting phase of riding. Though the jumps are low, the risk is none the less great, and the form none the less important. This a tame show indeed where there are not a few refusals and perhaps even a minor spill or two. Due to the fact that several of our jumping horses haven't had too much training, anything can happen . . . and probably will!

Last event of the day is usually the most entertaining, and so often missed by those who tire before the end of the program. Yes, the old faithful costume class, with its Cowboys, Indians, pony-carts, side-saddles and Lady Godivas. Here again, expect anything . . . and be surprised at absolutely nothing.

There'll be entertainment outside the ring, too, in the way of food! Drinks and possibly nabs will be on sale throughout the afternoon, for the benefit of riders as well as spectators. And no doubt there'll be as always the endless excitement of the side-play of Mr. Reid's pony!

You don't have to know a lot about horses to enjoy the Horse Show. It'll mean just as much to get a sun-burn out there as it would to park on the roof for an hour or so. You'll get more entertainment for less money than you would at the Saturday movie. It may be your roommate who's being The Headless horseman in the costume class, or it may be one of your third-grade pupils who's riding in the town children's class. It may be that you've never seen a horse before and would like to come for pure curiosity!

But whatever the reason, and whatever the weather, this is your show put on by your fellow-students, and we know that if you'll just take time out to come to it, you'll more than enjoy it. Those of you who do ride but were not interested in participating will probably need wild horses to keep you away. Come on, and bring the gal next door or the guy from H-S or Camp Pickett . . . and watch those gals ride out with the prize ribbons waving from their horse's bridles! We say it's worth it!

Picnics Spotlight Campus Activities

With the appearance of spring weather and the end of school approaching, picnics and parties are being held by various groups and organizations on the campus.

The junior class is entertaining the senior class tonight at a picnic supper at Longwood. Invited guests include Miss Elizabeth Burger, junior class adviser; Raymond French, senior class adviser; Mrs. Eva Warren, Mrs. Katherine Tabb, and Miss Evelyn Hamner.

The Spanish Club enjoyed a picnic at Longwood on May 9. Guests included members of the Spanish Club, Miss Helen Draper, and Miss Emily Barksdale.

In the recreational hall of Main Building, the Commercial Club held its annual spring picnic last Wednesday night. Mr. Christy Snead, Mr. Merle Landrum, Miss Ottie Craddock, Mr. S. M. Holton, Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Wynne, Miss Winnie Hiner, Dean Martha Smith Smith, Miss Zita Bellamy and Miss Olive Parmenter attended in addition to members of the Commercial Club.

Members of Gamma Theta sorority attended the annual spring picnic at Longwood on May 12. Seniors, officers, members not returning to school in the fall, and Miss Florence Stubbs, adviser, spent the night at the cabin.

The French Circle with Miss Helen Draper and Miss Edna Draper, spent the evening of May 11 at Longwood, enjoying a picnic and the singing of French songs.

Pi Kappa Sigma sorority held its spring banquet in the college tea room, Wednesday evening, May 9 at 6:30 o'clock. Beverley Peebles was toastmistress for the occasion, and toasts were given by Page Cook, Martha East, Margaret Lohr, Pat Maddox, and Joyce Hill.

Invited guests included Dr. J. L. Jarman, Dean Martha Smith-Smith, Miss Ruth Gleaves, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Graham, Miss Mary Dabney, and Miss Olive Iler, adviser of the group.

cause then Fortune awaits your choice. Fate makes her decisions, and you'll find out which horse you'll be riding in your regular classes come Saturday! Yep, we draw names tonight, so keep your fingers crossed!

Then too, at the same time be sure to bring your entry fees . . . thirty-five cents for each class . . . and pay them tonight, too. Joyce will be there to dish out last minute instructions and answer last-minute questions, and this is one meeting you don't want to miss.

WEEK'S NEWS

It took the Colonel to stir up the excitement which caused Gypsy to run across the road and deposit Betsy Dunn upside down on a soft little bank. All on the way home from Longwood when a lawn mower frightened the Colonel who started running, which excited Gypsy who did as just described. Betsy sure did look surprised! No harm done, of course.

And it took Darky to break her bridle Saturday and play all over the golf course before she condescended to get caught, and then to get loose again on Sunday and play some more. And all the while the peaceful Robin standing there nibbling grass . . . with never a thought of joining in the undignified antics, no matter how hard Darky begged.

GOOD LUCK

Well, we'll see you at the ring Saturday. Don't get nervous, now, or too excited. After all . . .think of the people who'll be wishing they were in our places! (Who are we trying to kid?)

Take it easy, best of luck . . . and

Stay on the bit!

Girls' Ideas Turn To Sun Clothes, As Summer Nears

By EVELYN GRIZZARD

Now that summer looms near, a young girl's thoughts naturally turn to sun clothes or play clothes, and there is nothing more attractive than some of the new ones in the stores.

The bare midriff is definitely here for the duration (and six months after) and there is no limit to the halter and shorts combinations that make sun bathing so much fun. Some of the shorts have neat pleats, but to our minds the cutest ones are gathered, presenting a bloomer-like appearance. These come in many colors, and in checks or solids, and some even have eyelet trim.

The favorite T shirt is back and in all the glorious colors of former years. You find 'em in circle stripes (like a convict) in solid colors, and even in two-tones. These look very neat with white duck shorts and help prevent a badly sunburned back.

The play dress is still a favorite, and some of the newest ones have halter-like tops. Some have buttoned on skirts that fit neatly over sun suit or shorts and make milady perfectly presentable on the street.

Play clothes are prettier and more eye-catching than ever this year. Pick a couple of new ones and watch heads on the beach, tennis court, or sun roof turn in your direction!

Room Signing Up Creates Wild Dash

By SUE HUNDLEY

"Have you seen my roommate-If you see her tell her to head it down to the Registrar's office and sign up for our room for next year."

"Yeh! They've been signing up all day and I just found out. You can't suite with them. They said they were gonna suite with us."

"Why don't we all sign up for the hall—that'll be better than eight in a room. What's the number of the room we want?"

"I think it's 23, maybe 26 or 27."

"Sign up for something if it's just a closet. So and so has signed up for that. We'll never get it now. She's on government and they get first choice."

"But our suitemates run the coke machines. That oughta help some. I heard somebody say that they had already started fixing out the rooms."

"Oh! they don't like me 'cause I have too many unexcused absences. We'll probably be in the basement."

"Oh! no! they couldn't do that to us—not again. I went over and looked at the room we wanted—I had to stand in line to look at the door. Then I forgot the number—oh! well, see ya next year. We'll just hafta trust to luck, I guess."

Increased Need For Nurses Seen

Victory in Europe has increased, rather than decreased the army's need for nurses and will not affect urgent requirements for recruits to the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps, the Office of War Information announced.

According to the Surgeon General, the Army Nurse Corps today is 9,000 nurses short of its June 1 goal of 60,000 nurses. Before July 1, 1946, there must be an increase in nursing strength in this country of nearly 14,000 nurses in the military and government services, and more than 35,000 for civilian needs, or a total of nearly 50,000 additional nurses, according to the Public Health Service.

It is expected, however, that most of this need will be met by graduates from the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps. It is anticipated that more than 30,000 student nurses will graduate between July 1, 1945 and July 1, 1946.

★ SENIOR ★ PERSONALITY ★

MARY WALKER WATTS

Our personality this week is probably one of the best known girls in school. For four years we have cheered her on as she scooted up and down the hockey field or aimed with deadly accuracy to score a basket. Her blonde hair and white shorts are often seen on the tennis courts and no Green and White softball team is complete without her. No more introduction is needed as we turn the spotlight on Mary Walker Watts.

Serving her class as secretary in this capacity for the past two years, she has also held the same office in the A. A. In addition to her secretarial duties, Mary has been the girl behind the siren during fire drills, for she is Fire Chief. Here her athletic training has stood her in good stead when she has had to make a tour of all the buildings in less time than it takes ordinary humans to bat an eyelash.

Mary Walker has a sincere interest in other people and is never too busy to stop for a chat. Her progress through the halls is marked by a broad smile and a long "hey". She's feminine to the bone and though she prefers skirts and blouses to frills, she has a weakness for perfume and always exudes the angelic aroma of "Heaven Scent."

Her likes and dislikes are definite. She's crazy about people, movies, corduroy jackets, and pie with ice cream. Numbered among her pet hates are people who boss, who tease her about her famous legs, and insincerity. Her chief ambition is to marry the man of her dreams and spend the rest of her life with him in a rustic mountain cabin where she can wear jeans always.

Next year will probably find Mary Walker working in a laboratory, where, if she doesn't blow up the place first, she may revolutionize the world of chemistry.

Rotunda Members Give Spring Banquet

Beginning at 6:30 o'clock on Friday night, May 18, members of the Rotunda staff will have the annual spring banquet in the college tea room.

Invited guests include Dr. J. L. Jarman, Dean Martha Smith Smith, Mr. S. M. Holton, Mr. and Mrs. Barrye Wall and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lancaster.

STC Girls Entertain At Local Lions Club

At a regular meeting of the Lions Club Friday evening, May 11, girls from S. T. C. entertained with dances and a piano solo.

Opening the program were Hildrean Suttle and Claire Clark dancing the Hopak. This was followed by acrobatic stunts by Terry Fuller, after which Cab Overbey played a selection on the piano.

Berkley Richardson and Corrinne Baker did a ballet dance, followed by Claire Clark with a tap dance.

Concluding the program was a dance by Hildrean Suttle, and a soft shoe dance by Berkley Richardson and Corrine Baker.

Connie Ozlin accompanied the dancers for the program which was under the direction of Miss Emily Kauzlarich.

Students of Russia Similiar to U. S. Girls

In spite of the war and the resulting shortages and hardship which drastically affect them, Russian college girls have a great deal in common with those in America, according to Maurice Hindus, noted authority on Russia.

Hindus, whose bristly gray hair makes him look just as a Russian should look, continued in his marked accent that they do not have our good clothes, nor our good food, libraries, classes, gymnasiums and all the excellent facilities taken for granted in colleges here, but in their way of thinking, they and American girls see eye to eye on most subjects. The Russian college girl is preeminently a career girl—medicine appeals to her more than any other profession—and she firmly believes that a family and a career are perfectly compatible.

Hindus stated that despite pictures often seen in newspapers here of feminine army personnel, who serve in a limited capacity, but who are often found in the fighting lines, Russian girls are "espousing the cause of femininity." But he added that college girls make the best snipers, a field in which Americans girls have fortunately not had a chance to prove themselves. —ACP

Just Looking, Thanks

By ANNE BUCK

Just looking around the campus to see who got homesick for 'Mom' on Mother's Day, we find many dorm rooms empty.

Going to Richmond were Betty Lee, Dorothy Halle, Gene Harrison, Corrine Baker, Berkley Richardson, Patsy Dale, Rachel Brugh, Sara Leach, Hilda Bennett, Muriel Crostic, Virginia Marshall, Marian Wittcamp, Mary Ann Morris, Frances Timmins, Glennis Moore, Anne Masloff, Ann Kindon, Betty Adams, Jane Anderson, Alene Alphin, Virginia Lee Abernathy, Marilyn Bell, Virginia Dale, Mary Fuqua, Frances Flynn, Jean Gangerl, Frances Hobson, Frances Lee, Pat McLear, Elizabeth Mountcastle, Barbara Montgomery, Betty Mitchell, Margaret Orange.

Roanoke was all aglow with Alice Coon, Dorothy Fultz, Madelyn Ayers, Betty Suthers, Elizabeth Driscoll, and Mary Castle.

Petersburg drew Doris Ramsey, Jean Givers, Jean Pritchett, Frances Seward, Betty Harville, Margaret Park.

Moms in Natural Bridge were happy to se Marian Lotts, Jeanne Tolley, Doris Young, and Miriam Estes.

On the go toward Blackstone were Ann Dickinson, Marian Gunn, Lottie Hammock, and Anne Williams.

Not far away but a precious place is Burkeville to Elizabeth Scott, Carol Jenkins, and Agnes Cooke.

Planning summer work in West Point were Judy Reich, Mar Kent Stevens and Sutton Bland.

One more week before exams—burr—nice thought, isn't it? Wonder who will be so bold as to go home the week-end before?

South Boston mothers were glad to see Shirley Ann Reeves, Betsy Scott, Reba Conner and Betty Jane Shepherd.

Going down to Danville were Martha Lynn Sprye, Barabara Lee Myers, and Helen Hope Worsham.

Visiting in Lynchburg were Shirley Slaughter, Joan Davis, Charlotte Hutter, Betty Plunkett, Alfreda Peterson, Faye Walke, Jean Bentley, Doris Jean Hancock, Josephine Bailey and Mary Walker Watts.

Having fun in Crewe were Mable Lewis, Virginia Beaver, Rose Bland Jenkins, Virginia Thompson and Helen Trump.

Food and friends at home attracted Peggy Moore, Mary Preston Sheffey, and Edith Duffy to Norfolk.

Chatham was a joyous place for Imogen Moore, Lorene Haynes, and Be Be Geyer.

Watts Selected Honorary Member By Junior Class

Class Head Makes Farewell Address

Mary Walker Watts, senior from Amherst, has been chosen honorary classman by the junior class according to an announcement made by Eleanor Bisese, junior class president. The announcement was made in Senior Chapel, Friday, May 18.

Mary Walker is secretary of the senior class, secretary of the Athletic Association, and Fire Chief. She is a chemistry major.

She was chosen on the basis of her interest in the school, and her official duty is to assist Eleanor Bisese lead the senior figure next year.

Beginning the chapel program Friday morning, the seniors marched in to the "Alma Mater." Rev. Philip Roberts gave the invocation which was followed by class songs to the adviser and to the college. Eleanor Wade made her farewell message, to which Eleanor Bisese replied, and also announced the honorary class member which had not been revealed until that time.

As a part of the traditional Senior Chapel program, Dr. J. L. Jarman sang "Keep on Hoping" accompanied by Mrs. Clyde Bradshaw at the piano.

Concluding the program, the junior class marched out to the "Alma Mater" under an arch formed by the senior class.

Zehmer Will Give Main Talk At Final Exercises June 4

Beginning at 10:30 o'clock on Monday morning, June 4, the sixty-first commencement exercises will be held in the college auditorium. Dean George B. Zehmer, dean of extension division and summer quarter of the University of Virginia, will give the main address of the morning.

Following the invocation by the Rev. H. Conrad Blackwell, Mary Preston Sheffey, second honor graduate, will deliver the salutatory address. The Madrigal Singers of the College Choir will sing "The Silver Swan" by Orlando Gibbons; "Sing We and Chant It" by Morley; and "Here in Cool Grot" by Earl of Mornington. Sara Dailey Moling, first honor graduate, will give the valedictory address, after which Dr. J. L. Jarman will award the degrees and announce the honor graduates.

On Sunday, June 3, at 8 o'clock in the auditorium, the Rev. A. H. Hollingsworth, Jr., pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, of Roanoke, Virginia, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon. The College Choir will sing Randall Thompson's "Pueri Habraeorum."

Class Day exercises will be held on Saturday afternoon, June 2, at 4 o'clock. Eleanor Wade, president of the senior class, will give the welcome which will be followed by the class song. Marilyn Bell, class historian, will give a history of the class, after which there will be the presentation of the Symbol of Office. Fay Byrd Johnson, class giftorian, will present the gifts at the conclusion of which the class will sing its farewell song, followed by the formation of the daisy chain on the campus.

Following the reception which will be held in the lounge of Student Building Saturday night, June 2, at 8:30 o'clock, the traditional lantern parade will be held on the college campus at 10:30 o'clock.

Spring Colonnade Will Appear Soon

Nancy Whitehead, newly elected editor of the Colonnade, has announced the features which will be included in this annual senior issue. This is the first magazine which she has edited since she was elected to the office.

Carmen Lowe has designed the cover of this issue which is to be distributed during those first of next week. Included in the issue are sketches by Carmen Lowe and Glenn Ann Patterson.

Raymond French, senior classman, has written an article to the seniors which is published in this issue. Jean Prosise contributes an article written in memory of the late President Roosevelt.

"Red Hat" by Ann Willis, transfer from Randolph Macon, is one of the excellent short stories featured in this May issue of the Colonnade. Other stories to be published are "White Envelope" by Mary Rattray, "Dreams Unwasted" by Martha Wells, "Vignette in Blue-Gray" by Betty Deuel Cock, and "Amanda Frances" by Annette Grainger.

The poetry section will include poems by Sara Moling and Janice Wells.

Bobbitt Announces Orientation Heads

Tearful Seniors Form Arch of Caps Under Which Juniors Proudly Walk

MARGARET WILSON

"Between Tears and Laughter"—the student body was wavering, with the accent on tears. With the first chord of "All Hail, Alma Mater" the lumps started lumping, but they couldn't really be called serious until Mr. French's expression was noted as the Class of '45 sang its appreciation to him. From then on it was every man to his own kleenex.

It's hard to explain a situation like that. We're not going to cry—that's silly. After all, it isn't as though they were heading into the Amazon jungles. Most of them aren't going any farther astray than the wilds of central Virginia. Of course, there are plutocratic few who will become nomads — wanderers in the wake of that wandering man—but what's so sad about that?

Yes, it's silly—but, my goodness, we'll get lonesome. Somebody tried to grin and didn't quite make it, or somebody twisted her hair like she always did to keep from figiting in class, or somebody waved a quick wave from the third row, and—put your finger in the dike—we were off again. Some nine hundred handkerchiefs saw some five minutes of hard wear and tear.

We guess those memories everybody talks about are all right in their place, but their place isn't the present—and that's when it's fun. It's nice enough to remember, but it's lots more satisfactory to be having those "cokes 'n' nabs 'n' conversations" now, than last year. Anyway, that's a good way to talk our way out of being just plain sentimental. And that's just about what everybody was talking about—cokes and conversations and "blackouts down in the rec" and how peculiar so-and-so looks in curlers and "Who's gonna get her dressed and down the steps the next time he comes home?" And all the time, there they stood, trying to sing, and getting madder and madder with each tear.

But what the heck, it was a mixture calculated to make anybody weepy—Eleanor's goodby, the old songs, Mary Walker's expression at the announcement of her honorary membership in the new senior class, the thoughts that sounded too silly to put into words. You bet we'll miss them—but nobody has to worry much about them. They've had the best foundation they could have for

Martin, Crumpler To Represent STC

"Y" Conferences Slated for Summer

Minnie Lee Crumpler and Ann Martin, president and vice-president of the Y. W. C. A., are attending conferences this summer as representatives of Farmville State Teachers College. Minnie Lee will attend Presidents' Summer School at the Union Theological Seminary of Columbia University, and Ann is going to the Summer Conference at Camp Highland Lake, Hendersonville, North Carolina.

Thirty men and women are attending the conference at the Presidents' Summer School. This is the 16th annual session. Minnie Lee will be there from July 2 to August 10 with the delegates from colleges and universities throughout the country. Three academic courses will be given and six credit points from Columbia University are made by each student. Among the lecturers at this school are such well known persons as Dr. Henry P. Van Dusen, Dr. Harry Emerson Fodick. Dr. Goodwin Watson, Dr. Reinhold Niebur, Dr. Benjamin Mayes and Dr. Paul Anderson.

Ann Martin is one of the four delegates selected from all of the many Virginia colleges and universities to attend this Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. conference. Students attend from each of the ten states in this region. Among the leaders of the conference are Raila Rom, secretary of the Student Christian movement of India; Dr. T. B. (Scottie) Cowan, Norris Religious Fellowship; and Dr. Huntly Supre, executive secretary of the World Student Fund.

Other officers of the Y are Martha Russell East, secretary; Agnes Stokes, treasurer; and Judy Rieck, freshman counselor.

Coke Line Furnishes Variety Of Entertainment or Disgust

CAB OVERBEY

"Here she comes! Stand back, let her through—aha—! The coke machine is opened at last."

"I want one!" the girl in the green and orange striped pajamas screams! She manages to push down the three patiently waiting customers who have been standing there for 15 minutes. And the first thing she manages to do after digging the lone nickel out of her wallet is to drop it in a trash can full of tops and pleads that she has to go back to play practice and would some kind soul stand there and fish it out for her.

Then there is the girl who stands in the middle of the door blasting out the inevitable, "tomato and lettuce sandwiches"! She has an argument with the girl who has bought eight cokes and is blessed with holding them while she borrows some money from her friend who lives in Student Building.

"Could I have three cokes? I'll bring the money tomorrow." Tomorrow never comes as far as the coke machine is concerned.

"I put a nickel in the box and I didn't get a coke. Do you think you could find my nickel? I hate to put you to all this trouble!" "Trouble? Who said 'anything about trouble? Why, I' just adore walking up three flights of stairs to the coke machine to find your lost nickel! Do you remember the approximate date on it?"

"Excuse me, but I'd like to know if I could get about sixty cokes for a picnic we're having out at Longwood next week. We'll take them out there and you won't have to bother with getting them there."

Then there is the little girl who happens to want two Coca-Colas. Imagine that! Someday we'll surprise her with a special "Cheeseburger." As if the coke machine sold anything but Coca-Colas.

Mayb: some of you have heard what you thought was a bowling alley? Oh, no, nothing like that, it's only the coke bottles that some little girl has found a way to entertain herself.

Have any of you been to the coke machine at one of those moments when the little girl (or should we say sucker) has been sent to buy her whole hall a coke? She stands there while the rest of the line extends all the way to annex, and opens them and then decides to open the 10th one on her dresser knob.

"I want a coke," the deadbeat says as she hands you four pennies and beats it through the line back to the solitude of her little room!!

The sight of a line is driving me insane, the only one that I can think of that is worse than the coke line is a bread line!

I could say a lot more about the coke machine, but it's ten o'clock and I have to go sell the cokes! Besides, what I have to say wouldn't pass the Hayes Office, anyway.

Short Story Contest

According to an announcement made this week by Nancy Whitehead, editor-in-chief of the Colonnade, a short story contest is being sponsored during the summer months. All students in school are requested to enter this contest which will terminate in October.

15 Students Enter STC College Choir

Fifteen girls have entered the College Choir on probation according to an announcement made on Monday night by Alfred H. Strick.

They are Grace Anderson, Sarah Ballard, Mae Ballard, Dorothy Blair, Virginia Butler, Alma Crawley, June Cregar, Juanita Davis, Iris Davis, Nancy Duncan, Sue Dickinson, Virginia Love, Martha Morrison, Lorraine Smith, and Virginia Tindall.

Marjorie Hewlett will head the Junior A'Cappella with Nell Scott as accompanist and Virginia Tindall, asistant accompanist. Junior A'Cappella has admitted four new members. They are Sara Ballard, June Cregar, Nancy Duncan, and Alfreda Peterson.

The Madrigal group, under the direction of Esther Shevick, has five new members. The are Carolyn Bobbitt, Norma Howard, Martha Ellen Jones, Lucie McKenry, and Connie Ozlin.

Annual Features Will Be Revealed, Editor Announces

Virginian at Press, Will Be Here Soon

Dedication, personalities, and the cover of the 1945 Virginian will be revealed as soon as the annuals arrive, Marilyn Bell, editor-in-chief, has announced.

There are 219 pages in the "Virginian." The opening section is on antique stock paper which has a rough finish. These views, which were done by Eleanor Correll, are in black on blue paper with white highlights.

Continuous Section

This year the Virginian is very different from past editions. There is a continuous section of stories of the clubs and organizations. Following this is a block of pictures in the same order as that in which the story appeared. Previously the story was followed by a picture on the next page.

Daily Divisions

The divisions are according to the days of the week. The division write-ups are informal cross-sections with usual college happenings mentioned. The annuals are at the press now, and shipment is expected at the end of this week or the first of next week.

Pat Maddox is managing editor of the Virginian, and Mary Elizabeth Harvey is the business manager.

20 Freshmen Join STC Honor Society

Twenty-four freshmen were recently issued bids to join Alpha Phi Sigma, an honor society for freshmen and sophomores. Of the twenty - four, twenty accepted membership in the Delta chapter.

They are Virginia Bailey, Lawrenceville; Mae Ballard, Bedford; Ann Clark, Dinwiddie; June Cregar, Tazewell; Shirley Didlake, Richmond; Gertrude Driver, Skippers; Betty Epperson, Lawrenceville; and Miriam Estes, Coeburn.

Also Charlotte Grizzard, Drewryville; Marian Hahn, Richmond; Margaret Jones, Wilkesboro, North Carolina; Jane Mantiply, Fisherville; Anne Mottley, Danville; Alfreda Peterson, Waynesboro; Dapline Pittman, Portsmouth; and Arstelle Presley, Council.

Also Maude Savage, Onley; Nancy June Snead, Martinsville; Page Vaughan, Dolphin and Anne Williams, Richmond.

In order to receive a bid to Alpha Phi Sigma, a girl must have attained at least a B average for two consecutive quarters.

4 STC Students Talk For Local Rotarians At Dinner Recently

At a meeting of the Rotary Club recently, four girls spoke on their native countries. The speakers were introduced by Miss Helen Draper, professor in the college language department.

Julia Braga from Fortaleza, Brazil, compared a small town in Brazil to a small Virginia town.

Enieda Costa also from Fortaleza, Brazil, spoke on Brallian music and played two numbers; one was a samba, and the other their national anthem.

Lise d'Anjou from Quebec, Canada, spoke on the customs of Canada and compared them with our Virginia customs.

The last speaker on the program was Carmen Flores, from Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, who spoke on the inter-dependence of Puerto Rico and the United States.

These girls were invited to dinner by the Rotarians.

All Hail Alma Mater, Dear Mother To Thee

"All hail Alma Mater, dear mother to thee,
Thy daughters true, faithful and loyal, will be."

Nineteen hundred and forty-five—the year of the death of our much beloved President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the defeat of the Nazi regime, and the termination of college days for the class of '45.

Another class of Farmville girls has said farewell to classmates and schoolmates in the customary senior chapel service, another class has formed an arch under which juniors have marched to the "Alma Mater."

Signifying the true "Farmville Spirit" which permeates the life of every girl on the campus, members of the present senior class sang a round of medleys to their class adviser and a number of traditional songs to the students who will be left behind to carry on the work which is ours to do.

Many classmates will be forgotten as the years go by, many facts of subject matter cannot be recalled, yet that thing which we call "Farmville Spirit," that force which is hard to define although present in the classroom and on the campus will not soon be forgotten. This spirit is most evident in such assemblies as the service last Friday, as the annual "class song" day, and at the number of games as we cheer our teams on to victory on the athletic field and in the gymnasium.

"Farmville Spirit" is the quality that characterizes the S. T. C. girls and joins them in love and devotion to their "Alma Mater."

Dreaded Week of Exams Has Rolled Around Again!!

That long dreaded week of examinations has almost rolled around again. It seems that it was only a few weeks ago that we were in this same predicament.

For some of us, this is our last week of college exams and for others it is our last weeks of exams of our first year. To those who face their exams for the last time, we say "Make better grades on these exams than you've ever made." To those that are completing the end of another year's work the same statement applies. We're speaking to girls who have experience in taking college exams. You're no longer new at this game, you have had at least two sets of college exams before this. By the time we all know where our faults are and it is up to us to correct these faults.

Spring quarter exams are often the hardest. "Ole Sole" calls, thoughts of summer vacations keep popping into our minds, and the idea that it's the end of the year and who cares, make it hard to settle down to a lot of good study. Let's not develop that idea that we're through for the year when exams begin. We have to remember that the exams for this quarter count just as much as those for fall and winter quarters.

Perhaps the best time for an editorial on exams is at the beginning of the year, because that's when our exam study begins. Even if we did our study then, now is the time we can lower or raise our grades. There are some students who insist that they're going to fail and there's nothing they can do about it, but often there is something that can be done. Adopt the motto "Fight until the fight is won."

Good luck!

The Marines and the Infantrymen on Okinawa are fighting heroically against stubborn enemy resistance. Despite this resistance, they have captured two strategically important hills overlooking the capital of the island. The Chinese have made some noteworthy progress in China this week with the capture of Foochow.

HEARD AFTER

BEDCHECK

A few people at the dance seemed to have the wrong dates. Guess you were in a stew, Dody!—and as for Ann Dickinson—well, her situation was even more confusing!

And to a certain senior is dedicated "Cocktails for Two."

Nancy Pitts' date was really six feet four inches tall—or so he says. You must admit that man shoots a line and a half!

Substitution of Jane was the best Betty could do for her date. Maybe he didn't know the difference.

Sounds as though Phyllis was quite impressed with Kenneth. Know you've heard her chattering about the NICE boy.

Poddy and Posy are quite the pair. Glad you've changed your opinion of S. T. C. dances, Poddy! I don't suppose your date could have had anything to do with their sudden change of mind.

Just what was Bev telling about Bill's goodbye that created a small riot in the stag line? Say, Bev, how about one more demonstration!

Cutest couple on the floor was Maggie McIntyre and Harold. However, they cut such a wicked rug she lost her flowers in the struggle.

And as for A. T., he was nearly rushed off his feet. Guess Helen was thankful for those no-break dances.

That was the BIGGEST hunk of man with Lynn Sprye seen in these parts in many a day.

Bobby Scott and her date lit out for Burkeville Sunday—mm-m that is an exciting place.

Just sing Anchors Away to "Bomber" if you want to give her a large charge..

Lillian Elliott and that cute Mr. Elliott were having one knocked-out time. Don't forget to bring him back, Lillian!

To change the subject rather abruptly, but must hurry on, Mrs. Tabb said—in speaking of the Junior-Senior picnic—"I wouldn't have missed a one of those hot dogs because it isn't every day you get a taxied hot dog."

Time's a-wasting so after putting off for about six weeks, the time for action has come, see you in the library, I'm afraid.

The Y

By ANNA HEADLEE

Each spring the Y sponsors a special drive for the signing up for little sisters for coming year. This year's drive is under way; be sure to sign up for yours as soon as possible. There will be girls canvassing the halls or you can sign on the bulletin board. This is one of the best ways to really get to know the freshmen and new girls.

Every quarter the Membership Committee writes and sends out an alumnae letter to last year's graduating class. The letter for this quarter has been written and includes Y news as well as all things of interest that have occurred on the campus.

The installation of the Westminster Fellowship officers will take place next Sunday during the regular evening service. The entire service will be presented and directed by the Fellowship. Everyone is invited to attend.

The Methodist girls will have their set-up conference Friday. The old and new council will meet at 4:30 and all Methodist students are urged to come out at 5 o'clock.

The Canterbury Club announces that it will have its annual picnic, with hot dogs and all the trimmings, Sunday at the Withers. They also report that the Fellowship Hour held last Sunday was a great success.

Theme of the week for prayers is "Christianity at Work in the World." Tonight the topic will be "Religious Foundation of Democracy." There will be a special program of music tomororw night.

Question of the Week

What are you looking forward to most this summer?

Mary Preston Sheffey: Blistering my nose at Miami Beach!

Janie Hanks: Food! ....

"Beulah" Bowles: Eating 'n' sleeping!

Anne Shufflebarger: A hospital! Assistant dietician.

Betty Cock: Ned's leave.

Martha Lee: Summer school, of course—That's all I've got to look forward to..

Cora Redd: Iced tea!

Marilyn Bell: Resting!

Miss Garnett: Going down on the Chesapeake Bay.—The sun, salt water, etc., etc.!

Mr. Holton: I'm not looking forward or backward either—just taking days as they come.

Eloise Hanes: House parties — Don't we all? Do you blame me?

"Ducky" Anderson: Money to spend on food!

Lucille Upshur: Letting the top part of my hair grow!

Lois Boone: To honor Florida with my lovely presence.

Sally Robertson: No teaching!

Elsie Thompson: Looking forward to Sergeant Burger's return!

"Gee-Gee" Yonce: Being with Pete!

Virginia M. Terrell: Those frequent trips to Washington!

Mary Walker Watts: Virginia Beach—between the 8th and 15th of June!

"Pogue" Massey: To my flight to Miami.

Betsy Fox: I'm going to Miami, too, but I'm really looking forward to Thomas's return.

Dottie Overcash: Getting away from it all.

Jean Pritchett: Playing at the beach.

"Lightning" Hume: Playing with Joyce and Jean when they come to see me, and then going to Florida!

Lillian Elliott: My trip to Chicago!

Letters to the Editor:

Dear Editor:

My reason for bringing this matter to your attention is because of the almost total misconception of the nature of sunlight, as evidenced by the doses some of our students attempted to absorb and because of the request for a number of them that I put in print some facts brought out in our discussion.

Those who have devoted most time to this subject and who know most about it tell us that the study of effects of sunlight and nature's effort to control them has proven to be one of the most complex branches of all biological studies.

Sunlight is essential for health, but there is no definite proof that any benefit is derived from semi-nude sun-bathing, but on the other hand there is definite evidence that much harm may be done. Scientists tell us that comfortable clothing, as worn in our climate, give all exposure that is needed for optimum physical well-being. Nature sees to it that the lower animals are protected from the dangers of sunlight, their clothing changing as the sun rays change. Consider the dog, the cow, the horse, etc. The part of wisdom is to protect the skin from the heat and chemical rays of the sun rather than to expose the skin to this irritant and its dangerous effects.

Probably the best approach to the subject is to outline the functions of the skin. I quote from Sutton' recent textbook: "The skin is the dividing line between the individual and his environment. It is primarily a barrier. Physiologically it serves in protection, heat regulation, sensation, and chemical exchange. It resists abrasion, light, heat, and living organisms (the germs of disease) ..."

Think through the above paragraph. You will see that sun bathing interferes with every function of the skin. Please check again and think through the functions of the skin. In the light of the above, you will also understand why exposure to the sun while exercising is nothing like so harmful as exposure to the sun while resting.

Let me run over some of the specific harmful effects that may be caused by sun bathing, many of which I have seen during the past month right here on our campus—exhaustion; skin inflammation (similar to poison ivy); gastro intestional upsets with nausea, vomiting, and diarrhea; congestion of the lungs; predisposing to influenza, pneumonia, and other respiratory infections. It has a tendency to cause eczema, acne, freckles, headaches, vertigo, skin cancer. Our knowledge of the sunlight has come largely through the Cancer Foundation activities. They have found that over-exposure to sunlight is one of the chief causes of skin cancer, from which 3,500 people die in the United States each year.

What we have said above refers to over-exposure and it is very difficult to avoid this because there are so many factors that determine the individual doses. If you feel that you must have a tan, take five minutes exposure two or three times a day for one week. Each week add five minutes to your time and you will probably get a tan that will not produce harmful effects. "And what is a tan?" A pigment which nature prepares to protect you from your own folly. It furnishes an insulation which protects from harmful rays of the sun.

Red and White Presented Annual Color Cup In Chapel Today

Wilson Presents Award To Winning Class Presidents

Red and White, composed this year of freshmen and juniors, was awarded the color cup. Helen Wilson, retiring president of the Athletic Association, presented the cup to the president of the two Red and White classes, Eleanor Bisese and Peepsie Brooks.

After the award was made, the freshmen and juniors cheered their colors and sang to their rivals.

Even though all activities toward the color cup have not been played, Red and White has enough points so that it would be impossible for Green and White to win the cup this session. Points given thus far are,

Red and White:

Hockey—class	10
Volley Ball—class	10
Swimming	5
Tennis—singles	5
Color Rush	5
Ping pong	5
Green and White:
Basketball—class	10
Basketball—varsity	10
Swimming	5

Picnics Continue Thru This Week

The Alpha Kappa Gamma picnic supper will be held Friday night at which time all active members, Miss Elizabeth Burger and Miss Ruth Gleaves, advisers, will attend.

Camp Pickett Made Army Hospital Center

Formation of a Hospital Center at Camp Pickett, comprising the existing U. S. Army General Hospital and the Convalescent Hospital, and with Colonel Fredrick H. Petters as commanding officer of the combined center, was announced last week by Colonel, post commander.

Colonel Henry S. Biesse, recently returned from two years in the European Theatre of Operation, will take over command of the convalescent hospital succeeding Colonel Petters, Colonel Potts said. The general hospital is commanded by Colonel Leonard W. Hassett.

Administrative functions of the two hospitals are consolidated in the Hospital Center with a subsequent saving of personnel and time, Colonel Potts said.

Softball Tourney Nears Final Stage

Opening the softball tournament, the first game of the season was played on Monday afternoon, May 21, at which time the freshmen defeated the juniors 9 to 7. On Tuesday afternoon the juniors tied the sophomores 17 to 17.

Playing on the freshman team under the captaincy of Betty Minton are Alice Abernathy, Ruth Bennett, Jeanne Bentley, Geraldine Colgin, Edith Duffey, Eloise Hanes, Joyce Johnson, Nancy Magner, and Dorothy White. Composing the sophomore team are Lee Carter, captain, Betty Bennett, Mary Lee Dickerson, Anna Headlee, Ruth Jones, Virginia Thompson, Rebecca Tomlinson, Jean Tucker, Mickey Williams, and Ruby Wright.

Betty Minton, head of college softball.

Juniors playing are Jackie Ritchie, captain, Louise Blane, Betty Ellis, Lucille Jones, Frances Lee, Margaret Orange, Regina Portinaro, Peggy T. Ross, and Kitty Wright. There is no senior team as not enough seniors had a sufficient number of practices.

Wednesday afternoon at 4 p. m. a team of STC girls played the Camp Pickett WACs. Following the game, the WACs were entertained by a swim in the college pool and a picnic given by the Athletic Association council. Officers of the Council are Frances Lee, president; Margaret Orange, vice-president; Betty Parrish, secretary; and Kitty Sue Bridgforth, treasurer.

Left Lead

The curtain is down, the let-down feeling drops over everyone, the praises die on the heels of Time . . . the Horse Show is over! We can't believe it, but we find it so, and tired as the riders were, and nervous as they seemed to be for several days before the show, still the general attitude is, "Gee, I'm sorry it's all over already!"

CONGRATULATIONS!

To the winners of every class go our hearty congratulations and a few bushels of oats 'n' things for the fine jobs they did in their respective classes. Competition against the town people was strong as usual, but STC held her own, and came out near the top, if not tip-top, in a good many open classes. The weather could not have been ordered more suitably, and the horses couldn't have been better behaved, and all in all a great many praises should fly in the direction of Joyce and her able-and-willing committees. The Horse Show was a big success financially as well as socially, and we say all's well that ends like that show did!

CELEBRATION

Just to finish things up in a big way, the Riding Club is celebrating at Longwood right now with a picnic. We aren't trying to ruin your appetite, but 'twas rumored the menu included fried chicken ('15 of 'em) potato salad fixed by "Sunshine", in her own inimitable way, hot rolls, cokes and little pecan pies from Chappell's, just as a few basic points of interest in the evening program. Prior to the feed, appetites were worked up by a vigorous initiation of the new Dusty Boots. Never a dull moment!

PHOTO-PLAY

Mr. Bundy, Davidson's new photographer, made himself well-known at the Horse Show by shooting at least 14 pictures of different vital bits of horse-play. Prints will go on sale eventually at $1.75 per. If you want a permanent record of how the Madame looked on Dewey, now's your best chance! We never saw so many cameras in action . . . and all centered on the Lady of the Day, Miss Cheatwood. Mr. Bundy called some of his "Beauty and the Beast" . . . some people are prone to wonder which was which!

BETTY ELLIS'

On the Ball

This is to be my swan song to not only this column, but to the entire sports page. In turning over the sports editorship to another student, I wish her the best of luck and success on the future editions, and also the fun and good times I have had while pegging away on my typewriter (a borrowed one) each Monday night. It has been fun corresponding with you athletes each week through the printed page, and it will be missed. But enough of this sob story, for this week has been a busy one in the sports world.

COLOR CUP

Congratulations to Red and White for winning that color cup again. Green and White has made a fine display of good sportsmanship on the field and court this year, and their fighting spirit is to be admired. Watch out, Red and White, they may sneak upon you. Best of luck to both colors for next year. Keep up your good spirit and stay in the game.

SOFTBALL

First game of the tournament found the juniors defated by their sister class, the frosh, 7-9. It was an exciting and well-played game, with a few minor slips here and there, which are naturally expected. Going to press so soon keeps yours truly from giving the word on the game played between the juniors and sophomores Tuesday.

Wednesday we received a visit from Camp Pickett, in the form of the WAC softball team. They were entertained after the game by a swim in the school pool, and a picnic given by the Athletic Council. Our team was made up of red and whites and green and whites selected by Miss Olive T. Iler and Betty Minton, softball manager.

RIDING

Saturday afternoon found us at Longwood for the Show, some of us were spectators and some participants, but no matter which, it is well agreed that it was one of the best horse shows STC has put on in many a year. Through the cooperation of Joyce Cheatwood, Miss Iler, and Mr. Graham, riding has become one of the outstanding athletic events on campus this year.

To the committees who helped to make the hore show what it was go bunches of orchids, and to the winners, congratulations. If you weren't a winner, just remember that there is always another time to try. Find the horse this summer and practice up on that posting, canter seat and jumping. If

TSU Attains High Scholastic Record

Of the sorority groups on campus, Theta Sigma Upsilon sorority attained the highest scholastic average for the winter quarter, according to an announcement made this week by Miss Ruth Gleaves, adviser of the Pan-Hellenic Association. The average for this group was 1.86.

Coming out second in the averages was Mu Omega with a 1.85 average. Alpha Sigma Alpha and Phi Zeta Sigma tied for third place, with an average of 1.84; while Sigma Sigma Sigma placed fifth with an average of 1.67. Gamma Theta sorority has an average of 1.63; Alpha Sigma Tau, 1.59; and Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.58.

Contributions Made To USO Committee For Work Next Year

Contributions for the USO for refreshments and transportation to Camp Pickett have been made by twelve organizations in the school. This money was contributed to carry on USO work next year.

Pi Kappa Sigma gave $20; Alpha Sigma Tau contributed $5; Sigma Sigma Sigma $20; Mu Omega, 25; Phi Zeta Sigma, $10; and Theta Sigma Upsilon, $5.

Also, the Athlethic Association gave $25: H20 Club $25; and the Dramatic Club $25. The freshman class gave $20; the sophomore class $25; and the junior class $25.

Other U. S. O. heads are Lucy McKenry, vice - chairman, and Katherine Prebble, secretary-treasurer.

Students Find Jeans Comfy Exam Clothes

HELENE GRIFFIN

Curled up in a chair, you see an S. T. C'er studying psychology as earnestly as any Prof would ever hope to see. She claims she can relax, and really put her mind to work because she's in her blue-jeans and plaid shirt, completely comfortable! Now over here, we have a little chick who states that it is much more profitable to don pajamas and lie flat on your tummy in bed to get the most out of psychology! Whom shall we believe? We finally agree they're both correct. They do look happy! Maybe clothes do make a difference because somehow we can never settle down if we lie around in our sweater 'n' shirt, or as the case may be, a pretty print dress.

Some ensembles take us out of the you-know-what! Slacks, and a drape T-shirt, as brother's old sports pants with his white shirt, once removed, make for comfy outfits to study in. Some creatures swear by their gym suits, but not us, if we got up in even a slight hurry, we'd trip over the "shorts" part of the suit. One chair, slightly worn, looks good to some students, while an old scarred desk, complete with crumbs and jam does everything for another pupil. So stylish! Ummm!

Guess we've covered all the types of "study" clothes. Maybe we have failed to mention a few—but after all . . . blush! Appropriate or not, plenty has to be done next week, so get comfortable gals and give!

JANE WARING RUFFIN

Winning the "E" for efficiency would be but one of the honors bestowed on Jane, better known as Ruffin, and christened Jane Waring Ruffin. Past editor-in-chief of the Rotunda, Jane is one of the outstanding girls on campus in many ways. Journalism is her by-word, and writing just a natural asset. Two years on the Virginian staff, and four years on the Colonnade and Rotunda definitely prove that statement.

Alpha Kappa Gamma, Sigma Pi Rho, Kappa Delta Pi, Beorc Eh Thorn and Pi Gamma Mu, all honor societies, have made Jane a member, and she has held the presidency of Sigma Pi Rho this past year. The Dramatic Club and Debate Club have held her membership, and she has done outstanding work in both these organizations.

For the lighter side of life, Jane is a born talker, and it is hard to find someone who can out-talk her, but another of Jane's virtues is that she knows when to stop talking and listen at the right moment. Possessing an unbelievable power of sleeplessness, Jane is a perpetual night owl, many's the night her lights are last off in Cunningham. She carries a list of things to do, and follows it closely, although her friends often wonder where she finds the time to work her twenty - five hour day into twenty-four.

Prissiness and snobbery are her pet hates, but she loves people, eating, coffee, and a good book. She has threatened not to become a teacher, but is finding her student teaching more than interesting. Long walks, flowers, and poetry give her a romantic side, and along with that comes Louis.

Working on her seminar paper, making the Rotunda one of the best, doing efficient work in organizations, taxing her brain in the quiz contest, stopping to help out a friend in need and many other activities keep Jane busy, but to her friends she is a talkative, interesting, witty and wise person to know. With her youth she has wisdom, all of which helps to make her one of the best.

Nurse Aides Capping 4 P. M. Sunday, STC

Ten new Nurse Aides will be graduated and capped at exercises Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the little auditorium of State Teachers College. The program is open to the public.

Mrs. M. B. Curry and Mrs. Graziani, registered nurses, who are making their homes in Farmville while their husbands are serving overseas, have been instructors for the class. Mrs. R. B. Crawford is chairman of the Red Cross committee which sponsors the training courses.

Members of the graduating class include Mesdames Ann Bloomfield, Imogene Tunstall, Ruby Gordon, Elva Jones; and Misses Olivia Andrews, Virginia Bedford, Carolyn Smith, Betty Baldwin, Anne Buck and Garnette Jamerson.

The graduation exercises are under sponsorship of the STC Red Cross unit, college students arranging a musical program and serving as ushers. J. B. Wall, president of Southside Community hospital, and Miss Patsy Wilkins, acting superintendent of the hospital, will take part in the exercises.

Just Looking, Thanks

By ANNE BUCK

Around the bend to Roanoke this week end were Doris May, Lois Kananaugh, and Betty Lemon.

Visiting in Cumberland were Julia Braga, Julia Perez, and Nell Wilkinson.

Finding Goodwin's Lake not too cold were Betty Bibb and Mary Ann Loving, while Lottie Hammock, Louise Pegram, and Ann Williams found good company in Blackstone.

Relying on the hospitality of Lynchburg were Martha Frances Morrison, Betsy Fox, Betty Gillespie, Joyce Sisk, and Elizabeth Motley.

Crewe was the center of excitement for Beatrice Bruch, Frances Livesay, Isabelita Maldonaldo, Edith Garcia, Luz Quinones, Elizabeth Driscoll, Phyllis Scherburger, Mary McCarty, Regina Portinaro, Mary William Calvert, Martha Watson, Lise d'Anjou, and Virginia Green.

Taking in the sights of Virgilina were Iris Hancock, Rose Chandler, and Audrey Hudson, and finding fun and frolic in Brookneal were Lorena Evans, Marjorie Holland, Zilpha Taylor, Nancy Taylor, Evelyn Rogers, and Kathryn Tatterson.

Over the hill to South Hill were Anne Tucker and Josephine Clayton.

As the conclusion of the week-end, these Richmonders say their "dreams are getting better all the time", Betty Lee, Lois Fuller, Norma Howard, Marjorie Tice, Nell Coleman, Pat McLear, Barbara Montgomery, Luverta Gumkowski, Ann Dickinson Dorothy Halle, and Theresa Powell.

Pamplin was the center of amusement for Elizabeth Terry, Mary Lee Dickerson, Sue Davis, and Celia Scott.

Visiting in Red House were Lelia Bouldin, Dorothy Chambers, Wilmpje Long, and Louise Elder, while Jane Baines, Barabara Jean Wiley, Constance Young and Mary Stewart Buford were in Lawrenceville getting that last-minute breath before examinations.

Attending a church conference in Danville were Martha East and Agnes Stokes.

Others at home and places of interest were Olivia Meade, Martinsville; Janice Halstead, Lexington; Marcheta Cunningham, Blacksburg; Betty Mitchell, Charlottesville; Frances Partin, Hopewell; Mabel Waddell, Drakes Branch; Anne Holmes, Boydton; Anne Charlton and Alma Davis, Dillwyn; Elinor Overbey and Shirley Cruser, Norfolk; and Martha Droste, Ronceverte, West Virginia.

Familiar faces seen on campus this week-end included Anne Snyder, Ella Pool, Dorothy Childress Hill, Leona Moomaw, and Nancy Pierpont.

We note that in England the people are being required to look at the movie scenes taken of Nazi cruelties and ruthless barbarism in their murder camps. We believe it is a good idea.

Such Chaos! Such Confusion! It's Annual Packing Up Time

HELENE GRIFFIN

"Do you suppose I could possibly get this last pair of shoes in my suitcase?"

"Go ahead; sit on it, that's the only way you'll ever get the top closed."

"O, good heavens, I forgot to put my bathrobe in."

These remarks may be heard at anytime via S. T. C.'s halls, rooms and by-ways. Such chaos! Such confusion!! Such a mess!! It's constantly amazing how these gals can ever wear again any of the clothes they so "patiently" packed.

Let's go in one of the rooms and watch . . . Buried half-way in the trunk is one S. T. C. frosh, quite new at this terrible task of throwing together her clothes come end of final quarter. Muttered phrases and mumbled exclamations issue forth as she charges across the room; flings open a drawer; gathers a handful of delicate unmentionables, and slings them in the bottom of her trunk. All sorts of shoes down to the muddy gym pair fall helter-skelter as she prepares to lay her white formal on top of all that. Her sweet temper is being ruffled somewhat . . . she can't get half her belongings in that blasted thing!

Our view, as we stand wonderingly in the doorway, is considerably blocked! When she turns to cross to the closet we lose sight of her. No wonder, with three suitcases piled up and a collection of stuffed animals clinging desperately to the sticky surface of the top one.

Sweaters, skirts, dresses, blouses, pajamas—everything follows suit as she lovingly folds each garment, only to plump them rather forcefully down over the cringing white formal.

With a sigh, she finally reaches the last item—her iron! Placing this ever so gently on top of all she slams down the lid . . . but—aha! it doesn't do right! Maddening, isn't it? Losing all attempts at control she screams, CENSORED, and we rush over to pool our strength to get the darn thing shut. (After minutes of deafening groans and grunts we do.) Feeling quite the gal, she turns to put some miscellaneous objects in her suitcase. To our horror and discomfort she omits a yell that would have made even Tarzan shiver. There, staring down at her with reproachful eyes, sit the aforementioned stuffed animals, quite hurt that she should have forgotten them. Did I say they were unhurt? It was a wise and good thing we did just then . . . turning quietly, yet swiftly, we left that room!

VACATION

Won't belong now, before we'll put away books and studies for the summer, and zoom away on that long awaited vacation. This is the time to catch up on plenty of outside activties to keep you out in the sun and fresh air. Some of you will be headed toward the beach for playing in the waves and sun. Some will go to camps to help in counseling youngsters in riding swimming, dancing, craftsmanship and recreational activities. Some of you many spend your summer in the mountains, at home, or even behind a desk. But wherever you might be, get plenty of exercise, so that when fall comes you'll be feeling just right to make your sophomore, junior, or senior year the best of all.

Since there won't be any "until next week," we'll leave you with a faithful reminder to stay in the game.

120 Receive Degrees at 61st Commencement

"Have Faith for Today" Hollingsworth Declares

"Have a personal faith for today," said the Rev. A. H. Hollingsworth, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Roanoke at the baccalaureate service yesterday, June 3, at 8 o'clock in the college auditorium.

In his message to the graduating class of 1945, Mr. Hollingsworth used as his text Mark 11:22, "Have faith in God". He said, "These words were spoken by Jesus at the beginning of the most crucial week in his life. It was to be a week filled with scorn, hatred, treachery, loneliness, and death. He faced these experiences with these words spoken to His disciples, 'Have faith in God'. This sublime utterance was made so quietly that in the mad rush of events those who heard it soon forgot. After His death as they sought for some means for their own lives, they recovered this great truth and by its power they lived."

REV. A. H HOLLINGSWORTH

"Faith in God provides a weapon for winning the battle of life", the minister said. "We need not be afraid of the struggle that lies ahead. A commencement speaker once told the graduates they were going out into a world of upheaval. He was speaking in the year 1835. Each generation faces its own peculiar problems. Through faith we win the battle for a better world. Faith has a forward look. It enables us to struggle for human betterment and greater social ideals. This is no shallow optimism. It is by this method that the great advances in history have come."

The Presbyterian pastor concluded, "Faith in God vindicates itself in experience. By faith the faltering disciples who heard Jesus speak were able to keep their rendezvous with life. Faith gives us the conviction of our individual worth. A life lived through faith in God is both durable and deathless. Faith gives us courage to live in the mood of Raymond Holliday French, classman to whom the seniors dedicated their annual, the 1945 Virginian.

Editor Dedicates Annual to French

Marilyn Bell, editor of the annual, dedicated on May 28 the 1945 Virginian to Mr. Raymond Holliday French, who is an associate professor of chemistry and has been the adviser to the senior class since the 1945 graduating class entered S. T. C. in 1941.

The dedication reads, "College days are recalled best through the memory of friends. To each of us these friends are different, but to all of us there is one whom we have in common. Somehow this one has caught the spirit of Farmville and exemplified it in his every action.

"Never too busy when we need him, always there greeting us with that same cheery smile, he will be remembered long for his generosity and thoughtfulness. Because of these qualities which we consider first in a friend, the staff wishes to dedicate the 1945 Virginian to our own "Charlie

Sophs Say Congrats, Goodbye To Senior Sisters of 1945

BETTY BIBB

"Just watch us fly, but we'll get by, with memories of you. We'll need you, we'll love you! Seniors of '45!"

What other season of the year could stimulate such poetic spirits from the sophomore class to the senior class except graduation? What other season of the year could bring more tears and laughter simultaneously? It is a time when memories and hopes rush together and produce a state of happiness and excitement that will be long remembered. The long-worked-for, talked-of, and longed-for moment has arrived for our sisters, the Seniors of '45, the Freshmen of '41.

There's a tiny bit of anxiety that enters every senior's mind as the big day draws hoursly closer. . . . Will I pass those piperoos Mr. Mac and Dr. Simp give? Will the tires hold out for Mother and Dad to get up here and then get back home? Did I get enough announcements? Can my little sister manage four extra days up here without going mad? It is going to rain the entire time we want to play round on the beach? When am I ever, ever gonna catch up on all the girls I'm leaving behind? This sort of brainfood keeps our illustrious seniors busy, as they scurry hither and yon and back again, autographing annuals, packing, eating, joking, teasing, getting flowers, presents, and congratulations from everybody and everywhere, and knocking themselves out over the whole thing.

This is a time when we, the sophomores, pause and survey these "girls of the moment" with pride and envy, with love and admiration. We have watched them, worked with them, accepted their wisdom and help, and now we know we'll have to take their places . . . that we'll have a new sister class that will look up to us as we have to them. It's a funny feeling we get as we see the familiar faces talking to Charlie Hop, eating breakfast in the tearoom, or marching sedately (?) down the aisle on Friday Chapel day, then running up to take off the familiar cap and gown, to hang them in our closets no more. They're each so individual, yet "all-together" in standing for the things we love and will miss. These seniors have been more than sisters, more than classmates, more than teammates . . . in their midst we have found friends—friends in the true sense of the word. Never let it be said that a sophomore is mushy, but do let us be sentimental and sincere for just a tiny minute while we say the old, old tribute to a new graduating class "Congratulations for having done so well thus far in your life, and may health, happiness, and prosperity be yours always"—We'll be seeing you around!

Music Program Held In Chapel May 25

At the chapel service held Friday, May 25, a special program of music was given. This was the last chapel program which the seniors attended as a class.

Lucy Messick lead the devotionals, after which Connie Ozlin played "Claire de la Lune" and an encore. Esther Shevick sang "One Fine Day" from the opera Madame Butterfly" by Puccini. She also sang the more recent song, "Dream".

Colonnade Rating Received Recently

Short Story Contest To End In October

The Colonnade, S. T. C. quarterly magazine, which is annually judged by the All American Magazine Critical Service of the National Scholastic Press Association, was recently awarded the rating of First Class—Excellent.

The publications are judged for qualities of fiction and features, editorials, critical writing, essays, poetry, humor, general art work—illustrations, photography, and cover—editing, makeup, and mechanics. These rating are given in order to aid future publications, and it is not a contest.

For the past two years, the Colonnade has held the rating of First Class—Excellent.

All students are asked to enter the short story contest which will last through the summer and end in October. At the conclusion of the contest, the winners will be announced, and the winning stories will be printed in the fall issue of the Colonnade.

Jane Knapton is the retiring editor, and Nancy Whitehead is the recently appointed editor-in-chief of the quarterly magazine.

The first issue under the editorship of the new staff was distributed to the students last week. This magazine was dedicated to the senior class with these words, "To the senior class of 1945 who have given so much, we wish to dedicate this edition of the Colonnade."

'45 Summer School To Open June 18

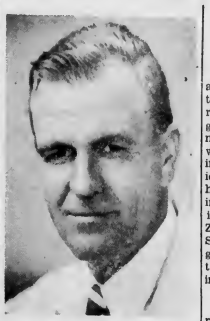
Summer School will open for the first session June 18 and will end July 21. The second session will open July 23 and will close August 25, according to an announcement made this week by S. M. Holton, Jr.

Miss Lois R. Keller, Cleveland Heights, Ohio, will teach geography, replacing Miss Grace Moran who will not be here for the summer session.

A three weeks workshop course on the natural resources of Virginia will be taught by A. A. Wingo, superintendent of Conservation Studies, State Board of Education.

In addition to these courses mentioned above, the usual courses will be offered also.

Graduation of seniors will be held in the large auditorium Friday night, August 24.



8 Advanced Students Pass Shorthand Test

Eight students in advanced shorthand passed recently the official 140 word Gregg Speed Test, according to an announcement made this week in the business department.

They are Betty Jane Austin, Roanoke; Alice Davis, Phenix; Betsy Dillard, Draper, North Carolina; Mary Elizabeth Fuqua, Cape Charles; Katherine Lynch, Lebanon; Anne Mapp, Bridgetown; Daphne Pittman, Portsmouth; and Anne Summers, Hampden - Sydney. These students received official certificates and would have received pins in pre-war days. Twenty students passed the official 120 word test and took the test at 140 words per minute.

Barbara Kellam, Norfolk, who is taking shorthand this year for the first time passed the 100 word official test.

"The function of education is to assist the student in mastering the tools of learning—the arts of reading, writing and figuring—to give them certain facts about the nature of the physical world in which he must live—to put him in touch with best thoughts and ideas of man, and, finally to help him develop good habits of thinking and working and of using his imagination," Dean George B. Zehmer, Dean of the Summer School at the University of Virginia, stated in his message to the graduating class this morning.

Jarman Recognized

Continuing, the University Dean remarked, "I wish to emphasize the fact that I have always had and still have a profound respect for the philosophy of education that has permeated thought and action at the Farmville State College under President Jarman's administration. Dr. Jarman and his able faculty have had no mean conception of the function of education and the responsibility that this institution has toward those who come here for nourishment and light. And I join alumnae, faculty and the graduates of the Class of 1945 in recognizing the lasting contributions that President Jarman has made and is making to Farmville."

Condition of World

"On the well-founded assumption that you, the graduates of 1945, have received here under the aegis of your Alma Mater this broad training of which I have been speaking and are looking upon this commencement occasion in the traditional but nonetheless true sense as the gateway to opportunity to put to the test the theories, hopes, ambitions, and ideas about life that you now cherish, I want to talk to you briefly about the kind of world that you must live in. I want to call your attention to some rather obvious but significant facts about the world that you face and, equally important, about the world that faces you."

The facts which the speaker mentioned are chaos, rapidity of change, and the complexity and complication of the world.

Personal Obligation

"If the world of the future is to become a better place in which to live, you must help make it so," the educator told the students

Sun Bathing, Writing Home, Packing Cause Last Days to be Busy Days

MARGARET WILSON

"Manufacture a feature" they said, "About anything" they added, maddeningly. So, unhappily, we retired to a secluded corner, and considered the possibilities. Surprisingly enough, that small voice—so often uncooperative on such occasions—whispered loudly something on the order of "You feeble - minded so-and-so — it's spring! You know — birds and bees and commencement, and home, and feather beds and stuff. Wake up and look around!" So we looked around and, my goodness, such doings on—as grandmother used to say. S. T. C. is really buzzing, right along with the bees. Those of us who are not occupied in what we fondly believe to be packing, smirking at the sun, are still writing desperate letters home about who's coming to get us—WHEW! Others of course, are busy entertaining parents in the unique way of S. T. C.

Those who are spending their leisure hours—or should we just say hours?—on the roof, are a little uneasy about their home reception. You see, there's a report that the last time one chocolate brown S. T. C.'er went home, her own father waltzed right by her at the bus without recognizing her. Besides, Dr. Moore has everybody a little worried. Of course, not to the point of joining the Lily-Whites, but—well, just a little worried.

Yessir, everybody has something on her mind, even if it's nothing more pressing than th- age - old decision—Van Johnson and Shannon's, or doing whatever it is we should have done last week. As of old, it usually turns out to be guess which.

And now, we have this little

We Are Graduated; We Are Now Alumnae

Now it's all over. Another class has graduated from Farmville State Teachers College. And it is a class that we have been particularly interested in because it has been our class.

For four years we have worked toward and looked forward to today, and now that it is here, we are filled with a mingled feeling of joy and sorrow; joy because we have successfully crossed the hurdles of college and are on the eve of a new life, and sorrow because it means parting from those we have learned to love.

We worked and played through four years, and graduation was just another far-distant day in the future, a something that happened to other classes, but wasn't ours yet. Then, all of a sudden, it was upon us and our remaining weeks at Farmville could be counted on the fingers of one hand. We had our Senior Chapel, when we all wept through our farewell songs. We had our Senior Sing when we willed to underclassmen a little of what was a part of us so that there would be some link with our Alma Mater. We had parties given for us, and each thing took on a new and more poignant meaning because it was a "last." We had our class day, our daisy chain, our lantern parade, and now we are graduated.

What is graduation? It is more than the mere receiving of a small square of paper. Graduation is the close of another chapter in our life book; it is the end of one phase and the beginning of another. Graduation is packing up and leaving for the last time, packing four full years in boxes and trunks and saying "good-bye" to a place that has been more than a home to us. Graduation is having another class take our exalted positions as seniors. Graduation is the leaving of familiar bells and schedules, of familiar places and faces. Graduation is that final, filled handful of days we have just completed.

This is graduation. The class of 1945 has left the shteltering halls of Farmville. We are graduated.

We are now alumnae.—J. W. R.

Our Farewell To The Seniors

During the graduating exercises this morning, another senior class received degrees from this college. Farmville State Teachers College has now become for them their Alma Mater. Once again Farmville's daughters will go out into the world, many of them to train the youth of our land.

Having lived together during four years of college, these students have shard in joys and sorrows. They have come to know what it means to live with other girls who live for the same things, who are interested in the same things, and who plan to teach with service as their prime goal.

The seniors will accept the challenge given them by the commencement speakers. They know that the road ahead is not an easy one, yet they are aware of the preparation which they have had to prepare them for this journey of life.

In saying good-bye to the daughters of whom Farmville is proud, we should like to quote from a Rotunda of another year.

"This morning they lay waiting in the peaceful harbor of college, but now they have weighed the anchor and are setting forth on the rough and dangerous sea of life. With four years of experience to guide them, with the association with those more learned than they to serve as a rudder, they will take the ship to another harbor in safety. May good luck and smooth seas go with them."

Gleanings

By Mildred Altice

This has been truly an eventful college session. When the college opened for classes, the Dumbarton Oaks Conference had commenced drafting a temporary charter for international organization which was to be considered as basis for the final charter. In the European war the British and American armies were experiencing defeat at Aachen. On November 7th, the American people, after a strenuous wartime political campaign in typical American fashion, elected a man to the office of President for the fourth consecutive time. Shortly thereafter Cordell Hull, the great statesman, was compelled by illness to resign, and the State Department was modified and reorganized.

• • • •

At Christmas came the German offensive and a brief period of depression. Early in 1945 the Philippines were liberated, and the President, after a simple inauguration, traveled to Yalta to attend a meeting of the chiefs of state of the three big allies. The island of Iwo Jima was conquered after one of the fiercest battles in Marine history. Plans were made at the Yalta meeting for a conference to be held at San Francisco to draft the final charter for world organization. Okinawa, an island 350 miles from the Japanese mainland, was attacked early in April.

• • • •

America's world-famous and beloved President died just before the San Francisco Conference convened to plan for lasting peace. While the nation mourned his passing, Germany unconditionally surrendered on May 9 to the three great allies. The session ends with the renewed effort in the war against Japan.

What grave crises will take place in the coming session of 1945-1946?

HEARD AFTER

BEDCHECK

Between geography papers, last minute cramming, exams and more exams, most of the men seem to have been scared away. Don't blame them one bit myself! There is something awfully depressing about this last week of torture.

However, some few braved the elements and presto! Queeky and Marguerite came through with the real thing. These two alternate between flashing smiles and diamonds. So much excitement at this time. What a graduation present!

And what's this we hear about Bracie—a diamond, and June (the month of course). Just add two and two together and you'll get a pretty nice conclusion.

Mary Ann Jarratte has at last received that long awaited letter. In the excitement she almost forgot to read it! Now, just what does that prove?

And did you hear about Keith? His visits to Farmville were becoming all too frequent (he only comes every afternoon and all day on Saturday) so seemingly the only way to keep him at Hampden-Sydney was to restrict him.

It certainly is hard to keep up with Wilson Rives these days. Is that boy fickle or does he just like variety? Betty seems to have made quite an impression because he knocked himself out getting back Sunday night.

It's mighty good to have Dicky-Bird back again, isn't it Margaret? How in this world do people get through exams with so much excitement?

And now the time for departure is drawing nigh. During the past week, school has been like a madhouse—everyone trying to study a minute or two between signing annuals and throwing dirty clothes into trunks. Thus, it is with tears in our eyes that we bid adieu to the "Class of '45". No one can take your places, but to you we wish the best of everything.

The Y

SARA BIRD WILLIAMS

And - so - another school year ends, and with its completion comes the end of another year's program of our own Young Women's Christian Association. The activities in which the Y. W. C. A. has engaged this year have not only been parallel with and integrated into other campus activities but have all been presented with one main pattern. That pattern was to weave into each girl's personal life a more highly consecrated and enriching religious atmosphere. All of the activities and plans were made with this in mind. The motto for the year, "Facing Today with the Living Christ" was chosen to help us through these days of world suffering with the ever present love of God before us to which to anchor our faith.

From the very first day of school when Y girls assisted the incoming freshmen though the traditional Christmas celebrations, through Religious Emphasis Week, through the election of the new Y. W. C. A. officers and their selection of the new cabinet, the Young Women's Christian Association has wanted each student to realize and to feel that this was her own Y. W. C. A. The Y has attempted to help each girl to find her rightful place among her fellow students.

The program for this entire year has been carried out by a most capable and efficient cabinet. It is to them we owe the success of each event. But even the most carefully made plans would not have given this degree of success had it not been for those of you who shouldered your individual responsibilities in accepting the challenge of a more beautiful life by sharing it with others.

To those of you who will be a part of our campus Y next year and to those of you who will not return, won't you remember that the success you have achieved and will achieve has been brought about "Not by might, nor by power, but by My spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts". Zach. 4.6.

Familiar Quotations

Since this is the last issue of the Rotunda which will appear this session, most of the feature material is about the seniors of '45. Printed below are names, nicknames, and familiar quotations of some of the members of that class.

Helen "Mother" Wilson; The crowning climax.

Jane "Ruffin" Ruffin; For the love of Mike.

Fay "Byrd" Johnson; Dar-ling I'm so excited.

Sara "Pip" Moling; . . . I can't understand her.

Marilyn "Meb" Bell; It's all in your mind, A. F.

Sarah Lee "Charlie" East; Sh-h-h.

Mary Ann "Jarratt" Jarratt; Yes, Dr. Wynne.

Lucy "Mrs. Sharpe" Manson Sharpe; Dan's out playing poker, so there go my summer shoes.

Jane "Knap" Knapton; For crying in the beer.

Elsie Thompson; Me 'n Marilyn.

Harriette "Hackie" Moore; I tell you but it's SO cold.

Virginia "Gin T." Pullen; It's here to stay.

Catherine "Queekie Trower" Trower; I'm supremely happy.

Bobbie "Peepsie" Scott; Ophs, I hit a snag.

Mary "Mimosi Flombosi" Watkins; I wasn't combing my hair.

Ann Masloff; Hail Com-e-rad.

Ophelia "Phe" Whittle; I'd be all right if it just wasn't for my legs.

Nancy "Possie" Harrell; I wish you all wouldn't call me POSSIE.

Sally Robertson; E-lise!!

Jean Carter "Smitty" Smith; You don't say.

Ann "Cherry" B'air; I've got what it takes.

Pat "Plem" Maddox; Oh I LOVE that.

Margaret Pogue "Poguey" Massey; Okay, be hard to get along with.

Betsy "Bets" Caldwell; I just don't feel like it.

Mary Walker "Legs" Watts; Oh go on now (there goes that inferiority complex).

Dora "Dody" Jones; Whatcha say, George?

Marilyn "Johnny" Johnson; 'n everything.

Betsy Fox; Isn't that disgusting.

Eleanor "Ellie" Wade; that gives me a LARGE charge.

Martha "Fats" Higgins; Call a meeting of "Us Incorporated".

Margaret "Teddy" Bear; What's going on in here?

Reminiscent Seniors Discuss 4 Brief Years at Farmville

FAY BYRD JOHNSON

Each senior who leaves this June has a vast number of reminiscences and each senior who tries to tell of these reminiscenes has vastly different accounts. As these four years draw to a close these are some of mine. We were the usual verdant freshmen and we did and thought about the usual things freshmen do and think about. Our first year was perhaps different only in this respect — on December 7 of that year, war was declared. The Sunday afternoon was quiet when suddenly someone screamed, "We have declared war on Japan." There was one of us whose brother was at Pearl Harbor. She became almost hysterical—we tried to help in the ineffectual way people try to help at such times. War had come to us.

There were battles in the Pacific but there were equally ferocious ones here with the well-known weapon—water.

Our sophomore year was highlighted by Budge's interpretation of the Black Hawk and also the mysterious White Hawk. Also Dimpie Kiger's wonderful direction for our production and circus stunt. The incessant bridge games which went on in Trotter and Orange's room were participated in by us all. Those were the last days of civilian Hampden-Sydney when there was an Every Day Club at Shannon's—when we actually had dates in the afternoons. Those were the happy days—the days of carefree fun.

Last year we were juniors. We came to know the joys of living in suites. We went to movies at night by merely signing up. Everybody danced to a Vic on second floor junior on Saturday nights. We had an increasing love and devotion to Charlie Hop.

Ellie was a wonderful president, and we became a solid class — sticking together through thick and thin. We went to Pickett dances—we dated boys of the 78th—we tearfully but proudly walked underneath the arch of caps for the first time to the Alma Mater. We couldn't believe we were seniors—we, the underclassmen became seniors.

Our senior year was saddened by the death of our beloved Miss Mary. We welcomed our new dean and have come to love and respect her. We have loved senior chapels. We came to know about practice teaching—its trials and tribulations. We knew the joys of Hackie's Ukelele playing—of the famous singers who lived on Annex. We cherished each passing minutes because we knew we have been shattered, pamper-

7 Students Will Be Camp Counselors

Seven students and two former students of STC plan to be counselors at camps this summer.

Cab Overbey, Betty Burchett and Jane Burchett will be at Cherrystone Ranch, Chatham. Millie Shepherd, Dot Owen, Louise Blane, Phylis Watts and former students Katherine Parker and Path Garth will be at Camp Farwell, Wells River, Vermont.

And so the time draws near when we again must take the sad initiative and bid our fond adieus. It's been a particularly wonderful year for us, and one that we're not soon likely to forget.

First, we were so enthused over the new group of horses . . . though we missed Cindy and Lindy and Winnie and Midnight, and all the others, we soon learned to love Cinnamon, Snowball, Callie and the Phantom Lady nearly as well. Then we were (and still are) so eternally grateful to Dean Smith for letting us ride on Sundays. Those extra trail-rides and long hours dashing about Longwood really meant a lot. And of course, just plain riding was generally termed Super! We had our mishaps, but who doesn't, please? After all . . . !!

And now another summer . . . and Mr. Nolen plans to auction the horses June 16th . . . and the question of riding next year or not remains to be seen.

FAREWELL FROLICS

During exams, all regular classes were dispensed with, and trail-rides took place right and left. Thursday was an eventful day. A group of woeful seniors took one last long trail to Hampden-Sydney, via the back way . . . left at 11:00 and ate lunch along the way. The Madame, in the meantime, had turned them over to Mary Sterrett, while she and Robin took off as a twosome for the day.

Margaret Lohr and Darky accompanied Anne Stewart and Cinnamon on another long excursion . . . this time ten miles to Anna's Grandfathers. They came in well after 6:30, tired but happy.

Throughout all the trail-rides, the tendancies have been exploration and expansion, and what we could easily term as Puddle-jumping! It's been "over the highway and through the woods" . . . for the last few days, and the surprising places you can't find on Horseback! 'Course it migiit take a little persuasion to get the mounts to crawl through brush on their "hands and knees" when we reach a ditch with the bridge down, but none of the riders seem to mind being dragged off into the mire.

And what isn't too broad or too slippery or too something or other, we leap lightiy over and go merrily on our way. Small bridges, big puddles . . . low sets of bars and high ciumps of grass . . . often with friendly mules tearing along over the jumps behind us in an enthusiastic attempt to be hospitable. 'Tis a great life.

HERE 'N THERE

Familiar sight around town after supper lately has been Bobby Anderson, riding, in turn, Robert Taylor's mare, Patsy, or his pretty little stallion, Prince. Pretty sight, whichever the mount . . . Thanks again to the Treakles and the others who made it possible for Joyce, J. Carter, Lightenin', Jeanne Sauerwein, M. Rucker, Mr. Sterrett, and B. Cock to make it down to Deep Run last week. 'Twas a beautiful show, with some beautiful displays of riding . . . Mr. Dickerson, who judged our own show, was in town Thursday, but only shopping for a saddle this time.

SO LONG

To all the seniors . . . how can we see Joyce leave? . . . we wish best of luck. We hate to see 'em go, and we'll really miss having them around the stables, but to all the others who will be back next year, we say have a big summer "at pasture" . . . and during the exercises.

The kind of government to which Mr. Zehmer referred in his message is being proposed at Dumbarton Oaks and in San Francisco. "I do not argue the necessity for some effective form of world organization and government if we are to prevent future world wars and possibly the complete break-down of civilization."

Going from weighty matters to the happier side of graduating, the University speaker said, "And I extend to you my congratulations upon your graduation and very best wishes for the future. I hope that I have not over-emphasibed the wickedness and the chaos of the present world or the difficulties that lie before you. The problem and the difficulties are many and great. But what I want to emphasize is the opportunity that faces youth. This IS an interesting world and there ARE so many opportunities to lead interesting, happy and useful lives. In many ways, I envy you. For one thing, travel should be easier and less expensive in the future and there are so many interesting and worthwhile places to go and see."

Dream of Future

In closing, he stated, "The only privilege that I take in response to the honor that you have extended to me on this occasion is to ask you to think and dream about the future of America and our relationship with other countries in some form of world organization. You know we are, or become, such stuff as dreams are made of! And it is the special privilege of youth to dream and to see visions. My scientist friends tell me that among other qualifications—and by no means the least of them — a scientist must have imagination. Imagination is the ability to anticipate, to synthesize the thinking of others and see the direction in which it all points, to see beyond one's nose. Isn't imagination an equally important and essential characteristic of a good citizen? So cultivate your imagination and draw freely upon it in visualizing the kind of civic and social order you would like to have in the future. Dream about the kind of home you would like to have; the kind of neighborhood and community in which you would like to live; the kind of state that under present conditions can best serve its people; and the new kind of regional organization that is needed to help men solve their interrelated and common problems; the character of the national state that the new order demands; and, finally, but not least, the kind of world order we should and must have if we are to have peace and justice for all."

Degrees Awarded

At this commencement program, 120 seniors were presented degrees by Dr. J. L. Jarman.

Mary Preston Sheffey, second honor graduate, gave the salutatory address, following the invocation by the Rev. H. Conrad Blackwell.

Singing Gibbon's "The Silver Swan", Monley's "Sing We and Chant It", and Mornington's "Here in Cool Grit" were members of the Madrigal Group of the College Choir.

Sara Dailey Moling, first honor graduate, gave the valedictory address, followed by the awarding of degrees and the announcement of honor graduates.

Those students who have a B or above on all four years of college work and who were named honor graduates in addition to the first and second graduates mentioned previously were Virginia Lee Abernathy, Margaret Barksdale, Marilyn Bell, Aline Boss, Olive Bradshaw, Mary William Calvert, Frances Copenhaver, Susan Durrett, Alice Feitig, Mary Elizabeth Fuqua, Katherine Todd Grizzard, Nancy Harrell, Lelia Holloway, Mary Anne Jarratt, Dora Walker Jones, Edith Jones, Anne Masloff, Harriette Moore, Alice Nichols, Jean Prosise, Virginia Radogna, Sally Robertson, Jane Waring Ruffin, Edith Sanford, Barbara Scott, Josephine Shaffner, Lucy Manson Sharpe, Margaret Stewart, Mary Parrish Vicellio, Eleanor Wade, Nannie Webb, Faith Weeks, Ophelia Whittle, Sara Bird Williams, and Mary Franklin Woodward.

DUKE UNIVERSITY
School of Nursing
DURHAM, N. C.

The next class will be admitted September 27, 1945. Only one class is enrolled each year.

Basic entrance requirements are intelligence, aptitude for nursing, and character. The academic requirements are 16 units of High School and at least one semester each of College Chemistry and Biology or Zoology. Annual tuition cost is $100 and covers the cost of instruction and maintenance.

Duke University School of Nursing offers the B. S. in Nursing upon completion of the 3-year nursing course and 60 semester hours of acceptable College credits.

Duke University School of Nursing also participates in the U. S. Nurse Cadet Corps program. Under this plan, students who pledge themselves to continue in nursing throughout the war, receive free tuition, uniforms and a small monthly stipend.

Application forms and catalogue can be obtained from: Dean, Duke University School of Nursing, Duke Hospital, Durham, N. C.

ed, and protected these four years. We did not know what the future held.

We have a great appreciation for all that has been done for us. We want to do the impossible—to sort of say thank you to all the faculty, the administration—to all those individuals who have molded our personalities, our thoughts during these telling years. We do realize and appreciate all this. There are many we regret to leave. However, through what has been given us, instilled in us, we face the future unafraid with love and appreciation, for the Farmville we leave behind.

Question of the Week

What will you miss most at S. T. C. after you've gone?

SENIORS:

Martha Anne Upshur: Chats late at night.

Gloria Sheppard: S. T. C. sundaes!

Mary William Calvert: My week end trips away from here.

Jean Carter Smith: Riding mainly, and figuring out a way to keep from studying.

Carmen Flores: Miss Barksdale, Southside and the kitchen in junior building.

Edith Garcia: Horse operas and the biology field trips at 5 o'clock in the morning.

Pogue Massey: Nights after 10 o'clock.

Betsy Fox: Charlie Hop's smile.

Sally Robertson: Everybody.

Lelia Holloway: My pantry, Miss Barksdale and Don Quixote.

Queckie Trower: Breakfast in the Tea Room.

"Dodie" Jones: That would be telling.

Gin T. Pullen: The little light bulb!

Betsy Caldwell: The chemistry lab.

Anne Masloff: I'll miss everything, but the girls and 121 C. H. the most of all.

Mary Walker Watts: Second floor Senior Annex.

Betty Edwards: Catching the 2 a. m. Westbound train.

Helen Wilson: That's hard to say.

Wardie Peery: Gossip!

Alice Nichols: My Chi sign.

Phe Whittle: It's not something I can put into words!

Marilyn Johnson: Mrs. Tabb's food!

Martha Higgins: Just People!

Jane Waring Ruffin: The Rotunda—both of 'em!

And now because they're a part of S. T. C., we asked a few V-12's the Question of the Week, too.

Bob Miller: Joan of Arc, Mrs. McCoy . . . And there's one more woman—Page!

Charlie Treanor: The charming personality and friendliness of the girls here—'specially Diddy.

Harry "Bud" Hall: Waiting(!)

Howard Jeans: I'll miss being at the only place I've been, except Washington, where the ration of women to men is high enough to suit me!

Dick Fowler: The Lamplighter!

Charlie "Chuck" Ailes: Studying geography (?) in the Rec!

Bruce Stern: Frances, of course.

Joe Sims: Oh, just leave it blank—like my mind.

WELCOME NEW STUDENTS

VOLUME XXV | FARMVILLE, VA., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1945 | NUMBER 1

President Greets Students

DR. J. L. JARMAN

It is my wish that the session of 1945-1946 will be a most successful one for all of you—new students and old. To the new students I wish to say that I am glad you decided to be with us and if you do your work the best you can you will never regret your decision.

To the old students, I wish to say that, since you have been with us before, I know you will live up to the traditions of State Teachers College.

To all students it is my wish that you be good citizens of the college community, that you do your part to put into practice the co-operation that a community such as ours requires from all its members.

Study the murals in the dome of the Rotunda and try to balance your college life with just proportions of Teaching, Study and Meditation, Rest, and Recreation. Then you will have good reason to be pleased with what you do at Farmville.

Your friend,

J. L. Jarman

Dean Announces Changes In College Rules, Regulatons

Since there have been a number of changes in the regulations of this college, and because certain rules need to be clarified and stressed, the most important things in the handbook are printed here for the convenience of all students.

Upon arrival within the city limits of Farmville, students are under all school regulations. Therefore, they must report to the college at once.

Seniors may date in the Recreation hall of the Senior building on Saturday and Sunday nights until 11:45. Upon returning from the drugstore on week nights, seniors may be accompanied to the doors of Cunningham hall by their dates, provided they leave by 10:30. Seniors should sign the date book in Cunningham hall when they leave the campus with their dates.

Juniors may entertain their dates in the parlor of the Junior building on Saturday and Sunday nights until 11:45. Seniors and juniors may entertain their out-of-town dates on week nights in the Dean's parlor of the Main building.

Sophomores and freshmen may entertain their dates in the Recreation room of the Main building until 10:45 p. m. on Saturday and Sunday nights.

College girls are asked not to date Farmville High School boys Girls may date Hampden-Sydney, Camp Pickett and town boys on Saturday and Sunday nights only.

All girls having dates during church hours on Sunday are expected to attend the church service at that time.

Sophomores may attend the evening movie (other than Saturday) six times per quarter. Freshmen may attend evening movies (other than Saturday) three times per quarter. All girls may go to the movies on week nights with out-of-town dates. They may stop by the drug store after the evening movie provided they are on the campus by 10:00; seniors by 10:30. All girls must be on the campus by 10 p. m. on Saturday nights.

Girls may eat off campus with their dates on Monday through Saturday by signing up in the Home Office. On Sunday, they may eat with their dates in the Weyanoke Hotel or Cactus Inn.

Girls must not leave the campus during intermission or after the dance. After the dance, girls and visitors must be in the dormi-

New Building Opened By Campus Laundry

Four rooms in the new building near the laundry are now being used as classrooms, according to an announcement made recently. Chemistry and Business Education Departments have part of their classes there.

After the completition of the new Science Hall about next fall, the building will be used as a central storehouse for all college supplies. Construction on the new Science Hall building will begin some time during this school year.

Picture Taking To Begin Monday

Beginning Monday of next week individual pictures will be taken for the 1946 Virginian, Lillian Elliott, editor-in-chief, has revealed. Students are requested to sign up at the table in the hall this week for appointments.

The price of the padded cover annual is $4.50; however, this entire amount must be paid when the annual is ordered sometime between now and the deadline date of December 12. Annuals with plain covers are $4.00, paying $1.00 down when the subscription is taken and the remainder when the annuals are distributed in the spring.

The John Ollier Engraving Company has the contract for the Virginian and the Bundy Studio is going to do the pictures and take orders for additional prints.

Arrangements for the printing of the Virginian were made in Chicago this summer by Lillian Elliott, editor, and Sue Hundley, managing editor.

STC Red Cross, USO To Entertain Boys At Blackstone Camp

On Sunday, September 30, three groups of girls will leave the college at 11:45 to entertain at three different wards at Pickett, Anne Summers, chairman of the Red Cross committee, has announced, and on Saturday, October 6, two groups of thirty girls each will go to the U. S. O. in Blackstone, and Service Club No. 3 at Pickett, Beverly Peebles, head of the U. S .O. committee, has revealed. Also on the night of September 30, a large performance will be given at the General Hospital.

Hilda Bennett served as acting Red Cross chairman during the summer for Anne Summers who did not attend summer school. She was assisted by Betty Ellis and a number of other girls. The Red Cross committee sponsored frequent trips to Camp Pickett where groups of girls entertained bed patients and convalescents in the General Hospital. Miss Wheeler chaperoned the groups.

Each time the campus Red Cross has carried groups to the hospital at Pickett, they have been more than enthusiastically received. The Red Cross will continue these trips to Pickett as often as possible throughout the year, and all girls who have talent in singing, playing any instrument, dancing or speaking are urgently requested to give as much of their time and efforts as they can afford toward entertaining these veterans.

During the summer term, the college U. S. O. committee, with a select group of girls, made several trips to Service Club No. 3 at Camp Pickett. They acted as junior hostesses and danced with, and talked to, and served food to the convalescent overseas veter-

Russian Pianist Polish Baritone Slated To Appear

October 4 Named Performance Date

October 4 is the date of the opening of the first concert of the artist series. Balbina Brainina, Russian pianist, and Alfred Orda, Polish baritone, will present a program in the S. T. C. auditorium at 8 o'clock.

Miss Brainina has studied under Paderewski. After the death of her parents in Moscow, she went to Bordeaux. The Germans refused to let her leave occupied France, but she escaped and made her way to North Africa. There she met the representative of the Portugese shipping firm who liked Chopin. Miss Brainina agreed to play for him if he would grant her passage to Lisbon which she received the next day.

Mr. Orda served as a Polish aviator before he was wounded early in the war. He escaped to England, and after his recovery he presented numerous concerts in London, Liverpool, Manchester and Edinburgh. Before coming to the United States in 1945, Mr. Orda was in Canada singing in Montreal in recitals and on national radio programs.

Short Story Contest To End November 1

Nancy Whitehead, editor of the Colonnade, has set November 1 as the deadline for entries for the Short Story contest.

A short story contest is sponsored each year by the Colonnade, the college magazine, which runs throughout the summer. Anyone can make any number of entries and are requested to enter as many stories as possible. There will be three prizes and two or three honorable mentions for those stories which are judged to be the best.

At the conclusion of the contest, the winners will be announced, and the winning stories will be printed in the fall issue of the Colonnade.

833 College Girls Matriculate By End of First School Week

Also Peggy Fink, Anna Headlee, Sue Hundley, Barbara Kellam, Heidi Lacy, Margaret Lohr, Grace Loyd, Sue McCorkle, Betty Minetree and Barbara Montgomery.

Also Barbara Lee Myers, Kitty Parham, Betty Parrish, Nancy Parrish, Ann Shuffleberger, Judy Reick, and Connie Young.

Rotunda Try-Outs To Begin Tonight

All girls in school who are interested in trying out for a position on the Rotunda staff are urged to meet in the publication office in Student Building at 8:30 tonight. Because of conflicting meetings tonight, the regular meeting of the editorial staff will be held at 8:30 also instead of at the usual time, 6:45.

There are vacancies on both the editorial staff and business staff to be filled. Try outs will continue for a period of four weeks, after which the new staff will be announced.

Patterson Chosen Member of Faculty

Adams, Bridgforth Act As Supervisors

Three new teachers have been added this year to the faculties of the college and training school according to an announcement by S. M. Holton, Jr., Director of Personnel.

Miss Jessie Patterson is supervisor of music on the college faculty, replacing Mrs. Ruth Bradshaw. A native of Warwick County, Miss Patterson has taught here for several summers.

Among other duties, she will be in charge of the freshman chapel. The class, under her direction, will learn hymns and various songs. This class meets every Monday at the regular chapel hour.

She holds an A. B. degree from Oberlin college; a master's degree from New York university as well as an education degree from the same university; her graduate work being begun at Cornell. She also has the distinction of having studied at Sommerville College which is a woman's college at Oxford university, England.

Miss Patterson is a member of Pi Beta Phi, social sorority, Kappa Delta Pi, educational fraternity and the American Association of University Women. She also has an interesting travel background, having been a cruise hostess five summers on a Mediterranean-Norway-Sweden cruise.

Miss Lucy Adams of Farmville, will be the supervisor of the fourth grade, replacing Miss Norris. Miss Adams was graduated from Farmville State Teachers College and received her masters degree from Columbia University.

Miss Betty Bridgforth is also a graduate of the Farmville State Teachers College and received her masters degree at the University of North Caroline. She replaces Mrs Watkins as supervisor of the kindergarten.

336 New Students Enroll In Classes

According to figures released from the office of the registrar Monday, September 24, 833 students have matriculated for the current sesssion of Farmville State Teachers College. This figure, however, will not remain the same as students are still matriculating daily.

Of the total enrollment, there are 336 new students, of which 317 are freshmen and 19 are transfers. Coming from almost every county in Virginia, there are also one new girl from Georgia, two from Kentucky, one from Maryland, four from North Carolina, and five from West Virginia.

Dramatic Club Plans For Fall Program

Old members of the Dramatic Club began their fall program Monday night with a social meeting held in the Student Lounge. It was announced that again this year the club will sponsor the formerly annual play contest with a number of the smaller high schools entering the competition. This contest has heretofore been impossible during the several years of war-time restrictions.

Members were given an opportunity for signing the rolls of the various apprentice groups, and refreshments were served.

There will be a meeting tonight in the small auditorium, immediately after the student body meeting, at which time new girls and any old students interested will have the opportunity of signing up for the apprentice groups. This will be a roll-call meeting for old members.

Sophs Elect Ballance As Class Treasurer

Doris Ballance, Norfolk, was elected treasurer of the sophomore class at a meeting held last night, September 25 in the small auditorium. She will replace Mary Lou Bagley, Virginia Beach, who did not return to school this fall.

Plans are now under way for rat week which will be in October. The rat caps for the freshmen will not arrive until the last of October or the first of November, because of a lack of flannel.

The other officers of the sophomore class for this year are Peepsie Brooks, president; Julia Booher, vice-president; and Anna Kucera, secretary.

Long Letter Home Relays Incidents

Editor's note (This feature was first printed in the premiere edition of the Rotunda, 1944; however, because of many requests to reprint it again in this first issue of 1945, we, the editors, hand it on to you, hoping that you will realize that it was written during a period of war and that you will make allowance accordingly.)

Dear Family,

Well, here we are back again . . . for the third time. Things change a little every year, but this year took a complete turn . . . not for better or for worse, particularly, just kinda inside-out!

At least we're living on the first floor. That is nice because there is no one under us to complain when we throw the beds at each other or do our reducing exercises. The only trouble with it so far has been the night the soldier looked in our windaw while we were cooking Clam Chowder, and the trouble with that was he left in such a hurry we couldn't catch him. Oh, yes . . . please send me some money for a Bear Trap which we are going to buy from the Farmville Supply Company.

The Clam Chowder was nice. The clams must have been awful deep in the mud, though; they couldn't wait to dig 'em up before they made the chowder, so it was more chowder than clam, but we ate it anyway. Whoever lived in this room last year left an Army "C" ration in the back corner of the closet so we thought we had biscuits to go with the chowder. We got the clam can open o. k., but we broke the can opener trying to open a biscuit. I'm glad I'm at school and not in the Army. We also tried to make lemon pie, and we did, but the meringue was a little runny because our new egg-beater is the wartype and came apart before we could beat the eggs, By the way, if you could increase my allowance a little, hope to eat two meals a day in the Tea Room and one at the Hotel or the Southside or some other place of interest here in Farmville.

The Freshmen are ever so cute, as usual. They're a bright group . . . just the other day I heard one asking one of the faculty if she could arrange it with the authorities for her to take 22 hours of chemistry a week as electives. That's what you meant by ambition, isn't it? My Little Sister is very attractive. She's six feet two and has one blue eye and one brown eye. By the way, I'll need a little extra money this week, as I am taking her and her two roommates to a movie and throwing them a little party afterwards. Just a few of their friends . . . we're renting the Tea Room banquet hall for it.

We can come home after classes every Saturday if we like. Can you meet me at Hoot-Owl Hollow at 4:55 this Sunday morning? If I catch the 5:19 train back that same morning, I can be here in time for Bed-Check. Please buy my ticket and have it ready for me to catch that train back, as I haven't enough cash on hand for a round trip ticket.

I stood in line the other afternoon for two hours to get the package. When it got to be my turn, I was so exhausted I fell

Farmville Doors Swing Wide Open Once Again

Once again the doors at Farmville have been opened and once again new girls and former students have entered these halls to catch and carry forward the spirit of this college as revealed in our patron saint, Joan of Arc.

Along the corridors and halls, upperclassmen have welcomed one another cordially, friendly, and happily, while freshmen and transfers have lived a different kind of life from the life once lived. They have met new roommates, new friends, and have been surrounded by new and different circumstances. The freshmen are leaving behind one chapter in their lives as their high school days have ended and are beginning a new chapter, a chapter which will, to some extent, be entirely new. Through classes of orientation, these girls have been able to catch the spirit of Farmville; they have learned something of our traditions and of our customs. Now as they live and work and play together as class members, they will become more a part of this college than was possible just through orientation work.

To you, the new girls at Farmville, we give a hearty welcome. We are happy that you, too, decided to make Farmville your alma mater and that you wanted to share with us our joys and our sorrows. You do have an opportunity which many in your high school classes did not have. May we who have gone ahead of you impress upon you the importance of taking advantage of the opportunities that are yours. Perhaps some of you are coming as a result of parental sacrifices, perhaps others aren't—but regardless of the circumstances and conditions, accept this challenge to make every day of these four years count for the most.

You are coming to college under different conditions from which the other girls at Farmville came. We, as upperclassmen, came while the world was engaged in war; you are coming at a time when the world is engaged in reconstruction. This is a great time to be in college, and above all, it is a challenging time to be in a state teachers college, training to go out to teach the youth of the land and helping to mould the lives of the children whom you teach. Will you as new girls on our campus accept this challenge and responsibiility? Will you help the "old" girls on the campus to carry the torch of Farmville as we in a teacher training institution take our places in a world which must be different and which must in part be made different by those who serve in the field of education?

Future of Peaceful World Depends on Students

For the first time in over four years, students this fall entered college in a peaceful world. We've almost forgotten what a peaceful world is like, but we do know that the air seems a little fresher and the sky a little bluer.

To some this means back to the old lackadaisical way of life. Yes, we have won the war, but we have not won the peace. If we go back to a selfish, isolated way of life, we will have lost what the boys won for us with precious American blood on Okinawa, Iwo Jima, and Luzon.

To others the end of the war meant only more gasoline, more meat, sugar, and more shoes. These people think happiness in life comes when you can get that new pair of red shoes you've been waiting for for months or when the pages in your date book begin to fill up. We should have learned to appreciate the freedom of speech, of worship, of the press, etc., during nearly five years of war.

It's easy to think now that we can stop buying war bonds and spend our money as we please. Thousands of G. I.'s are still overseas crossing off each day of the calendar as the weeks and months roll by. Those boys want to come home, but they're still giving their best that we may win not only the war but the peace. We mustn't forget those boys that fought for months and are now policing foreign lands. These lads are homesick and we want them to have the best food, clothing and equipment that they can have.

The future of this peaceful world lies in the hands of the college students of this powerful nation. The problem of reconversion is not only in the hands of the present rulers but also in our hands. Let us offer a prayer of thanksgiving that we have been the victors and in the words of our late President, "Let us endeavor to so live that those who have died may not have died in vain."

Gleanings

By Mildred Altice

This week plans for the occupation of Japan become clearer and more systematic through General MacArthur's action and through a directive which was made public for the first time and was sent to the General by government officials. More Japanese war criminals were arrested, and General MacArthur ordered the investigation of Emperor Hirohito's private fortune. From Chunking there is unofficial word that the Emperor has resigned.

The congress of the Foreign Ministers in London has not made too much progress. It has been announced that Soviet Russia has concluded a trade pact with Hungary which will give Russian control over one-half of Hungary's economy. Despite this, generally, discussion of the problems concerning the Balkan countries has been avoided so far because there exists a deadlock upon such matters with the United States and Great Britain opposing Russia.

Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson was named to succeed Secretary of War Henry L. Stimpson, and Senator Harold Burton of Ohio was named for the Supreme Court. All the bureaus dealing with labor problems were put under the control of Secretary of Labor Louis Schwellenbach within the one bureau of Labor. He immediately took steps to effect a settlement of the troubled labor situation. The coordination was a step badly needed, and it is to be hoped that a fair and just settlement may be found for the laborers, management, and the general public.

HEARD AFTER

BED CHECK

With the last shriek, "I'm so glad to see you!" followed by a bear hug, and the last box of debris shoved under the bed, everyone can settle down to the usual nonchalant (?) existence. Another year is well under way at S. T. C.

The gleam in three certain young ladies eyes is only a reflection of the dazzling diamonds now adorning their third finger, left hand. Must be nice to get your Master's degree!

And did you know that Ann Baer saw Chi Saturday night?

Bessy would like to announce to all Bob Johnsons fans that he is back in the dear old U. S. A. and has retired from Uncle Sam's services. (Editor's note — He's as cute as a bug's ear!).

We're going to miss Miss Bracie. Hope she will come back to see us soon.

And did you know that Pocahontas and Captain John Smith are once more a happy twosome? History does repeat itself!

Welcome back to S T. C. Betty Lee! Two schools in three days could be rather wearing.

Oh yes, our own Elsie Thompson is taking the fatal step this Saturday. Here's wishing you and Bob all the happiness in the world and lots of venetian blinds.

Why so forlorn, Summers? That long awaited letter might be in one of those mail bags soon!

Which brings to mind—mail call. Now we know how the boys feel—particularly when you go (with your knitting) sit and sit, and come out—with your knitting. Of course there was the freshman who stumbled out of mail call, practically in tears because she only got ten letters.

And then there's Hilda Bennett who gets tired of looking at one boy for a whole day. (Now we know the war's over, She's getting mighty choosey!)

Those big time prom trotters, Martha Wells and Heidi Lacey, are back in the rut again—University of Virginia and V. M. I. welcomed them with open arms.

Y News

The Y. W. C. A. started off its year successfully when the Cabinet and Sophomore Commission met the freshmen Monday. The Sophomore Commission then entered the Freshmen that night with a "Coke and Nab" party in the Rec.

Big sisters and Little Sisters resplendent in taffetas and nets attended the Reception held in the gym Friday evening sponsored by the Membership Committee of the Y. In addition to these welcomes the Y wants every new girl to feel that she is an important part of the Association. "Opportunity will be given for Freshmen to join a special committee of the Y this fall.

All the church parties seem to have been lots of fun, and the refreshments were reported to have been excellent.

Methodist girls report that they expect to have a student center by Christmas. In addition to the usual meetings, they plan to have a fellowship hour after Sunday evening services called "The After- Glow." Welcome goes to their new Student Secretary, Miss Frances Currin.

The Episcopalians report that their program will include Altar Guild, Choir work, and other phases of church association besides the Canterbury Club.

Baptist Girls! Don't forget the open house for all Baptist students Friday afternoon from 3:30 to 5:30. Students are invited to drop in for a chat and refreshments at sometime during this period. We, too, would like to welcome the new Baptist Student Secretary, Miss Olivia Stephenson.

Sunday night Dean Smith spoke to the Westminister Fellowship at its first meeting of the year. Don't forget the outdoor supper to be held in Mr. Graham's backyard Sunday night!

Prayers are held in the large auditorium every night after dinner Monday through Friday. They offer a special pause of quiet during our busy college days. Be sure to come every night; you'll find that they will fill an important place in your life here.

Delicious Pastel Shades Brighten Rooms in Dorms

By CARMEN LOW

It was simply marvelous coming back to school, seeing all the girls and friends that we bid fond farewells to all of three months ago. We all agree everything looked the same. Good as ever we might say, that is all but the classroom. What more could be expected though after a wonderful summer of expert loafing. Anything designed for slaving seems like a careless mishap and most artificial. Oh, but wait a minute! Something new has been added, or have you noticed the pretty walls in Cunningham, Gym and Student. Honey! There is nothing careless or artificial about these. In fact they are so luscious we have to keep pinching ourselves to realize the heavenly truth.

The walls come in four delicious colors, pale green for the nature lovers, a subtle pink for daintiness, a faint yellow which is just yummy and a sophisticated blue. Maybe you are one of the lucky Occupants, and there isn't anything to compare with his luxury. You have probably written home about the "blue room" leading parents to believe that you are rooming in another "White House." Oh the elegance of it! Perhaps you have told them of your bright sunny yellow one which sounds like a vacation in Florida. Oh the wonder of it!

Then think of the fun decorating them. What inspiration! There are so many attractive ways to dress 'em up. Pretty ruffles in dainty colors to make it feminine—matching Bates spreads and drapes to give it a tailored look. Subdued colors and brightness to give them an exhuberant personality. Its amazing what a little dash of this or that can do for a room. Of course, they wouldn't be perfect without the usual pennants, bulletin boards, pictures of friends, the ever - popular "Back Home for Keeps" and your favorite movie actor.

Things did become a little complicated when people arrived with green decorations and a blue room or something as equally disturbing, but as for "Local color"—sister, we've got it!

Robert Fraser Memorial Fund Aids 202 Students' Education

The Robert Fraser Memorial Loan Fund has received little publicity, but accomplished a great work in enabling worthy girls to secure an education at the Farmville State Teachers College. Miss Minnie V. Rice, who has been chairman of this fund and its predecessor, The Normal League, for the past 35 years, outlined the worthiness and needs of this fund in an interview with a Herald newsman this week. Miss Rice, who holds the record for service to the State Teachers College in years of teaching and influence, beamed as she revealed the following interesting story:

The Virginia Normal League, now known as The Robert Fraser Memorial Loan Fund, was organized in the spring of 1898 by Dr. Robert Fraser, then president of the Normal School at Farmville, Va.

This Loan Fund commends itself to the people of Virginia by the very purpose that called it into existence, as well as by the fact that, in a noble, unselfish service to some of the daughters of Virginia, it has proved itself true to this purpose.

In every part of Virginia, there are many high-toned girls that can not avail themselves of the scholarship offered by the State, not having means to pay their board. The Loan Fund is to make it possible for these girls to attend the State Teachers College at Farmville, Virginia, in order that they may become self-sustaining and, if need be, the mainstay of loved ones at home.

The Loan Fund began without one cent of capital. There was no income except in the way of dues, a dollar a member, amounting first year to about $40.00. Later friends realizing the good that was being accomplished, began to make contributions. At the present time the capital in hand is $3,507.00.

A life of greater usefulness has been secured for 202 young women of Virginia by means of this Loan Fund. Some of the young women took the two year course and some took the four year course. Who would dare to measure in dollars and cents this work, bringing in returns that eternity alone can estimate?

A gentleman of Lynchburg several years ago became so much interested in this work that he, through his friends, raised several hundred dollars and sent this amount to the Loan Fund. A professional man in Farmville lent $180.00 to a young girl to complete her work at the State Teachers College, requesting her to pay this amount to the Loan Fund in place of returning it to him. A business man of Norfolk for ten years in succession sent

New Head Replaces Florida Student

Louise Blane, senior from Alton, has been named sports editor of the Rotunda, according to an announcement made this week by Virginia Treakle, editor-in-chief. She succeeds Betty Ellis, senior from Coral Gables, Florida, who had to resign because of other duties.

Louise has been active in the sports life of the college during her past three years at Farmville, serving now as vice-president of the Monogram Club.

Assisting on the sports staff now is Mary Harrison, Thomasville, North Carolina. Others will be added to this staff after a period of trying out is held for one month.

Representatives Give Clinic Views

Frances Lee, Margaret Orange, and Phyllis Watts were sent as Farmville representatives of the Athletic Association to the Sports Clinic. This clinic was held at the University of Georgia in Athens. Various sports and athletic activities were taught at this clinic including basketball, tennis, archery, badminton, and gymnastics.

In addition to attending these classes, the girls had the opportunity of seeing some of the outstanding tennis players give exhibitions in tennis.

The purpose of this clinic was to introduce new and improved methods of teaching athletics in the various schools. These representatives were sent from Farmville to bring back valuable information which will be of great service to the local physical education department.

Jane Ruffin made it back in time to open up the school. She said she had to see Dr. Walmesly. Of course, it was just a coincidence that Lewis was also at home.

It was mighty good to have Theresa Powell, Patsy McClear, Anne Moore, Eleanor Corell, and Betty Jane Shephard back—even if only for a visit.

Anne Carter and Gooney (Goofy as she is known to her orientation class) took their dates to Cumberland. Must have been quite an exclusive week end.

Flash! Alice Hannah is going to Florida for the Christmas holidays—and is she excited!!!

Since the much-seen campus co-ed, Robert Newman has gone away, maybe "Buckie" can study now!!

Ever since A. B. made his appearance, Nelly Smith has been treading on air. We'll have to admit he was "out of this world."

Now about Glenn Ann's extended visit to the Univ. of Virginia this summer! She went for a week end, but stayed two weeks!

Three months is too much territory to cover, in one week so we'll just preserve the rest. But remember we'll know where you were when the lights went out.

Plastic Eyes Provided

Plastic artificial eyes which duplicate the appearance of natural eyes and which are superior to glass eyes, have been developed by the optical industry in the United States for use of wounded veterans, according to the Better Vision Institute. The iris, pupil and veins of the sound eye are matched in pattern and coloration by the artificial eye. The eyeball is built up layer by layer of plastic so as to obtain a natural effect.

Tennis Tourney Will Begin Soon

No exact dates have been set for the singles tournament, but it will begin in the near future. This will be the first competitive sports activity this year and everyone is eligible to enter.

The courts are ready for practices, and the only rule is to wear tennis shoes on the courts. The winner of the tournament will add points to either the green and white or the red and white color cup.

Hockey Practices Slated Next Week

Fall hockey practices are scheduled to begin next week, according to an announcement made by Frances Lee, president of the Athletic Association. Practices will be held every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoons at 3:30. These classes are open to any person who wishes to come out and practice for class teams or any person who wishes to sign up to take hockey as a class. For any person to participate in class games, she must have in eight hockey practices which have been recorded in a book for that purpose.

To be experienced in hockey is not necessary for participation in this sport. All classes are instructed by Miss Olive T. Iler, instructor of physical education.

ans of the club.

Beverly Peebles directed the committee activities during the first summer quarter, and Miss Leola Wheeler chaperoned the groups that went to Pickett. During their absence in the second quarter, Page Cook served as acting U. S. O. head and Miss Garnett acted as chaperone.

Last year and during the summer, the campus U. S. O. financed the transportation to Pickett, but transportation will be furnished by the camp this year. The group of 30 girls that will be selected from time to time to go to Pickett will alternate trips to Service Clubs 2 and 3.

More men at present are being redeployed at Pickett than there have ever before been. All men at Pickett are overseas veterans, and the majority of them are convalescents. These men need entertainment and relaxation, and since the U. S .O. committee has been entertaining in the Club for some time, they try to act fairly and wisely in their selection of girls to represent S. T. C. at Pickett.

LEFT LEAD

Tally-ho! What with all the beginnings of things going on around here, it seems a little more than unusual to be writing what may be perhaps a "swan song" and a farewell. But it is our sad business to relate what has become generally known around here anyway, and your Ridin' Reporter just couldn't do it without one last grand-slam and a hearty try to bring you what little bit of saddle gossip we could pick up this far away from the stable.

CURB BIT

Yup, there's really been a curb put on riding this year. Thus far there's no horses and very little hope, and a shame it is, what with all the new gals who have been hopefully asking about it, and with all the sorrowful old jocks sadly stroking their riding boots dusty this time from lack of use, and reminiscing of last year's days on the trail and in the ring, with Robin and Cinnamon, Darky and Miss Black, Gypsy, Callie, Cokie, Colonel, yes, and even Snowball, and all the rest. In case you're interested, we've learned a little of where the old mounts are, and we pass the news on to you as we heard it last.

EMPTY SADDLES

Snowball brought a good price at the auction in the spring, and is passing his days, happily we're sure, somewhere near Farmville, although we're not sure just which direction. Mr. Richard Cralle has Robin still gaiting about town, and up until last week Mr. Fitzgerald had Callie and the Colonel in pasture with Robin and several others. Now the Colonel has been bought by a Mr. Meador, and Callie, too has changed hands again. Bobby Anderson bought "the Colt" and the pair of them have become a familiar sight scampering about Farmville any old time the mood hits them. Mr. H. Weiis bought the pony. As for the others, we've kinda lost track. They've gone the way of Midnight, Cindy, Winnie, Nellie, Princess and all the "stable mates" of year before last. The trails have grown over . . . and we're hoping against hope that there will be new ones to blaze this year. Mr. Jacobs' "Dewey", who, with the Madame up, caused so much admirable comment in the Horse Show last spring, was sold soon thereafter, and his successor "Jitterbug" (Botts' pride 'n' joy) has recently been sold, too. Two nice five-gaited horses . . . we miss seeing them around.

TID-BITS

Joyce, as we all know, is riding instructor at Randolph-Macon Woman's College this year. She's definitely missed around here, not only by the stable crew, but on the campus in general, and by the town people as well. Our loss was Randolph-Macon's gain.

SO LONG!

And that is the round-up. Could be if we keep trying hard we can talk somebody into letting us have the horses again this fall, but it'll take some tricky talking. After all . . . . we've gotta have some place to practice up on "The Navajo Trail" . . . and "Sing Your Way Home" . . .

And if you get the opportunity to ride, don't miss it, as if you would! Just keep your heels down and—flat on my face and had to spend the night in the Infirmary. They are a little crowded with girls living there, so I had to sleep on the operating table. They operated on me by mistake, so I'm enclosing the bill which I hope you will attend to as soon as possible. I still don't have the package. I know what it was though, as the whole school is talking about it. Thanks a lot . . . since we've turned in our ration books I have not been able to buy any limburger cheese at all.

Well, it is now time for my afternoon nap. Since my operation I'm under the doctor's care. That would be all right except I have to pay a girl to coach me for the classes I miss by taking a nap every afternoon. Tell everyone to write to me as I do not have time to write to anyone first. I can hardly wait to see you at Hoot-Owl Hollow this week end. It's lucky I don't have any Saturday classes, isn't it? By the way, since I arranged my schedule so's I won't have any Saturday classes, it means that I'll have to come an extra year. Oh, well, when I'm teaching I can earn the money to pay you back double. It won't take but twenty-five years.

Before I go, I thought you'd like to know that Ogelthorpe has finally proposed. I'll probably be married as soon as I graduate so you can give me sliver for my next birthday. I didn't want to teach anyhow!

Do write soon, and please send me some money to buy bedspreads with. My roommate had red hair, so the orange and purple ones just won't do. Until I hear from you, I am your loving daughter,

5,000 More Men To Be Trained At Pickett

Camp Pickett's streets will stortly echo again to the sound of troops marching in training and, for an indefinite period, scenes of the hectic days of 1942, '43, and '44 will be re-enacted.

This prospect became a fact within the past few days with decision of the Army Service Forces to shift part of the Army Service Forces Training Center at Camp Lee to Camp Pickett for an undetermined period.

Headquarters of the "branch" ASFTC was set up last Thursday, with Lt. Col. E. E. Scudder, Glendale, Calif., veteran of 35 months service in the Pacific theatre, in command.

First contingent of troops arrived Monday. Three Special Service Companies—embracing a galaxy of entertainers—arrived Tuesday, setting up daily shows for the thousands of wounded soldiers in the U. S. Army General and Convalescent Hospitals at Pickett.

Size of the ASFTC activity is expected to reach 5,000 officers and men. By the end of this week, strength will be 1,200.

All Camp Lee ASFTC is concerned with training Quartermaster Corps personnel and units.

On the Ball

MARY HARRISON

Welcome to S. T. C. new girls. By now you have been given an introduction to the sports at S. T. C. Thursday you showed your interest in sports and turned out in full force to witness a swimming exhibition. Orchesis gave you an idea of how you would like dance, and the hockey players raced down the field showing the do's, and no doubt, do nots in the game. The courts were in use in an exhibition tennis game!

You will find time to enter several sports here, and learn new ones, and develop your oid favorite sports, by playing on a class team! Show your interest by coming out for a sport, and by supporting your class in the games!

An important event will be coming up soon—namely, fall tennis singles tournament! The courts are in good shape, and they are there for use, so drop by, on your free afternoon, get in some practice, and plan to enter the tournament. Don't get the idea you have to be an unusual player—you do not—the winner will add points for the color cup! The major rules are—tennis shoes must be worn on the courts, and a suitable tennis outfit!

For you lovers of basketball, and volleyball, they are games you'll want to learn, if you do not know too much about the games already! These sports come mainly in winter quarter, and are on the must-attend list, when it comes to attending class games—red and white, and green and white.

Play a good game, and be a good sport, and get in the game Happy sports season to you all.

Conservatory Closes After Years' Service

Founded in 1907 by the late Dr. August Schemmel, the Schemmel Conservatory was officially closed on September 11, 1945.

Miss Mattie Spencer Willis, a former teacher of piano and voice at the Conservatory now has her studio at Mrs. Layne's Business School, 106 High St.

Don't Send Parcels To Returning Servicemen

Thousands of packages are being hauled great distances overseas to servicemen who won't be there to receive them.

These men, homeward bound, can't be bothered about undelivered parcels, but the mail jam is tough on men remaining overseas.

So Navy postal authorities make the following suggestions:

1. Don't mail packages to men known to be returning within the next few months.

2. If a man is definitely known to be assigned to an occupation force, play Santa and send him a package.

Inclusion of credit points for overseas service has speeded up the demobilization procram and prompted the Navy Mail Service to adopt the following rules:

Letters and packages sent to Naval personnel returning to the United States for discharge, rehabilitation leave or shore duty will be returned to the sender unless the serviceman has left a civilian forwarding address.

No mail will be forwarded to Navy separation centers or receiving ships.

2 Student Workers Arrive On Campus To Assume Duties

Methodist Center To Open This Fall

Coming to the campus this fall as student workers are Miss Frances Currin, Methodist Student Secretary, and Miss Olivia Stephenson, Baptist Student Secretary.

Miss Currin was graduated from Radford State Teachers College in June 1945. During her college career, she was an officer in the state denominational work.

Plans are being formulated whereby the Methodist Student Center will be opened in the Cactus Inn sometime in December at which place the students works will live. In addition to her student work, Miss Currin is teaching the fifth grade at the training school.

Miss Stephenson received her B. S. degree in home economics from this college in 1940 and her masters degree in religious education from the Woman's Missionary Training School, Louisville, Kentocky, in May 1945. For three years, she taught school in Nottoway County, and she has also served as camp counselor and program director at summer camps. Succeeding Mrs. J. V. DeFoe in this position, Miss Stephenson is living at the Student Center in the Cactus Inn.

each year $100.00 to this organization. This work of aiding girls appealed so strongly to one of the alumnae that she gave $100. One of the classes, preferring flesh and blood pictures and statuary, made up the sum of $140.00 and gave this as a parting gift to their Alma Mater, to the Loan Fund. In presenting this money, the president of the class said: "We do this, because there will be no end to the good that this gift will accomplish."

When the Loan Fund enables a girl to become self-supporting, it puts her into a position to assist those who are dependent upon her and it makes her a power in her community, and, as a teacher, it makes her a potent factor in the schools of Virginia.

To realize what the Loan Fund has meant in the life of one girl, read the following letter:

"I am a happy girl tonight as I sit before a cheerful open fire in my own little home. If you were to ask me what in my life contributed most to this happiness, I would answer you without hesitation, "The Loan Fund," at Farmville."

Another girl wrote the following: "I am among the youngest of ten children. The problem of educating us was no small one. Before my turn came, I had almost despaired of going to school We lived in the country and had poor advantages, but there was within me an inexpressible desire to go away to school. Only those who have experienced the same longing can appreciate the hope that came into my life when I heard that there was an organization in the college at Farmville that would lend a girl money with which to educate herself and let her pay it back, when she could, without interest."

"The Loan Fund," another student said, helps girls to help themselves and surely, help can find no nobler or more generous form than this. It gives courage and strength to the recipients of its loans in that they may return all that they receive to be passed on to others, and, thus they, by their labor, become links in a never ending chain of noble deeds."

Appeals for help often come not from the girls themselves, but from some one interested in them. There are many young women of sterling character, endowed with good minds, who need help just long enough to give them a start in life.

The organization known for many years as "The Virginia Normal League" and now called "The Robert Fraser Memorial Loan Fund" presents its work to the people of Virginia in the words of one who knew from experience what the organization had meant to her and who wrote the following:

"No one who knows of the work done by this organizaztion can fail to realize something of its greatness. It is my conviction that if the people of Virginia were informed as to the good the organization does by helping young women to become independent and able to be of service to others, if they could be shown the great need of just this help, if they could know of the changes that already have been brought about by the work of this organization in many lives, they would count it a joy to have a part in this work."

tories by 12:45. Bedcheck will be at 12:45. Seniors must forgo the privilege of going down town at 10 if they attend the dance. Guests are expected to keep regulations—not leave school— during the dance or at the end of the dance. Girls must be responsible for their guests.

Girls must obtain permission from the Dean of Women to attend the dances off the campus. A written permission from the parents must be filed in the Dean's office each time a girl wishes to attend a dance at a boys' school. Girls will not be given permission to attend the Hampden-Sydney fraternity dances

Seniors may elect from their class a committee to act as chaperones for underclassmen to games.

Students must get permission from the Dean of Women before leaving campus for overnight. Any student wishing to leave Farmville for the night must have a written permission from her home filed in the office of the Dean of Women. This permission may be a standing one to cover the whole session. Girls must go to the destination and by the means of transportation stated on their permission. Upon returning, students must report to the Home Office the hour of return. They are expected to return by 11 p. m.

After 6 p. m., girls must get permission from a member of the Home Department to visit in town. Students are not permitted to spend the night in town. Students should not go alone to the dentists' or town doctors' offices.

Drinking of alcoholic beverages, including beer, in the dormitories and within the city limits of Farmville is absolutely prohibited.

All students may walk to Longwood any afternoon until six by signing up in the Home Office.

Horseback, bicycle, and car riding are not permitted at the college unless the students have permission from their parents on file in the office of the Dean of Women. Girls must sign up in the Home Office each time they go horseback, bicycle, or car riding.

Quiet observance of Sunday is expected. Students must not go down town on Sunday. Each student should attend her own church at least once on Sunday. Juniors and seniors may go to the town post office from 6:30 to 7:30 p. m.

Old Timer Gives Advice To Frosh

By EVELYN GRIZZARD

To you, dear freshmen, this article is affectionately written, because freshmen always are my favorite people. With your arrival at college and the onslaught of new friends and people, have you become clothes conscious? There's a right way and a wrong way here at S. T. C. to wear those spanking new clothes of yours.

You will find, dear freshmen, that skirts and sweaters can't be beat for classes and casual wear.

Almost any combination can be used, so long as colors and fabrics harmonize. You might even slip into class in a casual wool dress or neat-as-a-pin suit. The point is to look well scrubbed,well brushed and to have your clothes simple and well cut.

For Sundays and dates, you can pile on the glamor and be sophiscated as you please, but remember that this is Farmville and not Hollywood. Basic black dresses are almost a "must," but colored frocks with dressy lines and in becoming fabrics will see you through. Just keep in mind that "all going together" look.

For studying, jeans and plaid shirts, brother's cast off pants and T-shirts, or just any old thing will do. Just be comfortable and do study!

My parting word to you, seniors of '49, is to observe the first rules of good grooming, and before you know it, you'll have that "College Girl Look."

Just Looking, Thanks

By ANN BUCK

As the Norfolk and Western trained pulled in and out of Farmville's grand central station; and the Greyhound Bus came to a stop behind the Coffee Shop, they picked up S. T. C. gangs going far and near. Even this soon!

Tugging bag and baggage to Richmond were Alma Davis, Mary Rattray, Berkley Richardson, Audrey Hudson, Mary Hunter, Louise Rives, Jane Johnson, Betty Lee, Frances Lee, Connie Ozlin, and Jane Philhower.

Lynchburg always popular for the campus goers was honored with Anne Ford, Mildred Hawkins, Martha Hicks, Constance Loving, Nancy Jessey, Lucie King, Katherine Stoner, and Jane Watts. Of course Charlottesville was on the map of importance this week end with Univ. of Va's opening game with Coast Guards. S. T. C'ers seen in the stadium were Esther George, Shirley Loving, Norma Howard, and Martha Wells and yours truly.

Finding fun and frolic in Blackstone were Lottie Hammock, and Ann Williams.

Attracted to Appomattox were Katherine and Virginia Tindall.

Others finding more amusement off the campus than on it were; Dorothy White in Staunton, Claudine Guthrie in Sunny Side, Norma Dauerman and Rayler Fulcher in Roanoke, Helen Elder in Dillwyn, Evelyn Guaninnie in Howardsville, Frankie Hardy in Covington, Jean T. Howell in Franklin, Kitty Parham in Petersburg, Marion Jackson in Hopewell, Virginia Travis in Crewe, also Peggy Moore and Hattie Hyatt in Norfolk.

Some alumnae just can't stay away, namely Pat McLear and Jane Ruffin. Good to see them back.

Someone mighty go to London next week end for tea maybe!—well, you never can tell.

Cotillion Members Set Date of Dance

October 27 was named date for fall Cotillion dance at the first meeting of the school year held last night, September 25, in the small auditorium.

All Cotillion members are allowed to invite one new student to the dance.

Anne Summers announced that Peggy T. Ross, business manager, will be in charge of the music committee and serving with her on that committee will be Betty Brothers, Barbara Lee Myers, and Emily Carper. In charge of decorations will be Glenn Anne Patterson and Carmen Low. They will be assisted by the fall goats.

The officers of the club are president, Anne Summers; figure leader, Nancy Pitts; secretary-treasurer, Kathryn Prebble, and business manager, Peggy T. Ross.

Photographer Takes Virginian Pictures

On Monday, October 1, Mr. Bundy of Farmville, representing Mrs. H. M. Goddy's Laboratory, Charlotte, North Carolina, began taking individual pictures for the 1945-1946 Virginian. "Students are urged," said Lillian Elliott, editor, "to be on time for their appointments and not to wear lipstick or a checked or plaid suit.

Subscriptions are now being taken for the annual. The price of the padded cover annual is $4.50, all of which must be paid when the annual is ordered. Annuals with plain covers are $4.00, paying $1.00 down when the subscription is taken and the remainder when the annuals are distributed in the spring. Orders may be placed with any member of the Virginian staff.

Altice Selected Historian of Class

At the senior class meeting of September 27, Mildred Altice, Rocky Mount, was elected class historian.

Mildred has been active in extra-curricular activities of the college as a member of Beorc Eh Thorn, Pi Gamma Mu, the Debate Club, and as columnist for the Rotunda.

At the same time, Frances Lee, Margaret Orange, Lucie McKenry, Glenn Ann Patterson, and Catherine Lynch were elected as senior chaperones.

Dr. Noble Dedicates Hymn To Farmville

Announcement was made on the campus this week that "Morning Hymn" has been dedicated to the director and choir of the Farmville State Teachers College by Dr. T. Tertius Noble. This number will be sung by the choral groups on campus at the annual concert in the spring.

A famous composer, director, and organist, Dr. Noble conducted the spring concert on the campus last spring and conducted the major oratorio, Brahm's Requiem in the spring of 1944.

Alfred Orda, Polish baritone, who will appear in the lyceum tomorrow night.

Moss Is Member Of Student Council

Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss was elected faculty member of the Student Council at the student body meeting which was held last Wednesday night in the auditorium.

This election took place following the adoption of the amendment "That there be a faculty member of the student government council. This member shall serve for one year and shall be subject to reappointment. He is to attend student council meetings, except when girls are before the council, and is to give advice when advice is needed."

Mr. Moss recevied his A. B. degree from Washington and Lee University and his M. A. and Ph. D. degrees from Yale. He is at present a member of the history department.

Monthly News Letter Recognizes County Nutritional Work

The September Nutrition News Letter published monthly by the Department of Agriculture gives the Prince Edward Nutrition Committee report of the work done with the industrial groups in the town of Farmville.

Virginia — During the spring months, the Prince Edward County Nutrition Committee conducted a program of nutrition education for industrial workers. Arrangements were made with three industries; a shoe factory, a garment factory, and a laundry. None of these plants had any type of in-plant feeding. Most of the employees are married women, some of whom live in Farmville and some commute 20 or 30 miles. Some of them eat their noonday meal at nearby restaurants but many of them brinr a packed lunch from home. The managers of the industries were interested enough in the proposal of the committee to allow time for nutrition talks and demonstrations.

Senior home economics students under the direction of the foods teacher at Farmville State Teachers College planned and gave this series of talks and demonstrations. These included discussions of the "Basic 7", demonstration of ways in which both points and money might be saved without lessening food value, and the importance of growing a year-round garden and conserving for future use any surpluses of these gardens. These

Pianist, Baritone Will Be Presented

Presented as first in an Artists Series, Balbina Brainina, Russian pianist, and Alfred Orda, baritone, will appear on this campus Thursday night, October 4, in the auditorium at 8 o'clock.

Balbina Brainina was born in Russia and completed her musical education at the Moscow Conservatory under Professor Carl Kipp. After the death of her parents in Moscow, she went to Bordeaux. When the Germans refused to let her leave occupied France, she escaped and made her way to North Africa where she met the representative of the Portuguese shipping firm. She discoverd that he liked Chopin and she agreed to play for him if he would grant her pass to Lisbon. He fulfilled her request the next day.

Plays for Paderewski

Once when she played in Switzerland for Paderewski, he was so deeply impressed by her talent that he asked her to play the whole repertoire for him.

Miss Brainina will arrive in Farmville at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening.

When Alfred Orda made his debut, it was not before a small unmusical audience, but across the full majesty of the Warsaw Opera stage. The directors of the Opera first hearing the vividly rich tone of this Slavonic voice, when Orda was twenty-one, decided that he had all the things necessary to make a great star.

Polish Sponsor Training

This important beginning brought him to the attention of the Polish government which soon afterward sponsored his vocal training in Italy.

After one year's study, Alfredo Cecchi sent him to Vienna to take part in the "International Singer's Competition." Cecchi's faith in his pupil's voice was rewarded when Orda competing with five hundred singers, won the Grand Prize. He returned to Alfredo Cecchi for four more years of study in spite of an offer by the Vienna State Academy.

Service In War

Early in the war, serving as a Polish aviator, he was wounded and escaped to England. After his recovery there, he made a series of about one hundred and fifty concerts in London, Edinburgh, Manchester, and Liverpool. He had leading roles with the Carl Rosa Opera Company on tour.

Before coming to the United States in the spring of 1945, Alfred Orda was in Canada for several months, singing in Montreal in recital and on national radio programs. He has been singing recently with the Chicago Opera Company.

Mr. Orda arrived on this campus at 1:30 Tuesday afternoon.

Newest Classrooms Cause Confusion

Newspapers are sticklers for facts. News articles are checked and rechecked for mistakes in information or spelling or direct quotation. A news article never makes a statement without attributing it to an accredited individual.

In short, the newspaper looks out for its own neck.

But when it comes to features, by gum, the old feature staff can really cut loose on its own hook and say what it pleases about anything it pleases as long as it doesn't step on too many toes and stays within a mild area of reason . . . and facts can give way to fantasies and We of the Featuristic Press can have a lot of fun.

That is fortunate. There's a new building on the S. T. C. campus, and with its notable nose for news ever on the alert, the Rotunda is far from ignoring the possibilities of a good story. But . . . as an old medical friend of ours once said, "We must have

Two girls pose in front of the newly constructed building on campus.

Hard Cold Facts!", particularly for a news story, and nowhere can we find the factual essentials that concern the new building. So the Ed-in-chief smiles fetchingly at the News Ed, and the News Ed acquires a knowing gleam in her eye, and the Buck marches on, right on down to the long - suffering Feature staff . . . and rumor upon rumor comes bouncing back to mind, there to join the jolliest of imaginations, whereupon with pride and lack of prejudice, we present to you The T-Building.

Perhaps first notice was made of the building when the actual process of construction began, way last year. But aside from rumor number one that it was to be a new business department, not much was said about the matter. The blow came this year when schedules were being filled out, and people began filling in room numbers for Business-ed, chemistry, etc., as "Room T-1, Room T-3", and so on. Then there came many confusing conclusions hastily drawn when upperclassmen flew in the general direction of the laundry or power-plant, with the amazing statement that they had to go to Tea. We love the extremes of Fate which caused one little Freshman to wander all over

YW Develops Spiritual Life

From year to year on our campus, girls have been given the oportunity to develop a well-rounded life through curricular and extra-curricular activities. There are classes through which one develops intellectually; social events through which one develops socially; sports through which one develops physically; and religious activities through which one develops spiritually. From time to time, editorials have appeared in this paper in which special emphasis was given to each of these aspects of the well-rounded life. In this writing, we shall attempt to bring to you some of the opportunities for the religious and spirtual life on our campus; it is most fitting that we do so at this time because this coming week end, the "Y" Cabinet is having a retreat at Longwood to formulate plans whereby each girl on this campus may come to know God better and to serve him more faithfully in these halls of learning.

"Christ, the Way, the Truth, the Life" has been selected as the theme for the "Y" program of the year. No more appropriate theme could be selected for us as college girls in a world such as we know.

"Men never find Thee by hate or unrighteousness, by fear, or by worldliness, never. Always if Thou art found at all, it is by love and duty always by confidence and consecration. And this is Jesus' way. This is the one true light. There can be no other. One Way there is, one Truth, one Life" Oswald W. S. McCall stated in his book, "The Hand of God."

We as students on a college campus will live our school days to the fullest only if we realize this fact and as we live accordingly. You elected the officers of the "Y", pledging them your support. They have worked and are still working that each of us may know and may realize in a more real and more vital way that Christ is the only Way, the only Truth, and the only Life. As you are an active participant of the activities on campus sponsored and promoted by the Young Women's Christian Association and as you become a vital part of the church of your choice in the college town, you will have a large part in raising the spiritual life on our campus.

The spitriual thermometer will rise or fall as each of us realizes the significance and the importance of the Y. W. C. A. motto for this year, "Christ, the Way, the Truth, the Life."

The Rotunda staff joins the student body in an expression of sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. A. Paul Davisson in their recent bereavement.

Honor Code Is Part of STC

This week the freshmen and transfers are signing the honor code. This is a good time not only to emphasize the importance of the honor code to the new girls, but also to call it to the attention of the old students.

The signing of the code should not mean your John Henry on some dotted line, but should have a deeper significance. It is impossible for us to say what the honor code should mean to you because it has a different meaning to every individual. We do say, "Think about the honor code and let it have a specific place in your life."

Here at State Teachers College, we don't have a student government that operates as a group of secret police. This leaves the honor code of our school and ourselves up to us. Every girl has a certain pride in herself and in her school; she has enough pride to want everyone to think the best of her and of her surroundings.

The honor code is not just a promise that we won't cheat or steal. Honor is involved in the smaller things as well as those that are of a more serious nature. Honor plays a large part in our school where we are living together with so many other girls. Eight hundred girls can not live together and be happy if the honor code doesn't mean something to them.

We are thankful that we are living in a country where honor means something. For years people have been living in countries where they were not trusted and where honor was not respected.

Remember, you can take away all of a man's earthly possessions, but you can never take away a man's honor. Let the honor code be a part of you.

Gleanings

As time passes, the headlines proclaiming battles won or lost, which were a symbol of the war years, become more and more only a memory. To be sure the principle news items are concerned with General MacArthur's actions toward stabilizing Japan's peacetime economy and the meeting of the "Big Five" Foreign Ministers in London. The old-fashioned American game of politics is getting increasingly more space in the newspapers. However, it appears that a great many politicians have forgotten that a genuine world revolution has occurred and are using the same old methods which are getting them nowhere rapidly.

The meeting of the Foreign Ministers reminds one of the little boy who started to solve each of his assigned problems in arithmetic and stopped working on each one at the appearance of the first difficulty. He concluded with little evidence to show his teacher that he had even worked. Perhaps that is a bit harsh, but it's difficult to keep faith and hope when the Foreign Ministers constantly dodge the touchy problems of Europe, particiularly those concerning the Balkans.

The strikes are not calculated to inspire hope, but, at least, in a few cases the representatives of both Labor and Management are persistent in their attempt to settle their differences for the mutual benefit of all interested.

General MacArthur has put 20 Japanese banks out of business. Strikes are still spreading over the country. It will take patience on the part of everyone to solve justly the problems of reconversion.

Bed-Check

Brickbats to sailors who — enroute to senior rec—always end up on first floor senior annex.

Some mighty potent friendships (?) can evolve from these summer beach parties, but Carmen Lowe can tell you all about that.

And perhaps you didn't know but Bobby Moore seems to have succumbed to Nancy Pitt's charms once more.

However, the crowning climax of the week end happened in junior building. There is not adequate space to relate the details, and the victims seem to make their mishaps quite a hilarious tale. It seems that Grace tried to knock the door down and only succeeded in knocking her pretty nose out of line. "Ting" knocked herself out cold when she tried to take her head through the ceiling. Our sympathies are with them.

Well, there comes that hall president again so guess it's time to bedcheck myself.

Bedcheck comes all too soon—Especially for one Barbara Lee Myers who kept hoping for rain all Sunday afternoon. And why not, she only wanted "Ray Baby" to get marooned here.

That was one happy scene on senior annex when Mary Walker Watts finally made her appearance. She is really the pride of the Senior class. Not to slight Joyce Cheatwood, who found her way back from R. M. W. C. It certainly was good to see her.

Breaking all traditions (of former years) Martha Wells did manage to stay at S. T. C. one week end. And who wouldn't if the one and only Tom Hardy came up!!

Then, there's Margaret McIntyre who seems to be involved in quite a complex situation. She is quite worried about the significance of Chanel.

If you happen to notice Alice and Doris haunting the post-office in the next few days, they're only trying to head off a certain package from New York. Now, now, girls—better watch that stuff!!!

Wildest week end of all was claimed by Nancy Whithead and Mary Jane King who took off for Chapel Hill.

Jackie and Kilby have been keeping the telephone hot between here and Portsmouth, but since there's nothing like seeing him (especially in civilian clothes, once more) she felt it necessary to hit the road again.

And who was that Giggy was proudly displaying in front of S. T. C. Sunday?

Then, there are Barbara Montgomery, and Ann Houser who can also be counted among the fortunate few.

Dressed fit to kill, spike heels and all, Nancy Dickerson was indeed a most impressive sight as she floated down to meet her date Sunday.

Know you must have heard about Jennie Sue's latest—Louis from Lynchburg!

In case you've been wondering, all the racket in junior building

Y News

Sunday, October 7, is world-wide Communion Sunday, the day when Christians all over the world observe the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Make a special effort to go to your church Sunday. It is a chance to have fellowship with Christians of other countries and other races around the world.

This week end the Y cabinet will go to Longwood for its fall Retreat.

Presbyterian students announce that a good time was had by all at their picnic Sunday night.

The Baptists announce that Sunday will also be "Join-the-Church Sunday" at their church.

The Methodists are having a special conference to plan the year's work this week end at Natural Bridge.

Episcopal students, don't forget that Sunday night meetings will be held in the Rectory rather than in the Y Lounge.

The theme for the week for Prayers is "Prayer." Tonight the topic will be "Prayer is Communion with God." Tomorrow night the topic will be "Hindrances and Difficulties of Prayer."

"Y" WEEK-ENDER

Question of the Week

Question: What Do You Think of S. T. C.?

Helen Owins: Nice place, only, the dear little chores!

Mary Lawless: Wonderful place, especially the friendly girls.

Lee Staples: Crazy about it so far, except there's no horseback riding.

Betty Jefferson: The buildings are beautiful, and the girls are so friendly.

Lucy Rives: I think I will love it when I get more adjusted.

Cathon Neal: I like it as much as could be expected, but I'd rather be at home.

Jeanne Ellett: It really is a swell place; I've had a grand time so far. The teachers and students have been very cooperative.

Phyllis Alley: It's swell—would like to see Roanoke real soon, tho.

Marjorie Miller: So far it's swell, and I'm beginning to love it!

Phyllis Fulcher: I like it better the longer I'm here. I guess in 10 years I won't be able to leave!

"Doofy" Ramage: More fun . . . especially after hours—food, lessons . . .

Anne Verser: Swell time when your roommate gets a box of eats from home.

Sara Rawles: I think S. T. C. is O. K. It's lots of fun—and lots of homework!

Alice Wilkins: I love it here at S. T. C.—but I would like to see the folks back home.

Jennie Lee Cross: The ants and I are having loads of fun. What they don't eat, I do.

Ethel Shockley: S. T. C. is a swell place to be, but "There's no place like home!"

Dot Pennington: There's no place like it!

Ann Amory: I like it fine, but I can't wait to catch that 1:23 train on Saurday!

Nancy Holton: S. T. C. is swell!

Arline Raney: All the girls are friendly, and that means so much.

Jean Craig: One swell time here. For the learning part, this is certainly the place for it.

Nancy Dickinson: It's so friendly—I felt "at home" right away.

High Stepping Freshmen Find True Meaning of Aching Back

What do you think of Farmville? Well of course we love it. Sure it's a swell school. Naturally we've got wonderful teachers and don't you think the buildings are perfectly beautiful? Perfect except for one thing—they've got steps. Not just a staircase, but a whole army of steps. Stairs that go almost anywhere—some that go up, others that go down—some do both. The type we shall attempt to discuss are the kind that go up and down. Of course it would be difficult to go up and down them at any time, in fact, we think it's difficult to go up them at any time, particularly if you happen to be blessed with one of those sweet little rooms on third floor main. Oh, my aching back, who invented steps anyhow?

It seems that steps are the most common method of ascending or descending. More recent devices for totin' lazy folkes around are the elevator and escalator, these inventions being practically unheard of around here. However, if you decide to arrive by trunk instead of on foot you may have been deposited on your floor by an elevator.

After stepping inside the front door of the Rotunda and stepping around getting registered, we were confronted with whole flights of stairs going up from the Rotunda. These beautiful old steps show the marks of time on their faces. Gee, golly, from the looks of the sagging in the middle of the stairs and there must have been some pretty hefty freshmen living in Main during the last few centuries. From all the food we hear they eat after lights out it's no wonder. Pardon us girls, we really think your figures are something to be talked about. But if they're not, never fear, after a few months of dashing up and down the 1,473 steps in S. T. C. you'll have an 18-inch waist or fallen arches, one.

It's silly, you know, to exert one's self any more than necessary so let's try to get around here without using the steps. Of course, we will have to room in the Rotunda as all of the regular rooms are reached by the inevitable staircase but that won't be as bad as climbing thru a window to get into the auditorium. Well now we didn't want to take a business course anyway after finding out about those cute little steps that go down to that department. But maybe we could go out for athletics. That is if we enter the gym Tarzan style. Whew! After that we're kinda' hungry so how 'bout the tea room! Oops, there are those steps again. Never mind we can still settle down with a good book and forget our stomachs, provided we don't have to get the book from the library. We haven't even seen the "rec" yet—not feeling able to make the steps. It's a good thing we're taking it easy so we won't have to go to the infirmary since we would undoubtedly have to use the stairs. And we just found out we can't be a

Tennis Tourney To Begin Friday

Beginning Wednesday of this week, there will be a poster on the bulletin board for the purpose of signing up for the singles tennis tournament which will begin Friday, October 5. Points toward the color cup will be given for the winner of the singles tournament. There will also be a doubles "get-together" tournament; however, no points will be given for the winner of this tournament.

Tennis classes will be held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoons at 2:50 o'clock. People interested in tennis can come out anytime during the day before and after the tennis classes to get in their practices.

Old Students Take Physical Checkups

The physical examinations for upperclasmen began this week The time is on Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday from 7:45 until 9:45.

This year the Personnel office expressed the desire to have the physical examinations for freshmen and new students completed by Tuesday, September 25. The examinations began Wednesday evening the 19th, and were completed ahead of schedule on Monday night the 24th.

All freshmen and transfer students, numbering approximately 350, were given a fairly complete examination. Dr. Moore, college physician, stated, "As a whole, the students that I have examined have been well up to, if not above, the average of any class I have yet examined."

A. A. Head Announces Schedule of Sports

There has been a change in the hockey schedule, Frances Lee, president of the A. A. has announced. Classes are scheduled to meet at 3:50 o'clock on Tuesday and Thursday and at 4:50 on Wednesday. Anyone may enter any of these classes for credit or for securing her eight required practices for a class team.

Archery classes are scheduled to meet at 1:50 Monday, Tuesday, and Friday; also at 2:50 on Friday.

Recreational swimming classes are being held on Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday nights at 9:00 o'clock. Every person is invited to come to the pool at any of these times.

BLANE and HARRISON

HOCKEY

Hello, Sports Fans, we are greeting you from the press box of good ole S. T. C. stadium once again. With eight practices to your advantage anyone is eligible to participate in the class games which will be played sometime during the quarter. You frosh have the chance to defeat the sophs and remove those rat caps sooner. Don't put off until next week what you can do this week. Hockey practices were started yesterday at 3:50 and will take place every Tuesday, and Thursday afternoons, and ready yourself for the great event that is full of thrills and an occasional spill, all in the game of fun, of course.

SWIMMING

There will be a recreational swimming period posted soon, and this is a sure way of refreshing yourself after an eventful day of classes. Maybe you don't consider yourself "a fish in water", but you can still come on down and enter the fun and dabble in the water. Under the watchful eyes of the life guards, there is no cause for fear.

TENNIS

The courts have been relined after the rains, and are in excellent condition. Wednesday night after dinner in Dr. Walmsley's class room, you will be given a chance to sign up for a doubles tournament! We want to stress the fact that all who are beginners should take this advantage and enter the tournament. This tournament will not give points for the color cup, but it is an excellent chance for you to find out how you may improve your game. It will give you good tournament experience preceding the singles tournament to be held in the near future. The latter tournament does give points toward the color cup.

So long, for now—let me remind you to get in the game.

the backyard of the Training school looking for the College Tea Room possibly at the same time that another one walked into Mrs. Tabb's domain, sniffed the delusious smell of coffee and peach pie, and asked bewilderedly, "Do you mean we have class in here?"

Now that the T-Building has become more familiarly acquainted with the student body, there are fewer mistakes . . but innumerable more speculations as to what the T stands for. It certainly isn't a tenement house, and we wouldn't even say it's temperamental. It could be a toll-house in one sense of the word, but 'twould most likely take its toll in terror and torment comes time for examinations. We need a new auditorium, but this 'un wouldn't do for a town hall and we can't even trace a tower toward which to tender our transient tributes. The unpretentious brick walls typify nothing discernible, and its position terminates nothing more than that. There isn't even anything to attract termites. And in passing, there's absolutely no earthly reason for calling it the "Tickle House" . . . but it has been tantalizingly termed just that!

Would that we could explain for you. The least we can do is describe it to those who have missed the temptation to tarry there . . . 'tis the tantamount of perfection! The windows are wide and clear. (We'll skip the view.) The blackboards are new and sufficient. (Well skip the purpose). And the classrooms are . . . well, we'll probably skip the classes, too.

Anyhow, we like it, and though one feels sort of in another world . . . possibly underground somewhere, and miles from civilization, while there, at least the cold gray walls offer little diversion from the subject at hand.

The T-building has become a part of S. T. C. We could call it the Training-building or blame the T on its tentative position. We could even get logical and disappoint you by alluding to the adult suggestion that its called the T-building because of possible future use a storage house for trunks . . . but not that! That could be a fact, and facts are not for feature writers! If you want the facts, talk turkey with the Ones Who Know but as for us, whether trunk room or tickle house, the news staff will think twice before turning the tables on us again.

Longwood Cabin Opens For Guests

The cabin at Longwood is open any week end for college groups only. Permission to use the Longwood cabin may be obtained from Miss Olive T. Iler, physical education instructor.

Any group desiring to use the cabin may sign up with Miss Iler for the week end it desires provided that week end is open. All groups must be chaperoned by a faculty members and each group is expected to leave the cabin clean and in neat order, ready for the next group.

demonstrations were supplemented by informational materials and recipes and by wall posters left in the plant.

In addition to interesting the workers in these plants the committee hopes that these will develop an interest in some type of in-plant food service.

This program has been a fine example of the strength of coordination and of carrying projected state plans to the local level.

Developing some type of nutrition education for industrial workers was one of the goals of Virginia's State committee. Its adaptation as part of Prince Edward County's plan was suggested by one of the field nutritionists of the State board of health when she visited and contacted the county nutrition committee. The chairman of the committee, who is a member of the county welfare board, worked with other members of the committee to devise a way to carry out such a plan. The home economics seniors in the local college were recognized as a valuable local resource and used to excellent advantage. During the conduct of this program the need for a projector to make better use of available visual material was realized. The local TB association is planning to secure a projector which the committee and its cooperating agencies will be able to use.

Miss Ruth Gleaves, Home Economics Teacher Training Supervisor of Farmville State Teachers College, assisted by Mrs. Jessie Griggs, Supervisor of Home Economics in the Farmville High School planned and arranged the talks and demonstrations for the industrial groups which were presented by S. T. C. home economics seniors.

Miss Katherine Watkins, a graduate of Farmville State Teachers College, and a member of the local Welfare Department, acted as chairman of the Nutrition Committee of Prince Edward County. The program is sponsored by the local Health Department with Miss Mamie Rice, County Health Nurse, serving as the sponsor; Miss Anne Burnett, County Home Demonstration agent is co-sponsor.

CAB'S CORNER

CAB OVERBEY

Wouldn't you like to know a little something about this column? (So would I). To begin with the contents will be composed of everything from zoup to nertz!

This will be my way of sharing with S. T. C. little excerpts from my private file box.

Each week its contents will be different, such as, the latest song hits, poetry, recipes, what's good in the classics and just a number of little silly things we all love—

This week, I'd like to pass on to you a few of my favorite selections from Ted Malone's album of American Poetry.

When You're Away

Each night I take your name and tuck it snugly around my heart, one syllable at a time
Then carefully I place your laugh and crooked grin and funny way of holding a cigarette at the foot of my bed, so that I can go to sleep looking at them in the dark.

Refuge

All day I go where people are
And there are tasks to do,
And watching me, the curious think
I have forgotten you.
Dear one, if they only could see my heart
So lonely and so wide,
They'd understand sometimes a crowd may be a place to hide.

Quotation of the week:

"If you blow your neighbors fire, don't complain if the sparks fly in your face.."

Skirts, Sweaters Hold First Place

By LELA BOULDIN

Hey! wake up, it's time to go to class. Next comes that age-old question, "What shall I wear?" Well, S. T. C.'ers have decided that sweaters and skirts are the never ending fad at S. T. C. The campus fairly blooms with sweaters and skirts of all shades and hues. The sweaters are long, roomy, and preferably nubby. The skirts are pleated, of course, either all the way around or with boxy pleats in front and back.

Now, classes are over, and the girls go trooping back to their rooms. If you look in on one of the girls at S. T. C., you'll find her clad in blue jeans and a loud plaid shirt. Some, you'll find are wearing brother's cast off white shirt and an old pair of sport pants or even some are wearing T-shirts and shorts, preferably white. With the freshman class of 45 has come a new fad to S. T. C.—blue jeans cut off just below the knees with a fringe around the bottom—western style.

That trip downtown just must be made, regardless of the rain so from the halls of S. T. C. pour girls clad in trench coats with kerchiefs topped by jeep hats and rubber boots to keep their "tootsies" dry.

When bedcheck comes, you'll find them dressed in brother's pajamas and their hair up in rags or socks. History repeats itself for some of the girls are even wearing nigthshirts. Cute scuffs are easy to slip on as they drop in for a last minute chat with a next door neighbor. As the hall president makes her nightly round we say good night to the model S. T. C. girl.

junior or a senior in Cunningham speciality.

Come to think of it it might be a better idea to give up this thing and learn to shake a leg up a few stairs. The best way of course is to stand at the bottom, sling your books to the top and leap up after them six steps at a time. And everybody knows the best way to come down—By the way—remind me to see the House Council about putting pillows at the foot of each bannister!!!

"Home Sweet Home, There is no place like home." It doesn't take long for ears to burn with these chimes. They don't give school half a chance. One week of excitement and sleepless dorm life, then homeward bound these girls are.

Making their debut in Roanoke were Jean Parter Bell, Betty June Brockway, Rachel Brough, Barbara Boyle, Nancy Holton, Helen Jackson, and Dot Pennington.

Throwing rice (had to use rice crispes) in Boydton at the Thompson-Burger wedding were Anne Homes, Mable Park, Minnie Lee Crumpler, Lillian Elliott, Eleanor Bisese, Shirley Cruser, Jackie Pardon, Sue Hundly, and Miss Garnett.

Up and down hills, around curves to Charlottesville were Shirley Irving, Martha Ashby, Anne Barksdale, Dot Cummings, and Yours truly.

Around the East Corner in Blackstone were Pauline Carter, Francis DeBerry, Marian Gunn, and Lottie Hammock. Around the West corner in Appomattox were Betsey Higginbotham and Mary Jennings.

Eating "Mom's" fried chicken in Lynchburg were Anne Ford, Shirley Slaughter, Virginia Hollifield, and Constance Loving. Making a good dine in "Mom's" ration points in Emporia were Margaret Fleming, Elizabeth Harrell, and Frances Livesay.

South Hill was all aglow with Margaret Hendrick, Jane Paulette, Ida Allen, Jacqueline Bobbitt, Carolyn Bobbitt and Jane Guthrie.

Classes Select Stunt Directors

Students Named To Head Booths

Regina Portinarro, senior from Newport News; Margaret Walton Wilkinson, junior from Martinsville; Mary Rattray, sophomore from Long Island; and Jane Tayor, freshman from Pungoteague, have been elected to direct the class stunts which will be part of the circus on November 10. The circus, which is sponsored by Alpha Kappa Gamma, will begin with a parade through the streets of Farmvile on Saturday afternoon and will be climaxed on Saturday night in the college gymnasium at which time, the class stunts, ringmaster, and court will be presented.

Ann Summers, senior from Hampden-Sydney; Carmen Low, junior from Hopewell; Beatrice Geyer, sophomore from Chatham; and Martha Gilliam, freshman from Charlottesville, were elected as circus booth heads from the respective classes.

The freshmen class also elected assistant stunt heads and assistant booth heads for the circus. Those elected to help in planning the stunt are Anne Gallaway, Virginia Walsh, and Dolly Ann Freeman. Betty Spindler, Margie Miller, and Dorothy Ramage were selected as assistants to Martha Gilliam, chairman of the booth.

Frances Lee, senior from Richmond and president of the Athletic Association, is chairman of the circus.

STC'ers Entertain At Camp Pickett

Saturday, October 6, a group of 30 girls left at 6:30 o'clock to entertain the boys at the service club of Camp Pickett and 30 girls left for the U. S. O. in Blackstone.

Activities for the evening consisted of dancing, playing games, and talking with the boys.

The U. S. O., with Beverly Peebles as head, has sponsored frequent trips to Camp Pickett, and each time the girls are received enthusiastically.

Miss Leola Wheeler and Miss Alpha Lee Garnett chaperoned the girls.

Girls Issued Bids To Cotillion Club

Roanoke Orchestra To Play for Dance

According to an announcement made by Anne Summers, president, twenty new members were taken into the Cotillion Club on Friday, October 5.

They are Betty Adams, Ann Baer, Jean Bentley, Anna Lee Bianton, Louise Blane, Lois Boone, Betty Bowles, Lucy Bralley, Mary Morton Fontaine, Betty Gillespie, Anna Headlee, Doris May, Jane Paulette, Doris Rose Ramsey, Clie Sarver, Hildrian Suttle, Virginia Tindall, Lucile Upshur, Tucker Winn, and Hope Worsham.

Invitations for all new members will be in the form of the traditional "Goat Week" in the spring.

The first dance of the year will be held October 27 in the College gymnasium with Jimmy St. Clair and his orchstra from Roanoke playing for the occasion.

This is a re-appearance at S. T. C. for Mr. St. Clair, since he played for the Mardi Gras Dance of last year.

Peggy T. Ross heads the music committee. Assisting her are Barbara Lee Meyers, Emily Carper and Betty Brothers. Carmen Low, chairman of the decoration committee, is assisted by Glenn Ann Patterson.

Each member is allowed to invite one new girl in school to the fall Cotillion.

Grainger To Head State Committee

In order to consider the possibility of starting a search for teaching talent similar to the National Science Talent Search which has been carried on for several years in America, a committee was appointed at the conference on college offering held at Blacksburg from August 22 to 29. James M. Grainger, head of the English Department, was named as chairman of this committee.

According to an announcement made recently by Mr. Grainger, the first meeting of this committee will be held in Richmond the end of this week.

Attending the conference were representatives from all of the state supported institutions of higher education, Farmville State Teachers College, University of Virginia, Medical College of Virginia, William and Mary, Madison, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Virginia Military Institute, Mary Washington, and Radford as well as representatives from the State Department of Education.

The conference, which included studies on curricular, extra-curricular activities, guidance, and long and short courses, was attended by four members of the local faculty, M. Boyd Coyner, professor of education; James M. Grainger, professor of English; S. M. Holton, associate professor of education and director of personnel; and Dr. J. P. Wynne, professor of education and philosophy and director of teacher training education.

Head Hostess Names Assistant Monitors

Anna Headlee of Norfolk and Mary Wyatt of South Boston have been appointed as the new dining hall monitors for the coming year, Betty Adams, head dining room hostess, announced last week.

Girls have been asked not to wear scarfs in the dining hall. It will be one of the main duties of the monitors to see that this order is carried out properly. Their other duties will be to see that the two side doors are kept locked and that there is no talking during the reading of announcements or during the blessings. Both girls are authorized to give "call-downs" in case any disorder arises.

Navy V-12 Boys Leave Next Week

Advance in rank to that of lieutenant - commander was presented to George F. Howe, USNR, commanding officer of the Navy V-12 unit at Hampden-Sydney College, on the eve of the navy's discontinuance of the local officer candidate training unit.

Com. Howe will be here through October, at which time the Hampden-Sydney unit will be officially decommissioned, and all personnel and ship's company transferred to various other navy centers.

Dr. J. B. Anderson, lieutenant, USNR, who like Com. Howe, has been here since July 1943 when the local navy unit was inaugurated, will be transferred to Norfolk navy separation center the first of November. He and Howe are the only V-12 officers in the Fifth Naval District who have served continuously in the same unit. Dr. Anderson, prior to induction, practiced medicine in Asheville, N. C. Com. Howe was a member

College Students Held Spellbound By First Glamorous Lyceum Artists

By MARGARET E. WILSON

Up until last Thursday night "Lyceum" was just another big new word, like "matriculate" for the freshmen to learn. They were, however, introduced to our artist series at its best and we're off to a promising start.

There's nothing like a bit of glamour to help the arts along, and glamour we had plenty of. In the first place, it is not in the constitution of any American girl to resist a blond Polish baritone who also boasts an accent. Just how much those things had to do with the almost capacity audience is not for us to say. It was not, however, the baritone's oomph—which kept the audience enthusiastic, and brought him back for three encores—or as many as he would take. It was a really good voice—he wants to sing in opera.

Miss Brainina, whose reluctant speech in chapel and intriguing past combined to build up a lot of interest in the concert, triumphed over a slightly unsteady seat to give a "you-could-hear-a-pin-drop" performance. She's played for Paderewski, but we'll bet she didn't play any better.

Well, they wanted to concentrate on Alfred Orda, so we went to see the S. T .C. gal (she craves anonymity) who could tell us most about him. To begin with the pleasant side of things, he thinks American girls are "charming," likes Farmville, and wants to come back. He also admires Bette Davis, and enjoyed "The Corn is Green" even if some of it required a little translation—especially the Cockney. But — and here's the rub,—he is adamant in insisting that Sinatra can't sing!

He offered one helpful suggestion—take it for what its worth, but don't say we told you. "These bed-check—why you don't paint black you doors? In college we did so." And so it seems, there is nothing new under the sun.

Now, about the dining hall. In the words of our distinguished guest, "The girls—they make noise like bee-hives." (Nothing like getting in a plug for order when the opportunity presents itself. And subtle too, wasn't it?)

We also learned that Mr. Orda has made a habit of consuming a steak—the bigger the better—before every concert. The idea, he explained, is to supply energy for those gusty "I Love Life's" and "Scottish Marching songs." But where could he have found anything like that? He must have gotten all that vim and vigor from someplace. But what we really want to know is WHO or WHAT was on that front row!

Speaker Will Hold Open Association

"Personality Plus" Is Theme of Talk

Dr. Samuel T. Habel, minister of the West End Baptist church, Suffolk, will speak at chapel service on Wednesday, October 17, and at the Y. W. C. A. open association meeting at 4:30 that afternoon. He will have as his topic, "Personality Plus."

Native of Virginia

A native of Virginia, Dr. Habel received his Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Richmond, Richmond, his Master of Theology, from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Kentucky, and his Doctor of Philisophy from the University of Edinburgh, Edinburgh, Scotland. He attended graduate lectures at La Sorbonne, University of Paris and special lectures at Faculte Libre de Theologic Protestante de Paris, Paris.

Served In N. C.

After serving two pastorates in North Carolina, he accepted in 1940 the ministry of the West End Baptist Church in Suffolk.

Dr. Habel will be introduced to students during the chapel service by Margie Hewlett, chairman of the public affairs committee of the "Y."

Methodist Retreat Held Last Week-End

The annual Fall Retreat of the Methodist Student Movement in Virginia was held Saturday and Sunday at Hotel Natural Bridge, Natural Bridge. Plans for a new school year were made and a state program was formulated.

Among the speakers were representatives of the World Student Services Fund, which is attempting to raise $1,000,000 this year for relief of college students abroad. Dr. Henry Lee Robinson, executive secretary of the Virginia Council of churches, explained the program of this recently formed organization. Dr. C. Fred Williams, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Charlottesville, spoke on the subject, "Does Your Religion Keep Up With Your Living?"

Larry Eisenberg, a recreation specialist from the General Board of Education of the Methodist Church, Nashville, Tennessee, had charge of the recreational features.

A special communion service was held Sunday under the bridge as that day was designated as World Communion Sunday.

Delegates from the Farmville Methodist Church were Miss Frances Currin, student secretary, Ann Savage, Gladys Lankford, Jackie Hancock, and Ann Buck. Virginia Lee Price is one of the three vice-presidents of the Virginia Methodist Student Movement.

Honorary Society Postpones Meeting

The first meeting of Alpha Phi Sigma, which was scheduled for last Friday night, will be held at a later date, Virginia Tindall, president, has announced.

Alpha Phi Sigma is an honorary fraternity on the campus for freshmen and sophomores with high academic rating.

Excited, Smiling STC Girls Have Pictures Taken in Rec

"Lives of great men remind us we should have our pictures took, and departing leave behind us just exactly how we look.'"

So that's why everyone from Sally Senior to Fanny Freshman put on her best bib and tucker, or skirt and sweater, and tripped down to the "rec"! Must be that everyone here wants her picture in the "Virginian" so she can "departing leave behind her" a glamorous picture in the book. (The author is a passionate lover of Longfellow. Tho' she turns him over in his grave constantly with her paraphrases!)

When we first noticed the steady stream of dolled-up darlings we thought there must have been a MAN down in the rec. Sure enough, there was—a photographer. What a man he must be to coax enticing smiles from each!

Now that this business is over, the majority of us are waiting eagerly for the results. If the results are as horrible as each one declares hers personally will be, I dread the day they arrive. The secret of it all lies in whether you're flattered or not; if you are, the picture is good, if you aren't, you send it to the third-best boy friend in hopes he'll change his mind.

Frankly a few of us up on second floor have stiff faces this morning. Hours we spent in front of the mirror practicing enchtaning smiles, angelic looks, and come-hither glances. Naturally we forgot them in front of the camera.

Such complaints were heard as "My hair looks like a fodder stack", and "I've got mail bags under my eyes." All that self-condemnation couldn't be justified; hence, we consulted the photographer and he pronounced the entire group to be wonderful.

And so they came from Sally Senior to Fanny Freshman, one and all, to pose before shining lights, just hoping for the best. To paraphrase again — this time, Masefield, "'Tis a great life and an interesting life that cannot be denied."

Freshmen Must Meet Series Of Important Adjustments

A person entering a new environment can be compared to any animal out of its accustomed element. The fish left on the sand will struggle and gasp. If it is not returned to its natural elements it will fail to adjust itself to the new conditions and will perish. The reaction is similar though not so fatal to a human finding himself in new surroundings, among new people, in a new way of living. He will struggle, perhaps momentarily founder, lose his poise, his sense of self-confidence and assurance. His continued stay in the foreign element will find him becoming increasingly acclimated until he eventually accustoms himself to his new surroundings. With growing success in the new element, he will find his old self-assurance returning and will find even that it has increased.

Our freshmen are just at the beginning of the long trail and are experiencing that sense of maladjustment. There are those among them who will waver and find adjustment severe. There are others who will acclimate themselves and becom outstanding in our college community. They will gain confidence in themselves, confidence that will help them not only now, but when they go from these halls of learning to meet the realities of life. Entering college will not be the only change in environment that they will meet. It will be, perhaps, the first in a series of many adjustments which will be necessary if one is to become a vital part of the world in which we find ourselves.

Returning veterans will assume the leadership in universities for the next five to eight years, stated Dean Harry G. Carlson recently.

Declaring that more maturity is needed among university students if high standards are to be maintained, Dean Carlson said, "the veterans will lead, not because of advanced age, but because their war experience has matured them especially in terms of proper values."—ACP.

Congratulations Go To STC Girls on Lyceum Attendance

The student body is to be congratulated on the excellent attendance at the lyceum program last Thursday night. Perhaps we are becoming more aware of the value of these cultural programs as a part of our college life. Not only should the attendance be noted but also the interest of the students during the evening. These programs are arranged and brought to our campus for us that we may have unusual opportunities while still in college to develop a well-rounded personality through the medium of classical music.

As one listens to the instrumental music of Mozart, Chopin, and Liszt and to the vocal numbers of Leoncavallo, Bracco, Roger Quilter, and others, she is becoming a part of the classical and cultural world. Her outlook on life is broadened, her ideas and attitudes change, and she becomes a different person from what she was. This music becomes a part of her, thus changing her and in turn, her emotions, feelings, and thoughts.

We are grateful for the opportunities that we have of attending concerts, operas, and stage plays in large cities. We feel that because they are expensive, they are well worth our time and money. Yet perhaps at times we fail to realize that these lyceum programs on our campus cost also. Of course, if one even thinks, she would immediately recognize the fact that such talent could not be secured without time, cost and considerable thought.

If we accept our programs enthusiastically, graciously, and cordially, then perhaps we could have even more chances for cultural programs such as the one presented to a large audience on last Thursday night. Congratulations, students, for showing your interest in the things that stand as cultural and classical in our complex society of today.

General MacArthur took more steps this past week toward reducing Japan's wartime business by taking over all Japanese chemical works. The State Department announced also that Shintoism will no longer be a state religion; however, of course, any individual Japanese may adhere to it. The pattern for Japan's reconstruction unfolds itself gradually, and the more apparent it becomes the better it looks.

The conference of Foreign Ministers ended is a stalemate this week with Russia opposing the United States and Great Britain in many things. However, since this conference has taken place, it should be easier to find a solution to a great many of the world problems. This is true because it revealed the existing differences between the "Great Powers" which are as important to know as their agreements as both compose the whole. A puzzle cannot be solved when only a half of it is at hand. The same is true in settling international problems. Soviet Russia and the United States are meeting difficulty in Korea in their attempt to agree upon the method of occupation and of civil government.

400,000 laborers have been on strike this week. 150,000 of these are soft coal miners which has brought John L. Lewis into the limelight again. Apparently he still has his own ideas.

Two facts are interesting to observe in the news. The first is that there is no party line on foreign relations and the second is that next month there will be a trial of 24 Germans for aggressive warfare. These may be new trends in American politics and in law.

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

Did you see the warm reception John received in the Rotunda Sunday? Say, why don't you girls give Elizabeth Harrell a chance?

Evelyn Grizzard seems to agree that variety is the spice of life.

And how about that big trip of Betty Cock's? She went all the way to Washington to see her one and only.

Wings are really sprouting these days. Especially on one Betty Scroggins who has been soaring at a terrific altitude for the past week.

Second floor junior building is the main thoroughfare on week ends--or so it seems anyway. Of course, it must be mighty nice to have your own private porter escort you bag and baggage to your room.

Oh, yes, from all rumors there seems to be a romance blossoming in our midst. Pasty Dale and Jimmy are getting to be quite the two-some.

And Carmen was bubbling over with that big week-end in Lynchburg. She got a ride back with five men! (Maybe she caused the manpower shortage.)

Have you noticed that certain freshman who has been glowing like a neon sign? Well who could blame Evelyn? After all she saw the Jimmy for three and one-half days.

Page seems to find it necessary to make those trips up North more and more frequently. We all know she's mighty interested in football and Lou Baker must have caught the germ too.

Not to be overlooked is that pretty ring Tom brought Barbara all the way from India. This affair must be more serious than we thought at first.

Tears were dime a dozen last week end when Peepsie, Hacky, and Marliyn came back for forty-eight glorious hours. Mary Watkins came straggling in finally on Sunday night. For the benefit of those interested, she was probably still combing her hair when the bus pulled out.

It is rumored on campus that Millie is expecting a ring that sparkles from Jimmy.

Ask Martha Frances if she had a good time in Lynchburg on Saturday with Bert at the game. How these S. T. C.'ers get around!

Until next week's bedcheck, I'll say so long and be good.

Y News

By MINNIE LEE CRUMPLER

The freshman class will be installed into the Y. W. C. A. in a beautiful service held at Prayers on Thursday night. At this time the freshmen, wearing white, will become a part of a great organization and will take for themselves the national purpose to seek, to understand, and to follow Him.

This past week-end, Longwood was the scene of a great deal of planning when the Y Cabinet held its annual retreat to plan the year's program for the Y. The theme for the year, "Christ, the Way, the Truth, and the Life", was presented and the program and new projects were discussed. Under the year's theme, our center of interest for the Y. W. C. A., is "Christian Faith" which permeates and transforms all aspects of personal, campus, and community life. Around this center of "Christian Faith" the Y program is divided into the "Christian Heritage," "Growth of Persons", "Social Responsibility," and "World Relatedness."

Wednesday afternoon, October 17, at 4:30 in the Student Lounge, Dr. Samuel T. Habel will speak at the first Association meeting on the subject "Personality Plus". Each student at Farmville is a member of the Y. W. and so should take advantage of the opportunity that is given her to hear the speakers brought to our campus by the Y. W. C. A.

YOUR CHURCH AND MINE

You go to your church, and I'll go to mine,
But let's walk along together;
Our heavenly Father is the same,
So let's walk along together.
The chimes of your church ring loud and clear,
They chime with the chimes of my church;

TENNIS TOURNEY

Question of the Week

What was the most exciting thing that ever happened to you and why?

Sue McCorkle: That day at Natural Bridge. Pretty bridge.

Bobbie Graham: The first time I saw my little brother make a touchdown. Why? Family pride.

Chris Shifflet: When I learned to read the funny papers and didn't have to talk Daddy into it every Sunday morning.

Ann Hauser: The beach this summer! Gosh, what a life!

Pat Carter: A letter today! He's coming home!

Eloise Stancell: A-1 Christmas in Richmond. I'd rather not say why.

Ann Shufflebarger: The day I hit S. T. C. for the first time—rain 'n all. I'll never know why.

Hilda Bennett: The day I moved in a suite in junior building after waiting for two long years.

Edith Culbert: Can't say now. I'll tell you after I take my cuts.

Mary Lou Jordan: Day in Washington and the ride home with some certain person.

Betty Tilson: Wait till my 18th birthday in February. I'll tell you or rather show you then.

Suzanne Steele: My very first cruise in a sailboat. Why? Because I helped turn it over.

"Mole" Mason: January of 1944 when Dave came home after two years. Oh, gee!

Anna Kucera: That week in Washington. Why??

Dot Turley: Blind date! It turned out to be W. L.

Martha East: Life in general. Never a dull moment!

Margaret Nevins: Virginia Beach! I love those sailors!

Rosie Ramsey: Any time at Virginia Beach! Love that place!

Gooney Boone: The time I moved to Carrsville. That speaks for itself. Ugh!

Ann Carter: The day little "Luke" came back from overseas! Well, "ain't" that enough?

Jean Watts: Friday before last when "Fix" came to me just after he'd called and said he could not come.

Helen McBride: Coming to S. T. C. and seeing all the men. (Joke)

Mary Young: I can't think of anything that has happened but something exciting is going to happen—soon, I hope.

Lou Ann Mears: Meeting two cute V. P. I. cadets from Portsmouth) in the Rotunda.

Edna Earle Waters: To find out that Joe is going to be home for Thanksgiving. (If I don't get to go home, I'll die!)

Elaine Holder: Erick's coming to see me and the prospect of his getting a thirty day leave Christmas.

Cab's Corner

By CAB OVERBEY

This week I would like to talk a little about Frederic Chopin, pronounced (Show-pan).

I guess you could call the Polish composer "the Poet of the Piano." A frail and sickly genius who did far more than write perfect piano music, Chopin alone knew how to make a piano sing.

Did you see "A Song to Remember"? That picture should be enough to make you like him. In this picture, he played his famous "Polonaise in A flat." Even on the campus of S. T. C. you hear little snatches here and there from the "Polonaise"—and of course the well known "Till the End of Time" taken from the beatiful piece. Therefore, some of you might see the closeness of the "popular" to the beautiful "classic."

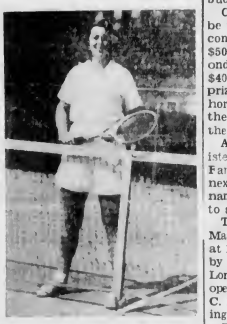
It is not really necessary to draw a line between the "popular" and the "classic"—and those who have heard enough of all kinds of music can quickly get rid of the habit. Listening to music is fun in any case as long as it is not a performance of a duty. Don't try to analyze your reactions, and do not worry about the sneers of the highbrows. You are getting fun out of music. That is the main thing.

Occasionally, you will run into people who like to do nothing but listen to music. They do not attempt to take part in it. Why do they sit in a comfortable coma around the piano and listen? Because they just plain love it! Maybe they don't know who's opus 6 7-8's it is or the key signatures, but they simply sigh and say, "I don't what it is, but I love it." Why not ask the musician who is performing, most of them, if they know themselves, adore letting you know the answer.

I'm going to list several selections from Chopin that I think you should get familiar with to make a good start to learn to get the most out of music from Chopin.

1. Chopin's Nocturnes.
2. Chopin's Polonaise in A flat
3. Chopin's Waltzs.
4. Chopin's Military Polonaise.

Quotation of the week:



Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime
And departing leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

Tennis Singles Tournament To Begin Friday, October 12

Students Urged To Participate

On Friday, October 12, the annual tennis singles tournament will begin on this campus. Two out of three sets will be played in each match.

The rules for the tournament are that regulation tennis shoes and dress must be worn on the courts. The deadline for signing up on the A. A bulletin board is Thursday, October 11, at 6 o'clock.

Phyllis Watts, manager of tennis.

The winners of the semi-finals and finals will be announced in the dining room at the end of the tourney.

Phyllis Watts, tennis manager, urges all students interested in tennis and who can play at all to participate.

Ellett, Yonce Named To Council of A. A.

Two new members of the Athletic Association have been chosen to succeed two members of the Council who did not return to school this year, Frances Lee, president of the A. A. reports. They are Margaret Ellett, assistant hockey manager, who will succeed Judy Connelly, and Virginia Yonce, swimming manager, who will succeed Kitty Kearsley.

Officers of the Athletic Association are Frances Lee, president; Margaret Orange, vice-president; Betty Parrish, secretary; and Kitty Sue Bridgeforth, treasurer.

Tournament Features Good Horses, Riders, Costume Color, Music

Southside Virginia's best steeds and horsemen will take part in the Lions-sponsored tournament at Longwood, October 12, when Dr. E. G. Gammon, president of Hampden-Sydney College, will deliver the charge to the knights. The coronation address at the court ball that evening in Farmville Armory, will be delivered by Judge Joel W. Flood.

Cash prizes totaling $160 will be presented at conclusion of the contests. Starting with a top $50 award, these will include second, third and fourth prizes of $40, $30 and $20. Also four $5 prizes are offered for the fastest horse and best looking horse, for the best dressed knight and for the best rider.

All knights are expected to register at the Middle Warehouse in Farmville not later than noon of next Friday, the day of the tournament. All knights are expected to appear in appropriate costume.

The parade, led by Chief Marshall J. W. Garnett, will start at 1 o'clock, and after the address by Dr. Gammon, which will be at Longwood, riding is scheduled to open at 1:45. A 40 piece Charlotte C. H. school band, will play during the parade and at Longwood.

The coronation ball, for which the Chase City orchestra will furnish music, is set for 8:30 p. m.

In addition to Mr Garnett, marshalls will be F. H. Hanbury and F. G. Baldwin.

of the faculty at Connecticutt State College, New Britian, Conn., before entering service in April 1943. He attended indoctrination school in New York.

Fully organized by July 4, 1943, the Hampden-Sydney V-12 at that time had its peak enrollment, 246 sailor students. This registration continued for three semesters, but has been gradually reduced since that time, only 104 navy boys now being at the college. Studies pursued by them included engineering drawing, naval history, and naval organization, leading to further work in midshipman's school and medical school.

The V-12 trainees will complete class work and be given leave on October 19. Future assignments for them have not been announced.

LEFT LEAD

Greetings and then some! Are we glad to be back. . . ? So glad and so full of news and plans that we'll prob'ly be all week telling you everything. . . and yet, when you get right down to the bare facts, there's not a whole lot to tell after all.

To begin with, 'taint definite yet, but. . . cross your fingers. . . hold your breath. . . we're almost sure we're gonna have ridin' after all! Wunnerful, huh? We think so too. We've been fenced in just about long enough, and this weather just dares you to stay inside when the red leaves are falling over the trails, and the zip in the air puts a kick in your heels: Dig out your blue jeans and dust off your boots. . . and get your singin' voice in order. We're off!!

HOW'S THIS

As things stand now, here's the general idea: The stables will be the same, and in charge of the horses will be Mr. Hugh Wells and Mr. "Bobo" Cralle, Instructor will be Jeanne Souerwein, president of Pigasus, and there will be afternoon classes each afternoon, one hour and 45 minutes each. Saturday morning will be reserved for the town kids, and possibilities lie there for a Junior Riding Club. Saturday and Sunday afternoons will probably be set aside for trail rides, although there may be classes on Saturdays. Dr. Jarman has asked that each girl have her written permission from home before riding, so if you have signed up, or plan to ride at all, better write home tonight! Yup, possibly by the first of next week, things will be hummin'... and hoofs will be beatin' it out down the trail to Longwood. With 80 gals signed for riding, something had to be done but quick, and our many, many thanks to all those who helped make even our tentative plans look hopeful.

ROSY FUTURE

Speaking of tentative plans, save your Saturdays. We hope to do some personal repair work on the stables . . . including standing-stalls in a row across, doing away with some of the partitions (and most of the confusion) inside. It'll be simple work, and up to us if it gets done. There've even been some tricky ideas of decoration, including a nameplate above each stall, and the re-decorating of the little club house. We're sure the Madame will understand if we make new curtains.

In fact, were so optimistic and so full of plans, we remind us of the little poem which Ted Malone collected . . . Marjory Smith wrote it; we pass it on to you to see if you can understand how we feel about it:

THE SMALLEST HORSE

The smallest horse on the merry go-round,
The spotted one with the twinkling eye
And the golden mane, who stamps his hoof
And winks at me as he goes by . .
I've chosen him for my very own.
He belongs to me. I've named him Spy.
The smallest horse on the merry-go-round
The one with the saddle red and wide . . .
We have a secret that no one knows;
Here's why he prances, full of

LOUISE BLANE'S

On the Ball

Greetings sports fans! Another week has rolled by, and we find our athletics coming along simply great. The tennis tournament is the top ranking interest in the sports world at S. T .C. this week. Hockey and archery are running a close second. The rain on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday overran this first disappointment.

HOCKEY

Hockey practices are under way with a wonderful interest shown in the game. A large number of girls were on the hockey field last week, and it is expected that there will be a larger number of girls wandering around this week to supply themselves with hockey sticks. Don't forget the time! On Tuesday and Thursday, hockey practice is scheduled for 3:50 o'clock, and on Wednesday come out at 4:50 o'clock. Don't miss these first hockey practices in which the fundamental techniques of the game are taught. The first two weeks of practice are the most important as these practices form a basis for your hockey game during the entire season.

SWIMMING

Let me remind you of the recreational swimming periods which are scheduled for 9 o'clock on Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday nights. These swimming periods are made possible for your enjoyment and benefit, so make the most of your opportunity. The practice gives you a wonderful opportunity to build yourself up to the standards necessary to pass the swimming test required of every person entering S. T. C.

WALK FOR YOUR HEALTH

Have you tried the streets which lead away from the downtown mob rather than those which take you to crowded walks of the main street? These cool autumn afternoons are wonderful for a brisk walk to help you brace up before spending a close evening in your room preparing for the next day's classes. Give your lungs an opportunity to take in pure, fresh country air, and your mind a chance to wake up and to relax. Take any of the streets leading towards the hospital or down toward the high school and take into account the cool lovelliness of these autumn days.

Until next week—Stay in the game.

the Y. W. C. A., a member of the student council, and president of the Westminister Fellowship. Margaret Ellett is president of the junior class, having served as class president since coming to Farmville. She is also vice-president of Beore Eh Thorn, a member of the Virginian staff, and a council member of the Athletic Association. Margaret Lohr is secretary of the student government association, a member of the council of the Athletic Association and a member of Pegasus.

Miss Ruth Gleaves, associate professor of home economics, was recently re-elected as an adviser for Alpha Kappa Gamma. Also serving as an adviser is Miss Elizabeth Burger, assistant professor in science.

Officers of Alpha Kappa Gamma are Anne Martin, president; Shirley Cruser, vice-president; Virginia Treakle, secretary; and Eleanor Bisese, treasurer.

According to the Office of War Information the cost of killing an enemy in battle in Caesar's time was 75 cents; in the Napoleonic Wars it was $3000; in the American Civil War it was about $5000; in World War 1, it was from $21,000 to $25,000; and in World War II it was $50,000.

Hockey Practices Off To Good Start

Even though no date has been set set for class games to begin, hockey practices are well under way with a large number of students participating.

Peggy T. Ross, hockey manager, urges all people to come out for practice. Due to the limited number of seniors who have reported for practice, she particularly urges them to come to practice this week so they may get in their eight required practices before class games begin.

No expert skill is required for hockey; under the careful supervision of Miss Olive T. Iler, physical education instructor, all techniques may be improved and perfected. Hockey is a major sport and gives ten points toward the color cup.

This year there will be a varsity team chosen from the classes.

Mrs. J. C. Bondurant Named Office Clerk

Mrs. J. C. Bondurant of Farmville was recently named as a clerk in the Registrar's office, Dr. J. L. Jarman revealed to the press this week.

Mrs. Bondurant is an alumna of the college.

Juniors Entertain With Party in Rec

On Friday night, October 5 at 9:30 o'clock, the junior class entertained the freshman class with a party in the Rec. Gwen Ackiss served as chairman of the occasion.

Those on the program were Mar Kent Stevens, Mary Anne Loving, Ann Shufflebarger, Hilda Bennett, Anna Headlee, Ruth Jones, Betty Parrish, Clie Carver, and Cab Overbey.

Guests in addition to the class members included Harriette Moore, Barbara Scott, Marilyn Bell, Jane Waring Ruffin, Elizabeth Crouch, and Rebecca Tomlinson, former S. T. C.'ers.

Officers of the junior class are Margaret Ellett, president; Grace Loyd, vice-president; Betty Bibb, secretary; and Anna Headlee, treasurer.

Members of Gamma Theta sorority entertained at a buffet supper last night in the chapter room. Guests included Miss Florence Stubbs, adviser, and Mrs. Janice Lemen.

Suits Rate First On Every Occasion

By LELA BOULDIN

Would you like to know what the well-dressed college girl is wearing?—Suits! Yes, at every college, you will find girls wearing suits on almost any occasion—to church to class, on dates, and for traveling.

On Sunday, you'll see them wearing suits of all shades with contrasting accessories. Gray pin-stripe suits with black accessories seem to be a favorite every where as well as those bright fushia suits. Green, brown, red, black, and other colors are being worn also. Colorful dickies or blouses make the suits more dressy looking.

That black suit with a frilly white blouse will be perfect for a Sunday afternoon date (if you're lucky enough to have one!!) or, maybe you'd rather have something more casual.

When the time comes to go home you'll see them tramping to the bus station clad in suits of all colors. As the weather gets colder, boxy coats may be thrown over the shoulders to keep out the icy wind. Those three piece suits are very good for such occasions.

S. T. C.'ers find suits very useful to wear to classes with sweaters or tailored blouses. Suits are especially valuable to the student teacher—the more tailored and well fitted the better!

Custom made suits are a "must" in every college girl's wardrobe. Because of their vertsatility, they meet the various needs of the well-dressed girl on the campus.

Ruth Radogna: My trip to Norfolk and the good times I had there. Wow!

Committee Investigates Possibilities Radio System for State Education

Education is fighting for a portion of radio control which it previously lost to commercial interests.

Dr. Edgar M. Johnson, associate professor of education at Farmville, is a member of a state committee to investigate the possibilities of Virgina colleges, universities, and public schools setting up a radio system for educational purposes. Dr. J. Alex Rorer of the University of Virginia is the chairman of this committee.

The Federal Communications Commission has allocated five broadcasting channels using frequency modulation for educational purposes. This state committee is investigating to find out if such a plan can work in Virginia as it has worked in other states.

The tentative plans are to set up fifteen radio stations throughout this State. Farmville would have one of these stations. They will operate on frequency modulation, thus eliminating many of the disturbances such as static, interference, fade-outs, and poor tone quality which have made education by radio impractical for classroom use .

Dr. Johnson says there is still much investigation to be done before this dream will become a reality. Money has already been made available to the State Department of Education for employing a person to do the preliminary research.

It is not probable that a bill can be introduced to the State Legislature for final approval at their next meeting, but Dr. Johnson seems to think that the possibilities for its final success are very good.

If this move succeeds, it will mean that educational institutions whose physics departments pioneered the radio, will gain an opportunity to use radio for educational purposes without interference from commercial interests. .

Just Looking Thanks

By ANNE BUCK

There must be something attractive about U. of Virginia's Cavaliers, and V. M. I.'s Cadets, because just look who sat through the slight downpour Saturday to see Virginia whitewash V. M. I.—Betty McNetree, Carmen Low, Kitty Maddox, Glenn Ann Patterson, Ruth Brooks, Margaret Orange, Mimie Rose Featherone , Ann Baer, Betty Gillespie, Doris Robertson, Anne Summers, Virginia Cox Travis, Marjorie Vaughan, Martha Wells, Margaret Wall, Frances Shackelford, Jacqueline Ritchie, Mary Walker, Catharine Bickle, Betty Bibb, Mary Overbey Barnes, Mary Ann Adams, Louise Blane, Gwendolyn Cress, Emily Carper, Nancy Dickinson, Janice Watts, Jane Mantiply, Helen Lewis, Barbara Krebbs, Iris Davis, Jean Driver, Betty Ellis, and Frances Farley.

Also Ann Ford, Carolyn Grimes, Evelyn Grizzard, Virginia Hollifields, Charlotte Hutter, Mildred Hawkins, Ann Homes, Kakie Hundley, Nancy Ingle, and Nancy Jesse.

Eating the game and dance in Durham, N. C., were Dorothy Gelston, Margaret McIntyre, Sara Mangum and Margaret Skelton. Attracted to the William and Mary campus for the week end, was Margaret Saunders.

Meeting dates in Washington, D. C. were Betty Deuel Cock, Page Cook, and Peggy Fink. Also in that area was Grace Herrlein in Alexandria. In the opposite direction was Evelyn Patterson in Winston Salem, N. C.

Coastward bound were Elizabeth Crichton, Jane Croom, Doris Ellis and Joyce McRae in Hopewell; Betty Brothers in Suffolk; Cornelie Hamilton, and Judy Rieck in West Point; Jackie Parden in Portsmouth; Venie Buchanan, Geraldine Colgin, Thelma Diggs, and Hattie Hyatt in Norfolk.

Making touchdowns in Petersburg were Grace Anderson, Page Callis, Kitty Hankins, Virginia May Jenkins, Bette Lively, George Anne Lewis, Gloria Moore, and Jean Moran.

Going over the 50 yard line in Roanoke were Phyllis Alley, Dot May, Edith Bryant, and Betty Minton. Taking time out in Appomattox were Harriet Cole, Frances Jennings, Helen Elder, and Phyllis Fulcher.

Going out of bounds to Staunton were Nancy Duncan, Mary Harrison, and Anne Haskins.

Watch for next week end's football line up.

Reporter Dreams Of Freud's Theory

By BETTY SPINDLER

Last night I dreamed I went back to—high school. (Any resemblance to "Rebecca" is purely coincidental. I never read the book—but twice!) I'm not going to tell you all about the dream because it had a big blond hunko-man for a hero, and what girl wants her dream-man snaked? I think instead of telling what it was I should explain why.

While strolling through the stacks I found "Sigmund Freud's Complete Works" and glanced through it in a casual sort of way. Sometime later, however, I felt compelled to be back—there was a paragraph on past experiences re-appearing in dreams. Perhaps it held the answer to a subconscious fear of which I was possessed.

Once there I found myself vainly struggling with huge volumes of questions and answers searching for information, what a progenitor is and whether Psychoneuroses is a disease or a Greek athlete. The stupendousness of it caused my head to spin, when at last it cleared I found myself in a courtroom confronted with an inquisition which seemed bent on probing the secrets from an innermost mind. Stern-faced judges pointed at me and shouted questions. "Are you persevering?" "Do you like to introduce people?" 'Are you uncomfortable in the presence of important people?" "Do meticulous and tidy people appeal to you?" Through the haze I searched for a door; finding one I dashed headlong through it only to collide with Miss Emily Post herself. Immediately she opened her blue book and proceeded to quiz me thoroughly on my etiquette, Question after question followed, to my embarrassment, till—

I felt someone shake me. 'Time to close", she said, "put your books back—why, you're reading Freud, aren't you?" He's the one who puts forth the theory of the re-lived past, I believe!" So it wasn't true at all, those questions, that inquisition, that encounter with Miss Post. In some strange manner my subconscious mind brought back those intelligence tests, which weren't so bad really, in grotesque fashion. If "I dream of you —what, not another nightmare!"

You go to your church, and I'll go to mine,

You go to your church, and I'll go to mine,
But let's walk a long together;
Our heavenly Father loves us all,
So let's walk along together.
The Lord will be at my church today,
But He'll be at your church also;
You go to your church, and I'll go to mine,
But let's walk along together.

Exhausted Freshmen Pass Out When Ordered To Undecorate

Scene—a down town store—two freshmen are at the curtain counter.

Do you think we ought to get the white ones or the flowered?"

"Well I don't know. Colored ones would add some brightness, but we don't want to get too many colors—clash, you know. They are cute, though."

"Oh, look! Pennants! Come on, let's get some before they're all gone. We can decide on the curtains later."

"And STC stickers; Do you think we ought to get another rug?" With all their freshman enthusiasm, they dash from counter to counter. Later—

The two freshmen are trooping up High Street, their eager arms loaded down with STC stickers, pennants, picture frames, bed spreads, etc. "(Did you get the nails?)"

"Yes, did you forget the curtain rods?"

"No. They're right under this box of crackers." Much later—Our freshmen are stretched out on their beds—happy, but completely exhausted.

"I think our room looks darling, even if I do say so!"

"Well, it certainly ought to. We've really put some work into it.

"Let's put out the lights and go to sleep. We have a lot to do tomorrow."

Next day—Our friends have returned to their room after a morning filled with tests.

"Look! Here's a note on our dressing table"

"Well, who is it from? Open it."

"I am. Oh—Ahh—Aww!"

"What does it say?"

"It says, 'Girls, your room looks lovely but I am afraid I will have to ask you to remove the pennants, pictures, and stickers from the walls. It is against regulations as you will find when your handbooks come'."

"Oh—all that work— all those cricks in my neck and back to hang those things and now we have to take them down!"

"Oh well— we still have our curtains!"

"Where are they? Let's put them up now."

"Didn't you get them?"

"Of course not"—you said —

"No, didn't you?"

At this point, they both pass out.

Anything Can Happen When STC Circus Opens November 10

By MARGARET E. WILSON

There's something about a circus! Sound the trumpet, beat the drum! Also bring on the peanuts, lemonade, hot dogs, delirious infants and bare-back riders. Almost anything is liable to turn up at S. T. C. on November 10. The only thing we definitely can't count on is a triple backward somersault on the flying trapeze—and maybe definitely is a bad word for that.

Anyway, the old-timers know, and the freshmen will soon learn, that the Circus is a huge event on S. T. C.'s calendar. There'll be the well-known "hot-time-in-the-old-town t'nite". (Don't take us too literally—the heat won't really go on 'til Nov. 10, but, as our respected feature editor once said, "let us leave the hard cold facts to the news department.")

The best we can do is try, by means of glowing adjectives and fabulous fabrications, to set down in uninspiring printer's ink something of the glamor, romance (that's a very pliable word, and what would we do without it?), tinsel and sawdust of the good old fashioned Circus.

The parade—as anybody who ever was a small boy or girl knows—is the best part of any circus. And that old feeling has a way of turning up in dignified adults, who should know better, but don't — thank goodness! Everybody loves a parade!

Well, the one in question begins its triumphant march through the town somewhere in the vicinity of 3:30. We don't know about the confetti, but if that's missing, it'll be all that is. Floats, elephants, lions, very noisy music, bare-back riders—and did somebody mention giraffs? Oh—the clowns. Well, to be an honest-to-John clown, it seems to be necessary to smile through tears. We may have to resort to the ever-ready onion, but

Education Society Recognizes Girls At Chapel Service

In chapel on Tuesday, October 16, 18 upperclassmen were recognized by Kappa Delta Pi, national scholastic society in education.

Girls receiving bids were: Lovice Altizer, Farmville; Sarah Elizabeth Bennett, Keeling; Rachael Brugh Roanoke; Mary Stewart Buford, Lawrenceville; Elizabeth Carter, Concord Depot; Patsy Dale, Homeville; Martha Russell East, South Boston; Margaret Ellett, Jennings Ordinary; Florence Godwin, Smithfield; Doris Hair, Danville; Anna Stewart Headlee, Norfolk; Sue Hundly, Suffolk; Barbara Kellam, Norfolk; Mary Agnes Millner, Danville; Nancy Parrish, Manassas; Louise Rives, McKenney; Lucille Upshur, Cheriton; and Charlotte West, Surry.

Dorothy Cummings, senior from Charlottesville, was elected treasurer of the society to succeed Anna Lee Blanton. Dorothy has not only maintained a high scholastic average in college, but she has also been active in the choral groups on campus. Other officers of Kappa Delta Pi are Agnes Stokes, president; Betty Adams, vice-president; and Katherine Prebble, secretary.

Kappa Delta Pi is having Dr. Dabney Lancaster, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, as a guest on the campus November 14. Dr. Lancaster will speak at 8 o'clock in student lounge on the "Trends of Education in Virginia."

During the winter quarter, a series of programs will be sponsored by Kappa Delta Pi emphasizing the students place in the post war world.

Commercial Group Will Meet Tonight

According to an announcement made this week by officials of the Commercial Club, a call meeting will be held tonight to elect an adviser for the group.

At a meeting held last Wednesday night, plans for the year's work were discussed, and committees were appointed, Charlotte West, Mariam Estes, Azeele Hutt, Luverta Joyner Gumkowski, Harriette Sutherlin, and Martha Lee were appointed to the finance committee, while Jane Paulette, Nancy Adams, Bonnie Curtis, and Mary Ellen Temple were named on the social committee. Serving on the program committee are Betty Woodward, Jean Taylor, Clie Sarver, Shirley Connelly, Jane Underhill, and Dorothy Turley. Iris Davis, Virginia Love, Mary L. Dickenson, Louise Blackman, Annie Ellis, and Martha Frances Webb were elected to serve on the membership committe.

Seniors Will Be Capped On Thursday

On Thursday night, October 18, the senior class of 1946 will be officially capped by Dr. J. L. Jarman, president of the college.

Eleanor Bisese, president of the class, has announced that Mr. Philip H. Roberts, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, will deliver the invocation at the service.

Officers of the senior class are Eleanor Bisese, president; Anne Summers, vice-president; Lillian Elliott, secretary; and Virginia Shackelford, treasurer. Miss Elizabeth Burger is the faculty adviser.

Wynne Announces Second Institute For October 25

McDonald Will Talk In Morning Session

On Thursday, October 25, the second institute on Professional Relations will be held in the auditorium of the Student Building, Dr. J. P. Wynne, chairman of the Institute Committee, has announced.

Superintendents, principals, and representatives of the various local associations of the Virginia Education Association, as well as teachers from Prince Edward and Cumberland counties will attend.

The Institute will open at 10 o'clock with an address by Dr. Ralph McDonald, executive secretary of the department of higher education of the National Education Association, Washington, D. C. The theme of his address will be "The Problem of Professional Relations."

Following Dr. McDonald's address, Dr. J. L. Blair Buck, director of teacher education of the State Department of Education, will lead a panel discussion of the subject, "Difficulties Involved in Developing and Maintaining Professional Relations," in which representatives of different professional groups will participate.

In the afternoon session beginning at 2:30.Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, will preside at a forum discussion of the subject, "Ways on Improving Professional Standards and Relations." In this forum administrators, teachers, student teachers, and public will be represented. Dr. John L. Manahan, dean of the department of education of the University of Virginia, and Professor George J. Oliver, dean of the department of education of the College of William and Mary, will summarize the results of the Institute and indicate what next steps should be taken in the development of a continuous program of professional relations. At the close of the Institute, Dean Martha S. Smith will be hostess at a tea in the Lounge of the Student Building.

The highlight of the Institute from the standpoint of the public will be Dr. McDonald's address. Dr. McDonald has a background of teaching and administrative ex-

ACP Rates Rotunda, Colonnade "First Class Excellent"; All Phases of Work Are Criticized

Magazine Judged For Second Time

National Scholastic Press Associated rated the 1945 issues of the Colonnade "First Class Excellent" according to the present editor, Nancy Whitehead. This is the second successive year this rating has been achieved.

Special commendation was given to features, essays, humor, and mechanical considerations; fiction, critical writing, and make up were given high ratings.

Suggestions Made

Suggestions for improvement include working to integrate art with copy, more variety in covers, and more atractive back page. The service is not a contest but an endeavor to analyze and evaluate the work of college magazines and to rate them in their respective standings.

Editorial content in the Colonnade was rated at 375 art work and photography at 155; editing and make up at 220; and typography and mechanical considerations, 160, making a total of 910.

Miss Moran Speaks To Freshman Y Club

Miss Grace Moran will speak at the first meeting of the freshmen "Y" club which will be held tonight at 9 o'clock in the Student Lounge, Judy Rieck, freshman counselor, has revealed.

Julia Booher and Frances Treakle, members of the sophomore commission, are in charge of refreshments.

Officers of the "Y" are Minnie Lee Crumpler, president; Ann Martin, vice president; Martha Russell East, secretary; and Agnes Stokes, treasurer.

Jonniaux To Speak Here October 26

Lecturer Brings Compelling Story

Madame Alfred Jonniaux, world traveler and international observer, will appear on this campus Friday, October 26.

Madame Jonniaux and her husband were in France when war was declared and lived in Paris until four days before the Nazi armies swept down upon that city. Making a hurried departure they went to what was then regarded as Free France and after nine months there, upon the intervention of American friends, they were permitted to leave, coming to America via Spain and a Clipper.

Both by background and experience Mme. Jonniaux is singularly qualified to bring to the lecture field a timely, compelling and thought-provoking message. Hers has been a wide and comprehensive view of the global picture, gleaned alike from many of the distinguishd and colorful international figuress that have passed through her husband's studio, as well as from her own keen sense and analytical observation of world conditions.

This is Madame Jonnaiux's second appearance here. She spoke to the students last year on "World Unity, Our Part as Individuals."

Presbyterian Girls Hear Field Director

Rev. W. Norman Cook, field director of Religious Education in this synod of Virginia, spoke to the Presbyterian students at a meeting at Longwood on Saturday.

Lucy Bowling led the Saturday night worship, and Martha Russell East directed the Sunday morning worship for the council which spent the night in the cabin.

Critics Commend Editing, Writing

Associated Collegiate Press scorebook, which was received this week, rated spring issues of the Rotunda "First Class Excellent" with a total score of 950, which a rating above the previous one received by the Rotunda.

The paper lacked only 50 points of being rated "All-American", which is the highest possible rating that any college or university newspaper can receive. The Rotunda has received the "First Class" rating before.

The ACP critics commented that the Rotunda's editing was "very well done"; that the news articles were "usually excellently written." High scores were given the Rotunda on coverage, war effort coverage, content of news stories, organization, features, sports writing, and typography. Suggestions were made for improvement of the last page of the paper and news features.

Scores Given

News values and sources were rated 250; news writing and editing, 255; headlines, typography, and make up, 225; and department pages and special features, 220.

Papers judged were published in February and March under the staff headed by Jane Waring Ruffin and in April and May under the present staff headed by Virginia Treakle.

The purpose of the Associated Collegiate Press serves not to create rivalry, but to give an agency through which staffs may be aided in giving their schools a better publication, and to help the staffs with their problems.

BET Recognizes New Members In Chapel Program Thursday

Beore Eh Thorn, honor society in English, recognized seven new members in a special chapel program on Thursday, October 11.

Those named were Lucy Addleman, Cumberland; Lorraine Smith, Nathalie; Ruth Whitten, Farmville; Anne Willis, Culpeper; Virginia Tindall, Hatton; Mildred Davis, Paces; and Ann Mottley, Danville.

Founded in Farmville in 1935, Beore Eh Thorn seeks to encourage creative writing and the study of literature. It gives its active support to the publication of the college literary quarterly and sponsors visits of distinguished writers to the college.

APS Elects Davis New Vice-President

Mildred Davis, sophomore from Paces, was recently elected vice-president of Alpha Phi Sigma, to replace Dorothy Ladue who did not return to school this fall, Virginia Tindall, president, has announced.

On October 30 at 8 o'clock, there will be an initiation service for sophomores who have attained membership through holding a B average for two consecutive quarters, and for the freshmen who are eligible to Alpha Phi Sigma through having been honor graduates in high school. About fifty girls will be initiated at this service, which will be held on Tuesday following rat week.

All old members of Alpha Phi Sigma will wear white on the day prior to the service, and the initiates will wear white on the day

Past Exalted Editor, Hard at Work Teaching, Pops Up With Lively Tale of Chosen Profession

Inspires Not Apples But Watermelons

By JANE WARING RUFFIN

JANE WARING RUFFIN

Today I had a letter from your editor—Treakie, we called her in the S. T. C. journalistic circle way back in the dark months of last year, when I, too, moved freely in that exclusive circle. She chatted on for several paragraphs, telling me next week's scoop, the latest newspaper dirt, and some other news that's not fit to print. And then she ended on a cheerful, familiar note; "How 'bout writing us a feature?" she says.

I stayed around the newspaper office just long enough to get a sufficient amount of newspaper ink behind my fingernails to get in my bloodstream, and it's not all out yet, so I dragged out my trusty old machine that pecked its way through so many issues of your Rotunda. What little brain I have left I strained to recollect that first instruction I always meant to give my feature writers: "Write about something you know something about." And since I started teaching school some six months ago I have discovered to my dismay that I "don't know narthing about narthing," which left me only teaching school to write about.

But surely the readers of the Rotunda wouldn't be interested in anything that has anything to do with school teaching because you have certainly run into that group of people who will assure you that teaching school is dull and monotonous, You haven't? Well, you have something to look forward to when you reach the point of trying to decide exactly what to do when you come to the end of four short years at Farmville. And with six weeks of teaching behind me, all I can say about those people is that they couldn't have ever taught school!

Dull? Well the odds are twenty-five (or as many pupils as you have in each class) to one against the teacher—and the teacher has to win! My faithful Webster that saw me through four years at Farmville defines "dull" as "slow to motion or not keen," and the pupils I've known, watching their chance to throw that spitball or whack on that gum, intently listening to pounce on any error the poor, defenseless teacher may make, those pupils are anything but "slow to motion or not keen!" But those things are all part of the game, and it's certainly no fun at all without stiff competition. And it is amazingly like a game—a game of give and take.

Besides being dull I was warned that teaching school would be

A New Class Begins March To Alma Mater

Tomorrow night, another senior class will be capped; tomorrow night, another group of students, joined together by kindred ties, will become "cap and gown" seniors. This ceremony will represent the culmination of three successful years of college work and the satisfactory beginning of the fourth and final year in an undergraduate school.

According to the Encyclopedia Britannica, even back as far as the fourteenth century, some colleges required scholars to wear long gowns. The hood was originally worn by all people, scholars included, and evidently had no academic significance. It was not until, around 1520, however, that the square cap was adopted.

At the time of the Revolution, the academic dress underwent some revision, chiefly in direction of sobriety and uniformity, "excess of apparel" being repressed as severely as ever but not with much effect. Since the seventeenth century, however, there haven't been many far-reaching changes.

In 1895, an intercollegiate commission drafted a code for academic caps, gowns, and hoods. This has been accepted by some 700 American colleges and universities. The three types of hoods are provided for bachelors, masters, and doctors, respectively, while the square caps remain the same for all degrees with the exception that the doctor's may be made of velvet and may have a tassel of gold bullion.

With this brief history of the academic cap and gown, we can now turn our attention to a 1945-46 senior class in one of the oldest teacher training schools in the south. Many students have week after week marched to the music of our "Alma Mater". Tomorrow night this procession will begin for a new class, a class that will go into a world of peace rather than one influenced by the perils of war. Another senior class is ready to wear the gown of the undergraduate; another class of Farmville daughters will become a part of a sacred college tradition.

Look Forward To Sunday

On our campus from time to time, much has been said about how to spend Sundays. Sunday should not be a day that we hate to see come and are glad when it is over. Rather it is a day to which we look forward, a day of rest.

The first thing we can do to start ourselves off to a happy week is to go to church. It is also a good idea to go to bed at fairly reasonable hour so that in church on Sunday morning, we won't sit up with one eye open and one eye shut. In this free land of ours, we are neither compelled to go to church nor is the privilege of worship in the House of the Lord denied us. Sunday is the Lord's Day, and the least that we can do is to spend some time glorifying Him.

A walk during these crisp autumn days is invigorating. A trip to Longwood for a delicious Longwood bun is worth anybody's time, energy, and money. Besides, who doesn't look forward to a little "home cooking"?

A book or a magazine will furnish good company. It's nice to snuggle up in a warm blanket and lose yourself in an interesting novel or a good book of love poetry. A warm blanket brings to mind that a nap is a delightful pastime and 48 winks won't hurt any of us. We all welcome an opportunity to catch up on our beauty sleep and to erase the dark circles from under our eyes.

There are good radio programs on Sunday afternoons. If you can't find an available radio, you can find a "vic" somewhere and listen to some classical records. This is a peaceful way to spend an afternoon. Perhaps, while you're listening to the records, you can catch up with your correspondence. The more letters you write, the fuller your mail box will be, so you see you can "kill two birds with one stone."

There are various other ways you can spend your Sundays. Don't say that you're bored; you'll make people think that you must be very poor company not to be able to entertain yourself.

Gleanings

Mildred Altice

Baron Shidehara has been the new Prime Minister in Japan for over a week now. Many people express the opinion that he is an excellent choice. He is considered quite liberal by Japanese standards, but by American standards there are very few, if any, Japanese liberals. During this week the complete demobilization of the Japanese Army has occurred, and more steps have been taken toward abolishing the Emperor myth and toward the preparation of the Japanese people for a general election at some time in the future.

* * * *

Pierre Laval of France was sentenced to death and died by a firing squad during the week. Indictment charges were given to 24 top Nazis for trial as war criminals this week, and it is to be hoped that this trial will really take place.

* * * *

The coal mine strike has continued in a deadlock all during this week. There has also been a strike of the longshoremen in the New York harbor this week. This is particularly serious because it is preventing prompt return of servicemen to this country from Europe. The epidemic of strikes continues critical, and as a result it has been reported that the War Labor Relations Board may not be discontinued as had been previously planned.

* * * *

Argentina is passing through a stage of strikes and other really serious trouble. That country's vice-president was also arrested. In French Indo-China, Thialand, and Java have been rebellions again of rule by various of the Allied powers. Civil war still hovers over the great country of China. Three ships were sunk and other damage was done by a typhoon off the coast of Okinawa.

Voice of Our Readers

Dear Editor,

This is my second year at Farmville, and so I feel that I have actually experienced what I am writing.

Rather than looking forward to Sunday, I actually dread it. It is, of course, a good time to get down in the dumps and homesick. During the week, the girls stay busy and have little time for such nostalgic feelings, but then as Sunday approaches, they naturally begin thinking of home and of loved ones far away. This, to be sure, is a natural reaction; yet, it seems that something could be done on our campus to help girls keep their minds from their own problems.

Could we have a different campus set-up on Sunday?

Sincerely,
A Homesick Soph

Dear Editor,

This is not intended to be just another gripe . . . it is, rather, in hopes of being a suggestion. The only way the students have of being informed as to the daily goings-on is through the announcements in the dining hall. Many girls, especially the freshmen who are not yet familiar with the daily or weekly schedules, have missed meetings or remained ignorant of requests, or possibly lost out on long distance calls all because the announcements could not be heard beyond the first row of tables in the dining hall. This is not entirely the fault of the clatter of the dishes and the general hum of low voices; it is because the announcements are read by well-meaning individuals whose voices simply won't carry over the needed space and distance.

We realize that there is a certain honor in the process of having the announcements read by those at the head table who are heads of organizations, and no one is trying to de-privilege these individuals. But for the sake of the disgruntled student body at large, isn't there some way it could be arranged to have them read by the one or two persons whose voices do carry to the farthermost corners of the dining hall? If the loud-speaker system cannot be used, it is at least the right of the students to ask that this be done.

I do not speak as just one student complaining over a simple trifle; in writing this I feel I represent the opinion of all the girls, and their sincere hopes that an improvement can be made over the situation.

Very truly yours,
Lee Staples

Dear Editor,

The entire study body is "still raving" about the Japanese Americans who entertained at Sing last Saturday night. We appreciate the attempts of the students who put on the skits and the mock weddings and the faculty take-offs, but why can't we have more real programs like this last one? There are plenty of opportunities at Camp Pickett and Hampden-Sydney and throughout the community itself. Let's put a few bees in the bonnets of the Sing committee and see if they can't provide some more real entertainment, and make our Saturday evening Sings worthwhile.

Sincerely,
Interested Student

Question of the Week

What are you majoring in at S. T. C. and why did you select this course?

Shirley Hawks: I decided to take the technician course because it only takes two years.

Mary Jane Dunlap: I decided to major in math 'cause I like to mess with other people's problems. Please, no phone or mail orders, I am busy with my own right now.

Alice Moore: I am taking prenursing in case I get wild with my rolling pin.

Elaine Pierce: Business is my choice; I learn something new every day—in science.

Jean Snead: I chose pre-technician because I can make the most money from it. Don't like it at all.

"Jac" Bobbitt: I am beginning to wonder why I chose business.

Charlotte Frank: I am taking home economics, so I'll be able to cook for the right man.

Nancy Jessee: I am taking elementary education because I have always adored children.

Sally Anne Smith: I am majoring in elementary education because I enjoy working with children. I consider it a good profession and I like the three fundamentals, reading, writing, and arithmetic.

Jo Anne Sterling: I am taking physcial education because it takes strength to go through S. T. C.

Mary Anne Adams: I am majoring in chemistry, 'cause I like Charlie Hop!

Frances Farley: I am taking home economics because I am always so hungry.

Sara Jane Youngblood: I am interested in penmanship so I can write to that man.

Dot Winter: Taking Math because I like triangles or else I am just that dumb.

Thelma Hillier: I am taking commercial for one reason and that's 'cause Dad wants me to.

Betty Pell Jordan: I am majoring in elementary education because I love children and am preparing for the future.

SENIOR CAPPING

Y News

By ANNA HEADLEE

All of those who went to hear Dr. Habel came back with some good pointers on his topic of "Personality Plus". It was quite an enlightening meeting. All students are urged to attend these open association meetings of the Y.

The Presbyterians were reported to have had a big time at Longwood last week-end, and while there they planned more thoroughly this year's work.

In the Episcopal church Sunday, the nationally recognized Youth Sunday will be observed by students taking part in the regular 11 o'clock services. There will be a special youth offering taken to go toward helping the children in St. Luke's Hospital in Manila. There will be an early morning communion service at 7:30 followed by breakfast. Sign up for breakfast on the bulletin board if you wish to go.

Don't forget Prayers each night except Saturday after dinner.

If any little word of ours
Can make one life the brighter;
If any little song of ours
Can make the heart the lighter;
God help us speak that little word,
And take our bit of singing
And drop it in some lonely vale
To set the echoes ringing

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

Last week-end was really one of the most knocked out week ends of all times! Every girl is going around with that "silly satisfied" look on her face now.

Corrine Baker got A-one charge this week end while she was home. One of her many came home on a short furlough.

Berkeley Richardson, went to Richmond (as usual) this week-end to see her Tommy. He brought her a huge box of Milky Ways and took her to hear Kay Kyser. Some week-end, eh, Berk?

Dorothy Rainer Shotwell brought her "Dock" Ballon back with her Sunday night for general inspection. We approve 100 per cent!

Mary Towles Waldrop is going to take her cuts next week-end to see her one and only — Good luck!

Carol Jenkins took Abernathy, Elizabeth, and Julia home with her this week-end. They went to the dance at the USO in Crewe. Some fun!

Mary Anne Morris just can't make up her mind which one she loves but right now I think John is in the lead.

"Boo" Bond and Caroline Painter had a grand and glorious time at Annapolis. They arrived Sunday night all smiles.

You should have seen our librarian with her fellow in the tea room Monday.

Mrs. Tabb says she certainly wishes that Circus would hurry and get over. They are already beginning to practice and 2nd flcor over at "the building" surely is noisy.

Fire Chief Lloyd was all set to go home Friday afternoon when she remembered the fire drill that night. Tuff! Grace, we feel for you!

Virginia Marshall, Betsy Scott and "Gee Gee" Yonce certainly had a bag full of experiences to tell after their return from Mary Jo Tucker's in South Boston.

We hear that Anne Summers' Jimmy has been discharged. I guess we'll be seeing quite a lot of him—Farmville is not so far from Crewe.

Peggy T. just sits around in a trance after she gets one of those thick letters from "Pitchet".

Janet Dunlap went to see the handsome soldier who was up here a couple of week-ends ago. She says "Billy" is just wonderful.

Kitty Hankins had a visit from "Tots" last week. He looks mighty sharp in that uniform!

Fall Cotillion really should be wonderful. From what I gather, there shouldn't be such a terrible man shortage. Lots of the old girls are coming back and a gay time should be had by all!

Hockey Team Will Play Varsity Game With W&M College

Inter-Class Games Begin at Early Date

According to an announcement made this week by Peggy T. Ross, manager of hockey, a varsity game is being scheduled with William and Mary. The exact place and date, however, have not been announced.

Scheduled practices for hockey are at 3:50 on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and at 4:50 on Wednesday afternoons.

Eight practices are required before a girl may play on a class team. For this reason, Peggy T. is urging all students to come to the practices at the scheduled hours.

Physical Education Heads Give Picnic

The heads of the Physical Education Department are giving a picnic, Thursday, October 18, at 5 o'clock at Longwood for the physical education majors.

This picnic is to acquaint the new physical education majors with the old physical education majors, and also to acquaint them with the working of the Physical Education Department.

this thing has to be all there. We may even have the Mayor in a top hat. At S. T. C. it's all—or nothing at all.

The Queen? The Ringmaster? Honey, if we knew! The element of suspense is a powerful commodity, and its anybody's guess.

One thing we can let go with a minimum of risk to our necks, is the theme—Mother Goose. And the things you can do with that old lady! Just ask Cab.

Anyway, you can count on a hot dog—with mustard, dancing—with (?), and intriguing booths with all kinds of stuff. (We know one ever-confident junior who's still waiting for that "tall and mysterious" that Mr. Mac promised her last year in his fortune-telling capacity.)

There's just one thing wrong with the whole works. We can't skip school to go to the circus, 'cause its at 8 p. m., and what's a circus without a licking the next day? Anyway—consolation — we can have a honey of a stomachache, if we work hard enough at it!

Tennis Tourney Is Well Under Way

The first round of the elimination tennis tournament has been played. Phyllis Watts, manager, has announced. Betty Parrish defeated Grace Loyd, 6—3, 6—2; Phyllis Watts defeated Kitty Sue Bridgeforth, 6—0, 6—0; Betty Burchett defated L. Steppe 6-2, 6-2. Jane Burchett defeated B. Russell 6-2; 6-4; M. Harrison defeated Dot Owen 6-2, 6-0; Mary J. King won over Jean Bentley, 6—1, 6—2; Margaret Orange won over Lou Baker, 7—5, 6—8, 6—1.

People who have signed up for the tournament are B. Bralley, J. Bell, L. Steppe, B. Russell, S. Youngblood, freshmen. Sophomores are Dot White, B. Burchett, J. Burchett, J. Bentley; juniors are S. Parrish, B. Dudley, B. Parrish, G. Loyd, K. S. Bridgeforth, N. Smith, D. Owen, M. Harrison, M. J. King, and L. Baker, and seniors are P. Watts, F. Lee, L. Jones, and M. Orange.

The semi-final matches will be announced in the dining room, and also the final matches. The winner of the tournament gains five points toward the color cup for her class.

HE WAS INNOCENT

He: "Darling! What ails your eye? Why the bandage?"

She: "Don't be ridiculous! This is my new hat."

LEFT LEAD

BUTTON, BUTTON

If it isn't "Button, button, who's got the button?" it's "Stables, stables, who's got the stables?", and believe you me, it's the riddle of the year. Mr. Graham sez he's got a wonderful proposition in view, but he just won't let the cat outta the bag . . , or the horse outta the stall as the case may be.

However, if you like to believe in rumors, Mr. Wells has acquired up to five horses, two of which he bought at the livestock sale last Monday. He wants to get at least seven (one for each saddle?) before he does anything about it, and there's another livestock sale next Monday. Then, too, we heard that Mr. Cralle had gone to Richmond Tuesday . . . and they have some mighty nice horsies in Richmond!

SHOW BUSINESS

Amelia went over the top last Saturday with one of the nicest little shows you ever saw. Thanks to Mr. Treakle, there were several S. T. C. representatives there getting more kick out of wandering around the paddock than out of watching the classes in the ring. Mr. Craigie himself was on hand with some of his friendly interest and interesting comments, and among the prominent horsenalities present, we found our old friend Dewey and Jitterbug. It seems Dewey has changed his name to Stardust, but whether his politics were responsible or not we don't know . . . we only know that he took three firsts, a third, and two fourths with Mr. Jacobs up! Yup, we were proud to say we knew him!

TID-BITS

We walked in on a discussion of movies about horses the other day, and heard one horse-lover lamenting the fact that she had missed seeing "National Velvet". Why not read the book? After all, the novel came first, and it's even more stirring than the picture, if you think it possible.

. . . Did you hear this one? "When the Donkey saw the Zebra, he began to switch his tail! 'Well I never,' was his comment . . . there's a mule that's been to jail!" . . . What with all the lovely fall leaves, and the perfect riding weather going to waste, we keep hoping it won't be too long before we get some satisfaction in the way of an answer to the issue of the day. Meantime, don't sell your riding togs yet . . . we haven't given up hope by a long shot! If you haven't written home for your permission keep it in mind for the next letter . . . and shine your boots up just in case!

See ya in the saddle . . .

monotonous. Monotonous? When you have to deal with a hundred different peple every day, and every day one of the hundred thinks up some new mischief? But perhaps I was just lucky when I drew from the grab bag a group of normally curious children, who at this point are trying to decide whether the new teacher is 24 or 25. Perhaps it isn't every beginning teacher who can be looked up in a last year's college annual and greeted familliarly when she enters the classroom with a cheerful "Hello, Jane Waring!" Perhaps chewing gum is just more plentiful around here. Perhaps it's just that the windows in our school are exactly that height from the ground to be tempting to boys who like to pretend they are wearing parachutes. Monotonous? With just six weeks of experience, I can think of many adjectives to describe the job, but "monotonous" certainly isn't a suitable one.

But they are just sidelights. It's really almost as thrilling as watching your first newspaper roll off the presses to watch the delighted expression of a biology class seeing for the first time under a microscope live, moving Paramacium which they themselves grew by simply putting some old grass in some dirty water. It's most satisfying to hear teen agers quote Bryant and Emerson as if they really knew and understood it. And it's pleasing to the ego, if nothing else, when pupils speak deferentially even when you meet them en route to the local theatre on Saturday night, when proud mamas stop you in the drug store to thank you for helping their Johnnie or Susie.

I could go on and on. On a subject so filled with interesting people and anecdotes, it's difficult for me to pick out the brightest highlights and to decide which should be cut, having, I suppose, that old newspaper instinct for telling the whole story. I'd like to tell about the shy youngster who brought me not the traditional apple, but a large and delicious watermelon, about the atractive miss who came practically in tears for advice on her love life, about the amusement of the class when I pronounced "houses" with same "ou" sound all Virginians use in "out", about the bet I lost on the World Series, about the speed with which I ended a crap game by winning, about the amazement of the group of boys who were so sure they could beat me at "Tit-tat-toe" when they found that I had been at the game longer than they, about the cute red head who promised to come get me for the local dance held on a school night if I wouldn't give any homework.

Fun—I'm having more fun than I've ever had in my life, and I'm working harder, too.

But I forgot—you people aren't interested in the dull, monotonous life of a school teacher.

Son: "Dad, what was your great ambition when you were a kid?"

Dad: "To wear long pants. And I've had my wish. If there is anybody else in this country that wears pants longer than I do, I'd like to see him."

LOUISE BLANE'S

On the Ball

Hello again from the sports world. With all signs of rain having disappeared, the spotlight is on athletics on the campus this week. With so many varied activities in progress, everyone has a chance to enter some phase of the athletic program.

HOCKEY

There is still time before the class games for you to get in your required practices. Try your skill in this fascinating game, and support your team in the final game. If you feel that you don't know encugh of the techniques of the game, come out and watch a practice in progress and see how simple it is for beginners to get in the game.

TENNIS

The tennis tournament is well under way this week with many of the matches having been played. Come out and support your class representatives. They need your cheers and words of encouragement. The tournament gives points towards the color cup; in fact, it is the first sports activity which contributes towards the cup this year. Come on, Green 'n Whites and Red 'n Whites and support your players.

LONGWOOD

Have you taken a Sunday afternoon walk to Longwood yet? If not, try it next Sunday afternoon. You freshmen, if you haven't been to Longwood, you don't know what an important phase of college life you have missed. Those famous Longwood buns hold a great degree of interest for those who have already learned about Nannie's cooking, and for you who haven't learned, try them.

Maybe the beautiful golf course and the riding ring will raise your interest in these activities which are taught every quarter.

Until next week—keep fit!

AA, Monogram Club Guests at Longwood

This coming week-end Longwood is to have as its guests the members of the Athletic Association council, and the members of the Monogram Club.

Miss Olive T. Iler, the faculty advisor of these two organizations, is to be the chaperon.

If your organization here on campus would like to spend a night at Longwood, please see Miss Iler to schedule your week-end.

Dance Group Elects Carper Secretary

Emily Carper, senior from Rocky Mount, was elected secretary of Orchesis on Monday, October 8, to replace Shirley Cruser.

Orchesis is now beginning work on a recital to be given during the winter quarter. Plans are definitely being made for the dances to be performed.

Other officers of Orchesis are Betty Ellis, president; Esther Shevick, treasurer; Nancy Whitehead, costume chairman; and Frances Lee, historian.

In the home economics group are Cary Beard, Roanoke; Beryl Brannon, Drewryville; Evelyn Pierce, Greensvoro, N. C.; and Virginia Lee Price, Farmville.

Girls To Help Make Surgical Dressings

On Monday night, October 22 in the art laboratory, the Red Cross organization on campus will sponsor the making of surgical dressings. Girls are asked to come to stay from 7 o'clock until 9 o'clock if possible, and if not, they are urged to come for one of the hours. This work will be sponsored on the campus each week throughout the school year until a sufficient number of dressings have been made.

In discussing the work this week, Agnes Stokes, Red Cross head, remarked, "We are making all of these surgical dressings for the veterans at Camp Pickett. The need there is so great that many of the patients are having to make them in order that all demands be met."

Girls who come to help with this Red Cross work are asked to wear cotton dresses or blouses and to wear some type of headgear.

Choral Club Names Hoge As President

Mary Ellen Hoge, senior from Bluefield West Virginia, was elected president of the Choral Club at a meeting held Thursday night, October 11. Betty Ellis, senior from Coral Gables, Florida, was elected secretary; and Carolyn Booth, senior from Wakefield, was elected treasurer.

The main work of the Choral Club consists of two concerts each year. This group also sings at various churches from time to time throughout the year.

London Entertains

Miss Willie London, faculty adviser, entertained at a tea in her home for the members of Phi Zeta Sigma on Tuesday afterhoon. Miss Ruth Gleaves, Miss Lila London, and members of Phi Zeta Sigma attended.

The new members of Phi Zeta Sigma were informally initiated on Friday night in the chapter room. Mrs. Lee Foster Tony, a Phi Zeta Sigma alumna, was present, in addition to the members of Phi Zeta Sigma.

Pi Kaps Give Party

Pi Kappa Sigma sorority had its first "get together" in the chapter room last Wednesday night. Miss Olive Iler, faculty adviser, and Miss Mary Dabney also attended.

Notice

Tickets will go on sale Monday, October 22 for fall Cotillion dance, according to announcement made this week by Anne Summers, president of Cotillion.

Tickets will be $2.40. This sum will include the member's ticket, a date ticket, and a ticket for a new girl. All old Cotillion members returning for the dance will be expected to buy their own ticket.

New girls invited by old members will not be allowed to bring dates.

RAT RULES

Louise Brooks, president of the sophomore class, issued to the press this week the following rules for rat week. The rules have been approved by Dr. J. L. Jarman and Dean Martha Smith Smith.

1. Attend all meals in the dining room.
2. Do not go to the post office until after lunch each day.
3. Always walk in front of Joan of Arc and kneel in reverence.
2. Know Red and White song.
5. Address Sophomores as "Miss" calling them by their last name and answer "Ma'am" when spoken to.
6. Meet in Gym at 6 o'clock each morning dressed in rat clothes.
7. Freshman class must make up a song in praise of the Sophomores.
8. Convene in front of the Colonnade at 12:30 and immediately after lunch each day.
9. A cardboard sign is to be worn on the front with rat's name and room number. A rat is to be drawn on the sign. A sign is to be worn on the back with "Praise Sophomores" on it. Use red and white colors in painting this sign.
10. Four plaits are to be worn on the right with red ribbons and eight plaits on the left with white ribbons.
11. Carry books in a kerchief.
12. Wear mismatched shoes with white stocking on right leg and red stocking on left leg.
13. Wear a long sleeve sweater with a short sleeve blouse on top of it. Wear a plaid skirt wrong side out.
14. Rats must not wear any jewelry or makeup whatsoever either day.
15. All rats must be prepared to give Sign Off at any time.
16. No rats will be allowed to go downtown or to Butcher's during the two days of ratting. "Rat Week" begins at 6 o'clock, October 23, Tuesday morning, and lasts through October 24, Wednesday night. Ratting must be discontinued at 6 o'clock on both days, except for special session of Rat Court, which may not be held except from 10 to 10:30 p. m.

SIGN OFF

(I (name of rat), from (name of home town), am a seditious, sycioistic freshman and seem to sense that the sensationally sagacious sophomores surpass us scholastically and socially, for standard statistics state sophomores stand stable, steadfast, and staunch since stratosphere started. Such singular stamina surely speaks splendid success secured, showing sufficient, even superfluous signs of success. Sophomores should really sever all conections with the silly, shallow freshmen, since they are scrapping in a sclamachy. Praise '48!

Just For Today 8

Just for today, I will try to live through this day only, not to tackle my whole life problems at once. I can do things for twelve hours that would appeal to me if I had to keep them up for a lifetime.

Just for today, I will be happy. Those who consciously seek happiness seldom find it. Finding happiness is more like an accidental discovery. This assumes that what Abraham Lincoln said is true that "Most folks are about as happy as they make up their minds to be." Happiness is from within; it is not a matter of externals.

Just for today I will try to adjust myself to what is and not to my own desires. I will take my family, my business, and my luck as they come and fit myself to them.

Just for today I will take care of my body. I will exercise it, care for it, nourish it, not abuse it nor neglect it, so that it will be a perfect machine for my bidding.

Just for today, I will try to strengthen my mind. I will learn something useful. I will not be a mental loafer. I will read something that requires effort, thought, and concentration.

Just for today I will exercise my soul in three ways; I will do somebody a good turn and not get found out. I will do at least two things I don't want to do; as William James suggests, just for the exercise.

Just for today I will be agreeable. I will look as well as I can, dress as becomingly as possible, talk low, act courteously, and be liberal with praise, criticize not at all, find fault with nothing and not try to regulate nor improve anyone.

Just for today I will have a program. I will write down what I expect to do every hour. I may not follow it exactly, but I will have it. It will eliminate two pests — hurry and indecision.

Just for today I will have a quiet half hour all by myself and relax. In this half hour, sometime I will think of God, so as to get a little more perspective to my life.

Just for today I will be unafraid, especially I will not be afraid to be happy, to enjoy what is beautiful, to love, and to believe that those I love, love me!—Anonymous.

Pi Gamma Mu Visits Historic Surrender Grounds For Picnic

Wednesday, October 10, Pi Gamma Mu, national honorary society in social science, journeyed to Appomatox for a picnic.

While there, they went through the historic Appomatox courthouse grounds and saw the spot where the apple tree grew, under which General Robert E. Lee stood to overlook his army. Betty Adams gave a vivid account of the procedures that took place when General Grant read the surrender terms to General Lee.

Taylor, Rachel Thomas, and Sara Jane Youngblood.

Madame Jonniaux To Lecture Here On Friday Night

Speaker Born In Great Britain

Madame Alfred Jonniaux will speak Friday night at 8 o'clock in the college auditorium.

This is her second appearance on this campus. She brought a message of wide interest last year and was received enthusiastically by students and faculty.

Madame Jonniaux is a world traveler and observer, and has had much experience in the lecture field.

She and her husband were in Paris when war was declared. They lived there until four days before the Nazis entered the city. Then they escaped from Paris to what was regarded as Free France, and then came to America.

Since her arrival in America she has lectured throughout the country, speaking at numerous colleges and universities.

A native of England Madame Jonniaux and her husband came to America via Spain after leaving France. They are now residents of this country. The international observer has a wide and comprehensive view of the global picture, gleaned alike from many of the distinguished and colorful international figures that have passed through her husband's studio as well as from her own keen sense and analytical observation of world conditions.

Students Make 650 Surgical Dressings

According to an announcement made this week by Agnes Stokes, chairman of Red Cross work on the campus, 650 surgical dressings were made by the college students in the Art Laboratory on Monday night from 7 to 9 o'clock.

"We hope to make at least 1000 bandages each week," Agnes remarked in discussing the work.

Other activities for the Red Cross committee for this month include 30 bingo prizes, and five baskets of fruit. This latter project of the fruit is being taken over by the various denomination groups on campus.

The original restrictions of wearing cotton dresses or blouses and some type of headgear have been lifted, and students are now permitted to wear skirts and sweaters.

Cornelia Page Hamilton Alias "Tootsie" Elected Frosh Head

By BETTY DEUEL COCK

It isn't everybody who can be president at 18, and for that matter, it isn't everybody who can vote before she is twenty-one . . . but when we proceed with the statement that the election was held by the Class of '49, the facts aren't as preposterous as they first sounded. Yes, the Freshman class elected its president last night, and if the U. S. political parties could be half as satisfied as the freshmen seem to be, there would be no more political friction in the U. S.

Ever-mindful of an interview, we waited with bated breath till the onrush of people told us that the meeting was over. Then we questioned the onrushers as to the outcome . . . and to our every, "Who got it?" came back a dozen replies . . . each different. With the aid of interpreters, we narrowed things down to either "Lucie" or "Tootsie" . . . and "Tootsie" it finally became. Then the mere problem was to find out, out of a class of 300, who was "Tootsie"?, and the answers came thick and fast. She was "the one with the glasses . . . she's a bird . . . or, 'She's a little taller than I am and a little shorter than you are. She's awful cute." And the scathing look, and "everybody knows Tootsie"! With such cooperation, who couldn't have found Tootsie, hidden away in a far corner of third floor Library Hall? 'Twas as simple as scaling a twenty foot wall!

But find her we did . . . and Tootsie turned out to be Cornelia Page Hamilton from West Point, Va., well-established at S. T. C., and well on her way to keeping her rep as "most popular" and "best all around" in W. P. H. S. Tootsie was surrounded by congratulators and friends and a beaming roommate, and our personal interview consisted mostly of her statement that she was too confused to make a statement! When called on for a speech just after the election, her entire oration consisted nibbling on a finger

Adelaide Coble will take the part of the Godmother; Janie Hanks will be Lord Mayor; Frances Marshall will be the Queen; Betty Scroggins, Lord Times; Mary Lou Freamster, the Bishop; and Lucia King, the maid.

The part of Dr. Bodie will be played by Rebecca Williams, and the part of Danny will be played by Eloise Hanes, Virginia Hollifield is the Probationer, and Charlotte Hutter the censor.

The Beauties of the production will be played by Delores Duck, Adelaide Cobie, Martha Hatcher, Sue Davis, Lucia King, Nell Coleman, Evelyn Patterson, and Mildred Hahn. Betty and Jane Burchett will act as pages, and Jean Cake, Martha Morehead, and Joyce Hill as Lords.

The girl that was selected to take the part of the King has been taken sick and someone else will be appointed to take her place at a later date.

December 8 Named By Bisese As Date For Senior Dance

December 8 has been set as the date for the traditional senior dance, Eleanor Bisese, president of the senior class, has announced. At this time, Mary Walker Watts, honorary member of the class, will assist the president in leading the figure.

Jane Philhower, Williamsburg, is serving as general chairman of the dance. She has been active in the activities of her class, serving on the freshman commission during her first year here and acting as class circus stunt director last year.

Dr. Belk To Speak In Chapel Tomorrow

Dr. Blanton Belk, pastor of St. Giles Presbyterian Church, will speak in chapel tomorrow morning.

Dr. Belk, who was graduated from Davidson College and Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, will be introduced to students by Martha Russell East, president of the Westminster Fellowship.

Commercial Club Elects Mrs. Wynne

At a Commercial Club meeting held last Wednesday, Mrs. Alice C. Wynne was elected adviser by the members of the club.

Officers of the club are Minnie Rose Hawthorne, president; Mary Virginia Walker, vice-president; Barbara Brown, secretary; Alice Davis treasurer; and Jean Kent, reporter.

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Practices Begin On Annual Circus

With the annual S. T. C. circus little more than two weeks away, practices are underway for the class stunts which along with the queen and court will highlight the evening program.

On the afternoon of November 10 a parade will take place through the streets of Farmville. The theme for the circus this year is Mother Goose.

Lillian Elliott and Margaret Lohr are in charge of the parade; Minnie Lee Crumpler and Dorothy Overcash are in charge of the court; Virginia Treakle and Martha R. East will take charge of advertising; Agnes Stokes and Margie Hewlett have charge of the animals; Shirley Cruser is in charge of decorations and floor; Eleanor Bisese and Margaret Ellet have charge of stunts; Jackie Parden and Freddie Butt are in charge of tickets.

Ann Martin, president of Alpha Kappa Gamma will help on all committees. Frances Lee is general chairman of the event.

McDonald to Speak In First Session

Beginning tomorrow morning at ten o'clock Dr. J. P. Wynne, director of teacher education, will preside at the second institute on Professional Relations. This meeting will be held in the auditorium of student building.

Dr. Ralph McDonald, executive secretary of the department of higher education of the National Education Association, Washington, D. C,, will speak during the morning session on the topic, "Problems of Professional Relations." Dr. J. L. Blair Buck, director of teacher education of the state department, will lead a panel discussion on "Difficulties Involved in Developing and Maintaining desirable Professional Relations." Taking part on this forum will be G. Tyler Miller, president Virginia Education Association; R. B. Crawford, chairman local county school board; Clarence Bussinger, principal Farmville High School; Miss Elizabeth Ellmore, president, department of supervisors, V. E. A.; Dr. W. J. Gifford, dean, Madison College; Mrs. Eleanor Rawlett, state director, National Education Association; and Glenn Anne Patterson, student teacher Farmville elementary school.

During the afternoon session, which begins at 2:30, Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, state superintendent of public instruction, will preside. Miss Pauline Camper, local associate professor of education; Dr. W. A. Scarborough, superintendent of Dinwiddie County Schools; Dr. Paul Houncell, professor of education at Madison College; Miss Celeste Jones, president of department of classroom teachers, V. E. A.; Rev. Philip A. Roberts, pastor, Farmville Presbyterian church, and Jane Anderson, student teacher, Farmville High School, will discuss "Ways of Improving Professional Standards and relations." Following this symposium, Dr. John L. Manahan, dean of the department of education, University of Virginia,, and Prof. George J. Oliver, dean

STC Rotunda Is Comparable To Grand Central Station

By JEAN CAKE

"O. K., I'll meet you in the Rotunda" is an often heard phrase at S. T. C. Overheard in the Rotunda are such things as "Oh-h Swoon-man, when did you get here?", "Mrs. McCoy, has my long distance call come through yet?", "Oh, dear, nothing on the mantel for me." "I wish the dining room would hurry and open, I'm about to starve." "Say I wonder who she's got a date with over there?"

Now you all know what the Rotunda is, It's that big place with a roof, four walls with pictures and a couple of doors and windows. No doubt, if you haven't already wandered in there you will. It will be recognizable by the steady stream of humanity passing through. Some dashing madly to keep that special date, others flying in, in zipped up trench coats and wet stringing hair to grab their phone call. Never a dull moment in that place.

In the winter we impatiently struggle to open the front door while in warm weather we lazily step through windows to see who's who and what's what at that particular moment.

Maybe you're one of those lucky misses who has located a date for the evening. When your man arrives you'll meet him there and if "share and share alike' isn't already your motto it will be after introductions have been made to all the friends you have suddenly acquired. If you decide to keep your date in the Rotunda, you'll have to ignore the comments made by the admiring young ladies hanging by their heels over the railing. Much to the House Council's dismay, we can't control our curiosity.

One of the most popular, if not the most important rooms in college, is the Home Office, located at the rear of the Rotunda. Here we spend many hours waiting for that wonderful phone call to come through. And we can't bear to pass that door without going in to see if by chance there's a note on the mantel for us or just simply to enjoy the fire.

Meal time brings a chattering bunch of hungry girls to crowd through the Rotunda and into the dining room. Among other welcome visitors to the "cross-roads' are the Western Union boy and the Special Delivery man. In our Grand Central Station, S, T. C. history is made. New students enter new fields and old students pass out into the cold, cruel world.

The fame of this friendly cen-

Students Mourn Death Of Faithful Postmistress

This week our students are mourning the death of one of our most faithful members of the administration, Miss Maude K. Taliaferro.

Serving this institution for forty years, Miss Taliaferro first became connected with the State Teachers College in 1905, serving in the capacity of assistant librarian. She held this position until 1912, at which time, she became postmistress. Hers was a noble job and a never-ending task which she performed faithfully and diligently.

Not only will Miss Taliaferro be long remembered as a member of our college administration; also, she will be remembered by many as a faithful, loyal, and cooperative member of the Johns Memorial Episcopal Church in this city.

Farmville daughters throughout Virginia and other states are, this week, paying tribute to one who gave her life for present and past State Teachers College students.

Help Is Urgently Needed To Make Surgical Dressings

Beginning on Monday night of this week, students were requested to give one or two hours of their time to make surgical dressings for the wounded veterans in the hospital at Camp Pickett. Only a very small per cent of the student body answered the call to service, and as a result, only 650 dressings were made during the two hours.

During the war years, we gave our time gladly for those men on the battlefields around the world. Now that the war is over, we feel that it is no longer necessary for us to invest our dimes and quarters in war stamps and to spend some of our leisure hours making surgical dressing for wounded service men. This should not be the situation at all as we know that weekly, our brothers, friends, and sweethearts are being returned to the United States, many of them handicapped for life, and others in urgent need of medical attention. Perhaps college students through the country are asking "What part may we have in the reconstruction period of America and the world?" Surely, there is no more worthy opportunity for us to serve in any capacity than for us to spend one or two hours weekly making surgical dressings in order that the men at Pickett may realize as much comfort as possible during their illnesses. Of course, all of us can't go every week, but many of us could go often to have a part in this urgent work.

News has reached our campus that the need has been so urgent that the patients have lain in bed and made dressings in order to meet their demands. Knowing this, we should act and we must act.

This is really the Macedonian call to each of you to plan your week's schedule in such a way that you will be able to spend at least an hour weekly in the Art Laboratory on second floor Library Hall making surgical dressings. Organizations will be called on from time to time to have a part in this important undertaking; however, that does not mean that individual students are not wanted and expected. These men have fought on fields of battle for us while we continued our studying in a land that was not bombed and was not destroyed by war. This, then, is our opportunity to have a small part in making their days happier and brighter days.

Gleanings

Mildred Altice

Concerning some newly discovered material on Bacon's Rebellion in 1676 Jefferson wrote, "One more case will be added to those which prove, that insurrections proceed oftener from the misconduct of those in power, than from the factions and turbulent temper of the people." It is quite possible that the revolutions occurring in Argentina, Venezuela, the Dutch East Indies, Indo-China, and China may indicate not only misconduct of the nations directly affected, but also the other great powers of the world, including the United States. It behooves every American to attempt to understand all phases of the various problems by carefully weighing all available evidence.

There are two sides to the problem of sending 100,000 Jews to Palestine as suggested by the President. Arabs already dwell in Palestine and have not hung a welcome sign for anybody. Isn't it too much to ask England to assume full responsibility for such an act? Quite possible a part of the responsibility belongs to America.

In France this week the first general election was held since 1936 with women and professional soldiers voting for the first time in French history. In the United States organized labor is expected to vote shortly on a proposal from management to settle labor strife.

Sharp debate continues in Congress and throughout the nation concerning the use and control of the atomic bomb. The President and many Congressmen favor isolating the control of the bomb to the United States. However, the control of the atomic bomb could be the first great and useful concern of the United Nations organization.

Voice of Our Readers

Dear Editor,

Having read the letter in the last issue of the Rotunda from a 'Homesick Soph", I attempt this answer to her problem of what to do on Sundays. Let us call this:

How Shall We Spend Our Sundays?

How many of us do not know what to do with ourselves when Sunday rolls around. With no set routine to follow some of us begin to feel homesick and lonesome. Doubtless, some of us hate to see Sunday come bringing a lonely and drab day. Many of us notice the empty corridors and begin to feel lost.

Then too, there has been a difference of opinion on what to do and what not to do on this, the seventh day of the week. This is not written with the idea of listing a lot of "don'ts", for Sunday should never be thought of in that way. Nowhere in the Bible can you find a list of things that you are not to do on Sunday.

We do, however, read in Genesis —"And on the seventh day God finished his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh from all his work which he had made." Here the seventh day was instituted as a day of rest by our God. You as a Christian should ask yourself these two questions. Does the doing of this thing best fit me for carrying on my work the other six days? Does my doing this deprive anyone else of His day of rest?

We also realize that to have a fully developed personality, we must grow in four ways—physically, mentally, socially, and spiritually. I am sure all of us have given careful attention to the first three ways, but how much thought or time have we put on our spiritual growth. The true meaning of spiritual growth is to grow in favor with God. Sunday is an opportunity to cultivate our spiritual lives. With this realization, it would be well to ask ourselves, "Is the doing of this thing the best way I can grow in Christ likeness?" Another good question is, "How little time can I spend with God and get by?"

Then too, we all know the commandment God gave his people saying, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." In other words, Sunday is a memorial day to God. This seventh day of the week belongs to God—not to man. Thus, it must be asked, "Does the way I spend my Sunday stand out as a witness to Jesus?"

If we thought seriously about the three rules that have been mentioned, we would begin to realize that we could have a very busy Sunday. It would not be a lonely Sunday with nothing to think of except what we would do if we were home. We would find it a busy Sunday, pleasantly different from the other six days of the week!

An Interested Freshman

Question of the Week

What are you going to do when Johnnie comes marching home?

Martha Morehead: Oh, Joy!

Carlotta Norfleet: My little man has just left for the Pacific, Goodness knows when he'll come back.

Ginny Walsh: If he walks in here I'll jump over the Rotunda railing into his arms. That'll be the day!

Ginny Hollifield: Oh brother! And he'll be here in a week, after a year and a half in the Pacific!

Sue Davis: That's the $64 question.

Charlotte Hutler: You mean Dick? Oh, Hon-ee!

Violet Ritchie: I'm leaving it up to him.

Jane Taylor: "I'm gonna love that guy like he's never been loved before.

Phyllis Alley: Shout for joy!

Boots Brally: What do you think?

Marion Atkinson: I'm gonna set a bear trap and bait it with—you guess what!

Miss Garnett: What do you think?

Btty Jefferson: He's already at home!

Mary Ann Morris: Are you kidding? That's a silly question to ask.

Paige Cooke: It's hard to tell.

Virignia Butler: We've got a date to shuffle off to Buffalo.

Freddie Anne Butt: Find Johnnie!

Virginia Shackleford: Hon-eey, you nver can tell, but you can bet your life we won't waste any time in Farmville.

Maggie McIntyre: I don't know any Johnnies but you can bet your life I'll be standing by to catch one.

Cotillion Beau and Belles

Y News

By PATSY DALE

According to a statement made by Miss Olivia Stephenson, Baptist student secretary, about 25 Farmville girls will attend the Baptist Student Convention to be held in Richmond November 2-4.

The Freshman "Y" Club had its first regular meeting last Wednesday night, Miss Moran spoke to the group on the subject "Getting the Most from Your College Career".

The Wesley Foundation is having a series of worship programs on the theme, "Paths that lead to God". The paths that will be discussed are art, literature, music, and nature.

The Presbyterian church was open Saturday night for recreation. The Presbyterians plan to continue this every other Saturday night during the year.

The Canterbury Club will have a waffle supper at the rectory next Sunday night preceeding their regular meeting.

Mrs. John Allen Moore, Missionary from Yugoslavia, was the guest speaker at the Y.W.A. meeting last Tuesday night at the Baptist Student Center. Mrs. Moore is also going to teach study class on Yugoslavia the first week in November.

There will be an "Old Fashioned Song Fest" at the Baptist Student Center, Saturday October 27, at 8:30 o'clock. All Baptist girls are cordially invited.

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

Maybe I'm mistaken, but wasn't it a little dull around here this past weekend? Probably only the quiet before the storm. Guess everyone is saving that man for Cotillion!

Lynchburg was certainly on the ball—at least Kakie and Margo seem to think so. They and their W. and L. dates really made the rounds.

As for Dot Shotwell—well, she and Sanford had A-1 elegant time.

And Margaret Wall has that 160 mile-away look in her eye. She must be thinking about that Norfolk man.

The University of Virginia seems to still be quite an attraction for Carmen and Glenn Ann. From all reports and orchids these two must have bowled 'em right over.

What's this, we hear Shirley mumbling about 30 days? Well, it's not "Thirty days hath September" but thirty days hath Billy.

That certain freshman, Ann Ward to be exact, manages to keep the path hot between Farmville and New Kent, Virginia. If she doesn't go home, he comes here. No wonder she wants extended week ends.

By the way, how did Audrey Fox like that soldier?

Sara Ballard has had a sparkle in her eye (also) ever since that one and only arrived.

Sounds like Christmas wedding bells are ringing, but Page and Keith can tell you all about it.

And as for getting in with the family, Virginia Toby says there's nothing like it.

Perhaps Anne Summers would like to vertify that statement also. When his mother starts coming along too—well—aw—few!

Evelyn DeJarnette won't reveal his name but she did go home to see her young man.

It seems to be the real thing with Lorraine Smith and Roy. More power to them!

Mildred Williams is really out of this world over Jim.

And who was that charming young man that Mary Waldropth had on exhibit Sunday.

Speaking of exhibits, Betty Gillespie has A-1 exhibit on display. She brought a rather unusual souvenir back from Richmond. What will Nubby bestow on her next?

Has anyone ever gotten the complete story of the trip to the circus that Eloise and Kitty took. They just shut up like clams when circus is mentioned. There's something funny somewhere!

Did someone say last week end was boring! Well, looks as if we'll have to retract that statement. As Dr. Swertfeger said, "My roll looked more like prewar

Westhampton Has Annual Tourney

Farmville Invited To Annual Meeting

Farmville State Teachers College has been invited to attend a state hockey tournament to be held at Westhampton College November 3. There will either be a team chosen to play as a whole or representatives will play with other schools. This tournament is held every year at Westhampton, and schools all over the state will be represented in the meet.

Class hockey games will begin Monday, November 12. The tournament will be a round-robin tournament consisting of five games. Each class will play every other class. The highlights of the hockey tournament will be the freshman - sophomore game. If the freshmen defeat the sophomores they will not have to wear their rat caps until the Christmas holidays begin. The winners of these class games will gain ten points towards the color cup. From these class hockey teams, a varsity team will be chosen.

Peggy T. Ross, general manager, urges all students to come out and practice for their respective class teams.

Girls Play-Off Tennis Tourney

Semi-Finals, Finals Set for Week-End

The second round of the elimination tennis tournament has been played Phyllis Watts, manager, announced. Frances Lee defeated Jane Burchett 6-3, 6-2. Dot White gained a forfeit from J. Bell and Mary Harrison defeated Sara Youngblood 6-0, 6-2. Lou Baker lost to Margaret Orange, and Beanie Dudley defeated Betty Parrish.

Quarter final matches are now in progress. Semi-final and final matches are scheduled to be played off Thursday and Friday.

A. A., Monogram Club Are Guests at Cabin

The Athletic Council and Monogram Club spent last Saturday night at the cabin at Longwood. The groups were chaperoned by Miss Olive T. Iler and Miss Mary Dabney, physical education instructors in the college.

The following people were there, Margaret Orange, Kitty Sue Bridgforth, Betty Parrish, Alice Anne Abernathy, Margaret Lohr, Eloise Hanes, Nellie Smith, Jeanne Bently, Betty Minton, Mary Jane King, Phyllis Watts, Dot White, Anne Summers, Gee Gee Yonce, Margaret Ellett, Frances Lee, Sue Hundley, Peggy T. Ross, Lillian Elliott, Lucile Jones, and Louise Blane.

LOUISE BLANE'S

On the Ball

With such beautiful weather as S.T.C. has enjoyed for the past two weeks, everyone should be getting in her share of sports and athletics. "Make hay while the sun shines", or rather, play while the sun shines should be your motto during this lovely weather.

Hockey Reminder

Each fleeting week brings those exciting hockey games between the classes closer at hand. The strong competition which is expected between the classes this year should prove to make these games an exciting and thrilling event. A spectator might be surprised to find both Green and White and Red and Whites playing together, although this is not a rare occurrence. This way it gives both teams a chance to cooperate with each other, and to discover an individual's playing power. From the girls who have been to at least eight practices by the time the class games begin a team will be chosen. Don't let the games slip up on you without your required practices.

Happy Hiker

Longwood was open this past Sunday, and we found many enthusiastic hikers wending their way along the road towards Longwood. Although some were disappointed because those all-time favorites, the buns gave out a little early, everyone seemed to have a wonderful time. Some of the more energetic of the hikers found contentment in a hole or two of golf. Others, not quite as full of vim, vigor and vitality strolled or reclined on the lawn. We are looking forward to more Sunday hikes to Longwood.

Tennis

With the fall singles tournament not too far from the finals, this week in tennis should prove to be very interesting. If you like tennis and aren't in the tournament, come on down to the courts and be a spectator. You can pick up a lot of valuable techniques by just watching, and the players will like an appreciative audience. The finals are drawing nigh, and everyone is holding her breath wondering who the winner will be.

Until next week—keep in the game.

Various Animals Add To Already Spicy Life of STC Girl

By BETTY LEWIS SHANK

"Now," said Miss Jennings, "Who is the author of 'Beowulf'?"

"Prrrrwrrlll!"

"Er, ah, it wasn't me, Miss Jennings!"

At this point a big, black and white cat yawns complacently, stretches, and jumps leisurely down from the window sill. Kitty strolls out the door slowly with her head high in the air leaving both English class and teacher bewildered and nonplussed.

Then, there was the day the three-legged dog chased the little mouse all around the colonnade. Needless to say, many fair S. T. C. students were left hanging by their toes on the columns.

And were you around the time all S. T. C. gathered to see if the kitten was really going to dive into the fish pond after our pet goldfish? Oh, he was a brave little feline? He would shut his eyes, get a running start and just when you were covering your eyes so you wouldn't see the horrible catastrophe, he would skid to a speedy stop. Whew! What a life. Never a dull moment!

What are we to think of all this "carrying on"? Didn't we come here to study? (Ha, ha!) Who said that, Seriously, are we going to let all these little animals run around loose and disturb our studies? And just when we were about to find out who did write "Beowulf"!

Footnote: Nobody knows who wrote "Beowulf" anyway, so don't guess too much harm has been done. All in favor of tolerating our feline, and canine friends, say, "Aye". Unanimous!

State Swimming Meet Will Be Held at STC

State Teachers College will be hostess for the annual state swimming meet this year. Colleges all over the state will be represented in the meet.

There is a definite need for more experienced swimmers to compete in this contest, Gee Gee Yonce, manager of swimming announced.

Circus Head Gives Practice Schedule

Following is a schedule for the various practices and places of meeting for annual circus, to be given November 10 in the S. T. C. gym. These practices will be held at 9:45 on the designated nights.

NOTICE

Riding classes will begin at State Teachers College the week of October 29. All girls wishing to ride horseback will please sign up for schedule arrangements with Jeanne Sauerwein as soon as possible.

Dr. Jarman has requested that all girls riding this year have written permission from home filed in the Dean's office before classes begin.

H20 Club Members Give Annual Banquet

The H2O Club had its annual banquet Tuesday, October 23, in the College tea room. Girls attending were Millie Shepherd, Anne Summers, Gee Gee Yonce, Jean Babb, Phyllis Watts, Frances Lee, Betty Lee, Cab Overby, Margaret Orange, Carrol Jenkins, Peggy Cabaniss, Grace Loyd, and Peepsie Brooks, Miss Mary Dabney, H2O sponsor, was also present.

Guests at the banquet were: Miss Emily Kauzlarich, Dean Martha Smith Smith, Miss Olive T. Iler, Miss Mary Barlow, Mr. S. L. Graham, Dr. Ray Moore, Miss Winnie Hiner, and Dr. J. L. Jarman.

Officers of the H2O Club are: Phyllis Watts, president; and Millie Shepherd, secretary-treasurer, who was recently elected to this position to succeed Kitty Kearsley.

New Popular Tune Hits S. T. C. Again

By BETTY LEWIS SHANK

In case you are tired of "Til The End of Time"--a hangover from "A Song to Remember", you can now sigh a sigh of relief for another popular hit has taken its place. As if you don't know, "You Came Along" from the picture of the same title is now the theme of S. T. C.

You lucky girls who were slowly going mad from hearing the former from morning til night can now go mad to the latter sentimental tune. Of course, if you are going mad, some people will try to tell you, it doesn't make a bit of difference to what air you do it. But this theory is not agreed upon by many. The question is—if you must live in a padded cell the rest of your life, what song had you rather live with? Some people prefer opera. And, when you think about it those provokingly high trills are good company for the insane, but boogie will serve the same purpose. However, we are getting off the subject. In case you haven't guessed what the subject is, it is movies. Bet you thought it was music.

Movies today mean music. And music means that a lot of people will be subjected to some song, which others fancy, day in and day out until another movie comes along with another tune. For instance, you will all remember Hoagy Carmichael's "How Little We Know" from "To Have and Have Not". For weeks on end, ambitious people were trying to imitate Bacall's technique with this fascinating little ditty. Finally that gave way to another--etc.,etc.

And now we come to "You Came Along". It is lovely right now. Wonder how long it will last?

Don't Forget Surplus Bread, Butter Becomes S. T. C. Chatter

By HELENE GRIFFIN

"See if you can get some more butter tonight, and we'll try to locate some 'surplus' bread." (Looking back over a year spent at S. T. C., we recognize this as one of the most familiar sounds heard in the dining hall at 6 o'clock).

Seated at the table, are little conspirators who go back for bread at least five times, and pile it all up, dreaming of its delicious devourment that night. . . . (to self:) "Now if Theresa only gets the butter, we'll have a feast, because Sue has some peanut butter, Gil has blackberry preserves and Tab has the relish—h'mmm. THAT should be good"—"pass the potatoes, please!" After announcements, these little gals scoop up their pickings, meet their accomplices who have towers of butter under that lower piece of brown bread, and together they do a fast one through the side door.

It's much later now, 10:00 let's say! Someone announces "she's hungry", the two plotters slip a sly glance at each other, and within 10 minutes are safe within their own little room. Rubbing their hands together in delighted anticipation of the pleasure to come they become starry - eyed when they smell the grill smoking—"it's hot!" The first piece is buttered and put on the grill (they have decided not to bother Tab, Gil, and Theresa for their jam, etc. Really, the plain toast is just as good! Especially when seven pieces is all that was confiscated. Settling down with a sigh of contentment as they hear the first piece sizzling in the toaster, the two are rudely interrupted by a loud voice shouting, "Hey you all got any bread?" Sadly nodding in the affirmative they yield two slices . . . ooooh! Wishing fervently for a Yale back they sink back down to dreams of toasted treats.

Bang! This time it's some nomad wanting to know what the Biology assignment is—one more piece — gone!!! By 10:30 three other slices have vanished into the mouths of unknown sources. Throwing up their hands in utter abandonment, the pair quickly slice the remaining morsel and down the buttered bit.

And so it goes! Lots of bread 'n' butter at 10:00; not even a crumb left at 10:30. Moral: Eat your bread before 10:00 because in this case you can't have your bread and expect to eat it, too!!!

Editor's Note: (Helene was a member of the staff last year while a student in the college. Even though she is not in school this year, we are printing one of her features.)

of the department of education, College of William and Mary, will speak on the topic, "Where Do We Go From Here?"

At 4:30 o'clock Dean Martha Smith will be hostess at a tea in the student building lounge.

This institute is being sponsored by Farmville State Teachers College, the Virginia Education Association, the State Department of Education, the National Education Association, and the J. L. Jarman Chapter of the Future Teachers of America.

According to an announcement made this weekby Dr. Wynne, all seniors will be excused from classes after 10 o'clock on Thursday, provided they attend the scheduled meetings. Students who are practice teaching are requested to have an understanding with their supervising teachers before missing classes to attend these meetings.

Australians Live in Towns

Despite its rural character, Australia has about two-thirds of its people living in towns. Sydney and Melbourne alone hold a third of the nation's population. Coal from the state of New South Wales, and gold, silver, lead, copper and tin from scattered mines, have, especially in recent years, created the industries largely responsible for the growth of big cities.

Just Looking

By ANNE BUCK

Many took three day leaves to go home to see Tom, Dick or Harry this week-end. To Lynchburg went Doris Hancock, Kathleen Shaner, Constance Loving, Betty Russsell, Anne Ford, Virginia Hollifield, Jacqueline Reynolds, Betty Jo Vail, Peggy Murray, Mary Overbey Barnes, Anne Barksdale. Also to Roanoke went Mildred Sadler, Claire Owens and Eleanor Farmer.

To see University of Virginia Bills and the equivalent in Charlottesville were Evelyn Gianinni, Lois Faye Wolfe, June Gianniny, Shirley Irving, and Virginia Tindall. Just as exciting was Alberta for Dorothy Ramage, Anne Orgain, and Martha Anderson.

Up the road to Blackstone went Marian Gunn, Anne Williams and Lottie Hammock. Also to Lawrenceville were Esther Marsh, and Virginia Bailey.

Coming in on "A Wing and a Prayer" after a big week-end in Petersburg were Peggy Jones, Jane Read and Jean Watts. Also from Fredericksburg were Elizabeth Crochett, and Josephine Leary, and from Hopewell were Mable Lewis, and Margaret Pearson.

Turning South Boston upside down this week-end were Ann East, Martha East, Jerry Osborne, Elainne Pierce, Mary Waldrop and Dorothy Shotwell. That same thing happened to Norfolk with Edith Duffy, and Peggy Moore.

Among the S. T. C. glamor gals in Richmond were Ann Boss, Jane Underhill, Anne Homes, Jean Turner, Mary Yates, Frank Charlotte, Edith Culbert, Audrey Walker, Claire Clarke, Sarah Greene, Jeanne Ellett, Marguerta Wash, Jean Rock, Shirley Didlake, Gwendolyn Kell.

Others finding much more important things to do away from school were Peggy Turner in Amherst; Virginia Parris in Danville; Catherine Bickle in Staunton; Eleanor Overby in Chatham; Betty Gill in Orange and Daphne Pittman in Ashland.

Next week-end is going to be a big one . . . wait and see.

APS Will Initiate New Members Soon

Due to the postponement of Rat Week, Alpha Phi Sigma will hold its initiation and recognition services November 13 at 8 oclock in the Honors Room according to an announcement by Miss Peck.

At this time, sophomores who have attained membership by having a B average for two consecutive quarters and freshmen who are eligible by having been honor graduates in high school will be initiated.

All old members of Alpha Phi Sigma will wear white on the day prior to the service, and the initiates will wear white on the day following their initiation.

The recognition service will be for those who have gained apprentice and masters degrees during the winter and spring quarters of last session.

So there you have it. With Charlie Hop as the class adviser, and the newly elected "Tootsie" as class president, we say congratulations to the new Green and Whites, and best of luck to the Class of '49.

Gowns Rate High For Coming Dance

As fall Cotillion draws near the topic of fashion turns to evening dresses. S. T. C. girls start looking over their wardrobes to decide what's right for such an occasion. Of course, everyone wants to look her best. Some of them will want to wear their lovely white dresses. That pretty blue net with the taffeta top would be just right or maybe some prefer their pink lace Those formal black dresses are just right for that sophisticated look. Or, some girls may like something simple and dainty.

There are varous styles which seem to appeal to the S. T. C. girls. Some prefer long sleeves and princess style, while others go in for strapless dresses. Full skirts are quite desirable as they twirl about the dance floor. Mergers are quite popular, especially black net over taffeta.

Decorations add a great deal to those simple, plain dresses. Dainty bows can be used in many ways to brighten up an evening dress. Or, some prefer to use flowers—a bunch from the department store will look pretty at the waist, and be sure to get some matching ones to wear in the hair. Those shiny little evening bags add to the effect and long gloves of a contrasting color look very attractive.

As the music starts and the dance begins, the gym will be filled with S. T. C. girls, who look their best in those lovely evening dresses.

Cab's Corner

By CAB OVERBEY

These poems for today have found their way out of my filebox into this column, hoping to stimulate enthusiasm and fun to all poem lovers.

Defense

My hours are crowded all day long
With tasks I set myself to do.
I weave them close with threads of song
Leaving no room for thoughts of you—
I dare not let a moment seem
Unbusied, lest sharp memories wake;
If I should pause to sigh or dream
My heart might find time to break
—By Saraka

No name, no author! Just one I clipped out of an old English book that I found in an old school.

"Thus o'er the dying lamp th' unsteady flame
Hangs quivering on a point, leaps off by fits, and falls again, as loth to quit its hold,
Thou must not go; my soul still hovers o'er thee,
And can't get loose.

Changing the subject a little bit,

At Midnight I Remembered

Wakening at the touch of a windblown curtain,
Wakening to joy in the soft loveliness of moonlight,
I remembered that I must go down the hall
Past the small bed all sweet and warm with sleep,
Down the white resting stairway to the front door,
And step out onto the cold moonshadowed porch
To bring in little, frozen galoshes!

"Who's Who" Lists Twelve S. T. C. Students

President Jarman Announces Thanksgiving Holiday Dates

Classes To Resume On November 26

Dr. J. L. Jarman announced to the student body in chapel on Friday, October 26, that there would be four and one-half days holiday for Thanksgiving this year.

The holiday will begin at noon Wednesday, November 21 and students must be back in time for 8:05 classes Monday morning, November 26. Only one day of holiday was listed in the catalogue.

Girls will not be able to cut any classes immediately before or after the vacation, Dr. Jarman has also strongly advised all girls to take no cuts between now and Thanksgiving.

Last year only a one-day holiday was given for Thanksgiving, because of transportation difficulties, and also because the holiday came just two weeks before the Christmas holidays began. The holidays will begin on Wednesday noon this year to allow girls that live some distance away to be at home on Thanksgiving.

Dr. Stevens Dies In Local Hospital

Dr. Edith Stevens, associate professor of biology, died early this morning in the Southside Community Hospital, where she had been since a laboratory explosion injured her on August 21.

She was born in Metz, W. Va., and was the daughter of the late, Wm. A. Stevens and Claire Campbell Stevens. Surviving are two brothers, Paul Stevens of Fairmont, W. Va., and Guy Stevens of Washington, D. C.; and one sister, Miss Edna Stevens of Follansbee, W. Va.

Dr. Stevens attended the Fairmont State Normal School, received her A. B. and A. M. degrees from West Virginia University and took her Ph. D. degree at the University of Chicago. She did research work with the Biological Board of Canada, the Marine Biological Laboratory of Wood's Hole, Mass., the University of Michigan, and Pennsylvania State College. She was a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and a member of Sigma Xi, honorary fraternity in science. Before coming to Farmville in 1928, she taught in Marion County, Littleton, and Parkersburg, W. Va.

Funeral services will be held from the home of her brother, Paul Stevens, 604 Locust Avenue, Fairmont, W. Va., however, the time of the funeral has not been arranged.

Colonnade Contest To Close Tomorrow

According to Nancy Whitehead, editor of the Colonnade, Thursday, November 1, is the deadline for the short story contest. All entries are asked to be handed to Mr. Grainger on or before that date.

The short story contest is sponsored by the Colonnade every year. Anyone can enter as many stories as she wishes and is requested to make as many entries as possible. There will be three prizes and two or three honorable mentions for the best stories submitted.

Winners will be announced at the conclusion of the contest, and the winning stories will be printed in the fall issue of the Colonnade.

"If you haven't finished your stories, please do so at once," advises the editor, "and get them in to Mr. Grainger."

24 Organizations Give To War Fund

Twenty-four of the forty organizations on this campus have contributed to the War Fund according to an announcement by S. M. Holton, Jr., chairman of the college contributions. The total amount contributed by them up to date is $260.

Organizations which have made contributions are Association of Childhood Education, Athletic Association, Beorc Eh Thorn, College Choir, Choral Club, Baptist Student Union, Westminster Fellowship, sophomore class, junior class, and senior class.

Also Colonnade, Cotillion Club, Kappa Delta Pi, Orchesis, Rotunda, Sigma Pi Rho, Virginian, Alpha Sigma Alpha, Alpha Sigma Tau, and Gamma Thtea.

Also Mu Omega, Phi Zeta Sigma, Pi Kappa Sigma, and Theta Sigma Upsilon.

Members of the faculty and administration have contributed $332.50. The grand total contributed up to date is $592.50. Last year $768.50 was contributed by the organizations, faculty and administration.

This drive is not a combination of the World Student Fund and Red Cross drives as was announced in last week's Rotunda. This drive is rather the last National War Fund Drive.

Freshmen Select Officers of Class

Commission Girls Elected by Ballot

At a meeting of the freshman class held last Friday night, part of the officers for the coming year were elected, Cornelia Hamilton, president, announces.

Dolly Anne Freeman, Lawrenceville, was elected vice president of the class. She was in high school, president of the Tri-Hi-Y club, editor of the newspaper, and a member of the Beta club.

Elected to student government were Anne Ford, Lynchburg, and Ann East, South Boston. Ann Ford was president of the Tri-Hi-Y club, vice-president of student government, and a member of the magazine staff during her high school days, while Anne East was salutatorian of her class, vice president of the senior class, and secretary of the Beta club.

At a meeting of the class, Marjorie Miller, Christiansburg, was elected secretary, and Lee Staples, Lynchburg, was elected treasurer.

Representing the freshman class on student standards committee are Lucy Lee Rives, Norfolk; and Evelyn Patterson, Kenbridge.

Nominated at a class meeting and elected by secret ballot, twelve girls were elected to serve on the freshman commission. Girls elected are Anne Ford, Lynchburg; Anne East, South Boston; Evelyn Patterson, Kenbridge; Martha Gilliam, Charlottesville; Anne Verser, Lynchburg; Jane Taylor, Pungoteague; Jackie Bobbitt, South Hill; Violet Ritchie, Richmond; Dolly Freeman, Lawrenceville; Marjorie Miller, Christiansburg; Grace Mallory, Lawrenceville; and Betty Sheets, Hopewell.

STC Will Observe Education Program

American Education Week will be observed on this campus November 11 to 17 with "Education to Promote General Welfare" as the general theme.

A special program will be presented in chapel each day during the week. Dr. J. P. Wynne, head of the education department, has revealed. The committee of students for the education week includes Anna Lee Blanton, Lucy Bowling, Dorothy Overcash, Jane Philhower, and Virginia Treakle.

Lancaster Enthusiastic About Making STC Best Institution of Its Kind

By BETTY SPINDLER and JEAN CAKE

"You can get him at lunch," somebody said. "You're crazy," we replied. "We're having fried chicken! I'll get him later." And later it was. After waiting all afternoon and peeping into the small auditorium every ten minutes, we finally with Mr. Holton's aid pounced on our unfortunate victim as he emerged from the afternoon session of the second institute on Professional Relations," where he presided. Cornering him in the Rotunda office we began to get acquainted. Starting our interview 'way off the subject, Dr. Lancaster who is the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, related to us an amusing tale about a misplaced hen.

At last we settled down to serious questioning concerning his views on postwar education at Farmville. First of all the subject of making S. T. C. co-ed was brought up and Dr. Lancaster said he seriously doubted if that would be done for quite a while. He was very enthusiastic in his praise of the school, saying he wanted Farmville to be the best institute of its kind in the state. Later on in our talk with him he complimented S. T. C. again by saying that it has "definite objectives" and has not lowered its standards in order to offer more courses of less importance.

In reply to our query about the changes to be made in educational methods according to the influences of war specialized training he made it clear that the whole training was carried on by educators and that they would put into practice the methods found to be the most successful. However he does not think that the accelerated courses should be used in our schools, primarily because there is not need for concentrated learning, and because in eliminating everything but the bare necessary facts, the interest and

Durant Will Speak At STC November 26

Dr. Will Durant, author, historian, and lecturer, will speak in the large auditorium, Monday night, November 26, at 8 o'clock. The topic of Dr. Durant's message will be "Causes and Consequences of the War.

People from near-by cities are expected to attend this program which is being sponsored by Pi Gamma Mu, national social science honor society.

Plans Progressing For Annual Drama

Loyd Will Play In Role of King

Plans are progressing favorably for the presentation of the annual fall production of the S. T. C. Dramatic Club, J. M. Barrie's play, "A Kiss for Cinderella", according to Miss Leola Wheeler, director.

The play, which will be held on Friday night, November 16, at 8:00 concerns the story of a disillusioned English girl of old London, who believes herself to be Cinderella. The somewhat complicated plot involves a large cast of characters, including several little girls of training school and pre-school age, who, under Miss Wheeler's able direction are more than apt to be miniature scene-stealers.

Grace Loyd, junior from Lynchburg, has been selected to play the part of the king, which part had to be given up by the original actress. Grace took part in both of last year's plays, and is active in the Dramatic Club and various other organizations.

The other members of the cast as announced in last week's paper are Betty Bibb, Martha Showalter, Jackie Watson, Jean Cake, Martha Morehead, Delores Duck, Frances Marshall, Adelaide Coble, Janie Hanks, Betty Scoggins, Mary Lou Feamster, Lucia King, Rebecca Williams, Eloise Hanes, Virginia Holliifield, Charlotte Hutter, Martha Hatcher, Sue Davis, Nell Coleman, Evelyn Patterson, Mildred Hahn, Betty and Jane Burchett, and Joyce Hill.

The chairman of the committees of the play are: Properties, Louise Harrell; make-up, Nancy Pitts; lighting, Doris Rose Ramsey; costumes, Ann Shufflebarger; acting, Betty Minetree; and staging, Beanie Dudley.

39 Baptist Students Will Attend State B. S. U. Convention

According to a recent statement made by Miss Olivia Stephenson, Baptist Student Secretary, 39 Farmville girls will attend the Baptist Student Union convention to be held in Richmond, November 2-4.

On Friday night, November 2, there will be a Global banquet, the program of which will be under the direction of Miss Caralie Nelson, a former Farmville girl. Miss Nelson was president of the student body and valedictorian of her class in 1941. The Farmville B. S. U. has charge of the worship program for the same evening. Following this, Dr. Claude U. Broach, pastor of St. John's Baptist Church, Charlotte, North Carolina, will deliver the keynote address, "Christ, My Imperative". The regularly scheduled program for the evening will be concluded with the motion picture, "The Romance of a Century" which depicts the history of Southern Baptists for the past one hundred years.

Freshmen To Lead In Circus Parade

Event Starts at 8 In STC Gymnasium

Beginning at 3:30 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, November 10, Nancy Dickinson and Cornelia Hamilton will lead the circus parade through the streets of Farmville, while Violet Ritchie and Peggy Stevens will carry the flag. The parade will include clowns, bicycles, class floats, horses, band and animals.

Forming behind the college post office, the parade will go down Pine Street and on down St. George street to Third street, up to Main street, then to High street up as far at Butcher's store and back to college.

Practices are well underway for the class stunts to be presented as a part of the circus on Saturday night at 8 o'clock in the gym. Jane Taylor, freshman from Pungoteague; Mary Rattray, sophomore from Long Island, New York; Margaret Walton Wilkinson, junior from Martinsville; and Regina Portinarro, senior from Newport News, are directing the class stunts, while Anne Summers, senior from Hampden-Sydney; Carmen Low, junior from Hopewell; Beatrice Geyer, sophomore from Chatham; and Martha Gilliam, freshman from Charlottesville; are serving as class booth heads.

Frances Lee is serving as chairman of the event which is sponsored annually by Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honorary leadership society. Officers of the Joan Circle of AKG are Ann Martin, president; Shirley Cruser, vice-president; Virginia Treakle, secretary; and Eleanor Bisese, treasurer. Misses Elizabeth Burger and Ruth Gilaves are the advisers of the society.

The admission price for S. T. C. students is fifteen cents and for outsiders thirty cents.

Faculty Selects Representatives

Twelve seniors have been accepted to represent Farmville State Teachers College in the twelfth edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities" for this year. These girls were selected by a committee of the faculty and administration.

Those students whose names are listed are Carolyn Bobbitt, South Hill, vice-president of Student Government Association, and a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma; Eleanor Bisese, Norfolk, president of the senior class, treasurer of Pi Gamma Mu, and a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma; Jackie Parden, Portsmouth, president of Student Government Association, and a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma; and Freddie Ann Butt, Portsmouth, president of the House Council and member of Alpha Kappa Gamma.

Also, Minnie Lee Crumbpler, Suffolk, president of the Y. W. C. A., a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, and active in choir work; Lillian Elliott, Farmville, editor of the 1946 Virginian, secretary of the senior class, and a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma; Frances Lee, Richmond, president of the Athletic Association, a member of the H2 Club, Monogram Club, and Alpha Kappa Gamma; and Agnes Stokes, Kenbridge, president of Kappa Delta Pi; chairman of the Red Cross college unit, and a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma.

Also Virginia Treakle, Farmville, editor of the Rotunda, member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, and active in the Y. W. C. A.; Shirley Cruser, Norfolk, business manager of the 1946 Virginian and a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma; Lucy Brailey, Richmond, head of Student Standards; and Ann Martin, Suffolk, president of Alpha Kappa Gamma, and president of Beorc Eh Thorn.

These students were selected from a large list of eligible candidates on the basis of extra curricular activities, leadership and scholarship.

Excitement Reigns Supreme Over All As Interview With Jonniaux Nears

By BETTY SHANK

Imagine being chosen to interview anyone so eminent as Madame Jonniaux We were so excited over the assignment that we rushed out of the dining hall in such haste we forgot to swipe any rolls. We eager reporters were met in the lobby of the Weyanoke Hotel by Madame Jonniaux's manager who said that Madame would be down just as soon as her manicure would permit.

While waiting we learned from her manager that Madame Jonniaux was very glad to be back at S. T. C., the atmosphere of which she likes very much. It seems that this great world-traveler and observer has a very warm spot in her heart for Farmville, its faculty and girls. She even told us that when shown the place of Woodrow Wilson's baptism at Mary Baldwin College, Madame Jonniaux exclaimed, 'But have you seen the colonnade at Farmville?"

Presently Madame herself entered—her exquisite poise not in the least disturbed by this unexpected call, and in her charming manner put us at ease by telling us of her many experiences since her last visit here.

Monsieur and Madame Jonniaux took out their papers some time ago and will soon be ready to take the final step in becoming American citizens. This gracious lady says that it is their desire to become Virginians! America and Virginia will be very proud to claim them as their own. In addition, she told us that Monsieur Jonniaux believes his studio in Paris to have survived the war, and of his new work. He has recently completed six portraits of well known people in Richmond. During the month of January, forty of his paintings will be on exhibition at the National Museum in Washington.

For her lecture Friday night, Madame Jonniaux spoke on "World Unity and Our Part as Individuals" based on their observations at the San Francisco Conference. About the future of England, France, Germany and other countries, MadameJonniaux, being a confirmed optimist, said that it was her opinion that there need never be another world war as long as there is understanding between nations, She remarked a number of times on how impressed she was with the eagerness of all the delegates to cooperate in working out differences of opinions and difficult problems.

We are planning to have Madame Jonniaux again for she's popular and welcome at Farmville. In fact, she could come every quarter and we'd be delighted to hear her! How about you?

Debating Values Cited

An unusual opportunity exists on our campus for girls who are interested in public speaking and debating. This activity has had a place in the lives of our students for many years, and Farmville girls have won renown in debating tournaments from time to time.

A student in this college has to make choices concerning activities in which she will engage while a member of the student body. The activities are numerous to meet the needs of different types of girls. Some activities are valuable; others are not. One of the most valuable and worthwhile clubs on this campus is the debate club; indeed so valuable is the experience that comes to girls who become a part of this organization that it might be classified as co-curricular instead of extra-curricular.

Before a student shows her intentions to become a part of the definite organization, she should first take stock of the advantages and disadvantages which a particular activity would offer. Without much investigation, she could easily and readily see some very definite advantages for one who is interested in debating. A girl who debates or makes other public speeches becomes confident in her own ability and develops poise. This in itself is enough to make such an activity not only valuable but one to be desired. Few girls there are who do not yearn for that ability to stand on their own feet with poise and self control. Then, too, there is a definite educational advantage in the knowledge that one receives. In order to discuss what is used this year, "Resolved, that the United States Should Do Everything Possible to Promote Free Trade", a student would have to make a study of economics and government. Through this research, she should develop powers of analysis and would become mentally stimulated. Especially the rebuttal offers a chance for mental stimulation as one has to think on the impulse of the moment.

Third and last, but not least perhaps, is the opportunity that debaters have for meeting students from other colleges as they attend forensic debates and tournaments. In past years, local students have attended the South Atlantic debates and have also gone to northern colleges to debate intercollegiate questions.

The debate club and Pi Kappa Delta, national forensic society, sh ould be commended on the opportunities which they are making available to students on this campus to develop self control and poise, to stimulate mental capacities, and to attend off campus debates.

Students Urged To Rest

In chapel last week Dr. Jarman read to the student body a letter that he had written to our parents about the two cases of polio that are in the school. Dr. Jarman said that there was no reason for alarm and he quoted Dr. Ray Moore, school physician, in saying that the important thing for the students was to get plenty of rest, thus avoiding fatigue.

Authorities do not know the cause of polio, but many agree that rest is the best preventive. We are not paying enough attention to this warning. We don't want to think this will affect us, and we go trudging on our way, wearing ourselves out. When we are young and healthy, it is hard to realize that the care we take of ourselves now, will affect our lives not only now but in many years to come.

We suggest that you plan your day with a special time for rest, and rest when that time comes. By budgeting your time, you can finish your work for each day, and get to bed at the proper hour. Bull sessions are loads of fun at night, but we don't think they're quite so much fun when we have to grab the bed post to pull ourselves out of bed the next morning. We'll wish we had not played those last hands of bridge late at night, when we have to give up a weekend jaunt because we're sick.

We can erase the dark circles from under our eyes, we can work better, and we can avoid shut-in days now and later, if we will get the proper rest. We shall certainly reap what we sow where rest is concerned. Remember there is a time to work, a time to play, and a time to rest.

Military Training?

Now that the world is at peace, most Americans are tempted to resume the gay and wonderful life of the late thirties. We are not a people who long remember unpleasantness or who keep grudges. Many intelligent men have intimated that this may lead to our downfall. These same men propose peace-time conscription.

There are many arguments, pro and con, on the subject of compulsory military service. Alarmists aren't the only ones who are asking for it. Quite a few people think that if we don't stay prepared from now on there will be other Pearl Harbors, with other nations who are desirous of world power leading the attacks.

Probably most of America doesn't believe in compelling youth to fight. Those who take such a stand say that it is an infringement of our rights to be forced into anything. They want military service made so attractive that youth of its own free will will enlist. With so many returned veterans having first demand on the scanty supply of jobs, certainly a great number of these boys will be more than happy to be sure of food, clothing, shelter, and enough pay to buy certain small luxuries. These far-seeing citizens also think that compulsory military training would cause too much corruption in connection with West Point and Annapolis, the wealthier men being able to bribe unscrupulous senators for appointments.

Will America, in so heavily preparing for quarrels that might occur between our allies or our enemies and this nation, gain extensive power which will provoke the animosity of other countries, or will she become too weak if she does not order men to train for military service?

This is another question which requires much thought and foresight. The answer will not be found easily by research alone. The whole matter requires the understanding and careful consideration of an intelligent, non-aggressive, yet firm people. — Campus Comments, Mary Baldwin College.

State Makes Accomplishments, McDonald Remarks At Meeting

"There are certain accomplishments which Virginia has made in education in the last few years," Dr. Ralph McDonald, executive secretary of the department of higher education of the National Education Association, Washington, D. C., remarkd in his address at the second institute on Professional Relations which was held on the campus Thursday, October 25.

In his talk, the North Carolina educator mentioned and commended the fact that Virginia became the thirteenth state to adopt four full years of training as a minimum requirement for teaching. Dr. McDonald also paid tribute to the president of this college, Dr. J. L. Jarman, as one of the great leaders in education.

Some ear-marks of a profession, according to the speaker, are a specialized body of knowledge, arts, and skills; continuous study; service for public good rather than for private profits; and a constant desire to seek improvement. A person in a profession will also live according to a highly specialized code of ethics and will receive public recognition, the educator stated.

Twelve problems of professional relations were discussed by Dr. McDonald. These problems included the amount of investigation and research that is going on in the field of education, the in-service study of teachers, the need for weeding out profiteers from education, the host of people who engage in teaching without expectation of continuing over a year or two, a recognizable trend away from education, improvement of the quality of teacher education, building in teachers the zeal for improvement, and development of ethical codes of conduct. Also the strengthening of professional organizations, the necessity of securing the approval of people in the community, and the economic adequacy of salaries for teachers were cited as problems.

In concluding his message, Dr. McDonald stated that the people of the United States should be so fully educated of the necessity of sound, free, democratic education that it would seem that the solution to the problems of world peace ultimately lies in what happens in the human nature of the people who compose the nation. "Education is the fundamental basis on which we must build a better economic life," the speaker remarked.

Following the morning address, Dr. J. L. Blair Buck, director of teacher education of the state department led a panel discussion on "Difficulties Involved in Developing and Maintaining Desirable Professional Relations." During the afternoon session, Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, state superintendent of public instruction, presided over a symposium in which the topic "Ways of Improving Professional Standards and Relations" was discussed.

Concluding the meeting, Dr. John L. Manahan, dean of the department of education of the University of Virginia, and Professor George J. Oliver, dean of the department of education of the College of William and Mary, spoke on the topic, "Where Do We Go From Here?"

Question of the Week

What do you think of Rat Week?

Miss Moran: If it helped more people rather than just a few to establish friendly relationships and attitudes, then I would be in favor of it.

Miss Jennings: I think it is in a saner direction this year than heretofore. I do think one day is enough.

Miss Garnett: I think it's perfectly normal to have rat week, but nothing should be done that would make the girls fatigued.

Kitty Parham: I think it does just as much good as an orientation class.

Nellie Smith: I like it 'cause I'm not a rat this year.

Joyce Hill: I think it is wonderful and should be carried on because of tradition.

Peggy Stevenson: Good muley!

Jenny Lee Cross: I think it is all right and think it's gonna be fun.

Julia Booher: Honee! I love it!

"Shuffle": It helps the girls to get to know more people.

"Charlie Hop": I think it's a very important part of college life —a fine way to give recognition to the freshmen.

Doris Ballance: I don't think there's much to it.

Corrine Baker: It's one of the best ways I know for people to get to know everybody.

Jennie Sue Webb: I think it is going to be a lot of fun.

Margaret Whittle: I think it's meant for fun if the girls have the right attitude.

Cab Overbey: It's just rat week, that is, week of ratting.

Nancy Dickerson: I'm scared.

Berkeley Richardson: I think it's a good idea. Sophs get to know the frosh better (?).

Betty Minetree: I think its purpose could be carried out better.

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

Beneath shimmering red, yellow, and green streamers, luscious looking dresses and tails and tuxs (taken out of moth balls once more) formed a pattern never to be forgoten.. What a week end!

Despite a broken nose and two black eyes, Pete did arrive for the gala occasion and Cay had A-1 super time.

Mary Harrison's brother—better known as "the Red Head Charger" was ever more living up to his name.

And who was the handsomest man on the floor? It was none other than Betty Bibb's Ryland Tuck. What a smile that man does have!

The event of an eventful weekend was "Queenie" meets "Queenie."

Margie Hewlett and L. W. took to the wide open spaces Sunday in that long slinky cream convertible. Guess those Sunday afternoon walks in Farmville are a thing of the past.

Did you see Kitty Wright's Prince Charming? Well, if you didn't, you certainly missed the thrill of a lifetime.

Although the bus had to break down, Fitchet arrived just in time to intermission with Peggy T. Hubba! Hubba!

And who was the most surprised girl in school when Buddy dropped in Junior Building? Wonder if Mary Jane will ever recover?

Frankie Bell is still saying, "Another week—new hope!" There'll be no peace in that suite until Lt. Prichet comes back from India.

Best time of all was claimed by Nancy Dickerson who openly stated her intentions. Did you hear a wolf howl?

When is Bessy going to bring Bob back to S. T. C.? In case you are interested, that is Bessy going out the door every Saturday with a suitcase.

Between the jangling of the telephone and running to the Home Office to get telegrams, Dot Overstreet is just about a wreck. But it's worth every weary step when they bring the glad news that Don is coming.

Nobody can say Frank "Pebbleheater' (alias Stoneburner) doesn't have an eye for color!

Frances Lee is starting a new fashion; the bride who wore red! Well, he is coming (IN THREE WEEKS) laden with red silk and silver goblets!

"Charlie Hop" didn't miss meeting a bus last week end — after five months of "long time no see", he was in his seventh heaven when Ellie, Mary Walker, Poquey, and Betsy came back to their Alma Mater.

Did you say Dot's Don is in the Rotunda. Well, let's go and see that man!

Girls To Elect Hockey Captains

Round Robin Games Begin November 12

Hockey captains for the various classes will be elected Thursday, November 1, at the regular hockey period. These captains will serve as team captains throughout the entire hockey tournament, and will be elected from the number of girls who have acquired their eight hockey practices during the season.

The annual round robin hockey games are to begin Monday, November 12, Frances Lee, president of the Athletic Association, announced today. These games will continue throughout the entire week, with final clashes between juniors and seniors; and freshmen and sophomores scheduled for Saturday, November 17 at 2:15 o'clock. This hockey tournament will consist of a number of games in which every class team plays every other class team.

The winning team of this tournament will receive ten points towards the color cup for her respective color. No girl with less than eight practices will be allowed to enter any class game, Peggy T. Ross, general hockey manager, announced. Extra hockey practices will be scheduled during this week and next, and the time for these practices will be announced in the dining hall.

Monogram Club Holds Fall Initiation

The Monogram Club held its fall initiation Monday night, October 29 in the field house. New members who were initiated were Lucille Jones, Kitty Sue Bridgforth, and Magaret Ellett.

Old members of the Monogram Club, are, president, Margaret Orange; vice - president, Louise Blane; secretary-treasurer, Phyllis Watts. Other members are Lillian Elliott, Frances Lee, Margaret Lohr, Betty Parrish, and Peggy T. Ross. Faculty adviser is Miss Olive T. Iler, physical education instructor.

LEFT LEAD

HELLO AGAIN

Now you see us, now you don't! And it's more confusing to us than it is to you, believe it or not, but this week we're in high hopes of being back with you for good, for better or for worse, for a lot of fun, and for a little information about the hossiest people (Sophomores and otherwise) at S. T. C.

The month-old cry of "A horse, a horse, our campus for a horse!" has finally been answered . . . with six or seven of the nicest looking animals seen this side of a Horse Show! Riding started this week in full swing; classes are signed up and underway with Jeanne Sauerwein instructing. Mr. Cralle and Mr. Wells "bought out" the supply of horses at a recent sale at Camp Pickett, and the field includes six fine looking mares and geldings, one of which is five-gaited, and all of which are spirited and wellkept riding horses. In fact, one is so spirited his stay at the stables will probably be limited . . . tossing a sailor off twice in an hour speaks no good for a horse, no matter how beautiful he may be. After all . . . we do have a few beginners.

SHOW TALK

We aren't sure about Maryland, but last week end was the grand finale for the horse show season in Virginia, with one final round-up at the Briar Patch in Hilton Village. It was a gala two-day affair with over twenty classes, and among the old favorites there we found the kangaroo of the stables, Sanoj, as well as champion Huntsmans' Pride and the rest of Mrs. Todd's clan; Mr. Craigle's Carefree; a new high-steper, Captain Christian, and dozens of other beauties from in and out of the state. For something different, there were classes of Tennessee walking horses, with one Chief's Rex, a rangy roan, literally walking off with top honors. Then too, there was "Sonny Boy", the trick horse who did everything from say his prayers to see an inebriated master safey home. It's variety like that which makes for a good show.

Back to Maryland went Professor Sauerwein, though for zest and excitement of some real hunting. She may not have come back with the brush, but there was a glow in her eyes that meant the thrill of real riding.

TID-BITS

There's a new book out by John Steinbeck called "The Red Pony" . . . or if it isn't new, at least it has been very recently revived. Horse-lovers will like it, and nearly everyone should enjoy it . . . One inducement to get people to the stables may be the fact that there is a potential class in mind for the H.-S. C. boys . . . with this to look forward to, there should be some interested spectators around the ring, if not in it . . . Now that Rat Week is over, we'll be hearing more of "Walk, trot, and canter" than we will of "Skip, rat!" . . . or at least we hope to!

Don't let the weather fool you, and don't put it off any longer . . . we'll meet you at the stables!

Stay on the bit . . .

Color Rush Date Set November 17

Color rush in the various buildings will be held Saturday, November 17, at 1:30 o'clock. Runners in this contest will be chosen from the various classes after try-outs have been made. Each class chooses three runners who will run against members of the opposing class color. The races take place in Senior building, Junior building, Library Hall, Main, White House, and Student building. There will be official timers, starters, and judges on each hall.

Only students participating in the races will be allowed in the building after the warning bell rings. If any person is in her room or on the hall after the starting bell rings, her participant will be disqualified for the race.

Winners on each hall place their respective color banner over the entrance to that building. The color rush gives five points towards the color cup.

Quarter Matches Played In Tennis

Phyllis Watts, tennis manager, has announced the scores of the quarter-final matches which were played off last week in the annual singles tennis tournament. Beanie Dudley defeated Betty Burchett, 1-6, 6-3, 6-4. Frances Lee defeated Mary Harrison, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

The semi - final and final matches are to be played this week. Lucy Brailey will play Beanie Dudley; and Mary Jane King will play Frances Lee. The winners of these two matches will play for the winner in the final round of the singles tennis tournament.

Newman Club Names Livesay President

Frances Livesay, junior from Emporia, was recently named president of the Newman club to succeed Helene Griffin who didn't return to school this fall. Frances was elected vice-president of the group last spring and served in that capacity until her recent election to the presidency.

Elected as vice-president was Mary Williams, while Barbara DeHardit was selected as secretary.

On the Ball

Old "Sol" is showing his face again for all you sport fans. Last week was a slight bit damp for those outdoor sports and physical education classes. This week shows promise of fair weather and fun.

Tennis

With the final matches for the singles tournament coming up this week, the first points toward the color cup will be added this week. Come out to those matches and support your color. Maybe your class isn't represented, but you will be interested in cheering for your sister class. The courts are in excellent playing condition, and so if you wish an hour of exciting pastime, get yourself a partner and come out and use the courts at any time other than during the regular class periods.

Hockey

There is a little over two weeks remaining for you to get in your hockey practices before those momentous class games begin. As Thanksgiving holidays are being granted us, all games will be played before the holidays begin. A varsity team will be selected sometime this week to compete against William and Mary College.

You have just as good a chance to be selected as anyone else, so come on out and show your skill in the game this week.

Keeping Fit

The idea of "keeping fit" has been introduced to you many times, but no one really seems to fully realize the importance of this phrase until she loses her resistance to colds and other common diseases and has to spend a week in the infirmary resulting in a loss of classes and fun. Consider Dr. Jarman's advice and get plenty of rest, fresh air, and well-balanced diet. Even one day lost if you are not in circulation proves to be a great loss in many respects.

November 17 Set For Song Contest On Local Campus

Class song contest, which is held every year near the end of hockey season, will take place Saturday, November 17 in the large auditorium during chapel hour. Every class produces the song that has been written, and songs will be judged by judges chosen from the faculty. The winner of this contest is based on originality, suitability to the occasion, and pep. No points for the color cup are obtained from this contest, but much class spirit is produced from the songs.

While the judges are making their decisions, cheer leaders, chosen from the various classes, will lead team cheers.

Pan-Hel Gives Tea In Student Lounge

Scholarship Plaque Awarded Mu Omega

At the annual Pan-Hellenic tea held yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the student lounge, Mu Omega sorority won the scholarship plaque with a yearly average of 1.87. The award was made by Evelyn Grizzard, president of the Pan-Hellenic Council to Grace Loyd, president of Mu Omega.

Dean Martha Smith Smith spoke to the guests on the topic, "Minerva Was Not a Bookworm." Also, as a part of the program which was planned by Betty Adams, Pan-Hel program chairman, Anna Headlee played the accordian, Kitty East rendered a vocal solo, and Catherine Bickle played a violin solo.

Alpha Sigma Alpha came out secondly in the year's averages with an average of 1.86; Phi Zeta Sigma placed third with 1.85; and Theta Sigma Upsilon, fourth, with an average of 1.81. Placing fifth was Sigma Sigma Sigma with an average of 1.70; while Alpha Sigma Tau had an average of 1.69; Gamma Theta, 1.65, and Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.61.

In the averages for the spring quarter last year, Alpha Sigma Alpha was first with an average of 1.90; Phi Zeta Sigma second with 1.84, and Theta Sigma Upsilon was third with an average of 1.78. Mu Omega had an average of 1.78; Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.66; Alpha Sigma Tau, 1.59; Gamma Theta, 1.56; and Sigma Sigma, Sigma, 1.54.

The present scholarship plaque was first won by Phi Zeta Sigma sorority in 1938-39. This plaque then went to Mu Omega sorority in 1939-40 and back to Phi Zeta Sigma in 1940-41. Mu Omega again won the plaque in 1941-42, after which Phi Zeta Sigma won it for three consecutive years, 1942-43, 1943-44, and 1944-45.

13 Girls Pledge Local Sororities

Thirteen girls pledged sororities last week as a result of fall rushing, according to an announcement by Evelyn Grizzard, president of the Pan-Hellenic Association.

Pledging Sigma Sigma Sigma were Kitty Hankins, Richmond; and Eloise Stancell, Emporia; and pledging Gamma Theta was Patricia Carter, Bluefield, West Virginia.

Betty Gillespie, Grundy; Ethel Harrison, Emporia; and Marjorie Tice, Tazewell, pledged Pi Kappa Sigma, and Jane Anderson, Farmville; Pauline Barnes, Richmond; Kathleen Cage, Nathalie; Virginia Farrier, New Castle; Elizabeth Mountcastle, Mountcastle; Mary Ellen Petty, Wren; and Irene Pomeroy, Quinton, pledged Theta Sigma Upsilon.

much of the value of the course is taken away. On the other hand, Dr. Lancaster does believe that the whole program of education will be "vitalized" by our war experience. Another point that he brought out was the need for coordinating vocational and liberal education. In his opinion, this is vitally necessary in order to preserve our democratic ideals. He pointed out that it is dangerous to allow vocational education to be conducted in separate grouos employing the concentrated war method because each group would be interested only in itself. Whereas if it were combined with liberal education, there would be little or no tendency for these vocational groups to form minorities, corresponding to labor unions that would work for the ultimate destruction of the Democratic principle.

Just as we eager beavers were enthusiastically pumping all possible information from Dr. Lancaster, Mr. Holton repented of his part in the capture and came in to rescue him. A few minutes later, after taking in about all our feeble brains could hold, we liberated our captive and allowed him to proceed unharmed but breathless to the tea in the Student Lounge.

Dr. Walmsley Elected To Y Advisory Board

Dr. James Elliott Walmsley, professor of history and social sciences, was elected a member of the Y. W. C. A. advisory board at a meeting of the student body last week to succeed Dr. George Jeffers. As well as being active in the civic affairs of Farmville, Dr. Walmsley is adviser of Pi Gamma Mu, and during the time that the War Council was active on the campus, he was adviser of that group.

Each year one member of the Board finishes a term of office, and annually a student election is held to name a successor.

Other members of the Board are Miss Winnie V. Hiner, chairman; Miss Mary Clay Hiner, Miss Olivia Stephenson, Miss Pauline Camper, and Dr. Floyd F. Swertfeger.

Alpha Kappa Gamma to Raise Big Top

Crumpler To Open Week of Programs

Education Week Will Be Observed

"Education to Promote General Welfare" is the theme of American Education Week which will be observed on this campus next week, November 11 to 17.

Special programs on this theme will be presented in chapel each day during the week. Minnie Lee Crumpler, president of the Y. W. C. A., will begin the program on Tuesday by making a talk on "How Can the Student Safeguard Her Spiritual Life While in the College."

Stokes, Parden Speak

On Wednesday, Agnes Stokes, president of Kappa Delta Pi, will speak on "How Can the Student Economize Time and Secure Efficiency in Study While Here in the College." "How Can the Student be a Good Citizen While Here in the College Without Neglecting Her Studies" will be the theme of the talk made the following day by Jackie Parden, Student Government president.

Lee Gives Message

Frances Lee, president of the Athletic Association, will deliver the final speech Friday on "How Can the Student Keep Well and Happy While Here in the College." A musical program will be given Saturday sponsored by the music department.

Dr. J. P. Wynne, head of the education department, and a committee of students were in charge of planning the week's program.

Stokes Announces Durant Lecture Tickets Go On Sale

According to an announcement made this week by Agnes Stokes, tickets are now on sale for the lecture by Dr. Will Durant on Monday night, November 26, at 8 o'clock. The price of the ticket is 75 cents for students and outsiders. All seats will be reserved.

Dr. Durant is a well-known author, lecturer, philosopher and historian. The topic for his speech will be "Causes and Consequences of the War."

Crumpler Attends N. C. Conference During Past Week

On November 2-4, Minnie Lee Crumpler, president of the Y. W. C. A., and a group of students from Mary Washington and Randolph-Macon Colleges, attended the conference, "Adventure In Applied Christianity," held at Duke University and N. C. College.

Each year North Carolina college students attend this conference for the purpose of considering the most pressing phases of their lives as Christians today. This year's theme was, "The Time Is Now", and the conference was under the auspices of the North Carolina Council of Churches and the American Friends Service Committee.

Outstanding speakers for the conference included Dr. William G. Carleton, who spoke on "The International Situation"; Dr. David Jones, whose address was "Christian Students Go Forward"; and Dr. H. Sheiton Smith, who delivered an address on "The Christian Imperative."

The three workshop discussions were "The Basis for Christian Action", "Southern Problems", and 'Our International Task."

Lancaster To Speak Here On November 14

Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society in education, will sponsor a lecture given by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, state superintendent of public instruction, on November 14 at 8 o'clock in the student lounge. The faculty and student body are cordially invited to attend.

Betty Adams, chairman of the program committee, will introduce Dr. Lancaster, who will speak on the topic, "Trends in Education."

The Beta Epsilon Chapter of Kappa Delta Pi was organized in 1928. The membership in this organization is confined to students of the junior and senior years, whose scholarship ranks in the upper fourth of that of the student body.

Holton Announces Total of War Fund

Student organizations, faculty and administration contributed $832 to the War Fund for this year, according to an announcement by S. M. Holton, Jr., chairman of the college contributions.

Thirty-eight organizations contributed $405.50 of the total $832, and the faculty and administration gave $426.50. The total contributed last year was $768.50.

The organizations that contributed are Alpha Kappa Gamma, Alpha Phi Sigma, Association of Childhood Education, Athletic Association, Beore Eh Thorn, Choir, Choral Club, Baptist Student Union, Canterbury Club, Newman Club, Wesley Foundation, Westminster Fellowship, freshman class, sophomore class, junior class, senior class.

Also Colonnade, Cotillion Club, French Circle, Gamma Psi, Granddaughters Club, Kappa Delta Pi, Orchesis, Pi Gamma Mu, Rotunda, and Sigma Pi Rho.

Also Alpha Sigma Alpha, Alpha Sigma Tau, Gamma Theta, Mu Omega, Phi Zeta Sigma, Pi Kappa Sigma, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Theta Sigma Upsilon, Town Girls Club, Virginian, and Y. W. C. A.

Hilarious Madhouse of Fun Comes To STC In Form of Annual Circus

By JEAN CAKE

The circus is coming to town! Big show! Wild animals! Stunts! "Peanuts, popcorn, chewing gum, crackerjacks, buy your eats before the show starts. "Peanuts!"—And so it goes. Excitment and mystery are the prevalent feelings at S. T. C. this week for Saturday, November 10 is the big day—Alpha Kappa Gamma circus!

Everything is being done to make this event as much like a good old time circus as possible. Preparations are just about complete for a hilarious madhouse of fun. Animal trainer "Shuffle" has her pride and joys well aired from their moth balls and in excellent shape with the right tails on the right beasts. And you know we can hardly wait to see those class stunts everybody's practicing for—better than any Barnum and Bailey three-ringer, so they say. And golly, gee! if the deep, dark secret of the identity of the Circus Queen and her court isn't soon revealed, we'll just die of curiosity. But the press would be the last people they'd tell a secret to, so guess we'll have to wait 'til the unveiling on Saturday night like everybody else. You know, of course, that everything centers around Mother Goose so don't forget to study up on your nursery rhymes so nobody will be a stranger to you.

In case you'd like to know where to get rid of some extra money just amble past those booths on Saturday night and you won't be able to resist those tempting hot dogs, ice cream cones, and pink lemonade. And you'll want to try your luck at bingo, darts or pitching pennies too. Don't tell me you don't believe in fortune telling, either, because from the looks of the mob outside that tent everybody will be crystal gazing to see who their next star gazing partner will be. Jitterbugs and hepcats will find their seventh heaven in the Senior dance corner with all the latest tunes.

So prepare to come early and stay late because, la-dies and gentlemen, the big, beautiful, glorious, and glittering circus is coming to town and will pitch its big top at S. T. C. for a wonderful evening of old-fashioned rip-roaring fun.

Treakle Reveals Staff Additions

18 New Students To Assume Duties

Eighteen students have been added to the Rotunda staff according to an announcement made this week by Virginia Treakle, editor-in-chief of the college weekly.

Betty Marie Pairet and Mary Agnes Millner and Nancy M. Taylor have been added to the news staff, headed by Mary Helmer, while Jean Cake, Betty Lewis Shank, Betty Spindler, and Cab Overbey have been added to the feature staff under the direction of Betty Deuel Cock. Lelia Bouldin will serve on the social staff, headed by Evelyn Grizard, and Ruth Radogna has been named as a proof reader, working under Betty Lewis, head.

Working with Ruth Rowe, who has just been appointed as advertising manager, will be Lee Ewing, Betty Jefferson, Frances Ferguson Marshall, and Ann Pullen. Serving on the circulation staff, headed by Mary Stewart Buford are Dorothy Chambers, Evelyn Rogers, and Alice Smith.

New typists for the Rotunda are Mary Davis and Andrea Garrison, working under the leadership of Dorothy Geiston. There are no additions to the sport staff at this time, which is headed by Louise Blane.

Sophomores To Cap Freshmen Tonight

Immediately after Prayers tonight, the sophomores will cap the freshmen at the traditional ratcapping service, Peepsie Brooks, president of the sophomore class, has announced. This service will be held in the gymnasium.

At 10 o'clock tonight in the large auditorium, big rat court will be held at which time all freshmen will wear white and all sophomores will wear red and white. The best rat will be announced and four other girls will be given honorable mention.

Club To Present Three-Act Play

Plot of Production Set In England

On Friday night, November 16, the S. T. C. Dramatic Club will present its fall production, Barrie's three-act play, "A Kiss for Cinderella," at 8:00 p. m., in the large auditorium.

The story concerns a young British girl of somewhat difficult circumstances who, unwell from over-work and lack of proper food, believes herself to be the Fairy-tale Cinderella in person. The time of the play is World War 1, and the place, London. Cinderella (played by Jackie Watson) has an air of mystery about her which puzzles her kind friend, the artist Bodie (Betty Bibb) and infuriates the slow Scotland Yardsman (Martha Showalter). The second act of the play serves to throw light on the mystery .... but to complicate the plot by presenting a feverish dream of the ill girl, picturing delightfully the entire Court scene of the Fairy Ball which Cinderella attends. Variety in staging appears in the third act which takes place in a World-War-One hospital, and here a minor love interest is discovered in the comical Danny (Eloise Haynes) a convalescent soldier and the Probationer-nurse, played by Virginia Hollifield.

The three refugee children are portrayed by three Farmville children, Mary Kay and Ruthie Catlin, and Beverly Rippard. The play is under direction of Miss Leola Wheeler, and is open to the public as well as to the college girls.

Spanish Club Elects Stancell Treasurer

At a recent meeting of the Spanish club, Eloise Stancell, Emporia, was elected treasurer, and Mary Wyatt, South Boston, was appointed head of the circus booth according to an announcement made by Evelyn Goodman, president of the club.

Students taking part on the program included Mary Lou Feamster, Enieda Costa, Sue Hundley, Margaret Ellett, Isabelita Maldonado, Iraida Ramerez, Felicidad Avellanet, June Cregar, and Martha Anderson. Also as a part of the program, the first year students sang "Cielito Lindo", the third year group sang "Chiapanecas" and "Alla-En El Rancho Grande", and the seniors sang "Adios Muchachos.."

Senior Head Names Chairmen For Dance

Eleanor Bisese, president of the senior class, has announced the following committee heads for the senior dance which will be given December 8.

Anne Summers is chairman of the decoration committee; Lillian Elliott heads the tickets; Betty Ellis is in charge of the figure; Lucie McKenry heads the floor committee; Dorothy Overcash is chairman of the program; and Peggy T. Ross heads the music committee.

Jane Philhower is serving as general chairman of the dance.

Frances Lee, who is serving as general chairman of the circus.

Scott Announces New Chapel Regulations

New chapel regulations, which were to go into effect immediately, were announced in chapel last Wednesday by Nell Scott, chairman of the chapel committee.

According to these new rules, four unexcused chapel absences will deprive a student of one cut in her first class on Friday. If this cut has been taken already, the cut for next quarter will be taken away.

During spring quarter, four unexcused absences will cause a student to have to go to breakfast every morning for two weeks. Every unexcused absence after this will add another week to the penalty.

These rules were set up by the Student Government Association.

Mantiply To Head Surgical Dressings

Jane Mantiply, sophomore from Fishersville, will serve as chairman of the surgical dressing committee, Agnes Stokes, Red Cross head, has announced. Jane is editor of "Westminster Fellowship" and reporter for the French Circle.

There is still a great need for assistance in making these dressings. Only 500 of the 1000 quota were made last week.

Jane is urging that a large number of girls spend at least one of the two hours 7-9 in the art laboratory on Monday nights. No special uniform is needed.

Afternoon Parade Will Begin Circus

Mother Goose Is Theme of Circus

On Saturday night, November 10, at 8 o'clock, Alpha Kappa Gamma will raise the "Big Top" over the annual circus in the S. T. C. gym. The theme of the circus is centered around Mother Goose; the identity of the queen and her court and of the ringmaster will not be revealed until Saturday night.

The main events of the circus will begin with a parade through Farmville on Saturday afternoon. Nancy Dickinson and Cornelia Hamilton, freshmen, will lead the parade, and Peggy Stevens and Violet Ritchie will carry the flag. In addition to horses, clowns, bicycles, and animals, each class will sponsor a float.

Queen To Be Revealed

The circus queen has been selected from candidates in the senior class, and in her court, there will be one member from each of the other classes. The ringmaster, who is the master of ceremonies, will preside over the events Saturday night, beginning with the presentation of class stunts. Following the usual procedure, the identity of the queen will be revealed after the animal show directed by Anne Shufflebarger, animal trainer. Following this, the class stunts will be presented.

Directing the freshman stunt is Jane Taylor, and heading up the sophomore stunt is Mary Rattray. Margaret W. Wilkinson is in charge of the junior stunt, and Regina Portinarro heads the senior group.

Lee Heads Circus

Frances Lee, senior from Richmond and president of the Athletic Association, is serving as general chairman of the circus, while Ann Martin, senior from Suffolk and president of Alpha Kappa Gamma, is assisting on all committees.

Lillian Elliott and Margaret Lohr are in charge of the parade; and Minnie Lee Crumpler and Dorothy Overcash are heading the court committee. In charge of advertising is Virginia Treakle, assisted by Martha Russell East; animals, Agnes Stokes, assisted by Margie Hewlett; decorations and floor, Shirley Cruser, assisted by Carolyn Bobbitt; Eleanor Bisese and Margaret Ellett have charge

Many Skills, Ideas Needed To Give Barrie's Production

By BETTY DEUEL COCK

The Show must go on! Yes, even with the usual apparently hopeless properties to find, with the costuming difficulties even more difficult than usual, and with staging and lighting effects presenting at least the usual problems, what with all these, the show must still go on.

"A Kiss for Cinderella" by Barrie is not an easy play to produce. The plot of the story is timed during World War I; the setting is in England. And among the varied cast of characters present, we find the costume department struggling like mad to clothe suitably a Red Cross worker, an army nurse, a convalescent soldier, a Scotland Yard "Bobby", and at the same time, to find a smock for the artist, three minute "nighties" for the younger set, regal robery for a king and queen and their whole court of lords and ladies, and a ball-gown for the gentle Cinderella.

On the somewhat weird list of properties, we find everything from fishing rods to ice cream cones . . . and including pins, thermometers, an executioner's axe, a tea-wagon, and a wheel chair. Believe it or not, the wheel chair was one of the easiest of all to find, and the thing that has caused the most trouble is an old-fashioned muffler . . . the like of which can't be turned up in an attic of anyone in or around Farmville! Well, it's not too late to start knitting!

Make-up difficulties haven't failed to arise, and just to make wigs exciting, there's been much persuasion and a lot of trouble, but you'll no doubt find some of the main-er characters shearing off their crowning glory . . . 'cause as we said, the show must go on, and quibbling over a mere haircut can't stop it.

In Memoriam

Again the students, faculty, and administration mourn the passing of a loved one, Dr. Edith Stevens. We all realize that we have lost not only one of our best teachers, but one of our best friends. She was a friend to all of us. Everyone knew her and loved her dearly. When she passed us in the hall or on the campus, we smiled, spoke, and went on our way feeling better. The twinkle in her eyes gave us new spirit to go smiling through the day.

We loved the exact way she had about her. Her exactness was a quality that many of us lack, a quality we would love to have. She was exact in her dress, in her classroom, and in her lab. We loved her because teaching to her was not a breadwinner, but a pleasure. She loved her work, and she sought to make us love it as she did.

We loved her because she wanted us to feel that she was on our level. She liked for the girls to call her Miss Stevens and not Dr. Stevens. In this way, we felt that she saw our point of view.She seemed never to forget that she, too, was once a college girl.

We loved Miss Stevens for her faithfulness. For 18 years, she has served State Teachers College as only one with a faithful heart could serve. She served by imparting her great knowledge to the many students that have studied under her. Miss Stevens has left us, but our memory of her will be everlasting. She has left a place in our school that will never be filled.

We loved her for her attractiveness. We shall long remember her all-important lectures that sparkled with winsome anecdotes. We loved her most of all because she loved us.

Thanks for Education

It is a happy coincidence that Thanksgiving Day and American Education Week come in the same month, November. Ours is the only nation that sets apart a Thanksgiving Day regularly, and likewise the only one which devotes a week annually to emphasis on education. While the end of the war in victory is naturally uppermost in our minds as a reason for thankfulness, we may well be grateful for our system of universal education and its preservation amid dangers.

We should not be complacent, however. Education cannot stand still. It must move with the times, or even ahead of the times, if it is to keep its full value.

Returning service men point to the deficiencies in our typical education. A young soldier told me he could speak Malayan better after six months' instruction from a native teacher untrained in pedagogy than he was able to speak French after six years under cultivated professors full of educational theory. Of course, he spent his life studying Malayan, not playing football, attending fraternity meetings, and dancing in night clubs.

After such experiences as that, it is small wonder that many men home from overseas are indifferent to education that is offered them here. They don't want more of merely the same thing they got before they entered the armed services.

What this points to is that we must develop postwar plans for education. We have lots of education, and it has lots of good things in it, but how thoroughly does it train the boys and girls exposed to it? Not too well, if one compares it with first class army or navy training in similar subjects.

Our education ought in the future, it seems, to do three things. One of these is to train children to make a living when they become adults. That ought to be intensive training. The youngsters may complain that they are overworked, but they won't be. I used to be a teacher, and I never encountered a student who overworked, though I knew hundreds who overplayed.

There should be a second type of training, equally intensive. That should be in citizenship: community citizenship, state citizenship, national citizenship, world citizenship. It should present the facts about the human society in which we live. It should aim at eliminating all prejudice, all intolerance, with the idea of giving every individual a fair chance and enabling all of us to live together in harmony.

These two types of training of themselves will develop capacity for a fairly full, rich life. But the time that remains—and there will be plenty—may well be devoted to what we usually call cultural subjects, subjects that t e n d chiefly to make life more enjoyable.

Such a plan would mean quite a revamping of American education, but I am confident it would develop citizens with a knowledge of where they are going, where their country is going, and why. — Nelson Crawford, Household Magazine, November 1945.

Gleanings

Mildred Altice

The flame of freedom has burned persistently for many hundred years. In the seventeenth century religious freedom was the objective. The eighteenth century was most outstanding for its search for political freedom. In the past two centuries social equality and economic freedom have become the goal—the lofty ideal. Current news of the week reveals that some parts of the world are still striving for political freedom. The uprisings in Java, Indo-China, and Egypt are excellent examples of this assumption. Other parts of the world are striving for more economic freedom and social equality. The unrest and actual civil war in South America, China, the Balkans, and Poland are examples of this quest. Aside from actual uprisings are the results of the battle for votes in France and England and labor-management unrest and disturbance in the United States. This quest for every type of freedom, in my opinion, will prove a mightier force than reaction or even peace. Realistic acceptance of this fact could prevent much heartache, bloodshed, and suffering.

This week witnesses the beginning of the conference of labor and management. Above all, the conference must practice cooperation as a duty to the veterans and to those who will never come home. The general public also has a duty. Their duty is patience and impartiality. Patience and cooperation are a very small price to pay for possible future prosperity in our own country and future peace for all the countries of the world. America has an excellent oportunity to carry the torch into new and grander fields of freedom with a genuine working democracy.

Question of the Week

What are you going to do Thanksgiving?

Martha Wells: Well, I've got some good ideas . . .

Martha Russell East: I jes' don't know.

Margo Skelton: I'll still be takin' 'bout that call from Honolulu!

Kakie Hundley: I 'magine I'll have a big fight.

Shirley Penn Slaughter: Don't quote me!

Cab Overbey: Break my diet!

Betty Minnetree: (from the depths of the bath tub) Hubba, hubba!

Patsy Saunders: Going HOME!

Ann Taylor: Might go to West Virginia.

Phyllis Scherberger: Be in my brother's wedding in Georgia.

Connie Christian: Goin' home and have a rugged time!

Nancy Ingle: Have a big time, wherever I am.

Nancy Whitehead: Root for V. P. I.

Mar Kent Stevens: Ditto.

Martha Sours: There's no telling.

Ann Nichols: I'm going home to Tennessee . . . where they celebrate on the 29th!

Frances Seward: Jus' goin' home—that's all.

Dot May: Well, it's gonna be fun!

Maggie McIntyre: Goin' to the Carolina-Duke game and have a big time.

Cay Lynch: Goin' to the Tech game with Pete.

Anonymous: Eat a whole turkey, cranberry sauce, plum pudding, pumpkin pie, mashed 'taters, spiced pears, and all the trimmin's, all by myself!

Frances Shackelford: That's a silly question to ask!

Sing a Song of Telephones–They're Busy Ringing All the Time

By MARGARET W. WILKINSON

Br-r-r-r, br-rr-r, br-r-r, hello, hello, hello, number pleez, number pleez. Ain't nothin' wrong with me that a nickle won't cure. I live right around the corner from a telephone—Telephone!

Sing a song of telephones
Busy all the time
Four and twenty operators
All calling 5-2-9.

Put on the pressure cooker, Mom, we're having corn for supper.

Come on, chillluns, lets get down to cases. Now for the benefit of a few who may not know the features of a telephone—it is made up of—well—er, do-dads, and er, er, nick-nacks and er, well, it's a little black thing that talks encased in a booth. (Guess I got out of that one all right.) Next less—To get it to talk, you drop in anything that looks like a nickel, slugs preferably but if you're temporarily out, maybe the person you're calling isn't, so say "collect, pleez." This usually applies to your parents when the piggy bank has given its last grunt. Now for the final lesson. If you're paying for the call three minutes is the limit; if not, the night is young—

When Edison first invented the tella-phone, land, our grandparents ran from the fool contraption with energy equal to the atomic bomb but now we kinda reverse the situation. The freshmen race to answer it (friend of mine was seriously trampled the other day) waving the big banner of high hope—they're the most popular. Then the sophs walk; little more dignified—the juniors finally drag in after it has been ringing half an hour, and the seniors are kinda deaf unless it's the specified time the man said he'd call. Who'd blame them after they've answered it for three years usually for Carry Core who doesn't live here anymore?

But the telephone has a system all its own. You can wait for hours for a call to come—it won't unless you get in the tub, wash your hair, or get ready for sacking time, You can lose weight answering the telephone, but just get ready to make a call—in a couple of hours you can work from fifteenth up to fifth in the line if you're lucky. You can go to sleep and someone blows up their lungs and bellows "Abba Wzzxy on ug floor." But, I'm here to tell you, it's all worth it when it happens to be your name and the one and only says, "Hi—there, Darling", and sends you skyward bound on that boo-ti-ful pink cloud.

So ring, telephone, ring!

LETTER TO EDITOR

Dear Editor,

Surely all girls know that prayers are immediately after supper in the auditorium, but when you hear all of the noise around, you often wonder. You can not help being distracted, and it ruins the effect of the service. It seems that for these five minutes, the girls who do not care to go to prayers would have more consideration for those who do go for a very few minutes of meditation. This is an appeal to you girls who thoughtlessly have disturbed the evening devotional. Knowing the spirit of Farmville girls, this condition will surely improve in the near future.

Circus Comes To Town

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

Seems as though S. T. C. is going to need an extension to the Rotunda—for last week end there was standing room only! The wolves were everywhere howling inside and those who couldn't get inside (proof of the need of an extension) howled outside.

And what about those ten extra men in the Rotunda Sunday night?

While on the subject of the Rotunda—brickbats to the mob of girls hanging over second floor Rotunda Sunday night. It certainly gives a nice impression of the school.

Those trips to Pickett can certainly bring results. How about that Mary Ann?

Hilda Bennett and Paige Cook likewise didn't waste any time.

Since when did Julia Booher start taking studying so seriously that she couldn't date such an attractive young man? You know that line has been a little overworked!

Did you see Bobby Graham charging down the hall the other day? Well, the only detail that could be heard in the uproar was discharge.

These conferences to Duke sound like quite the thing according to Minnie Lee, and what was that about the football game?

Just call Evelyn Patterson and Grace Mallory "prom trotters". Come Saturday they took off, in quite a rush, for that place of many charms, N. C. State.

Tuesday was the day of all days on Dot's calendar because that man came home after these many months of waiting.

It seems that Maggie McIntyre just can't stay away from Duke. It's really getting to be a tradition for every week end to be a Duke week end. But this time she took Pocahontas along to meet Bob as well as the other attractive features of that institution.

It must be nice to have your m[illegible]ed roommate pass along her man to you. Minnie Rose and Mary Virginia think it's quite the best idea yet!

Glennis Moore was the picture of happiness Sunday—if you saw him you'd know why!

Ho! Hum! Better dash off to the library while there are still seats left. Wouldn't be very restful standing in the stacks all night and business should be big after those grade estimates. By the way, tell the girls who had the relapse that the best advice from an old timer is: To be prepared for anything with a glass of ammonia.

Y News

By ANNA HEADLEE

The committees of the Y. W. C. A. will meet tonight at 9 o'clock. There will be a special program at each meeting.

The Episcopal girls announce their Sunday night waffle suppers are still being continued. The Canterbury Club has been having special workers to speak on the various faiths.

Baptist girls! Don't forget the Mission Study Group meetings led by Mrs. John Allen Moore at the Student Center each night at 9 o'clock.

November 11 is Church Affiliation Sunday at the Presbyterian Church. Students who would like to become affiliated are asked to see Martha Russell East. This will not affect home church memberships. The church supper held last Sunday was reported to be a big success.

Methodist girls are invited to the supper to be held at the church next Sunday at 5:30 o'clock. Sign up on the bulletin board and bring your dates.

The theme for the week in Prayers is "Personal Faith and Growth". There will be a musical program tonight.

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our eternal home.

Frances Lee Wins Tennis Tournament; Adds 5 Points To Color Cup

Champion Defeats Dudley In Finals

Red and White gained five points for the color cup Tuesday afternoon when Frances Lee, senior, defeated Beanie Dudley, junior, in the final tournament for the fall season. In the semi-finals, Dudley defeated Bralley and Lee defeated King.

In the matches that were played, Bralley defeated Nancy Parrish, 6-0, 6-0; Jane Bell defaulted to Dot White; Bralley defeated D. White, 6-0, 6-2; and Beanie Dudley defeated B. Bralley, 6-4, 6-3. Betty Parrish defeated Grace Loyd, 6-3, 6-2; Beanie Dudley defeated Betty Parrish; P. Watts defeated Kitty Bridgforth, 6-0, 6-0; Betty Burchett defeated P. Watts, 6-2, 6-1; Beanie Dudley won over Betty Burchett, 6-1, 4-6, 6-1; and Frances Lee defeated Nellie Smith, 6-2, 6-1. Jane Burchett won over B. Russell; Frances Lee defeated J. Burchett, 6-3, 6-3; Sara Youngblood defeated Lucille Jones; Mary Harrison defeated Youngblood, 6-0, 6-2; Frances Lee defeated M. Harrison, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3; and Mary Jane King won over Jean Bentley, 6-1, 6-2. Lou Baker lost to M. Orange; Mary Jane King defeated M. Orange, 6-1, 6-2; Frances Lee defeated Mary Jane King 6-2, 7-5; Frances Lee won over Beanie Dudley 6-3, 6-4.

Another tournament will be played in the spring for color cup points. It is an annual event each fall and spring for a tennis tournaments to be held on S. T. C. tennis courts. The tournament in the spring will be a double matches tourney.

Barrie's Production

We wish we had time enough and room enough to tell you a little about the play itself, but telling it in part would be giving away the plot and that we must'nt do. Suffice it to say, you'll do well not to miss it . . . and in the very humble opinion of the unprejudiced press, you'll love every scene from the artist's studio to the hilarious dream-ball in the king's court . . . and you'll love all the characters . . . and the costuming . . . and you'll agree with whichever one it is in the cast who has "A Kiss for Cinderella."

Students Select Hockey Captains

November 17 Set For Final Games

Captains for the class hockey teams have been selected and announced for the coming class games. Leading the freshmen will be Ann Barksdale, freshman from S. Norfolk, sophomores, Gerry Colgin, sophomore from Petersburg; juniors, Nellie Smith, junior from Norfolk; and seniors, Lucille Jones senior from Staunton.

Peggy T. Ross, general hockey manager, announced Monday that a scheduled game between Farmville's varsity hockey team and the William and Mary varsity team has been cancelled. This game was the only scheduled varsity game for the season.

The round-robin hockey tournament will begin Monday, November 12. The games will continue throughout the week, and the final games between freshmen-sophomores, and juniors-seniors, will be played Saturday, November 17. The winning class of these games will gain five points for the color cup.

Language Teachers Attend Conference

On October 27, Miss Emily Barksdale and Miss Helen Draper attended the joint meeting of the annual Modern Language association of Virginia and the Virginia Chapters of The American Association of Teachers of French and The American Association of Spanish. This conference was held in Richmond at the John Marshall Hotel.

Among the business reports in the morning was one on the Westhampton workshop which was held during the summer. Spanish pupils went there for a period of four weeks, during which time they were not to speak a word of English. "This report was one of the most inspiring because of its very nature" stated Miss Barksdale.

In the afternoon all speeches were delivered in French and Spanish.

LEFT LEAD

HELLO AGAIN

MEET THE GANG

Yup, we've been doing a lot of talking and saying nothing as of late, so this time we want to settle down and perform some real introductions around here . . . just in case you haven't been out yet to see for yourselves. The crew is nine strong at this point, and each with the Horsentality all his own.

As you walk down the hill to the stables, you're mighty apt to notice the two sorrells first, so just to set you straight on their identity, the 3-gaited is Red Fox, the 5-gaited, Eagle. Both are geldings. Red Fox has been a bit lame until this week, but is all right now, and has been out and showing what he can do. Eagle, with his charming manners and nice gaits has already endeared himself to the hearts of all who've tried him out; a host of admirers . . . none the least of whom is Miss Sauerwein herself.

Two others who may confuse you at first glance are the two darker horses, Spud and Playmate. Spud's a chestnut not quite as large . . . with a sort of roanish face and bigger feet . . . Playmate's a bay—the one "who is all right after you get him saddled." Don't let that bother you . . there's nothing the matter with him that a little time won't cure. He's just skittish about who shoves the bit into his mouth, that's all. Both are nice easy-going horses, fast but sure, and if Playmate keeps up the jumping he's been doing, well . . . a triple-bar would mean no more than a ditch with that stretch!

The next confusion might be connected with the two names of Phantom Lady and Virginia Lady. The Phantom, as you know, is none other than the same little mare we had last year . . . gentle as ever, and ready for all you beginners. And for your information, Virginia Lady is just "The Pony." Favorite last year, especially with the small fry, Lady is in good form, and ready for action.

The two you'd probably look at last and least are Dora and Creaper. (Probably more fittingly spelled "Creeper") But Dora is a thoroughbred, although she's blind in her right eye and sadly poor and in need of some fat, and she's nobody's slow poke, in any sense of the word. As for Old Black Creaper, she's no colt, but she can move, and she has four legs, a mane, and a few of the other requirements needed to make her a horse, and we all love Creaper.

In a class by himself is My Pal, better known as The Black. Once in the ring, we find Pal not too bad after all . . . just frisky and fast, and rarin' to go. However, the general opinion still runs to the other eight when it comes to picking a gentle docile mount for a calm and peaceful ride.

ADDED ATTRACTIONS

So there you have the line-up. Other improvements to be noted are mainly the new tack-room and feed storage space. The club house, too, is in the process of being cleaned out and fixed up, and by the time we really need it, Bobo and Mr. Wells will have us a stove up, and the fire going!

One particular added attraction is Sherlock, the new groom. What would we do without him? No other being can construct a saddle out of a few straps and a hunk of hopeless leather and make it comfortable enough for both horse and rider, when there's a need like there was last Sunday. And it's Sherlock, too, who took The Black out to the ring for us . . . and who brought him safely back.

SIDE-SHOW

What with all the spectators at Longwood Sunday afternoon, there was the same atmosphere of friendly interest so prevalent at regular shows. Well, you can't say they didn't get their afternoon's worth! What with Anna Stuart and Bobo flying like kangaroos over the jumps on Playmate, and with the pony carrying on in traditional manner, and with all the other horses showing their gaits in and out of the ring and around Longwood in general, we claim never a dull moment. All we needed was Mr. Reid's Beauty!

REMINDER

Several of the new girls showed up for classes Monday and could not ride because of no permissions from home. The "Blank" which you checked will serve only temporarily . . . you must have a special signed permission from your parents or guardian before you may ride here at school. It is a small enough thing to remember; please comply with this one regulation.

Also . . . first period classes are from 1:45 to 3:30, and the second class goes out at 3:45. Please be on time for riding as you are for your regular classes. You hold up everyone when you are late getting to the stables.

Stay on the bit . . .

Clad In Blue Jeans, Girls Hit The Trail For Longwood

By MARGARET WILSON

The sun shines, the moon gives promise, the winds blow, Longwood trail invites, and hep, hep, we're off. There's an air about blue jeans that seems to put zip and a touch of zing into any undertaking, and jeans are the order of the day at the A. A. cabin. Not so much as an eyebrow raised—well, not high—at anybody who can produce evidence that Longwood is her destination.

It's open to any school organization. Just consult Miss Iler, pounce on the first free week-end, hold tight, collect a faculty chaperon, and you're on your own for a short spell of communing with nature. This communing business, by the way, is notoriously hard on the appetite, which usually begins making itself felt at about the third hole on the golf course. Food, as any fool can plainly see, is one of the major essentials of a sojourn at Longwood. Bring on the hamburgers and cokes, not forgetting the onions (providing everybody indulges), mustard, ketchup, and horse-radish. None but the strong and vigorous dare attempt a cabin-hamburger, but for those who dare, the gates of Paradise are opened wide.

Cook 'em on the outdoor fireplace, pile on the accessories, and since you'll probably be doing a slow freeze by this time, adjourn to the indoor blaze to eat it. Speaking of that inside fire-place, if you're a fire-place sitter, or gazer-into, here you have the perfect setting. All you have to do is knock the rest of 'em out of the way (get a bunch of pals together and use the old T formation), ease down with both elbows supporting your chin, assume the accepted hazy expression, ignore the surrounding melee, and gaze. Simple and highly restful.

However, there will come a time when some unimaginative, or maybe just a weary soul, will bring up the subject of bed, at which point all eyes will turn to the bunks, boards, or what have you. All faces will assume expressions of resigned horror, backed up by Volga-boatman heaves at the mattreses stacked up in the cor-

38 Girls Attend Opera In Richmond

Thirty-eight girls attended the opera "Rigoletto" at the Mosque in Richmond last night. This trip was sponsored by Student Standards committee headed by Lucy Brailey. Student Standards arranged the transportation to and from Richmond, and provided seats for the students. Several trips are arranged each year under the auspices of this organization.

The opera began at 8:30 o'clock with an all-star cast from the Metropolitan Opera House. Miss Emily Barksdale, assistant professor of modern languages, was chaperon for the group.

AST Sorority Holds Meeting In Roanoke

The Fourth Regional District of Alpha Sigma Tau, national education sorority, held a two-day conference in Roanoke on October 27 and 28.

The Fourth District of the sorority is comprised of twelve southern states, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama, Kentucky, Tennessee, and the District of Columbia.

Approximately sixty girls from collegiate and alumnae chapters attended. The national officers, Mrs. H. E. Stackle, of Columbus, Ohio; Miss Meade McNeil, of Athens, West Virginia; and Mrs. E. F. Peterson, of Crawfordsville, Indiana, also attended.

Mrs. Emmett Phipps, of Mt. Hope, West Virginia, presided at the meeting, which was held at Hotel Patrick Henry. Miss Charlotte Greeley, alumnae representative of the Zeta Tau chapter at Farmville State Teachers College, acted as general chairman for the conference.

Anna Headlee, who served as secretary of the conference, and Peggy Moore of the Zeta Tau chapter of Alpha Sigma Tau, attended the meeting.

French Circle Makes School Year Plans

At a meeting of the French Circle held on Tuesday afternoon, October 30, tentative plans for the year were discussed, Margaret Harvey, president announces.

Janie Hanks, sophomore from Hampton, was elected to represent the French Circle in managing the Spanish-French booth at the circus on November 10. Cards, which will be made by members of the language classes will be sold at the booth. Each of these cards will bear a message written either in French, Spanish, or Portuguese.

Following the business meeting, the first year French class sang two French numbers, after which the second year taught the group a game conducted entirely in French. The advanced literature class presented a resume from th old thirteenth century "chantefable", "Aucassin et Nicolette," and played the music by which the old minstrels used to chant.

Concluding the meeting, the French national anthem, "La Marsiellaise," was sung.

STC Teachers Attend Art Educators' Meet In City of Richmond

Attending the conference of Art Educators held in Richmond, October 27 were Miss Virginia Bedford and Mrs. Janice Lemen. This conference was called by Miss Sara Joyner, the new state supervisor of art, for the purpose of discussing the following two vital questions in the light of the growing demand for well qualified teachers in the art field. The first question was "The Contribution of Art Education to the Educational Experience of Students and Teachers"; the second was "The Relation of the Teacher Training Program to Adequate Art Education for Virginia Schools."

Among those discussing the second question was Miss Bedford, head of the S. T. C. art department. Following the conference, the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts was host to the group at a preview tea of the British American Goodwill Exhibition of Paintings.

Dale Named Officer Of Virginia B. S. U.

Patsy Dale, junior foom Homeville, was elected second vice-president of the Baptist Student Union of Virginia at a convention held in Richmond November 2 to 4.

Patsy has been active in school activities in this college, serving this year as chairman of the service committee of the Y. W. C. A. and as a member of the B. S. U. council. During her sophomore year, she was president of Alpha Phi Sigma, freshman-sophomore honor society. She recently received a bid to Kappa Delta Pi, national honorary society in education.

Should you draw the lower, the only thing you really have to worry about is how much the two on top are weighing these days. It would probably be better if you slept in shifts - one relaxing and the other listening for warning creaks up above.

It's a great life - the open life. Over the golf course and down the hill to the A.A. cabin we go. We know - off the cob. But it's fun! Try it sometime!

Cab's Corner

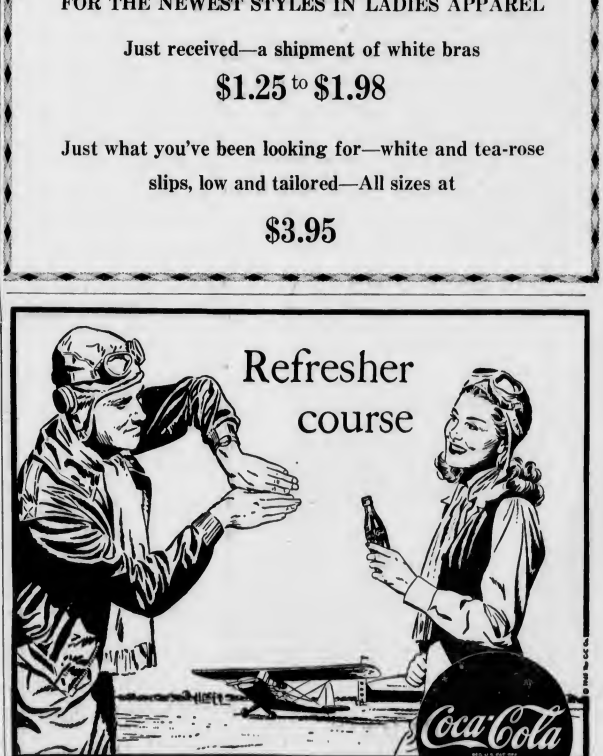
By CAB OVERBEY

Out of the Mouths of Babies from "Music for Fun" by Sigmund Spaeth.

"Listen Mamma. From the day I was born you had a chance to let me hear music. There was a "vic", a radio and even a piano in the house. Did I ever hear any of them? No. What I heard was baby talk, all day and half the night. How was a lovely baby, 'yed, he wud'. What kind of English is that anyway?

"But what did you do about music. Nothing Mamma. I heard no music that sounded nice to me. When I tried to play on the piano at an early age, I was told to stop that noise. There's no excuse in saying you aren't musical and never were. Would I have known the difference? In my childish innocence, I thought everything you did was pretty swell. I probably could have stood even your interpretation of music.

"You can't say you didn't have time to develop my musical instincts. Think of how much time you wasted, not only with baby talk, but in shaking rattles in the front of my face, building with blocks, cutting something out of paper, and putting dolls through all sorts of contortions. I often heard you say, 'I can't think what to do next to keep this child occupied'. Wouldn't it have been a joke on you if simply turning on a phonograph record had given me the habit of keeping quiet? You never made any effort to find out.



"All these years, from the time I was a day old completely wasted so far as music is concerned. I've heard of babies that kept time to music before they could walk. You never found out if I could do it, because there wasn't any music to which I could keep time. I'm told that plenty of kids have been able to hum a tune before they could talk. But if I never heard a tune, how could I hum it?"

A lot of music can be obtained by phonograph for babies, but most of it can be sung by anyone with a confidence and the ability to carry a tune. Remember always, though, that the baby is not likely to be critical.

Lancaster To Talk At 8 PM Tonight In Student Lounge

Speaker Sponsored By Kappa Delta Pi

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, state superintendent of public instruction, will speak Wednesday, November 14 at 8 o'clock in the student lounge. His topic will be "Educational Trends In Virginia." Special invitations have been issued to the honor societies, faculty, and administration. Students are invited to attend this lecture which is being sponsored by Kappa Delta Pi.

Dr. Lancaster received his A. B. degree from the University of Virginia, his M. S. degree from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and his L. L. D. from the University of Richmond.

He has worked with young people as associate master at St. Christopher's School, instructor in modern languages at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and professor and head of department of Agricultural education at V. P. I.

Dr. Lancaster left Virginia in 1929 to become dean of men and assistant to the president of the University of Alabama. He returned to Virginia to become executive secretary of the board of advisers at Sweet Briar College.

He is a member of Delta Tau Delta fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi, Pi Gamma Mu, Omicron Delta Kappa, American Association of University Professors, Rotary Club of Lynchburg, Education Association, Virginia Social Science Association, Virginia Academy of Science, and listed in Who's Who in America. He was made an honorary member of the Beta Epsilon chapter of Kappa Delta Pi in 1941.

Wynne Will Speak Tomorrow at 9:30

Dr. John P. Wynne, head of the college education department and director of teacher training, will speak tomorrow morning at 9:30 o'clock in the regular fall session of the Virginia Philosophical Association at John Marshall hotel. This meeting opened today and will close tomorrow afternoon.

Dr Wynne will speak on the topic "Verification of the Truth Claims of Propositions from the Standpoint of Philosophy of Experimentalism."

Prof. Albert Balz, of the University of Virginia spoke this afternoon on "Science, Metaphysics, and Myths," and Prof. D. M. Allan of Hampden - Sydney College will speak tonight at 9 o'clock on "Teleology and Contemporary Naturalism."

Happy Birthday Monday

Education Week Program Begins

To inaugurate the American Education Week program which will be observed on the campus, Lucy Bowling made a short talk on Education Week in chapel yesterday morning. She then introduced Agnes Stokes, president of Kappa Delta Pi who spoke on "How Can the Student Economize Time and Secure Efficiency in Study."

That this is the first time many of the students have been away from home was emphasized. They are now their own boss and have many new responsibilities to assume and decisions to make, the most important being how to use one's time to the greatest advantage. "It is possible" said Agnes, "to economize your time and still lead a balanced life on the campus."

Study does not need to take the entire free time of the students. Extra-curricular activities are very popular on campus and through these activities, one can broaden her individual life by association with others with similar interests. "Be careful, however," warns the speaker, "and don't try to join all the organizations. Find the specific one which will meet your needs, join it, and give it the best you can."

The most important requisite of a balanced life and the one most often neglected by students is rest.

The attitude one has toward her teachers and classes will influence the way in which she studies, Agnes said, and she concluded with the following questions: "Is your attitude right? Are you misjudging your teacher? Are you doing your best to use your time in such a way that you can secure efficiency in study?"

Frances Lee, president of the Athletic Association spoke today

Durant To Speak On November 26 On Local Campus

Tickets Go On Sale On Friday Morning

Dr. Will Durant will present a lecture on "Causes and Consequences of the War" in the S. T. C. auditorium November 26. Admission is seventy-five cents, and tickets may be purchased at the table in the hall Friday and Saturday. They will also be sold at Pattersons, Shannons, and Southsides Monday, November 19. They will go on reserve at Pattersons November 20.

Emily Carper is chairman of ushers, and Betty Adams will serve as chairman of the reception committee. The arrangement committee will be headed by Freddie Ann Butt, Carolyn Bobbitt has charge of the tickets, and Agnes Stokes is responsible for publicity.

If anyone would like to order an autographed copy of one of Dr. Durant's books, please see Dr. James Elliott Walmsley or Agnes Stokes immediately.

Dr. Durant was born at North Adams, Massachusetts in 1885. He attended St. Peter's College Jersey City, New Jersey and Columbia University, New York. For a brief time, he served as a cub reporter on the New York Journal. He then went to Seton Hall College, South Orange, New Jersey, where he taught Latin, Greek, French, and English four years. He toured Europe in 1912. Upon his return to the United States, he took up graduate work at Columbia University where he specialized in biology and philosophy.

APS Initiates Girls In Different Degrees At Regular Meeting

Three sophomores were initiated as masters in Alpha Phi Sigma last night. The girls who attained this rank because of their college record last year were June Cregar, Tazewell; Margaret Jones, Wilkesboro, North Carolina; and Myra Anne Motley, Danville.

Eighteen sophomores were initiated as apprentices on their college records for 1944-1945. Dramatic Club Will Present Fall Play Friday Night At 8

Johnson to Speak Here November 29

Burges Johnson will lecture on this campus November 29. Mr. Johnson is being sponsored by the Beorc Eh Thorn, honor society in English.

Mr. Johnson was professor of English at Union College and Vassar. At the present, he is secretary of the College English Association and editor of its publication. He is touring the country especially to come in contact with the English teachers.

At a meeting of Beorc Eh Thorn last Thursday, the year book which contains the year's program was presented by Margaret Eliett. She introduced Dr. Francis B. Simkins, associate professor of history and social sciences, who spoke on Latin American history.

Katherine Allen reviewed the book "Inocencia" by Tauna. Beorc Eh Thorn's theme for the year is Latin American literature.

Patterson Heads Frosh Commission

Evelyn Patterson, Kenbridge, was elected president of the freshman commission at a recent commission meeting. Violet Ritchie Richmond, is the newly elected secretary, and Jane Taylor, Pungoteague, will serve as treasurer for the commission.

During her high school days, Evelyn was a member of Dramatic Club president of the freshman class, vice-president of Girl Reserves, chairman of Harmony and Hangout, Freshman adviser, and secretary of History Honor Society, Debating Club, Booster representative.

The members of the freshman commission are Anne Ford, Anne East, Evelyn Patterson, Martha Gillum, Anne Verser, Jane Taylor, Jackie Bobbitt, Violet Ritchie, Dolly Anne Freeman, Majorie Miller, Grace Mallory, and Betty Sheets.

Members of the sophomore commission who returned to school this fall are Corrine Baker, Julia Booher, Kitty Hankins, George Anne Lewis, Mary Anne Morris, Frances Treakle, and Berkley Richardson.

Hawthorne Directs Elementary Typing

The Commercial Department is continuing its class in typewriting for the sixth grade students in Farmville Elementary School.

Last year's sixth grade did so very well that it was desirable to continue the class for another year. This year there are 26 students in the class which is held every day in the college typewriting room at the chapel hour. So far they have spent a total of twelve hours at the machines.

Most of the students type slowly without looking at their fingers. At the present time, they are not as accurate as they should be, but all of the students are improving because they show a keen interest in their work.

The class is being directed this quarter by Miss Minnie Rose Hawthorne, and during the winter and spring quarters, the students will be instructed by Miss Katherine Tindall and Mrs. Luverta Gumkowski.

All desiring to observe the sixth graders at work are invited to pay a visit, officials of the business department have announced.

Carlotta Norfleet, president of the Dramatic Club which is presenting the fall play on Friday night.

Butt Announces Changes In Rules Of House Council

Freddie Anne Butt, president of the House Council, announces this week that certain changes have been made in the house council rules and regulations.

Hall presidents will give call downs to girls for noise made during study hour, for not being in their room at bed-check, and for lights on after 11 o'clock. The fourth call-down will confine a girl to the library from 7:30 to 10 o'clock for one week.

The fifth call-down will add another week of library confinement, and after another call-down, the case will be subject to student government regulations.

Campus will not be given for room warnings.

Too Late To Classify

Because of Thanksgiving holiday, there will be no classes after chapel on Wednesday, November 21, according to an announcement made by Dr. J. L. Jarman. Classes will be resumed on Monday morning, November 26 at 8 o'clock.

Chapel will be held as usual on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock and lunch will be served in the dining room at 12 instead of the usual time of 12:45.

Scene Takes Place In City of London

Wheeler Directs First Play of Year

Despite the illness of Miss Leola Wheeler, director, who has been in the college infirmary since last Thursday, the fall play of the Dramatic Club, "James L. Barrie's "A Kiss for Cinderella" will go on as scheduled this Friday night in the large auditorium. The curtain will rise at 8 p. m., upon one of the most difficult productions ever put on by this group.

The play itself takes place in World War I-torn London, and concerns a penniless girl portrayed by Jackie Watson who imagines herself to be the story-book Cinderella. One of the most enticing parts of the play is the scene which describes her various and sundry means of earning money . . . and her odd love of the Penny is vividly depicted by the fact that this is the price she charges for all of her odd services.

Cinderella's Ideas

Another of Cinderella's mind-weary ideas is that her feet are her fortune, and the extremes to which she goes to protect her feet lends an air of pathos to an otherwise light comedy. Even the Glass Slippers come into the plot, and a very impotrant part they do play.

Perhaps the lightest of the scenes is that of the Dream-Ball. . . . so typical of dreams that it sparkles with imaginary connections in the real life of Cinderella. An air of suspense is held during the first of the play, relative to a series of large wooden boxes which Cinderella keeps hidden in her shabby apartment and more suspense comes with the unravelling of the love interests.

Characters Well-Cast

Characters in the play have been well-cast, according to the descriptions in Barrie's play. Scenery obstacles and costuming have been overcome under the able direction of Beanie Dudley and Ann Shufflebarger while Doris Rose Ramsey has been supervising the extensive lighting effects, and Lou Harrell has had charge of properties.

Betty Bibb will play the part of Mr. Bodie, in this play, while Martha Showalter will portray the part of the policeman; Jean Cake, the man with the coat; and Martha Morehead, the man with the shirt. Mrs. Maloney will be played by Delores Duck, and Frances Marshall will act as Marion.

Godmother Chosen

Adelaide Coble will take the part

Sigma Pi Rho Bids 3 As New Members

Sigma Pi Rho, honorary society in Latin, initiated its new members on Wednesday, November 7. New members taken in at that time were: Lovice Aitizer, junior from Farmville; Lee Carter, junior from Concord; and Audrey Lee Davis, sophomore from Farmville.

Officers of Sigma Pi Rho are Mary Anne Dove, president; Jane Anderson, vice-president; and Katharine Allen, secretary and treasurer.

Sigma Pi Rho was first organized in 1930 on this campus. Its purpose is to give recognition to those who have shown a deep interest in the field of Latin and have attained a certain scholastic standing, to afford them further opportunities in the work, and to create in others an interest in Latin.

Buy Victory Bonds

The eighth bond drive, the victory drive, is now in progress in the United States. This is one of the most important bond drives that we have ever had. The war is over, but we still have a job to do. President Truman has said, "You can't liquidate overnight the cost of a total war." Bills are still coming due that were made in the last days of the war.

World War II has been the most costly war in the history of the world. One good reason for spending in this way was to save the lives of our fighting men. No expense was spared to do this. Former Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau termed this spending to save lives, "the most significant fact in War Finance." A major cost of rehabilitation of our wounded continues. The Army, Navy, and Air Forces have set $3000 as a general all-purpose cost for the medical care and equipment used by one man. This includes such items as X-ray machines, beds, whirlpool baths, wheelchairs. We want our boys to have the best treatment. These wounded G. I.'s have given their best, and they're still giving. We didn't fail these boys during the war, and we must not fail them now.

It costs millions to bring the boys home, muster them out, and administer the G. I. Bill of Rights. We, college students, realize the opportunity that we have to go to school, and want our service men and women to have this same opportunity. Many soldiers, sailors, and marines have had their schooling postponed. Our victory bonds will send them back to school sooner. They have given much to make us free, the least we can do for them is to give them the opportunity to receive an education.

It costs a great deal to maintain an army of occupation. While our boys are serving on foreign shores, we want them to have the best, the best food, the best clothing, and the best equipment. The war is over, but we still have a job to do to keep peace on earth. Our fighting forces have won the war for us; we must buy war bonds and win the peace for them.

Students Urged To Attend Prayers

It seems most proper that we should comment in this column concerning the noise in the halls during the time that the Y. W. C. A. is sponsoring Prayers. Last week, two interested students voiced their opinions concerning the noise during Prayers in a letter to the editor. Perhaps many others have the same feeling and just haven't put it down in black and white in such a letter.

College days are busy days filled with numerous classes, activities, and just plain jobs that must be done. Many times, we have to crowd our twenty-five hour schedules into twenty-four short hours. Even with this busy schedule, each of us needs time for meditation and prayer. An atmosphere of quietness and peacefulness is provided for us each week night for a few minutes after dinner. Yet, there are many girls on our campus who do not take advantage of this opportunity, some of whom disturb the stillness of the atmosphere by being noisy in the halls.

It is true, of course, that we like some excitement before settling down for a night of study or meetings, and yet it does seem that we could spend the first few minutes after dinner each evening in a meditative, prayerful way as we unite with other students in this nightly devotion.

As we approach this Thanksgiving season, we are, of course, truly grateful for our blessings and opportunities. Let us resolve within our own hearts to express our gratitude by attending these evening devotional services sponsored nightly by the "Y". We shall come from them rested, and feeling greatly blessed.

Gleanings

Mildred Altice

The news of this week is not too optimistic either for world peace or for an amicable settlement between labor and management. However, patience and hope are very much in need because it can be remembered now that it is always darkest just before the dawn. The conference of labor and management started this week. So far this conference has been unable to accomplish very much because labor members are disagreeing among themselves as well as disagreeing with management. This may be just an excellent indication that those people at the conference are Americans and believe in their right to express themselves. It is to be hoped that a bad beginning will produce an excellent end. The most discouraging phase of the conference is the lack of confidence that the public, labor and management have expressed in it. The end of this week witnessed the arrival of Prime Minister Attlee and Prime Minister King to this country to discuss the future of the atomic bomb. Rumor has it that Prime Minister Attlee favors placing the atomic bomb under the control and at the disposal of the United Nations organization. If this is true, in my opinion, the world needs more men like him as leaders for future peace and security.

* * * *

This week's outstanding foreign news concerns uprisings and unrest again. Affairs in China seem to be reaching a critical point with Chinese Communists and Kuomintang Chinese at war with each other. Yugoslavians voted this week and, as might be expected, Tito's party is reported to be leading. Conditions in Germany are reported to be reaching a serious stage with civilian uprisings very possible and in some parts probable.

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

Phyllis Watts thinks train service is getting better. Result—one male from Pickett whom we hear has quite a flashing smile. Some molars, eh Phyllis.

Charlie Hop's class of '45 made quite a showing this week-end. "Peepsie" Scott, Hackie Moore, Anne Blair, Martha Higgins, Ophelia Whittle, Mary Franklin Woodward, and others all came to see his new class perform.

Traipsing off to Virginia went Glenn Anne, Carmen, and Martha. The scenery must be quite attractive as the trips are becoming more and more frequent for the above young ladies.

A southern Yankee, accent and all, came to visit us this week-end in the person of Jodie Davis. Her coming, and the arrival of Betty Harville brought about A-1 reunion on second floor junior.

Glad to see Corrinne Baker back at school. Hope her stay will be a permanent one now.

We hear Lulu writes fascinating letters all of six lines long, but do nothing till you hear from him, Shirley.

We wonder what happened to Margie Hewlett's twin. According to the Crystal Gazer, there is such a person.

The lovelight in Edith Bryant's eyes couldn't be from John's visit, could it, we wonder?

Gone again this week-end was Virginia Hollifield who regularly burns the path between here and Lynchburg. What's he like, Virginia?

The trio that turned out to be a quartet received quite an ovation for the rendition of "Mountain Dew". With a string section added, they could probably go places.

D. D. O's children have planned a trip to Baltimore. She declares that accounts for her regular nightmares.

"Peepsie" Brooks was all smiles Saturday night after circus. Could be that attractive male she was with!

A ring of the phone—a mad dash—a quick hello! Frank's back and Frances Lee is once more walking on air.

So Linnie Noblin is raring to go to Lynchburg. Can't blame ya gal. He's a cute cheer leader.

We wonder when Leddie Foster's sailor from Duke will be back. Better not be too long, 'cause Cecil is really taking the situation in hand.

By the way, if you see a handsome Ensign wandering around, it's Dorothy Overton's real.

No wonder Treakle was beaming. Did you see that lieutenant? That was John!

Brick-bats and onions to a certain freshman and her sailor date who haven't self-respect enough to show to proper use of Longwood.

What with the confusion including Jack, John, Dan, Dave, and Ned, nobody could keep up with B. Deuel over the week end. Some are still wondering who was expected, who came unexpectedly.

The Westminster Fellowship Council will journey to V. P. I. to the state-wide Westminster Fellowship Conference this week-end. The Fellowship announces that they are very pleased with the new affiliated members which were received Sunday morning at the church service. Last Sunday the Fellowship observed Assembly's Youth Sunday by having a combined program with the Hampden-Sydney students for the evening worship service.

The Baptist Student Union will sponsor a Sunrise Service Sunday morning at 7:15 a. m. It will be held on the College Athletic Field steps, and the entire student body is invited to attend.

The supper that the Methodist girls sponsored was reported to have been a great success. Quite a group of college girls attended as well as a busload of Camp Pickett boys.

The Canterbury Club announces that they have already started work on their Christmas pageant which was writen by Anne Willis.

The theme for the week of Prayers is "Thanks to God". Miss Pauline Camper will speak tonight.

Question of the Week

What did you think of the circus?

Tucker Wynn: Had a wonderful time—backstage.

Jo Goodwin: Wonderful!

Dot Bradley: Plenty cute.

Helen Williams: Some stuff! (Emphasis on the sophomores!)

Dorothy Rand Shotwell: Never seen anything like it before!

Lela Bouldin: It was fun!

Phyllis Fulcher: Seats were hard as heck, but the circus was fun!

Jackie Seymour: It was wonderful! Ray for the sophomores!

Phyllis Watts: It was SWELL! Really on the ball!

Jean Cake: More fun than the real McCoy.

Ned Dickinson (Just visiting, thanks)—Awfully unique. Really it was good!

Mrs. McCoy: Couldn't see it! I think it must have been a good show from the way people in front of me acted. Too many people there.

Pauline Carter: Excruciatingly superb!

Violet Ritchie: I loved it so good.

Tootsie Hamilton: Cutest thing I've ever seen, to tell you the truth.

Mayland Dudley: Jus' plain scrumptuous.

Frances DeBerry: Really sweet.

Connie Loving: Out of this world!

Rickie King: I wouldn't have missed it for the world.

Rachel Thomas: Colossal! Really was better than Ringling Bros.

Anne East: I enjoyed the parade! (weren't we clowns cute?)

What did you like best about circus?

Sue McCorkle: All I can remember is "sixteen hot dogs and twelve cokes, please."

Olivia Meade: Everything! Just good to be back.

Ginnie Woodward: 2000 A. D. of course!

Mar Kent Stevens: Just sitting back and watching it all.

Martha Sours: Everything! Esprecially the Jrs!

Virginia Travis: All those nice people.

Ann Baer: Hot dogs!

Bobbie Graham: That fortune Mr. Graham told.

Mabel Park: The school in 2000 A. D.

Kitty East: We won! After four long years, too!

Dot Bennett: I liked the handwriting analysis. Jeanne's pretty good at that stuff.

Evelyn Goodman: I got no hot dogs. I got no cokes, I got no nuttin' but I loved it all.

Ruth Jones: The sight of MEN—beautiful civilian clothes, and sailors, At last S. T. C. is coming back into its own.

"Guinny" Halstead: When Philhower said the Jrs. came in second!

Traditional Rat Caps Again Appear On Heads Of Freshmen

By JEAN CAKE

"Sign mine for me, will you?" "I can't keep mine on!" "Personally, I think they're darling." Yes, that's right, we're talking about the new rat caps for freshmen. They've come at last and it seems like half of S. T. C. is bobbing around in a little white Eton cap. Last week at the capping ceremony the frosh knelt before their respective sophomores and received their new headgear. Emerging white crowned from the gym, the autograph hounds dashed madly for their first signatures. By now the majority of them are competely covered by "Love ya's" and "Good lucks". It's the best way to hide the dirt so we're told. And they'll certainly be filthy by the time we're through wearing them, but who cares how long we'll have to wear them—we think they're right cute. "Charlie Hop" has his own rat cap, too, like a good little freshman and incidentally his autograph is the most sought after around here.

Some of these innocent little rats took literally the fact that the caps are supposed to be worn all the time. There were girls who played a whole game of field ball holding their hats with one hand and the ball with the other. And maybe you don't know about a cap that got a dunking when its owner forgot to take it off in the bathtub. Honest, girls, you don't have to wear them to church, too. But woe be unto the sleepy rat who forgets to wear her cap to class in the morning. Just put it on your list of things to do before breakfast.

The creations we see coming down the street! There's a cap on hind-part before and another tied under the chin with ribbons. It's nothing to see the ever popular kerchief topped by that jaunty little thing I have mentioned so many times. I reckon t'would be trite to name again. O how most horrible it is when it rains and the ink starts running! 'Tis then that the little derbys get turned inside out or go under the scarf instead of on top.

With the traditional rat caps stuck on the back of everybody's head, our college life seems more complete. It singles out the fresh-

Say Freshmen--What About Those Rat Caps? Saturday Tells

Annual Color Rush Will Begin Saturday Before Class Games

Final clashes in class hockey games are slated for Saturday, November 17, with freshmen playing sophomores, and juniors playing seniors. The first game will begin promptly at 2:15. These games mark the end of the hockey season for this year.

Class games will be played through the entire week in the round-robin tournament. Wednesday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock the sophomores and junlors competed; Thursday at this same time the seniors play the freshmen. Saturday the freshmen play the sophomores, and the juniors play the seniors. The color winning these games in the round-robin tournament gains ten points towards the color cup.

Annual color rush will begin at 1:15 o'clock Saturday afternoon, November 17, prior to the hockey games. There will be two runners in each building, one green and white, and one red and white. They will run in first floor senior, second floor junior, third floor library, second floor White House, second floor Student, and second floor Rotunda. Officials for timing, judging, etc., will be chosen from members of Student Government Association, and upperclassmen. There will be three judges on each hall, one to start the girls, and two at the end of the hall, to judge the finish.

Every person must be out of the building at 1:15 when the first bell rings. If anyone is found on the hall during the race, it will be a default for her color team. Her runner will be disqualified in the race, thus losing the race on the hall.

After the last hockey game on Saturday afternoon, the players of the various class teams and members of the Athletic Association are invited to attend a party given by the Athletic Association outside the A. A. Field House.

Students To Attend Ballet In Richmond

These girls will attend the ballet to be held in Richmond, November 14, at the Mosque: Betsy Brown, Cornelia Davidson, Betty Parrish, Margaret Wilkinson, Anne Verser, Anne Orgain, Naomi Piercy, Margaret Ellett, Carolyn Bobbitt, Virginia Butler, Catherine Cosby, Betty Tipton, Betty Spindler, Paticia Lynn, Nancy Parrish, Betty Adams, Rachel Thomas, Frances Currin, Anne Buck, Bobby Mitchell, Alice Buck, Katherine Tindall, Betty Nixon, Caroline Moon, Barbara Cosey, Nancy McCauley, Corinne Baker, Berkeley Richardson, Connie Ozlin, and Gene Harrison.

Also, Carolyn French, Anna Headlee, and Ann Nichols.

The group will be chaperoned by Miss Emily Kauzlarich, modern dance instructor, and Mrs. Mabel McCoy.

This trip is being sponsored by the Students Standards organization on the campus.

Are You a Balletomane?

You don't know what I am talking about do you? And, I am wondering why I asked you that question. It alone leads to many others.

If you are a balletomane or ballet fan you want to know what to fan about, don't you? The two concerts, one ballet, and the other a modern dance one call for some explanations. My own conscious appreciation is not at ease because each new season brings forth companies both new and old proclaiming wide the fame of the Ballet Russe.

There is no real Russian ballet group in America: Diaghileff and Fokine, two Russians did set a pace in ballet as "the" dance art and set a precedent for all others to follow. Today students of the dance call it the Diaghileff-Fokine era. But the great audience, European first then American, seems to want a Russian affinity pronounced.

Today—this season—there are two, only two large traveling ballet companies. Neither is strictly Russian. Both show evidence of ballet becoming Americanized by using American themes by recruiting American talent and lastly, by making a definite bid for the American audience.

The Ballet theatre group is simultaneously and synonymously linked with the name of Agnes de Mille. She has done more to popularize ballet and set a new trend in dance than any other single, solitary figure in the last decade. Her first ballet "Rodea" staked the claim for this new era in dance.

At the other end of the extreme is George Balanchine, a strict adherent to the classical traditions of ballet and a close associate of the now Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo. He is more a choregrapher than a dancer.

"On State" coming to Richmond tonight with the Ballet theatre group is fresh, youthful, and thoroughly original. It provides one more striking illustration of what happens to traditional ballet medium when it falls into the hands of independent - minded young Americans, who look not back at what the courtiers of yesteryear used to consider de rigueur but ward at to what a contemporary theatre audience will respond. "Graziana" is another American attempt, the first successful one by an American choregrapher to work in the pure classical form.

We are right back where we started from. Are you a balletomane? Or do you want to know about the modern dance concert?

The second victory in the round-robin tournament goes to the juniors, who defeated the freshmen Tuesday, November 13, in a 3-0 victory. Freshman line-up was as follows, captain, Anne Barksdale; Nancy Dickinson, Mary Evelyn Miles, Violet Ritchie, Evelyn Drewer, Jane Taylor, Martha Gillum, Dorothy Ramage, Marie Hutcheson, Katherine Cosby, and Hazel Lewis.

Junior line-up was Nellie Smith,

Song Contest Slated For Chapel Saturday

Annual song contest between classes will be held Saturday morning, November 17, at 11:00 o'clock in the large auditorium. This is an event which takes place every year during the final rounds of the hockey season.

Each class has its opportunity of presenting an original song to the audience and judges. These songs are to be color songs rather than class songs. They will be judged on the basis of pep, originality, and suitability to the occasion. No color cup points are gained by the winners of this song contest, but strong competition is present.

Judges for the contest are selected from the faculty members, and this year's judges will be Miss Patterson, music instructor, Miss Gleaves, home economics instructor, and Mr. Davisson, biology instructor.

All persons are asked to wear their class colors and be on time, so you may be able to sit with your class. After the songs are presented, and before the judges render their decisions, school cheer leaders will lead cheers for the colors. This period of songs and yells serves as a pep rally before the final hockey clashes and color rush which are held in the afternoon.

men so that they are more able to recognize their own classmates and gives them a sense of belonging to S. T. C.

If only a rat cap could talk! We will bet it could tell plenty—everything its owner does from dawn to dusk and considering it's an S. T. C. girl that's wearing it, the stories would be rare and interesting.

It's true Kitty Wright had a phone call, but whether he ever called back, we haven't heard. If he did . . . it musta been 'way after . . . bedcheck!

LEFT LEAD

GIT A HOSS!

Dominating the tables as it dominated the whole school this week, the S. T. C. Circus, or in this case, the Parade was the highlight of the week as far as equestrians were concerned. Leading the parade we found Joyce back old times sake, and Jeanne up on Eagle, and Bill, the instructor and ex-instructor fully clad in black coats and derbies, and looking sharper than sharp on the two sorrels. In between things came two wagons pulled by horse or pony . . . just ask Annette G.! Then again, along toward the end, the costume class of last spring's show darned near repeated itself with Betty Bibb as an Indian, Ducky Anderson as a cowboy, and Betty Cock as a circus bareback rider. Bringing up the rear came Anna Stuart Headlee on King and Margaret Lohr on Squealer. And did we hear Bobo suggesting a new horse? Why not the Ole Gray Mare of the animal act in the actual circus Saturday night? The horses did indeed make names for themselves in connection with the S. T. C. circus.

WELCOME HOME

Hearty were the welcomes issued to the Madame . . . whom we hadn't seen in nearly two whole weeks! . . . but who is looking fit as ever, even with a black eye. (Shh . . . we didn't SAY a horse kicked her in the head!) Back, too, and looking wistfully in the direction of the stables was Mary Walton Rucker. Too bad M. Sterrett had to change plans at the last moment. We can still visualize M. Sterrett racking around the Longwood ring on Princess. Then, too, we found Jody Davis . . . with a gleam in her eye that seemed to turn longingly stable-ward. We didn't know how much we missed people till we saw them back, and not hovering around the clubhouse.

RUNAWAY

Even Joan of Arc has her mishaps . . . after lo! these many years, her calm and docile steed took off from his pedestal in the Colonnade and ran away with our patron saint. What can't you expect from this iron-hoss-flesh!

That's all, jocks . . . see you at the stables.

On the Ball

Hello, once again, sport fans. Blue Monday again from station S. T. C. Keep your fingers crossed for fair weather and hockey games.

AKG CIRCUS

This week's bouquet of orchids goes to Frances Lee, general circus chairman and president of the Athletic Association, for such efficient management of the annual circus. This event is one which will not be forgotten soon by many people. Don't forget to give the heads of the various class stunts all the credit which they rightly deserve for the four outstanding class performances. They again brought their class talent to light in the face of many excited spectators.

HOCKEY

Monday morning looked rather depressing for those hockey games as the class games are to be completed this week. Girls who may not have made your class team, listen for the dining room announcements for the scheduled hockey games this week and come out and support your team and colors. Hockey gives ten points for the color cup, so you Green 'n Whites and Red 'n Whites, get on the ball.

COLOR RUSH

Color rush will be held this Saturday before the final hockey clashes after lunch. Don't forget the rules of the game; you don't want your player disqualified. Get out of all buildings when the first bell rings, and don't come back for anything until after the banner is placed on the front of the building. Give your runner a fair chance to do her best running for her class. Be a good sport if your runner should lose. There will be sufficient officials to judge all runners, and their decision is final.

So long—see you at the hockey games.

APS Initiates

Watts, Austinville, Jacqueline Bobbitt, South Hill; Sarah Greene, Richmond; Dorothy Winton, Bedford; and Harriette Purcell, Drakes Branch.

The degree of apprentice will be conferred on these freshmen when they have attained a B average for two consecutive quarters, and the master's degree when they have held a B plus average for two quarters. A scholarship key will be awarded by the national headquarters in May, 1946, to the girl who has held the best record throughout her freshman and sophomore years.

The initiation services brought the membership from 33 to 81. Of the 33 in the society at the beginning of this session six are masters, 15 are apprentices and 12 are novices. Those masters include Hilda Abernathy, Annette Grainger, Agnes Millner, Virginia Tindall, and Jeanne Tolley. These girls received their masters degree in March, 1945. Audrey Lee Davis obtained hers in January, 1945.

Queen of Hearts Reigns Over Circus Filled With Ripples of Laughter, Galore of Talent

By BETTY LEWIS SHANK

MINNIE LEE CRUMPLER

JANE PHILHOWER

It was Saturday, November 10, 1945. S. T. C. was buzzing with enthusiasm, for tonight was the night that Alpha Kappa Gamma would raise the Big Top for the anual circus.

The air of excitement grew steadily more tense as the day wore on, until at last it was time for the circus parade. S. T. C. students, faculty, and town people lined the streets in eager anticipation of the parade which was to begin at 3:15, and the magnificant march began winding its hilarious way thru the streets. Bearing the Stars and Stripes were Violet Ritchie and Peggy Stevenson. "Tootsie" Hamilton and Dolly Ann Freeman, freshman class president and vice-president respectively, held high the banner which identified this procession. It was a noisy host—girls shouting and singing; the smart click of the horses hoofs on the pavement; cries of the pink elephant; screams of the sophomore "wild man"; and the giraffe making whatever noise it is a giraffe makes.

Ah—but this was but a sample of what was to come. This was enough to make everyone wish it were already 8:00 o'clock that night!

Seven p. m. found the gym already a hard place in which to fight ones way. Time ticked on and the audience grew more impatient. Who would be the ringmaster? Who were the class court members to be? Who indeed, was circus queen. And which hard-working class would walk away with the "cup" for the best act?

Ringmaster Appears

Finally, at 8:00 on the dot the house lights dimmed and dimmed until they were no more. A hush came over the crowd. The spotlight shown down on the M. C.—senior Jane Philhower . . . and there was a ripple of applause for her.

The circus got off to a wonderful start with the tamed animals. These animals were very talented; they jumped through hoops, danced, and amused the crowd in general. One particular creature which delighted the crowd with its dancing was the Ole Gray Mare. Later it was learned that the head end of the horse was played by Betty Parrish and Claire Clark took the other part! Soon the trainer decided they had showed off enough and shooed them away.

Court Revealed

Silence reigned again as the M. C. announced that at this time the class court representatives would be presented. To the soft strains of "Pomp and Circumstances," these four lovely girls stepped from the pages of a giant Mother Geese book, and gracefully made their way to the throne. There were oh's and ah's of approval throughout the spectators. Freshman Violet Ritchie made her class proud as she smiled up at the crowd. She looked lovely, as "Mistress Mary" in her gown of pink. Next came Peggy Moore representing the sophomore class. She made a beautiful "Little Miss Muffet" in an evening dress of shimmering yellow. The junior class Maid of Honor, Nellie Smith made hearts beat faster as she came forth in a sky-blue gown. And last came Minnie Lee Crumpler of the senior class as Queen of Hearts to reign over the circus. She was radiant in a gorgeous white gown, and crowned with red hearts. Last—did we say? Lets not forget the two giant white rabbits who were attendants to the queen! Straight from Alice's Wonderland!

Classes Perform

And now the four acts were to begin. First was the freshman act. In keeping with their "youth," they presented a skit centered around that loveable old character, the Old Woman who lived in the Shoe. Showing they were no "ickies"- their Little Boy Blue dressed up his tootin' Harry James style, and the bad old wolf who chased after Little Red Riding Hood was one of the modern species complete with zoot suit, twirling chain, and H. S. C. Rat cap

The sophomores were next in line with the dream of a movie producer about a jungle scene he was to create. It seems his dream got slightly entangled with an order he had gotten to "Take That Night Train To Memphis"! The result was hilarious. The "snakey" part of this scene was a sax rendition of "Stormy Weather" by Mr. Tucker Wynn.

Atomic Age

The juniors were really "out of this world" with their version of S. T. C. living in an atomic age. Their robot teachers made classes very interesting. Who wouldn't like to learn about the bugs and flowers (biology, if you please) by watching graceful young ladies dance!

Last in the order of contest were the seniors. Theirs was a street scene in a small town where everyone was quite happy with the exception of one sophisticated college graduate who was very bored. But the red-headed policeman—Jackie Parden—soon convinced her of the sunny side of life there. The seniors' properties showed signs of hard work and their musical score was original with them.

The acts were now over and Jane Philhower stepped forth to tease the onlookers as to the judges' decision. Everyone knew that Mr. Davisson, Miss Barksdale and Mrs. Lemen were in quite a spot to choose the best and next best act. All classes had worked hard on their parts—a fact which was evident from their presentations.

Seniors Win

After humming and hawing about how she was not going to hum and haw, the mistress of ceremonies invited everyone to come downstairs after the decision was announced and dance, eat, and visit the various booths. Then she cleared her throat, got out her glasses; unfolded the little slip of paper, and read—the senior class took first prize and the juniors came in second! What a roar filled the gym! The crowd wound its way down the stairs to the tune of "Red and White" to enter in the fun.

There was plenty to eat plenty to do, and plenty to see! Hot dogs and cokes were sold by the juniors; ice cream, by the freshmen; peanuts, by Pi Gamma Mu; and pop corn, by the Town Girls' Club. A place for dancing was provided by the seniors.

The sophomores displayed some of their "freaks" in a side show; government sponsored a booth where Mr. Graham foretold futures by palm reading; the Y. W. C. A. had a penny pitching booth; a handwriting analysis stand was supervised by the Choir; the A. A's. had a roulette board; bingo was sponsored by the Monogram Club; the Spanish and French Clubs had a stand together in which they sold attractive cards with messages written on them in Spanish and French; and many a ring was tossed at the Granddaughters Club stand.

Time flew by, and it was almost time to say good-night. Everyone was tired but happy. The circus, as it always was, had been a huge success. Now the crowning highlight of the year was drawing to a close. The animals sleepily hung their heads—and the Big Tent was folded up until next year. Luck to it!

Students To Sing At Baptist Church

On Sunday morning, November 18, at 11 o'clock, special music will be rendered at the Baptist church as a part of the regular worship service, Alfred H. Strick, head of the music department, has revealed.

Soloists for the program will be Kitty East and Jeanne Button. Directed by Margie Hewlett and accompanied on the piano by Nell Scott, the Junior A'Capella will sing, after which the Intermediate A'Capella headed by Dorothy Cummings and accompanied by Grace Anderson will appear on the program. Nancy McCauley and Jeanne Button will also sing a duet during the morning worship hour.

Presbyterian Girls To Attend Meeting

Attending the Presbyterian conference at Blacksburg, will be 14 college students from State Teachers College. The conference will open November 16 and will close November 18.

On Friday, November 16 the group will hear Chaplain Russell Stroup, who served in the Pacific area during the war, deliver the keynote speech. Highlighting Saturday's program will be a panel discussion, and an address by Rev. Richard T. Gillespie. Sunday's program includes a discussion led by Ellis Nelson on the topic, "Why Not Stop Praveing?", John Fishbach will lead a discussion on the subject "The Eternal" and social concern.

Rev. Philip A. Roberts will deliver the morning sermon at the Blacksburg Presbyterian Church on Sunday.

Those attending from Farmville will be Martha Russell East, Connie Ozlin, Lucy Bowling, Alfredia Peterson, Jane Mantiply, Catharine Bickle, Elinor Overbey, Ruth Rowe, Clie Sarver, Mary Rattray, Glennis Moore, Christine Shiflet, Mary Lou Graham, Agnes Stokes, Mrs. Frank Crawford, adviser to Westminster Fellowship, and Rev. Philip A. Roberts, pastor of the Farmville Presbyterian Church.

Tindall Will Head Phi Zeta Sorority

Katherine Tindall, senior from Hatton, was recently elected president of Phi Zeta Sigma sorority to succeed Rachel Brugh who had to resign because of her health.

Elected as treasurer to succeed Katherine was Jane Mantiply sophomore from Fishersville.

of the Godmother; Janie Hanks will be Lord Mayor; Frances Marshall will be the Queen; Betty Sroggins, Lord Times; Mary Lou Feamster, the Bishop; Lucia King, the maid, and Grace Loyd, the king.

The part of Dr. Bodie will be played by Rebecca Williams, and the part of Danny will be played by Eloise Hanes, Virginia Hollifield is the Probationer, and Charlotte Hutter the censor.

The Beauties of the production will be played by Delores Duck, Adelaide Cobie, Martha Hatcher, Sue Davis, Lucia King, Nell Coleman, Evelyn Patterson and Mildred Hahn. Betty and Jane Burchett will act as pages, and Jean Cake, Martha Morehead, and Joyce Hill as Lords.

The three refugee children are portrayed by three Farmville children, Mary Kay and Ruthie Catlin, and Beverly Rippard.

Tickets went on reserve at Patterson's at 8 this morning. Girls are asked to attend the play in formal dress, Carlotta Norfleet, president, has announced, however, this is not compulsory.

Just Looking Thanks

By LELA BOULDIN

The circus drew quite a few familiar faces back to S. T. C. this week end. Among those were Hackie Moore, Gin T. Pullen, Bobbie Scott, Joyce Cheatwood, Eleanor Corell, Jean Prosise, Virginia Lee Abernathy, Mary Franklin Woodward, Martha Higgins, Martha Anne Upshur, Mary Rucker, Lucy Lingo, Lucy Messick, Mary Lou Donley, Gwen Ackiss, Joan Davis, Jean Givers and Ann Blair.

One would suppose that circus would be enough to keep S. T. C.-ers at school, but not so, for the University of Virginia proved exciting to Frances Bell, Nancy Dickinson, Betty Ellis, Norma Howard, Carmen Low, Jane Page, Glenn Ann Patterson, and Martha Weils.

Flashing the spotlight to Richmond, we find Nancy Blair, Louise Blane, Barbara J. Churn, Barbara DeHardit, Doris Elliot, Lee Ewing, Alice Gordon, Sarah Greene, Marion Gunn, Lottie Hammock, Mary Lou Jordan, Mary Kennedy, Gwendolyn Kell, Jean Kollmeyer, Shirley Mankin, Virginia Marshall, Berkley Richardson, Connie Ozlin, Edith Pemberton, Patsy Saunders, Betty Scroggins, Ann Taylor, Martha White, Audrey Wilkerson, and Mary Yates.

Tuning in on Petersburg we will hear from Anne Ford, Doris May, Gloria Moore, Florence Pride, Mildred Spain, Frances Seward, and Frances Shackelford.

Danville was the center of attraction for Evelyn Hair, Mary Ellen Petty, Louise Smith, and Elizabeth Bennett.

Finding fun on other campuses were Jean Babb and Mary Waddell at Mary Washington and Alice Buck at Hollins College.

Up and down the hills of Lynchburg we could have seen Virginia Hollifield, Lucia King, Katherine Prebble, and Jean Watts.

Chase City proved interesting to Ruth Fleming and Mary Robertson.

Keeping up the morale in Covington were Frankie Hardy, Peggy Murray, Betty Jo Vail, Gwendolyn Smith and Ann Verser.

In Dillwyn were Iris Davis, Doris Robertson and Jean Rock.

Green Bay may be a small place, but it proved interesting to Hilda Kauffman, and Ann Owen.

Willis Takes Highest Honors In Annual Colonnade Contest

Second Place Goes To Wilson

Ann Willis, junior from Culpeper, won first prize in the short story contest sponsored by the Colonnade, according to an announcement made by Nancy Whitehead, editor of the magazine. The title of the prize winning love story is "Kiss in the Dark."

Second prize went to Margaret Wilson, junior from Washington.

ANN WILLIS

D. C., for her story "Erase the Puppy". Betty Deuel Cock, senior from Hampton, won honorable mention for her story "Mr. Simmons Sittles Sings."

Honorable mention also was awarded Irene Pomeroy, senior from Quinton, for her story "The Climax."

Featured in this issue will be poetry by Page Callis, freshman from Petersburg, and Betty Deuel Cock. Dean Martha Smith Smith has written an article entitled "Thoughtful Satisfaction."

This issue of The Colonnade is dedicated to the freshman class, with an appropriate design by Carmen Low. The Colonnade is a literary magazine to which students, members of the faculty, alumnae, and others contribute. It publishes some of the results of the thinking and writing done in the college and among its friends.

A transfer from Randolph-Mason last spring, Anne served as a reporter of the college newspaper; while during her high school days she was editor of her high school paper. At Farmville she is a member of Beorc Eh Thorn, English honor society, and has recently written the Christmas play for the Canterbury Club.

15 Students Join Town Girls' Club

Fifteen local girls were initiated into the town girls' club at a meeting held Friday afternoon, November 2, 1945.

Girls initiated were Lucille Baldwin, Leddie Foster, Lennie Noblin, Cathryn Mosteller, Betty Pairet, Thelma Southall,, Mary Virginia Morris, Jane Glenn, Pat Lynn, Wilma Allen, Eula Ayers, Iris Coleman, Virginia Lee Watson, Dorothy Bousman, and Catherine Hogge.

At this meeting Cathryn Mosteller was elected reporter. Other officers of the club are Martha Holman, president; Evelyn Moore, vice-president; Nola Brisentine, secretary; and Betty Bondurant, treasurer.

Philhower Reveals Dance Ticket Sale

Tickets for the annual senior dance which will be held this year on Saturday night, December 8, will go on sale on December 4, Jane Philhower, general chairman of the dance has revealed. Stag tickets will be fifty-five cents, while date tickets will be $1.10.

Leading the figure in which only seniors and their dates will participate will be Eleanor Bisese and Mary Walker Watts, followed by Anne Summers with Lillian Elliott, and Virginia Shackelford, with Jane Philhower.

Chaperons for the dance will include Miss Olive T. Iler, Mrs. Eva Warren, Mrs. Katherine Tabb, Dr. and Mrs. C. G. Gordon Moss, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. McCorkle, and Raymond H. French.

Anne Summers is chairman of the decorations committee; Lillian Elliott heads the ticket committee; Betty Ellis is in charge of the figure; Lucie McKenry heads the floor committee; Dorothy Overcash is chairman of the program; and Peggy T. Ross heads the music committee.

According to an announcement made this week by the general chairman, the dance will be an open dance, and all students and visitors are invited. There is, however, one rule that no one except seniors can wear white dresses.

Lancaster Speaks In Student Lounge

In his lecture of November 14, sponsored by Kappa Delta Pi, Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, state superintendent of public instruction, reviewed educational trends over a period of years with special reference to Virginia schools.

Dr. Lancaster stated that with an increase in the school enrollments, and with an increase of pupils with varied backgrounds making up the enrollments, the school system has become much more complicated as the years have gone by.

In predicting future changes in the school systems of Virginia, the state superintendent of public instruction said that there would probably be a reduction of the now 500 recognized high schools to 200; of these 500 schools, 20 have enrollments of 500 or more. Since schools with large student bodies have more educational opportunities than smaller ones, consolidation of smaller schools seems to be the only remedy for the situation. Dr. Lancaster also predicted longer school hours as well as a state-wide twelve year system. Also he thought that some type of summer program would be carried on—organized differently, of course, from the winter program.

Of the more recent accomplishments in the field of education, Dr. Lancaster believed that the action taken by the state legislature

Johnson To Talk At Local College On November 29

Martin Announces Committee Names

Ann Martin, president of Beorc Eh Thorn, English honor society which is sponsoring the lecture of Mr. Burges Johnson, has announced the following committees to make all the arrangements for that lecture which will be heard on this campus November 29.

Serving as chairman of the publicity committee is Margaret Wilson. Helping her are Virginia Treakle and Connie Ozlin.

Louise Rives heads up the staging committee. Her assistants are Lucie Addleman and Marjorie Hewlett. Katherine Allen is chairman of the library committee.

The invitation committee is headed by Lovice Altizer. Serving under her are Shirley Cruser and Ann Willis.

Nell Scott has charge of the social committee. Virginia Tindall Virginia Shackelford, and Sue Hundley are assisting her.

Mr. Johnson is secretary of the College English Association and editor of its publication. He is touring the country especially to come in contact with the English teachers. Following his lecture there will be a reception in the student lounge.

Commercial Club Presents Play

Last Wednesday night at 6:45 o'clock the Commercial Club presented a play "Boss Versus Secretary" in the small auditorium. This play served as the program for the regular Commercial Club meeting.

The play showed the difference in an inefficient secretary who chewed gum and had holes in her letters from erasers, and the efficient secretary who had a college education in business education and could get out a good, well-written, neat letter in a short time.

Cile Sarver, Barbara Kellam, Mary Jane King, Anne Williams, and Lucille Upshur were the characters in the play which was under the direction of Mrs. J. P. Wynne, advisor of the club, and Mary Virginia Walker.

The Commercial Club of the high school was represented and also a large number of the freshmen business education students of the college in addition to the Commercial Club members.

Annual Deadline Set By Editor-in-Chief

Lillian Elliott, editor-in-chief of the Virginian, has announced that November 20 will be the deadline for subscriptions to the annual with padded covers. Subscriptions for the annual with plain covers will be taken until December 13.

Before these dates, members of the staff will canvass each hall for subscriptions. The cost of a book with padded cover is $4.50, whereas the cost of the book with plain cover is $4.00.

The Virginian is the year book of State Teachers College. Students are responsible for art work, the editing, and management of the publication. Each issue represents a cross section of life here in this college.

Dance Trio To Give Concert

Program To Begin At Eight O'clock

Jane Dudley, Sophie Maslow, and William Bales, dance trio will present a modern dance concert in the college auditorium, December 7, at 8 o'clock.

The trio revealed their full stature as artists of the first rank when their debut as a concert trio turned out to be not only the dance event of the season but also the forerunner of ever more triumphant successes in New York and on tour. As featured soloists or guest artists with the leading American companies of Martha Graham, Humphrey - Weidman, and Hanga Holm, the dancers were well known before launching upon their independent careers.

Their program of dances drawn from the American scene and from folklore, old and new, bring characters and situations to life in a simple human emotion. Their vivid performances are heightened by the use of drama, dialogue, and music, delighting their audiences with a new and exciting form of popular theater.

Sophomores Present STC Fashion Show

On Thursday night, November 15 at 10 o'clock in the Student Building auditorium, the sophomore commission presented a fashion show of "Do's and Dont's" at S. T. C. This fashion show was presented to the freshmen "Y" club.

Taking part in the program were Alice Ann Abernathy, Julia Booher, Claire Clarke, Mary Jane Bond, Jerry Colgin, Edith Duffy, Carol Jenkins, George Ann Lewis, Peggy Moore, Mary Ann Morris, Caroline Painter, Berkley Richardson, Betsy Scott, Nancy Squire, Betsy Stoner, and Gee Gee Yonce.

STC Choir to Sing In Richmond Soon

Girls To Broadcast Over Station WRVA

On Sunday morning, December 2, the college choir will sing in the St. Giles Presbyterian Church, Richmond, and on Sunday evening, the group will sing in the Boulevard Methodist Church of the same city, Alfred H. Strick, head of the music department, announces.

Participating in the worship services will be the entire choir of sixty-five voices, the senior a'capella, madrigal singers, junior a'capella, and intermediate a'capella. Esther Shevick will appear as guest soloist for the services. Student directors participating will be Esther Shevick, Margie Hewlett, and Dorothy Cummings, while Nell Scott, Grace Anderson, and Constance Ozlin will accompany the groups at the piano.

Also as a part of the program, Dr. James Elliott Walmsley, professor of history and social sciences, will give annotations of the hymns.

Dr. J. L. Blair Buck, chairman of the music committee of St. Giles Church, issued the invitation to the choir director to have the students sing in that city church of which he is a member, and Dr. Edwin S. Sheppe, pastor of the Boulevard Methodist Church, invited the group on behalf of the music committee of his church. Dr. J. Blanton Belk, who recently spoke on this campus under the auspices of the Westminster Fellowship, is pastor of St. Giles Church.

The choir will leave Farmville Saturday afternoon and will rehearse that evening in Richmond. Arrangements have also been made with officials of WRVA for the group to broadcast on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 with a rehearsal at station WRVA at 1:30.

Philosopher Born In Massachusetts

PGM TO Sponsor Eminent Lecturer

Dr. Will Durant will speak on the "Causes and Consequences of the War" in the State Teachers College auditorium on Monday, November 26, at 8 o'clock. Dr. Durant is being brought to this campus under the auspices of Pi Gamma Mu national social science honor society.

Dr. Durant was born at North Adams, Massachusetts in 1885. He received his formal education in the schools of that city and Kearny, New Jersey; at Saint Peter's College, Jersey City, New Jersey; and at Columbia University, New York. He served as a cub reporter on the New York Journal for a short time and then taught Latin, Greek, French, and English in Seton Hall College, South Orange, New Jersey. In 1912 he toured Europe and returned in 1913 to take up graduate work in biology and philosophy at Columbia University. He received his Ph. D. degree there in 1917.

Versatile Speaker

In 1914 Dr. Durant began lecturing in New York City on philosophy, literature, science, music, economics, biology and history. Since his audience consisted mainly of the business, professional, and working classes, it was necessary that he give clear detailed explanations and some contemporary significance to all material presented. He received valuable training through this to which he owed the success of his book, The Story of Philosophy. This book has sold over two million copies since its appearance in 1926, and has been translated into twelve languages.

Lecturer Retires

In order to give all his time to what he intended to make his life work, Dr. Durant retired in 1927 to write The Story of Civilization. For this purpose he has traveled twice around the world and four times through Europe. This work will be divided into five volumes. The first, Our Oriental Heritage, appeared in 1935; the second, The Life of Greece, in 1939; and the

Troxell To Sing At Annual Concert

Miss Barbara Troxell, lyric soprano, will be guest artist at the annual Christmas Concert of the College Choir and Choral Club on December 16 at 8:30 o'clock in the college auditorium.

Born in Easton, Pennsylvania, Miss Troxell gave no thought to music as a career until she attended the Pennsylvania State College. Here she won her Bachelor of Science and Master's Degree in Musical Education, and also taught voice and piano while earning her graduate degree.

Miss Troxell, with a long list of Eastern appearances to her credit, was soloist for two summers at Duke University, was chosen last year to appear on the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air, and was guest artist of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra when they presented DeBussy's "Blessed Damorselle".

According to the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, "Miss Troxell's recital proves a matter of cultured, sensitive singing of feeling, and tradition as regards to the style and phrasing. She has a clear young voice which is produced with gratifying ease and not a little skill."

Are We Truly Thankful?

Thanksgiving 1945 comes to a world that is different in many respects from recent years. This season of giving thanks finds us in a world not being devastated by war but in a world that is striving to reconstruct out of its ruins a just and lasting peace, a peace that shall not be shaken in the years to come.

As we approach this season, we should bow humbly before Almighty God to praise Him and to thank Him for the many blessings we do have. First of all, may we reverently be thankful for the cessation of hostilities around the world and for the vast number of fighting men who have already returned to us. Then, too, we could not fail to utter prayerful thanks for those men who have paid the supreme sacrifice on fields of battle around the world.

Let us as college girls in the land of America pause to count the blessings that are ours because we do live in this country and because we have been granted the opportunity of continuing our education. There are many young people in the world today that would give almost anything to live in democratic America and to know what it means to go to an American college.

Third, may we be truly thankful for the life that we have to live in the classrooms and on the campus, wherever we are. Then, too, for love, we shall give our heartfelt thanks, love of Christ, love of parents, love of relatives, and love of friends—that great element in mankind that lifts us out of mere existence into real living.

These are, of course, but a few of the many things for which we should be thankful. Time and space would not permit a lengthy discussion on this topic. The question, however, on which we shall place emphasis is this "Are you truly thankful?" Have you taken stock of your own blessings and opportunities? Do you thank God daily for them? Are you truly thankful as you approach Thanksgiving 1945?

Our Congratulations

Congratulations go this week to the student body for their fine school spirit displayed in the round-robin hockey tournament, color rush, and the song contest. Congratulations to the winners, and congratulations to the losers for being such good sports.

Those of us that lost have shaken hands with the winners, smiled, and resolved that we will not be defeated in the struggle for the color cup. We'll fight on with the same school spirit we displayed this past week, and at the end, the loser will go down fighting.

School spirit, a great part of S. T. C., is one thing that makes us love our college. We're all out for our class; and when the time comes, we're ready to pull together for all classes. We yell for green and white or red and white when we're trying for the color cup; but when it's our school out on the field, you'll find us yelling for blue and white.

In chapel Saturday morning we screamed and applauded for our class; and when the winner was announced, we showed just as much enthusiasm. We ran from building to building in the afternoon to see who was the first to put out the colors. If we won we were happy, oh, so happy; if we lost, we congratulated the winner on a fine job. At the hockey games, we screamed for our class until we were blue in the face. Then after the game, we hoarsely offered our praises to the winning players.

S. T. C.'ers have again proved that they are good sports. We'll go on fighting to put the colors on the cup in the same way, the way that's a great phase of the life of the Farmville girls.

Gleanings

Mildred Altice

Observing the conditions that exist throughout the world today we Americans discover that we possess countless blessings for which we should be thankful during our traditional thanksgiving season. In all the countries of the world there is not a comparable holiday, but nowhere is such a time for giving thanks so much needed. We can be thankful that our country is not torn by civil war so soon after the past gigantic struggle as is true in China. However, it is the opinion of informed people that it is going to be very difficult for the United States to keep completely aloof from that struggle. We can be thankful that starvation is not stalking mercilessly over our continent as is happening on the European and Asiatic continents. We can be thankful that our homes and country have not been devastated by war as has been the case in so many nations of the world. These are only a few blessings that can be mentioned that we have which are denied to many people in the world.

* * * *

A soft coal strike and a steel strike both threaten the country and either one will hinder the production of automobiles. The three outstanding automobile producers are all lined up together against labor and, incidently, do not expect a solution to labor problems from the current labor management conference.

* * * *

Our country is bountifully blessed with natural resources and with strong, fearless people, but still we employ the atomic bomb and a large financial loan to make the rest of the world do as we say. I wonder whether this will work ultimately.

Bed-Check

While visions of turkey danced through their heads—

Mary Ann Morris and Peggy Cabaniss took off to Burkeville, or was it Prospect? Well, anyway their destination was the wide open spaces! Can't blame them!

Have we turned back the pages or was it only an optical illusion when we saw those familiar faces—Margaret Orange, and Howard Ellett once more on campus?

Why do all the town boys appeal to you, Philhower?

It seems that Pete is taking the "Black Hawk's" place at S. T. C. We know Cay doesn't object at all.

And how about that big time conference at Blacksburg. From the meager details that have leaked out, it sounds ALL RIGHT!

Happiest girl last week end was Christine Shifflet who saw her big brother (a MAJOR—take notice, please) for the first time since he arrived home!

Hm-m-m, did you see that attractive man with Dot May? He was something to dream about!

Speaking of dreams—Lucy created quite a commotion in Junior building when she carried on a fifteen minute conversation in her sleep! That can be dangerous, you know!

Congratulations to Miss Wheeler, Carlotta, and the cast of "A Kiss for Cinderella" for their superb performance!

Flowers were floating in all directions—especially to one Betty Bibb. Ryland nearly knocked himself out getting them there in time.

And we wonder how Billy liked Virginia Holliifield as a nurse! She looked mighty appealing across those footlights.

Another wanderer has returned—it was mighty good to see Allan Phillips around once more—and with Ann Carter!

Y News

Immediately after dinner on Wednesday night November 28 in the large auditorium, the Freshman Commission will be installed. On last Thursday night, the Sophomore Commission presented the entire "Y" club a fashion show in the little auditorium.

News from the various church groups on campus includes an inspirational week end at the Presbyterian conference in Blacksburg by the officers who attended. The Baptist students report that the sunrise service on last Sunday morning was held as originally announced but that their hike to Longwood on Monday afternoon for the two Sunday school classes was called off because of rain.

As we approach this Thanksgiving season, we are grateful to God for the countless blessings that are ours. In the eighteenth century, A. L. Barbould sang praises to God for love, plenty, knowledge, and other blessings that were his. May we in these days, "praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Praise to God, immortal praise
For the love that crowns our days;
Bounteous source of every joy,
Let thy praise our tongues employ;
All to thee, our God we owe,
Source whence all our blessings flow.

All the plenty summer pours;
Autumn's rich o'erflowering stores,
Flocks that whiten all the plain
Yellow sheaves of ripened grain;
Lord, for these our souls shall raise
Grateful vows and solemn praise.

Peace, prosperity, and health,
Private bliss, and public wealth,
Knowledge with its gladdening streams,
Pure religion's holier beams:
Lord, for those our souls shall raise
Grateful vows and solemn praise.

As thy prospering hand hath blest,
May we give thee of our best;
And by deeds of kindly love
For thy mercies grateful prove;
Singing thus through all our days
Praise to God, immortal praise.

—A. L. Barbould, 1772

Voice of Our Readers

Dear Editor.

Why should we stand rather than sit when we ask the blessing at meal time? I am not asking for a change because we students mind standing, but rather because we think that it would be more reverent to remain seated. When the girls come into the dining hall, they immediately take a seat because of the long wait before the meal begins. Then when the bell rings to return thanks, there is a scrapping of chairs which does not add to the occasion. Sometimes girls even seat themselves before the blessing has been completed. All this takes away from the meaning of our simple words of gratitude. In church we do not always stand for prayer and in our homes we seldom do this. Why should it be so in our school?

Hoping for a change,
Mary Agnes Millner

Dear Editor:

There are several things we think that should be brought to the attention of the students since we've been having our evening prayers in the Episcopal Church. Not meaning any harmful criticism against prayers in the auditorium, for they have done a great deal toward making our school day more complete, but the church has an atmosphere of reverence which is difficult to find in other places. Everything there is so serene, so still, so solemn, so beautiful with the soft candle light. There is no distracting outside noise, no unnecessary commotion for this is a place dedicated to God and His work.

It would be nice if we had a chapel of our own on campus, but since this is immediately impossible, we think, with their approval, we should continue our services in the Episcopal Church.

Cinderella, Policeman Make Play Ending Happy, Exciting

Laboring under more than the usual difficulties because of the illness of Miss Wheeler, the Dramatic Club outdid themselves in last Friday night's production of "A Kiss for Cinderella," and hit a new high in variety and near-perfection. The curtain went up at eight-on-the-nose, and we, the audience were ushered into the darkened studio of Mr. Bodie, artist. Betty Bibb made a lovable Mr. Bodie, respiendent in blue smock and artist's tam, with her silvery Van Dyke beard trimmed to perfection, and a fine performance she gave.

It wasn't too long before we met Martha Showalter, portraying the part of Our Policeman . . . just from Scotland Yard, and ever ready for his slow but steady bit to do credit by the force. Congratulations go, too, to Martha for her excellent portrayal throughout the entire three acts. It was the Policeman, who in a discussion of the story of Cinderella, brought the first laugh by proclaiming, "Oh, I don't keep up with the fiction."

Last but not least of the characters who appeared in Act 1 came Jackie Watson as Cinderella herself . . busy as a little bee mothering Mr. Bodie and asking her endless questions. We can't suggest enough orchids for Jackie, freshman from Hampton, who in her first S. T. C. play has thus proved herself not only to be a fine little actress, but also a confirmed master of extreme facial expression.

We couldn't begin to mention the odd goings-on in Cinderella's little tailoring shop, in the first scene of act two. There was a man having a coat altered and a woman with an ailing husband; there was another man calling for his laundry, and a social outcast who merely wanted a kindly word from someone. The charge for every service was one penny.

During the whole scene, while Jean Cake, Delores Duck, Martha Morehead and Frances Ferguson Marshall were doing admirable jobs of playing the above mentioned parts, people in the audience were wondering about three very large wooden boxes standing on stilt-legs toward the back of the stage. Needless to say there was also some wondering about a mysterious (and very youthful) sneeze that resounded from somewhat the same region. But the element of surprise was felt throughout the auditorium when at last the plot of the story led up to the startling revelation of the contents of the boxes . . . three tiny young hopefuls who may hit Broadway yet . . . Beverly Rippard and Mary Kay and Ruthie Catlin as the three refugee children Gladys, Marie-Theresa, and Gretchen whom Cinderella had under her generous care. These three wee ladies came very near to stealing the whole show, whether deliberately or not we'd hate to say.

Perhaps the favorite scene of the whole play was scene two of act two. Cinderella, half-starved and her mind feverish, falls asleep in the snow while waiting for her fairy godmother to come and present her with an "invite" to the Prince's Ball. Here in the snow she dreams that her Godmother does come . . . and then the audience is spirited away to the scene of the ball . . . a dream complete as all

Red 'n Whites Win Hockey Tournament; Greens Chalk Up Victory In Color Rush

Sophomores Defeat Freshmen 1 to 0

The final scores of the hockey games Saturday afternoon gave the Red and White classes ten points toward the color cup for this year. The sophomore team defeated the freshman team with a final score of 1-0, and the seniors tied the junior team in a 0-0 score. This ended the final games in hockey for this year, and as the Red and White teams won the most games, they gained ten points toward the color cup.

Thursday afternoon the senior team defeated the freshman team with a score of 4-0, and Friday afternoon the juniors held the sophomores to a scoreless tie. Line-ups for the class teams for the games were: seniors, Lucille Jones, captain, Margaret Orange, Louise Blane, Kitty Wright, Frances Lee, Jackie Ritchie, Martha Watkins, Phyllis Watts, Regina Portinarro, Lillian Elliott, and Peggy T. Ross. Junior team: Nellie Smith, captain, Margaret Ellett, Margaret Lohr, Dorothy Owen, Kitty Sue Bridgforth, Sue Hundley, Betty Minetree, Betty Parrish, L. Carter, D. Anderson, Grace Loyd. Sophomore line-up: Jerry Colgin, captain, Alice Abernathy, Peggy Cabaniss, Peepsie Brooks, Jeane Bentley, Julia Booher, Myra Ann Motley, Mary Ann Morris, Dorothy White, Jackie Hancock, and Betty Winston. Freshman team; Anne Barksdale, captain, Nancy Dickenson, Mary Evelyn Miles, Violet Ritchie, Evelyn Drewer, Jane Taylor, Martha Gillum, Dorothy Ramage, Marie Hutcheson, Katherine Cosby, and Hazel Lewis.

The class color rush on Saturday afternoon ended in a final victory for the green and white runners. Green and white banners were hung from junior building, library hall, student building, and as there was a tie between the runners on White House, both green and white and red and white banners were hung. Red and white banners were on senior building, Rotunda, and also on White House, as the results of a tie. This event does not give points for the color cup, but is for the purpose of stimulating interest in the athletic events to appear later on the campus.

At 6 o'clock, the Athletic Association entertained in honor of the four class hockey teams, and all members of the teams were invited to student building lounge for supper.

Orchesis Members To Give Program

Practices have already started for the annual Christmas Sing program to be given by members of Orchesis on Saturday night, December 15, in the college auditorium immediately following dinner, Miss Emily Kauzlarich has announced.

This year's theme includes not only the traditional materials as exemplified in previous programs, but also an attempt by dance, song and speaking voice of Christmas Thoughts of 1945, that comes from the Freedom of Worship as stated musically in Russell Bennett's Symphony of the Four Freedoms.

last May was the most remarkable. At that time, without a single dissenting vote, the legislators passed a bill appropriating a huge sum of money to be spent for certain educational purposes. Among other things, this money is to be used to secure more personnel in State Department of Education, to test pupils this year to see how satisfactory their learning is and to use the results of the tests to maintain and operate vocational education.

While Dr. Lancaster was pleased with this improvement, he stated that the State Department intended to ask for much more when the legislature begins work in January.

He said, "We want $40,000 more for additional personnel, particularly a director of health education and director of school transportation."

Also the State Department of Education wants more money for teachers, for adult education, for school libraries, for vocational education, etc.

In closing, Dr. Lancaster pictured a bright future for the teaching profession,

Junior Class Wins In Song Contest

Saturday, November 17, the annual song contest was held in the large auditorium during the chapel period. The juniors won top honors this year by a decision of the judges.

Frances Lee, president of the athletic association, opened the program with a short talk. Kitty Sue Bridgforth then told the audience about the rules for the color rush, Peggy T. Ross explained the hockey games, and Betty Parrish told about the color cup, and how points were gained for it. After this, the classes sang their songs. First the freshmen sang, followed by sophomores, juniors and seniors.

While waiting for the judges' decision, Betty Ellis, Lou Baker and Betty Lee led the audience in several cheers and songs. The pep meeting ended with Frances Lee announcing the juniors winners of the contest.

LEFT LEAD

RUSH ORDER

No rest for the weary! Because the paper comes out a day early, columns, etc., must be in the hands of the printers about four days early, so while we've little chance to gleam bits of stable gossip and pass them to you, we do consider this an excellent time to present to you a few pointers from C. W. Anderson's handbook on riding, "Heads up—Heels Down."

HOSS TALK

Mr. Anderson says that a horseman never speaks of "front legs" or "back legs", but of forelegs and hind legs, although he may say a horse is lame "in front" or 'behind". The "near side" of a horse is the left side, from which you mount and from which he should always be handled. Although you may speak of the "left front leg" or the "right hind" without making a faux pas, the "near fore" and "off hind" is the horseman's way of describing them. Although these are not vital, there is a certain satisfaction is calling things by their correct names; and horse terminology has as much color and atmosphere as that of the sea. "Below deck" certainly sounds more interesting than "downstairs", and "a rangy bay with a blaze" gives more the feeling of the horse than does "a brownish horse with a white nose."

People may laugh when you speak of a horse with a "giraffe-neck" or "ewe neck", but Mr. Anderson uses these terms and says the condition is a sign of weakness. Another term equally amusing to those unfamiliar with it in connection with horses is that of the Roman nose. This, too, is an authentic bit of horse phraseology and indicates stubbornness on the part of that animal, yet oftentimes courage as well, and even Man o' War had a trace of Roman nose.

COLOR AND MARKINGS

In horses, the most common color is bay, which ranges from a deep reddish mahogany to a light tannish brown. A bay will have a black mane and tail. A brown horse is almost black to the average eye, but he has brown hairs at flank and muzzle. To be black, officially a horse must be black throughout, and the hair on the muzzle, which never changes, is the deciding factor. Chestnut has a wide range, the most common color being golden; but it also includes a coat that is almost red as well as one of deep liver color. Grays include everything from

On the Ball

Victory for the red and whites ended the hockey season this past Saturday. The seniors and juniors tied with a score of 0-0, and the sophomores defeated the freshmen 1-0. The games were exciting and all the teams were well-matched. Good sportsmanship was displayed by both sides. The green and white who took their defeat with a smile, cheerfully warned, "Just wait until next year!"

Green and white banners hung from four of the buildings with red and white banners on three buildings. There was a tie between the two colors on White House. This was a sign that Color Rush was over. The runners had completed their short treks, the cheers were over, and the crowd dispersed to the hockey field. Victory for green and white!

BOUNCIN' BALLS

After we have spent that eventful holiday stuffing ourselves with turkey and sweets, we will return to school to start the basketball season. Being a member of a team teaches good sportsmanship, cooperation and standing back to give the other girls a chance. All these can be found in playing basketball. The red and whites are well on their way toward the color cup, so green and whites here's a chance to catch up with them. We want to find girls from all the classes out on the court practicing. You might make sub-varsity, so come on out and try, because here's your chance to help your colors toward the color cup.

HOLIDAY FUN

We will put away our balls and hockey sticks, our tennis rackets and golf clubs this Wednesday to take ourselves away from school for a Thanksgiving holiday. But don't forget that sports can be just as much fun on a holiday as they can be in school.

Most of us will see a football game, some will go horseback riding, play tennis, bowl a few games, and some if they are lucky might even talk dad or the big brother into taking them hunting. Get out-of-doors when you're home, for this is the kind of weather that makes you feel good to be alive.

Parden Announces Student Meeting

Plans To Be Made For Conference

According to an announcement made this week by Jacqueline Parden, president of the Southern Inter-Collegiate Association of Student Government, a board meeting will be held in Winston-Salem, North Carolina on December 1.

At this time, plans will be made as to the date and the place of the spring conference, and problems which have arisen concerning student government on various campuses will be discussed. Practically all of the colleges in the south are represented in this organization.

At a meeting of the board last April, Jacqueline Parden was elected president for the year 1945. Some time ago, she appointed Dr. C. G. Gordon Moss as adviser for the entire association. Over a period of several months, the president has been corresponding with campus presidents on problems which have come up pertaining to student government.

Council Entertains For Dr. Jarman

On Monday night, November 19 at 6 o'clock in the college tea room, the Student Council entertained with a banquet in honor of Dr. J. L. Jarman. This affair is held annually on Dr. Jarman's birthday.

Invited guests included Dr. J. L. Jarman, Dean Martha Smith Smith, Mrs. Mary Watkins, Miss Virgilia Bugg, Miss Alpha Lee Garnett, Miss Winnie V. Hiner, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Graham, Dr. and Mrs. C. G. Moss, and members of the Student Council.

horses that are generally called white to those that are deeply dapple-gray—so deep as to be almost black. The roans, red and blue, are gray with a mixture of either chestnut or blue-gray hairs in their coats. Duns are either mouse-colored or the color known as buckskin in the West.

The white markings that some horses have are quite simple in name, and, once learned make it much easier to describe a horse. A wide band of white extending down the front of the face is called a "blaze". A patch of white on the horse's forehead is called a "star", and a narrow, irregular bit of white is a "stripe". If there is a patch of white at the horse's nostril it is a "snip". A white leg is called a "stocking". Certainly a chestnut horse with a blaze and two stockings "behind" would be the simplest way of describing a horse with these two markings. Anyone who has tried to play tennis learns quickly what base line, service, and fault mean, yet many persons who have been riding for some time are content to speak of a chestnut horse as "sort of tan color," and of the martingale as "that thing-amajig." They are really only a step above the little girl, who, her first time in the saddle stated, "I can't reach the pedals."

Cinderella Play

dreams are, with all the people who have passed in array before Cinderella that day appearing as some character in the ball room. Even the children are there in their boxes, and all is impressive, and all goes well, until the fatal stroke of the midnight hour . . . when much to the audience's surprise Cinderella is left alone in the center of the stage in her usual rags instead of the elegant white ball gown. She flees in shame, so that the Prince, (who is in reality the friendly Policeman), as he sees her, finds nothing left but her tiny glass slipper.

The final act takes place in a room in Dr. Bodie's convalescent home and we learn that Dr. Bodie is a woman doctor . . . and Mr. Bodie's own sister. The whole scene is light from the start, with the comedy and minor love-interests being capably taken by Virginia Hollifield as the probationer nurse, and Eloise Hanes as Danny, the convalescent soldier. Rebecca Williams did an excellent job as Dr. Bodie, and the others did more than well as in the respective parts. And natch, the plot figured itself out to the inevitable happy ending with the novel engagement of Cindrella to the kindly young policeman.

The actresses are not the only ones who deserved a great deal of credit in the production of this play. Staging, costuming, properties, lighting and makeup all had their various and sundry problems —in our opinion better jobs could not have been done in overcoming them. Special mention we feel should go to the properties group for a very effective snow-storm, and to the costuming group for the beauty and tricky part of the Ball scene. And to the make-up group, for the excellent cooperation in hair-cutting!

Yet, another fall play has come and gone. To use a time-worn expression, Miss Wheeler has "done it again". We again say "Congratulations," to every one concerned in the least bit with "A Kiss for Cinderella," and may the spring play be half as entertaining!

Just Looking Thanks

Attending the Presbyterian Conference in Blacksburg during the weekend were Agnes Stocks, Ann Savedge, Christine Shifflett, Alfreda Peterson, Catherine Bickle, Lucy Bowling, Martha Russell East, Mary Lou Graham, Jane Mantiply, Glennis Moore, Elinor Overbey, and Ruth Rowe.

Football Go'ers Could Wear Suits

By LELA BOULDIN

Thanksgiving holidays are almost here! What are you going to do? Football is among the first on the list (besides that "big" turkey dinner at home!)

Some of you are wondering what to wear to the game. Suits are always appropriate. A bright fuschia suit with a black chesterfield coat would be just right. Maybe some of you have a three-piece suit that you'd like to wear. A black checked suit would look "mighty" nice with a black three-quarter length coat. Perhaps some of you would prefer a plain wool suit with a matching topcoat — blue, black, green, or just any-color that suits you.

Your favorite woolen suit will look up to par with a contrasting blouse and a coat flung over your shoulders. Sport coats of the boxy types or tailored boy coats make the best toppers. Semi-dress shoes with heels of medium height or the ever popular wedges will be most suitable and comfortable for such an occasion. Maybe you'd like to add a sport hat to wear on the back of your head to make your outfit perfect.

If you're getting tired of wearing suits on every occasion and prefer a dress, choose something casual. A well-tailored woolen or gabardine dress will be appropriate. Maybe you're lucky enough to own a fur coat. By all means carry that along to keep out the cold wind.

Whatever you wear, you want to look your best, and so be sure to be neat and well-groomed.

Here's wishing all of you a happy Thanksgiving holiday.

Modern DanceTrio Presents Program Here Friday Night

Dudley, Maslow, Bales Compose Unit

Beginning at 8 o'clock on Friday night, December 7, the Dudley-Maslow-Bales Trio will present a modern dance program in the college auditorium.

The group was formed in 1942 and made its first New York appearance that spring under the auspices of the Dance Observer magazine in a series at the Humphrey-Weidman Studio Theatre. Jane Dudley and Sophie Maslow were then both members of Martha Graham's company as well as the New Dance Group, and William Bales, a former member of the Humphrey-Weidman Company was (and is) on the faculty of Bennington College.

Their first program contained Miss Maslow's "Folksay", which has already become something of an American classic, as well as her teaching pair of "Dust Bowl Ballads" to Woody Guthric's songs. It had as well Miss Dudley's incomparable "Harmonica Breakdown" is also in the permanent class. Mr. Bales promising "Es Mujer" has been followed by a small spacious work "Sea Bourne" of which the duet will be shown here.

It was clear at the beginning that these three young dancer-choreographers had something else besides themselves on their minds.

A three part dance suite to music by Bach opens the program. It is light, fast and full of presto movement similar to that found in ballet.

Included also on the program among others will be "To a Green Mountain Boy", "Spanish Suite", "New World A-Comin' ", "Furlough," and "Dust Bowl Ballads."

"To a Green Mountain Boy" has Yankee ginger in it. John Martin, the New York Times dance critic, says it is a delightfully conceived ode to the cussedness of Ethan Allen and his gang. It glasses over none of the Yankeeisms, but brings such a genial comment to

Mardi Gras Slated For February 23

Mardi Gras dance will be held Saturday night, February 23 in the college gym, according to Kitty Maddox, general chairman for the dance. This dance is a costume dance which is sponsored every year by Pi Gamma Mu.

Voting for the queen and her court will take place tonight, December 5, after supper. The results wil be published in the Rotunda, December 12.

Troxell To Appear Here December 16

Miss Barbara Troxell, lyric soprano, will be guest artist at the annual Christmas concert of the College Choir and Choral Club on December 16 at 8:30 o'clock in the college auditorium.

Born in Easton, Pennsylvania, Miss Troxell gave no thought to music as a career until she attended Pennsylvania State College, where she won a Bachelor of Science and Masters Degree. While earning her graduate degree, she taught voice and piano.

Immediately after her college graduation, she was awarded a scholarship to study with Madame Elizabeth Schumann at the Curtis Institute of Music, from which she was graduated in 1942.

Mis Troxell, whose voice has been described as "a warm lyric soprano with a dramatic tinge at the top," started her career off with a long list of engagements in the East. She held the position of soloist at Duke University for two years. Last year she was a finalist on the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air, and was guest artist of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchesetra when they presented DeBussy's "Blessed Damoiselle."

Miss Troxell has been soprano soloist with the Dessoff choirs and National Orchestral Association —this time in the city Center of Music and Drama, presenting the Brahm's Requiem. During this year, she has had three Carnegie Hall appearances in Bach's "Magnificat," Rameau's "In Convertendo," and has served as assisting artist with the Down Town Glee Club.

Also Mary Waldrop, Margaret Wall, Mary Virginia Walsh, Ann Walton, Margaret Ware, Jackie Watson, Jean Watts, Margaret Watts, Ginny Sue Webb, Martha Ann White. Margaret Whittle and Rebecca Williams.

French Circle Plans For Christmas Party

Last Tuesday afternoon, November 27, at 4 o'clock, the French Circle held its second meeting of the year. Plans were begun for the annual French and Spanish Christmas party that will be held next Thursday at nine o'clock. Committee heads were named and told to begin work immediately.

After the party had been discussed, the president turned the meeting over to Mary Mason who took charge of the program. Becky Williams gave in French an account of the life of Paul Verlaine, the famous French poet, after which Elizabeth Spindler read two of his poems. Annette Grainger recited one of his most beautiful poems, "El Pleure Dans Mon Coeur." Margaret Harvey also gave a recitation of "Sonnet Pour Heline," by Ronsard. Janie Hanks read a composition on the life and works of Ronsard, and the famous group of seven French poets of the Renaissance, the Pleiade. Following the program, the first year class conducted in French a game of bingo.

Annual Subscriptions Close December 10

December 10 is the date set as the deadline for subscriptions to the Virginian, Lillian Elliott, editor-in-chief, has stated,

The subscription may be given to any member of the annual staff or may be bought at the table in the hall. The cost of the book with a plain cover is $4, with only $1 required as down payment; the remainder to be paid when the annuals are delivered in the spring.

Russ Carlton and Orchestra To Set Senior Dance Tempo Saturday Night, December 8

MARY WALKER WATTS

ELEANOR BISESE

Seniors, Escorts To Compose Figure

Russ Carlton with his fifteen piece orchestra and vocalist from Danville will furnish the music for the annual senior dance which will be held on Saturday night, December 8, from 8:30 to 12 in the gymnasium according to an announcement by Jane Philhower, general dance chairman.

Tickets for the dance went on sale in the hall at chapel hour Tuesday, December 4. Admission prices are sixty-five cents for stag tickets and date tickets, $1.20.

The receiving line will consist of S. L. Graham; Eleanor Bisese, president of the senior class; Miss Elizabeth Burger, class sponsor; Mary Walker Watts, honorary member of the class; Anne Summers, vice-president; Lillian Elliott, secretary; Virginia Shakelford, treasurer; and Miss Mary Dabney, sister class sponsor.

Eleanor Bisese and Mary Walker Watts, followed by Anne Summers and Lillian Elliott, and Virginia Shackelford and Jane Philhower will lead the figure in which only seniors and their dates will participate.

Chaperoning the dance will be Miss Olive T. Iler, Mrs. Eva Warren, Mrs. Katherine Tabb, Dr. and Mrs. C. G. Gordon Moss, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. McCorkle, and Raymond H. French.

Anne Summers is chairman of the decorations committee; Lillian Elliott heads the ticket committee; Betty Ellis is in charge of the figure; Lucie McKenry heads the floor committee; Dorothy Overcash is chairman of the program; and Peggy T. Ross heads the music committee.

The dance will be an open dance, according to an announcement by Jane Philhower, and all students and visitors are invited; however, only 600 tickets will be put on sale and no tickets will be sold at the door. Spectators will be admitted for twenty-five cents, provided they are not dressed in evening clothes. No one except seniors can wear white dresses.

Educators Honor College President

Dr. J. L. Jarman was one of five Virginians honored by the Virginia Educational Association last week when the association for the first time in its history awarded honorary life memberships to him and four other men, noted in state and national education.

Announcement of the award was made in the John Marshall High school auditorium on Thanksgiving morning, at the state convention which was attended by 1,031 educators, including a number from State Teachers College and Prince Edward county.

Dr. Jarman, president of State Teachers College here, was called "the great teacher of teachers", in the award address by Francis Chase, now rural education director for the University of Chicago, and formerly executive secretary of the VEA, who returned to Richmond to attend the session. Chase declared Dr. Jar-

STC Yule Program Opens December 10

Beginning Monday night, December 10, the first of the series of Christmas programs will be held, at which time Jackie Parden will tell the Christmas story, "Why the Chimes Rang."

December 13 Miss Minne V. Rice, Latin professor, will tell the story, "The Other Wise Man" at prayers. Immediately after that there will be the hanging of the greens.

December 14 a pageant entitled "O Holy Night" will be presented at prayers according to an announcement made by Charlotte Grizzard, head of the prayers committee of the Y. W. C. A.. The annual observance of White Christmas will be held immediately after the pageant. At this time organizations on campus will contribute to the fund for the local welfare, according to an announcement made by Patsy Dale, chairman of the service committee of the Y. W. C. A.

S. T. C. Choir Sings In Richmond Over Station WRVA Sunday

For the first time since the beginning of World War II in December, 1941, the College Choir under the direction of Alfred H. Strick sang over station WRVA on Sunday afternoon, December 2, at 2:30 o'clock. A large number of friends of the college and of the choir attended the broadcast, sitting in the room adjacent to the broadcasting room and watching the girls broadcast through a connecting window.

Also as a part of the Richmond trip, the girls gave a concert of sacred music at St. Giles Presbyterian Church Sunday morning, at which time, the College Choir sang the folk carol "Sing We the Virgin Mary". Also as a part of this program, the Senior A'Capella choir sang "The Nativity" by Graf, and "When Jesus Lived in Galilee" by Niles. The Junior A'Capella, directed by Margie Hewlett and accompanied by Nell Scott, sang "Alleluiah" by Fuger-Bach and the Madrigal Singers, directed by Esther Shevick, sang "Two Carols" arranged by Swift. Dr. James Elliott Walmsley gave annotations on the two congregational hymns, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God" and "Our God Our Help In Ages Past."

Following the church service, the members of the choir and invited guests attended a dinner at the Hotel Richmond. Guests attending included Dr. Luther Richman and son, Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wendt, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cartwright, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Strick, Dr. James Elliott Walmsley, Miss Jessie Patterson, Miss Virgilia Bugg, and Miss Alpha Lee Garnett.

At 1:40, the choir assembled in the studio of WRVA to rehearse before appearing on the air in a program of Christmas music. A trio of Alfred H. Strick at the piano, Frank Wendt at the violin, and Paul Cartwright at the cello accompanied the choir in the anthem. Esther Shevick was soloist for the broadcast as well as for the sacred concerts Sunday morning and Sunday night.

At 8 o'clock Sunday evening, a similar concert of sacred music was presented at Boulevard Methodist Church. This concert included the numbers rendered during the morning concert in addition to several other selections.

The Intermediate A'Capella choir, directed by Dorothy Cummings, sang "There Was No Room for the Christchild" arranged by S. T. Tuttle, the Madrigals sang "Charm Me Asleep", and the entire choir sang "There Is No

College USO Goes To Dance at Pickett

On Friday, November 30, 110 girls and the U. S. O. Committee headed by Beverly Peebles went to Camp Pickett to entertain the men at Service Club No. 2. The program consisted mostly of dancing. A waltz contest was held later in the evening, with Lee Ewing and her date winning the prize which was a carton of cigarettes.

It has been announced that this was the last time the college U. S. O. will go to Camp Pickett to entertain until after the Christmas holiday.

STC Spanish Club Presents Short Skit

Margaret Ellett, Mary Anne Loving, and Frankie Bell presented a short skit at the meeting of the Spanish Club on November 27. The humorous conversation took place at the grocery store, and even the freshmen who find the rapidly spoken Spanish hard to understand, roared at the comedy.

All of the members were invited to the annual Christmas party sponsored by the language clubs.

Our Student Government

"Whereas we, the students of the State Teachers College of Farmville, Virginia, desire to assume some responsibility in the management of our affairs thus to develop the principles of honor and self reliance, we do thereby, in accordance with an agreement between the President and the students, organize ourselves into an asssociation." Thus reads the preamble to the constitution of the Student Government Association.

How many of us have really stopped to consider this preamble—to think what the real purposes of our Student Government Association are, and what Student Government should mean to each and every student here at Farmville? Just as laws are necessary for order, safety, and the well-being of any community, state, or nation, they are also necessary for order and good living here in our college community. In our country, we, the people, through Congress, determine the rules or laws that we shall have, but the courts impose the fines or punishments which shall be inflicted for the violation of these laws. Here at Farmville in our democratic society, our Student Body is small enough for all of us to be members of "Congress" and help make the laws or rules and regulations. Each member of the Student Body automatically becomes a member of the Student Government Association. Just as in the national and state government, though, the determination of how girls who violate rules and regulations shall be punished is necessarily the work of a representative group — a group elected by the students themselves and called the Student Council. The means of punishment for call downs is what was changed recently and not the rule or regulation itself. That remains the same.

One of the purposes of Student Government is to unite the students of school for more efficient living. This can be done only through the cooperation and willingness of every student here to do her part. Our Student Government Association is democratic. It allows us many privileges and much freedom. With freedom, however, come certain obligations and responsibilities—obligations for each girl here. Student Government was instituted by the students themselves, therefore, every girl here—hence, the entire Student Body, should make everything that they have created, live and work in order to have a real Student Government. Unless every girl realizes that she has a definite and vital role to play, that it is up to her to make our Student Government Association the best possible, then Student Government has failed to accomplish its real purposes and has become no more than a "police force" composed of Student Council members.

It is up to each one of us to preserve student honor, to feel personally responsible for and loyal to the Student Government, and to cooperate in every way possible. Only when every girl at S. T. C. realizes that she is an important and vital part of our Student Government; that is is up to her to determine what its standards shall be and to make these standards high; that it's up to her to be honorable in all her daily living—honorable in little as well as big things; that it's her personal responsibility to see that the real purposes of our association are carried out; it's only then that we can have the best Student Government Association possible.

Our Congratulations

Farmville daughters, both past and present, are this week congratulating their president, Dr. J. L. Jarman, on his recent honor of being made a life member of the Virginia Education Association.

This is indeed an honor which only few have achieved, an honor quite worthy of recognition. Such an honor is bestowed only after much careful thought and consideration on the part of those who made the selection.

The spirit and ideals of our beloved president mentioned in the telegram of notification are a part of the spirit and ideals of this college, our Alma Mater. It is this spirit that becomes a part of Farmville daughters.

Such an honor bestowed to one in our midst makes us indeed proud to be a part of this institution of higher learning.

In Appreciation

Two unusual opportunities were afforded us last week by two of the honor societies on our campus, Pi Gamma Mu and Beorc Eh Thorn. We, as students, should like to express our appreciation to these two organizations for their splendid selections of outstanding and eminent men and speakers.

As has often been said in these editorial columns, there is much more to be learned in college than the subject matter taught in classes. Each of us who attended the two lectures on our campus last week, the first by Dr. Will Durant, author, lecturer, and historian, and the second by Mr. Burges Johnson, author and teacher, came from them mentally stimulated, perhaps even with a new outlook on the problems and situations of life. We were better educated, more experienced students because men who had found life, travelled widely, and written extensively, shared their experiences with us.

Gleanings

Mildred Altice

About the only trend that can be gleaned from the news of the world is that there is unrest in all parts of the globe. However, after such a gigantic world revolution, it is impossible to expect genuine and lasting peace without mighty, ceaseless effort. That applies to the unrest in this country with labor and management.

To begin a quick trip around the world, it is noteworthy to observe the trouble in Iran. Soldiers of the United States Army and some of the Soviet Army are both in Iran, and the matter could become very serious.

There is still trouble in Palestine with the Arabs making economic plans as well as military plans to force the Jews away from that country. Civil war continues in China, but each side maintains that peace could be regained shortly if the other side would give in, and if they received sympathetic understanding from foreign friends, particularly the United States. The British are still helping the Dutch in the East Indies and are using armed Japanese soldiers to fight the Indonesians. In India, Nehru made a statement to the effect that Great Britain must give India her independence immediately or other people will get it. This could mean that India will fight for freedom.

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

And did S. T. C.-ers have a big time Thanksgiving! From all the chatter after bedcheck, we need no further proof.

Ann Baer experienced the thrill of a lifetime when she witnessed the Army-Navy game with Leon. Even if the Navy did lose, she wouldn't have missed a minute of it! And to top the day off perfectly, she sat in front of President Truman!

But Betsy Brown enjoyed the longest Thanksgiving. She took all three quarters cuts rolled into one and went all the way to Augusta, Georgia, to see her A-1 man!

Of course, the V. M. I.-V. P. I. game beckoned three-fourths of S. T. C. It was just like a family reunion! Say Lou, did you and Charlie have fun and who got the twenty-five dollars?

Bobby Graham seems to be hitting it off fine with Jimmy Jones. At least she didn't have three dates to divide her time among as she did on one memorable occasion.

In Lynchburg, Martha Showalter attended the game with tall, blond Hall Wingfield! Hmmm. Martha, this is one you haven't told us about!

Now Alice, who is the Lieutenant that showed you such a big time?

But Lucille Bell claims the most exciting time of all and he does sound super deluxe. She not only celebrated Thanksgiving but Santa Claus—and a very handsome one at that stopped over for a few days! It was terrific!

Well, Betty, didn't someone say your heart was doing peculiar things lately? I don't suppose Cully Lee could have anything to do with that, but he does manage to come around mighty often for these days!

Did you hear a loud explosion in the P. O. the other day? After five weeks and three days, Minnie

LETTER TO EDITOR

Dear Editor,

We have been under the impression that the Student Government is an organization which enforces the rules and regulations made by the students concerning all important issues. However, this year, we have found out that our definition of the Student Government of Farmville is entirely wrong. Just a few days ago it was announced that campus would no longer be given for call downs. As far as we know, this decision was not made by the students. The student body has no chance to vote on it. We felt that this was important enough for the students to have their say so.

We would like the real definition of the Student Government.

Y News

This week finds the Y. W. C. A. and the various denominational organizations as well, in excitement and preparation over the coming Christmas season with its parties and pageants.

Last week the Freshman Commission was installed at Prayers during an impressive ceremony. Union vespers were held last Sunday at the Methodist Church followed by a fellowship and social hour.

The Public Affairs Committee of the Y will present a panel discussion on "China" tonight at 9 o'clock. The various Y committees and the Freshman Y Club are invited to attend.

The Christmas season will be officially ushered in tonight at Prayers when the topic will be "Mankind's First Christmas Present." Miss Mary Clay Hiner will speak Thursday night on the theme for the week "Peace on Earth" while on Friday night the topic will be "Good Will To Men." Come and join in the spirit of Christmas.

Senior Dance

Question of the Week

What do you want Santa Claus to bring you?

Shirley Irving—A great big teddy bear.

Nancy Dickinson: More idle time. (She's an English major.)

Betsy Stoner: A book on knitting instruction.

Dot Anderson: I would like a fur coat, watch, car, and a Parker 51 fountain pen to write to Charlie with.

Lucille Jones: All I want is a stocking full of candy!

Ann Joyner: Oh, for a week-end pass to Suffolk, so I can see Milton.

Charlotte Hutter: Please for a rowboat to row myself out to the Aleutians. (His name is Dick.)

Ann Willis: Just a snow storm and lots of parties.

Betty Russell: How I would like a meal ticket (year-round) to eat at Butcher's.

Babs Brandon: Naturally curly hair.

Norma Soyars: Gee, I'm not particular—I don't care how many sailors he brings.

Margaret Lohr: A trip to New York to see Johnny.

"Mole" Mason: Ear muffs so I won't have to listen to the alarm clock at 7:45 in the morning.

Janie Hanks: I want a vic so I can enjoy recorded lectures. (big joke)

Qualities of Modern Dance Are Analyzed and Discussed

A few weeks ago we promised you a modern dance concert. This is it.

First you will ask—what is this modern dance? Dance of today would be a more descriptive and correct term. But it is called modern dance. So, think of it as being modern in the same sense as you would when thinking of modern art, or modern music. If uses any conceivable movement or movements as tools or materials where the ballet uses set techniques.

Many and now most modern dance concert artists have to take some ballet techniques because these are the best ways of moving danceably. Many modern dance compositions and particularly large group works are called ballets. At times the line between the two, ballet and modern dance, is too fine to be drawn.

Movements to most who view modern dance for the first time seem primitive, distorted and archaic. But these are qualities in all things modern, particularly art. Ballet is an example of distortion but most people see only the daintiness, seeming fragility of the performer and the prettiness of the whole. The two differ in the use of their content or materials.

The opening movement of a dance is its statement, its theme which is most often repeated. You see it twice. If the original thematic movements will evalue making for an enlargement or development of the theme.

Most dances follow musical form rather strictly, the ABA or three part one being used most. So, you see the theme, its repetition and its development into a part that we call A. Then you see something new. Anyway it is different from what you have seen and it could stand alone. We call that B movement material for his second part B can grow out of the theme, be another development or enlargement depending on the idea behind the whole dance or composition. As a rule the first A is repeated after the B identically like the beginning one or completely converted depending upon what the artist has to say.

Other forms used often are an extended Rondo one but if you will remember to look for the first movement, its repetition, its delineation and its development you can ask yourself—Do I like that? Why did you? Because the movement was interesting? Or was it related to the title or explanation of the title of the dance?

You can get so engrossed in the music (strange, discordant or even romantic), the costume, its color or design, the pattern the dancer's body makes in space, over and on the floor (choreography) or something you don't quite understand but because it interests you and is different. Don't worry! To enjoy anything for the first time you can't see everything. You have to find what is most interesting to you! And if you could see it all over again just which ones-would you choose? And why? I'm curous. Are you?

Basketball Season Opens December 3

Beginning on Monday, December 3, the official basketball season of the college was opened at four college classes met for their which time, students from the first practice in the college gymnasium, under the direction of Miss Olive T. Iler.

Serving as manager of basketball this season is Nellie Smith, junior from Norfolk, while Alice Anne Abernathy, sophomore from Stony Creek, is serving as assistant manager.

Practices will be held in the gymnasium each Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday afternoon at 3:50 and each Wednesday afternoon at 4:50. Any student in college who is interested in basketball or in learning the game of basketball is urged to come to any of the pratices stated above, the manager has announced.

Johnson Lectures On Literary Work

Burges Johnson in his talk of November 29, sponsored by Beorc Eh Thorn, had as his subject "My Literary Shop."

Mr Johnson spoke of the manuscripts and the literary people with whom he had come in contact as an editor in the journalistic field, or as he put it, in "his literary shop." In conclusion he commented on "our literary shop."

The lecturer gave some interesting sidelights on the lives of his literary friends, men about whom students now study. Among these were William Dean Howells, O. Henry, and Mark Twain.

Next this teacher, editor, and author turned to "our literary shop." In doing so, he reminded the students that the teacher can never teach one to write; one teaches herself. "It is the duty of the teacher," he said "to provide an audience and to make writing compulsory". He remarked that often a student can write better if she knows she has to have the paper prepared by a certain time.

Mr. Johnson criticized themes as college students write them. According to his opinion, to many students the word theme means just so much required work. "Themes," he stated "should be written to impress others with what the writer truly thinks and feels; it should come naturally and not because the student has to turn in something."

In conclusion, Mr. Johnson said, "Writing is enormously worth bothering about for writing does the work when we are not there."

Group To Present Christmas Sing

On Saturday night, December 15, Orchesis will present the Christmas Sing program in the college auditorium. All members of Orchesis will participate in this program that is directed by Miss Emily Kauzlarich.

The group elected to work on present day themes as well as the traditional Christmas ones. Last spring a copy of Russell Bennett's Symphony of the Four Freedoms proved interesting material. After much discussion and study, the basic idea was one of "Freedom of Worship" as expressed so beautifully in Russell Davenport's "My Country," "Freedom is not to limit, but to share; and freedom here is freedom everywhere." The composition will show worship of the Jew, the Catholic, and the Protestant in forms universally accepted. The Sabbath lights will be kindled in the Jewish theme. A Sarabande, which is still done down the center aisles of Catholic churches in some Latin countries, is the main part of the Catholic theme. The Protestant theme is the most difficult to portray in dance form as there is very little ritual and ceremony in the Protestant services. The group is combining the singing of a hymn with the development of movement used in the other themes to bring out, what to them, is a Protestant theme.

Two other present day themes go to hungry, war-torn Europe for materials. One is entitled "Want" and needs no subtitle to explain it. The other is "Sorrow" which perhaps is more than European in feeling. It is for everyone who has felt a deep loss in the war now ended.

Troxell To Appear

Last summer she spent most of her time with Sir Thomas Beecham's Mozart Opera Festival, in Mexico City.

Miss Troxell opened her winter season with a concert in Ilion, New York. Again, as always her concert proved an example of perfect artistry and musicianship.

According to Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, "Miss Troxell's recitals proved a matter of cultured sensitive singing of feeling, and tradition as regard to the style and phrasing. She has a clear young voice which is produced with gratifying ease and not a little skill."

LEFT LEAD

HEADS UP

It was "over the river and through the woods" last Sunday afternoon for about six members of the stable crew, and happy hunting to the tune of "Don't Fence Me In." The gray skies and half-promise of snow, however, soon had the riders cantering along the wintry dirt highway lustily singing everything from "White Christmas" to "Jingle Bells", and there was nothing irreverent about the fact that a few of the regular Christmas favorites came in on the repertoire. The horses seemed to catch the holiday spirit, and even a short workout in the ring at Longwood didn't serve to hold them down to earth. They flew along like Santa's reindeer themselves jumping the icy puddles and dashing under the pines and through the high grasses with a vigor that would have become their winged ancestor, Pegasus.

SLEIGH TIME

Indeed, the party spirit had a right to surge from within as the riders contemplated plans for the party promised next week. Thanks to Bobo and Mr. Wells, plans are well under way, and though it won't be a sleigh-ride, it'll be a real Christmas shindig at Longwood, with food and fun and open fires blazing away for hot-dogs and popcorn for all the girls and H.-S. C. boys taking riding this quarter. Look for more news about it later, and watch the note-board for notice of a called meeting before long.

And speaking of sleighs, we haven't honestly enough snow around here to merit their investing in a sleigh, but again Bo and Mr. Wells have come through with another super-suggestion . . . why not a wagon for hay-rides, and what laws against sleigh-bells on a hay-wagon? If Pal (the black) looks "that" pretty hauling hay and feed, think of how he'll pick up his feet when he's pulling a load of us gals and of the prancing he can do to our singing! That new harness is more than becoming, and Pal at least seems willing. All we need is the wagon . . and there's lots of hope for that.

HEELS DOWN

Reports from the beginners are all favorable. Everyone seems to enjoy riding all the more because of the nearness we came to not having it. We're ever so glad to welcome Carolyn Grimes back . . . and even gladder to hear her say, "Yes . . . I'm gonna keep on riding." . . . Even the long ride to Hampden-Sydney about the week before the holidays didn't leave Anna Stuart in as bad shape as did that McClellan saddle this past Sunday! Wheee! Now that the notes are cleared off the mantel, there's more room for people to eat! She still loves Playmate, and we can't blame her . . . Margaret Nevins, however, may have lost some of her esteem for the Pony . . . and we can't blame her, either. As for Eagle . . . he's still everybody's favorite.

HOUSE-PAINTERS

It's nearly done . . . the clubhouse we mean. The walls are a pale apple-green, and the curtains are planned, if not yet constructed. The stove is up and the furniture has improved considerably. There's hope for framed pictures if the owners can tear them away from each other, and all in all the atmosphere has a definite horsiness that is pleasing to the riders as well as to occasional visitors. The stove is up for toasting toes after a cold afternoon in the ring, and the oil lantern spreads a cheery glow as these early winter evenings close in around the tables. have an awful lot to thank a lot of Thinking over the situation. we people for.

Yup, these are the days when the plaid shirts blossom out and the blue jeans roll down over the boots and the horses shake their heads and stamp their feet and seem to say, "What're we waitin' for?" After you're once up and on your way, it isn't even cold . . . just crispy-feeling, that's all. Listen to those leaves crackle when you canter around the golf course!

See you at the stables . . . .

Rose heard from Bruce and her joy could not be contained.

The minute Carolyn Bobbitt got back from Richmond Sunday night, she found her telegram saying that Cab had hit the states. Oh happy day!

Mary Virginia certainly made a date in a hurry in the bus station. Don't get upset. It was Earl!

We are all sadly bemoaning Cab Overbey's absence. She is greatly missed, but we'll see her again after Christmas!

And as for Doris Elliott and Hubert—they certainly make a cute couple!

Everybody please keep your fingers crossed for Lillian as Tom must get back in time from overseas. Besides, we've been wanting a long time to see him!

Guess we'd better lay off and rest up for the big shindig coming off next week-end when the dignified seniors of '46 dazzle us after almost four years of hard work. There isn't an available man left in the state of Virginia —we've scoured the place. So until then—we'll see you!

GOOD HABITS

Have you ever thought very much about your health and why it is so important to you? Good health comes from good habits, and a daily schedule worked out by you alone can help to make you a better person. Of course, you are always rushed here at school, but don't forget to take the time out for that weekly hair washing. Brushing your hair each night will keep it shiny and cleaner. Use a good shampoo, lots of hot water, and scrub hard.

A daily bath is another important item in one's routine. Again you use lots of hot water, plenty of soap, and a sturdy brush to use for your knees and back. Lots of good-smelling bath powder gives you a very nice feeling, too.

Plenty of sleep is something we all need and never seem to get. If we could give up that last hand of bridge, or forget that favorite radio program just once, it would be surprising to find that extra hour of sleep comes in very handy. Eight hours are essential for good health, and if you like, you can call it that needed beauty sleep. Along with sleeping comes eating; they always seem to team together. Cokes, nabs, peanuts, and chocolate bars seem to be the favorite food of the average college girl, but these are the things that cause bad complexions, excess fat, and oftentimes, bad dispositions. Three regular meals a day will help to make you feel more physically fit and ready for anything.

These are but a few of the habits we should all form, so let's begin next week right, by trying to live up to each one of them and also making up some of our own.

ATHLETIC IDEAS

So you want to be an athlete? Not everyone is built for that, but there are many who have tried and succeeded in doing some sport well, because they did try. Practice, practice, practice keeps running through your mind, but that is exactly what you have to do, if you expect to get anywhere on the tennis courts, hockey field, riding ring, basketball court, or other sports activities.

Trying out for a class team does not mean coming down to the gym, sitting around, and watching the other girls play. It means going out on the court and working just as hard as the rest of them. you might be afraid at first if you happen to team up for the afternoon with all physical ed. majors, but you will find that they don't always excel in every activity.

Try to learn the rules and stick by them. Watch closely when you are not playing and see if you can find a foul or penalty as soon as the umpire or referee does. When you are in the game, remember you are a member of the team, and there are other girls playing besides you. Don't go haywire, and forget to cooperate. If you are playing tennis, golf, or riding a horse, which calls for individual work, try to make yourself work as hard as though you were being directed, instead of just practicing by yourself. A good player on any team or in any game always tries to be in practice at all times, so use that as one of your rules toward becoming an athlete.

Durant Lectures On Civilization

Monday night, November 28, Dr. Will Durant, teacher, author, lecturer, and eminent philosopher, came to S. T. C., under the auspices of Pi Gamma Mu. It had been previously announced that Dr. Durant would speak on the "Causes and Consequences of the War"; however, at the invitation of Dr. Walmsley, he changed his topic to that of "What is Civilization?" As he himself said, the former lecture had been written some time ago and dealt with the causes of the war and his predictions of the outcome.

Dr. Durant began his discourse by asking a number of questions on which he elaborated. First of all—"What is Civilization?" "Are We Civilians?" "What is a Civilized Man like in War?" and "What is the Difference Between a Civilized Man and a Barbarian?"

In the course of the address, he brought into focus the evolution of government and its relationship to civilization. One of his most pertinent remarks on this subject was, "Civilization is orderly freedom promoting discipline." Along this line he made one of his most interesting points based on Plato's theory that a government destroys itself by carrying its principles to extremes. Beginning with a monarchy, which he defined as a unit of power, he carried it to the aristocracy, whose principle is selection; this gave way to democracy, whose principle is at first liberty but carried to the extreme results in license then chaos; out of this state may come a dictatorship.

Dr. Durant continued with the types of order and illustrated each by naming the country that stood at the top during the past century. According to his estimations, Germany is first in biological order, Britain highest in political order, United States ranks highest in economic order, Scandinavia in moral order, France in social activity, and Britain in settlements by arbitration.

Dr. Durant's amazing diction, his beautiful choice of words, and his well built sentences formed the basic structure of his lecture to the extent that his audience was carried by him not by "verbal hypnotism," but by the thoughts he presented. In fact it was hard to realize that nearly two hours passed in the course of the address.

Kappa Delta Pi Has Christmas Banquet

Tonight at 6 o'clock in th college tea room, Kappa Delta Pi, honorary society in education, is having its annual Christmas banquet.

Guests attending include Dr. J. L. Jarman, Dean Martha Smith Smith, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Grainger, Dr. and Mrs. J. P. Wynne, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Johnson, Miss Helen Draper, Miss Mary Haynes, Miss Grace Moran, Miss Mary Nichols, Mr. S. M. Holton, Jr., Dr. Floyd Swertfeger, and student members of Kappa Delta Pi.

Margaret Ellett and Sue Hundley are in charge of the program.

Societies Entertain

Pi Gamma Mu, honor society in social science on campus, was hostess to a reception in the Student Lounge on November 26, in honor of Dr. Durant, and Beorc Eh Thorn, English honor society honored Mr. Burges Johnson at a reception on November 29, following his lecture. All members of the honor societies, the faculty, and administration of the college were invited.

Tupper Entertains In Student Lounge

On November 30 at 4 o'clock in the Student Lounge, Miss Katherine Tupper entertained the freshman home economics majors at a tea. In the receiving line were Miss Tupper, Miss Bessie Jeter, Miss Ruth Gleaves, Betty Deuel Cock, president of the Home Economics Club, and all other officers of the club.

All students majoring in home economics were invited to attend this reception.

NOTICE

The regular meeting of Alpha Phi Sigma will be a Christmas Sing held in the Student Lounge at 8:00 on Tuesday, December 11. Refreshments will be served.

Angel S. T. C.-ers Will Float In Gym

As the strains of "You Walked By" come dreamily to the ears of the dancers on the gym floor, come Senior Dance, an onlooker would probably think himself in heaven. There will be angels floating by in lovely white dresses of net, satin, taffeta or tulle.

These dresses may be lovely off-the-shoulder jobs with white satin waists and wide white net skirts, which will be held out with petticoats of crinoline.

They may even have brief sleeves, shirred a bit for careful contour and attached in a waist-whittle fashion to a very wide gathered skirt of net over taffeta. To go with this, the angel may be wearing a ribbon-tied choker necklace of pearls, with tiny pearl earrings to match.

Some of the angels will have brocaded taffeta costumes with sweetheart necklines or "V" necklines and may be even nice long below-the-elbow sleeves, and with very full skirts.

However they may be costumed, the seniors will be the "angels" of Senior Dance.

Honor Dr. Jarman

man's "influence has pervaded thousands of class rooms of the state, and he has exerted a great influence in moulding the citizens" of Virginia.

The telegram which Dr. Jarman received announcing this honor is reprinted below:

"The Virginia Education Association, in appreciation of your distinguished service to education, requests you to honor it by accepting Honorary Life Membership. We are grateful that your spirit and ideals have pervaded so many thousands of Virginia's classrooms. With this award come the affectionate regard and good wishes of the officers and members of the Association."

Modern Dance Trio

bear upon them that the result is a tribute to gallantry, however stubborn. There is a nice dramatic characterization that largely dictates the surface of the movement, and a fresh and racy flavor to the choreography.

Of the "Spanish Suite" the first part "Cante Flamenco" is more direct and effective. It sings in passionate dance the anguish and anger of the enslaved " in a conquered land." "Llanto", the new companion piece, brings release to the anguish (this is our grief) of the solo through the portrayal of "We shall avenge our tears."

The duet from "Sea Bourne" portrays woman-calm, woman-lonesome and woman-grief as a lone duet danced by Miss Dudley and Mr. Bales.

"New World A-Comin'," is bright, infectious, and projects a dizzy, happy-go-lucky mood of optimism.

"Furlough" is a comedy piece which deals with the same topic as Jerome Robbins "Fancy Free". It has wit and spirit, excellent choreographic inventions and an overall sense of good theatre.

"Fragments of a Sheltered Land", deals with a present day Yugoslavic theme. One has to read the guerrilla's letter to Adamic's "My Nature Land" to understand fully the import of the idea.

"As Poor Richard Says" has been thought up together, with the intention of having fun and showing off tricks. Gregory Tucker's score and Charlotte Trawbridge's costumes and clever centerpiece participate gaily in the merriment. The dancing, set going and then a renewal of both by some of Benjamin Franklin's proverbs sententiously spoken by Mr. Bales is quick and saucy.

Death" in addition to the morning program.

A large group of Farmville alumnae now living in Richmond attended the evening concert, and Miss Helen Rieff, a former officer of the college choir from Lansdowne, Pennsylvania, came down for the service.

During the week-end, Alfred H. Strick, head of the department of music and director of the choir, received telephone calls from friends of the choir in New York, North Carolina, and many parts of this state.

As a result of the day's programs, Mrs. Garland Hood, president of the Musicians Club of Richmond, issued an invitation to the Senior A'Capella and Madrigal Singers to give a concert some time in the new year to that large organization.

Language Club Holds Party For Christmas

The Spanish Club and French Circle are having their annual Christmas "Fiesta" in the Recreation Hall of Main building on December 6. French and Spanish games are to be played. Miss Helen Draper, Miss Emily Barksdale, members of the two clubs, and invited guests will attend.

Cralle To Sing Solo On Sunday Morning

According to an announcement made this week by the Rev. Philip Roberts, pastor of the Farmville Presbyterian Church, Mr. Edwin Cralle will sing at the worship service Sunday morning, December 9 at 11 o'clock.

During the month of December, vesper services will be held at the church at 5 o'clock each Sunday afternoon instead of the regular worship service at 7:30 on Sunday night.

Philhower To Reign Over Annual Mardi Gras

Troxell To Sing At Christmas Concert On Sunday Night

Program To Begin At 8:30 O'clock In Big Auditorium

Miss Barbara Troxell, nationally known soprano, will be presented by the Choral Club as guest sooist at the annual Christmas concert, Sunday night, December 16 at 8:30 o'clock in the college auditorium.

BARBARA TROXELL

Miss Troxell received her master's degree in Musical Education from Pennsylvania State College. Immediately following her graduation, she was awarded a scholarship to study with Madame Elizabeth Schumann at the Curtis Institute of Music, from which she was graduated in 1942.

She was soloist for two summers at Duke University, and was chosen last year to appear on the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air. She was also the soprano soloist with the Dessoff choirs and the National Orchestral Association in Carnegie Hall and in New York City Center in the spring of 1944.

Among the numbers she has selected for her program are "Rejoice Greatly" by Handel, Kramer's "Before the Paling of the Stars", Adam's "Cantique de Noel" from "O Holy Night," Head's "Slumber Song of the Madonna", "I Wonder as I Wander" arranged by Niles, "The Storke," by Clokey, and Austin's arrangement of "Twelve Days of Christmas."

The College Choir, Choral Club, A'Capella Choirs and Madrigal singers, under the direction of Professor Alfred H. Strick, will also appear on the program.

A silver offering will be taken at the door to help defray the expenses of the concert.

Students Will Have Christmas Banquet

Tomorrow night at 6 o'clock the entire student body will celebrate with a formal banquet in the college dining hall.

Special music for the occasion will include a violin solo by Catherine Bickle, and a trio of Christmas medleys by Kitty East, Julia Messick, and Connie Ozlin. Virginia Tindall and Hilda Bennett will play the piano, and all students will join in the singing of Christmas carols. .

Wyatt Will Assume New YWCA Duties

Brugh Resigns As Church Head

According to an announcement made by Minnie Lee Crumpler, president of the Y. W. C. A., Mary Wyatt, junior from South Boston, will succeed Rachel Brugh, who had to resign because of her health as chairman of the Church Cooperative Committee. In the past Mary has served as chairman of the Prayer Committe.

Other members of the Cabinet are as follows, president, Minnie Lee Crumpler; vice-president, Ann Martin; secretary, Martha Russell East; treasurer, Agnes Stokes; and freshman commission, Judy Reick.

Committee chairmen are, membership, Virginia Lee Price; music, Virginia Tindall; public affairs, Margie Hewlett; prayers, Charlotte Grizzard; publicity, Anna Headlee; service, Patsy Dale; social, Ellen McMullen; library, Connie Ozlin; sing: Hilda Bennett; town girls: Dorothy Overton.

Ex-officio members are Jackie Parden and Jane Anderson.

Tonight at 6 o'clock in the Y lounge, the officers and committee chairmen are having their annual Christmas dinner. Guests will include Dean Martha Smith Smith the advisers, and cabinet members.

Wynne Will Speak On Friday Night

Dr. John P. Wynne, professor of education, will speak at the meeting of War Dads on Friday night, December 14 at 8 o'clock in the court house. He will speak on the topic, "Democracy's Secret Weapon and How to Keep It."

Also as a part of this program, Lt. Col. Walker Paulette of Farmville will give personal illustrations from his experience as an army officer overseas.

Yuletide Programs Presented Nightly

Adams Will Lead Prayers Tonight

Tonight at Prayers, Betty Adams will tell a Christmas story, and tomorrow night, Miss Minnie Rice will tell the story of "The Other Wise Man." Following this story, the annual custom of hanging of the green will be observed. This annual affair is sponsored by the Freshman Commission.

Special Christmas programs began Monday night in the auditorium at Prayers. At this time, Jackie Parden told the story "Why the Chimes Rang", and then last night, Polly Pride told a Christmas story.

A pageant entitled "O Holy Night" will be presented Friday night, December 14 at the regular time for Prayers. This pageant is under the direction of Charlotte Grizzard. The cast includes Mary, played by Evelyn Grizzard; Joseph, Evelyn Pierce; angels, Esther

Strick Announces Program of Music On Sunday Morning

Under the direction of Mr. Alfred H. Strick, head of the S. T. C. music department, the college choir and choral club will sing at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning, December 16 at the 11 o'clock worship hour.

On the same program will appear Miss Barbara Troxell, lyric soprano, who will be the guest artist at the annual Christmas concert (see story elsewhere in this paper.) Miss Troxell will sing as her solos "Jesu Bambino" by Yon and "There Was No Room or No Candle" by Lehman.

The Reverend Mr. Roberts will have as his sermon the topic, "There Is No Death" and the choir will sing the anthem bearing that title. The choir with the choral club will also sing Christmas carols.

The student body is cordially invited to attend.

JANE PHILHOWER, who was recently elected Queen of Mardi Gras by students in secret ballot.

Exams Will Begin On December 17

Examinations will begin on S. T. C. campus at eight o'clock Monday morning, December 17. At 12:30 Thursday, December 20 when the last test will have been completed, Christmas holidays will begin and will continue until January 2 when students will be expected to return to school. Classes will be resumed on Thursday, January 3.

During the examination period, study hour will be from seven to ten o'clock. Students who wish to do more studying may keep lights as late as they desire but absolute quiet must reign after eleven o'clock. Any call-down given between December 17 and December 20 will mean a week's confinement in the library.

Baptist Students Will Present Play

Student Night will be observed at the Baptist Church on Sunday night, December 16. At this time, the Baptist students will have complete charge of a program supervised by Miss Olivia Stephenson.

A freshman choir directed by Elaine Holder of Portsmouth, will furnish the music. They will have as their special number, "God so Loved the World' and will be accompanied at the organ by Ethel Shockley of Roanoke.

"They that Sit In Darkness," a play in which an outcast of Bethlehem is made happy on the night Jesus was born when she realized that He came to bring light to those who sit in darkness, will be presented. Those taking part are Nell Scott, Evelyn Hair, Patsy Dale, Mary Ellen Petty, Betty Bennett, Virginia Atkinson, Virginia Treakle, Bonny Curtis, Lee Carter, Frances Owen, Vicky Edmunds, Virginia Tobey, Frances Treakle, Ann Harris Johnson, Mary Lee Dickinson, Geraldine Joyner, Cathy Cage, Gertrude Driver, and Jean Babb.

This play will be directed by Naomi Piercy; Lois Lloyd Sheppard has charge of costumes; Martha Frances Webb, lighting; and Ellen Bailey is stage manager. Maria Addleman is general program chairman. There will be student ushers but they have not yet been appointed.

Notice

Since the hospital at Camp Pickett has been turned into a general hospital, no more surgical dressings will be made on this campus, Jane Mamtiply, chairman of the surgical dressings committee, has announced.

During the fall quarter, college students were requested to make surgical drssings in the art laboratory from 7 to 9 o'clock on Monday nights.

Court Selected By Secret Vote

Jane Philhower, senior from Williamsburg, will reign as queen of the annual Mardi Gras ball which will be held this year on Satudray night, February 23, in the college gymnasium at 8:30 o'clock. This costume ball is sponsored annually by Pi Gamma Mu, honorary society in social science.

Jane has been active in school affairs during her years at Farmville, serving recently as ringmaster of the annual circus. During her junior year, she was head of the class stunt, and during her freshman year, she was a member of the Freshman Commission. She also served as general chairman of the senior class dance which was held on December 8, 1945, in the college gymnasium.

Court Selected

Attending the queen in the court will be three seniors, two juniors, one sophomore, and two freshmen, all of which were elected by secret ballot on December 5.

Senior representatives in the court include Margaret Orange, Richmond; Bevery Peebles, Hampton; and Peggy T. Ross, Onley. Ann Carter, Cumberland; and Margaret Ellett, Jennings Ordinary, will represent the junior class, while Julia Booher, Abingdon, will represent the sophomore class. Representing the freshman class will be Barbara Krebbs, Lynchburg; and Margaret Wall, Norfolk.

Heads To Be Named

Kitty Maddox, senior from Lynchburg, who is serving as general dance chairman, has stated that the committee heads will be announced at a later date.

Girls are expected to wear costumes and masks, while dates are expected to dress formally. Prizes will be awarded for the best costumes in several groups.

Episcopal Group To Give Pageant On December 16

On Sunday, December 16, at 5 o'clock, the Episcopal Church will present a Christmas pageant entitled "The Shepherds Dream", The story was written by Anne Willis and will be directed by Miss Mary Nichols.

The chairmen of the committees are music, Margaret Verell; costumes, Anne Willis; properties, Ann Taylor; makeup and lighting, Peggy Fink and Judy Koch.

Characters include Ben Moomaw as the prophet; Jean Harrison, reader; Jeanne Strick, shepherd boy; Betty Cock, Jean Sauerwein, Anne Willis, the three shepherds; Lois Steppe, angel of the Lord; two angels, Anna Headlee, Ann Taylor; Mary's angel, Mary Mason; Mary, Lucy Anthony; Joseph, Betty DeHarditt; wise men, Mary Catlett, May Ballard, Lee Ewing; children of the procession, Marty May, Kitsy May, Mary K. Lancaster, Louise Moss, Jeanne Cox, Mary Kent Withers, Mary Kay Catlin, Boy Green, Dottie Green, and others.

Music includes well known carols and a special solo, "Shine on Bright Morning Star."

That Good Old Christmas Spirit Once Again Fills Corridors of School, Hearts of Girls

By MARGARET WILSON N

Exams Fail To Add To Yuletide Spirit

Well, that old feeling's back again. It's earlier than usual, maybe, but there's no doubt about it—it's back! Sound indefinite? It is! Nobody can put everything about the Christmas spirit together and call it anything—it just sort of starts growing along about the first part of December. A whole lot of things get all mixed up together—like a fruit cake—slightly spiced—and make what is known as the "spirit."

It's holly, and mistletoe, and oranges, and raisins; it's frosted window panes and visions of sugar plums; it's hard candy, and electric trains; it's silver and green, and bright red; it's Crosby and "I'll be home for Christmas". We give up! What you'd better do is pull out the old Dickens—he got it.

Anyway, S. T. C. has its own individual ideas about Christmas—or maybe they're the same as everybody else's who's going home from some place else. Our chief claim to distinctions is the traditional ceremony of hanging the greens. The old Rotunda really perks up and shows off! Of course, we can't overlook exams, because as sure as Christmas, they're going to come first. However—moral—if you've been a good girl, maybe you'll pass some of 'em.

How'd we get onto that? They sure don't contribute much to the Christmas spirit which is supposed to be the subject at hand.

What really does it is touching one parent for the money for the other one's present, and vice versa. Has anyone ever thought of a more subtle method? Oh, well, the folks are probably used to it after twenty years, and besides, the thought's there.

And isn't it a wonderful feeling when the last "Do Not Open" is licked and dispatched to Aunt Such-an-Such in Hackensack, and you can concentrate on the much more fascinating business of investigating the dark recesses of the closets? Spare bed rooms and even kitchen cabinets have been known to yield rich harvests to those enterprising spirits who get beyond the most obvious sources. It's a great game—when you don't get caught—but it does require a certain degree of dramatic art come Christmas morning when you have to look surprised. Of course, there are those, who by exercising fantastic powers of self-control, are able to keep away from closets, but they are rare stuff and not to be classed with the common variety of pre-Christmas peepers. Then there are some who can content themselves with speculative

Visions of Nylons Dance In Our Heads

Success of Student Council Depends On Everyone

Student Government can only be a success if everyone does her part in making it one. Before this can be accomplished, we, as students of Farmville, should all make a special effort to learn and obey the rules of Student Government and report anything that is done wrong by you or anyone else.

If you should see someone doing something wrong, talk to her. Make her realize that we cannot all live happily together unless everyone will cooperate with each other. Then ask the girl to report herself. When each girl signs the honor code, the school, the faculty, and her fellow classmates are putting their full trust and honor in her. Until a girl proves herself unworthy of this trust, it is her duty to herself and others to report herself if she cannot keep the rules and regulations of the school. Should a girl be lacking in this character trait, it is up to the others of us here to report her and try to straighten her out on college life.

We, the student council, do not want to be a police system, as we are so often called. If you do not like the idea of such a system, the only way to prevent it is to take individual responsibility and enforce the rules and regulations. Such responsibility has to be taken for that is the cost of Student Government. No one gets anything for nothing, so if we want Student Government, we have to pay for it. Help us to improve our governing body by making constructive suggestions. They would be helpful to all.

Annually there is the serious task of selecting major officers in the spring which should be selected on their ability to best fulfill the office and not if the girl is a friend nor if there is some prejudice between you. With every honor bestowed upon us, there is also a side of hard work and even sometimes unpleasantness. We want to have officers that can cope with such situations. Be careful in selecting your officers and remember they are the ones who help make our school what it is.

Student Government is nothing but what the students want to make it. It is the thing that is basic to real student body spirit in the college. Let us make our aims nigh and each cooperate in making our Student Government something of which we can be proud.

America To Celebrate First Peacetime Christmas

For the first time in four years, America will celebrate a peacetime Christmas this year. As the twenty-fifth of December draws near, we are eagerly awaiting the celebration. Thousands of the service men and women will spend their first Christmas at home in many years.

We have a certain feeling in our hearts that is inexpressable when we see familar faces once again gathered around a cheery fireplace. A happy family sitting around the fire in a room filled with the delicious odor of pine and cedar is a symbol of "peace on earth."

The Yuletide spirit is creeping into us a little earlier this year than in previous years. We are more excited perhaps because Big Brother is home or because our blond head hero will arrive home from the Pacific area in time to spend the holiday with us. Busy shoppers started hustling about the main streets earlier this year, and grocery employees are working late hours to fill the shelves in the store with the "goodies" that have been a scarcity for a long, long time. This is indeed going to be a great American Christmas.

Let's thank God that once again we may enjoy a peaceful Christmas, and ask Him that the true Christmas spirit may be a living spirit in the hearts of men and women throughout the whole world during the years that are to come. Let us ask Him to help us to so live that the boy who gave his life for just such things as a peaceful Christmas, may not have died in vain.

Gleanings

Mildred Altice

It's difficult to determine the biggest news of this week. Headline for the week might read, "$4,400,000,000 loan to Great Britain announced this week; a meeting of the Foreign Ministers of the big three powers announced to be December the fifteenth; Republican National Committee met this week in Chicago to plan for the Congressional elections next year; General George C. Marshall testified before the Pearl Harbor investigation committee this week; General Motors strike continues at a deadlock but may be on the way to a solution; trouble continues in the Dutch East Indies, China and Iran; demonstrations have been staged in Argentina against Peron for president; and General George S. Patton was injured in an accident in Germany this week."

The loan to Great Britain may mean a great deal for Anglo-American relations. It may mean that America will improve relations with other countries since it may be expected that other loans will be arranged with other countries—Russia, France. Some of the conditions of the loan are important also.

The Republican National Committeemen were not the only people who have been considering politics lately. The Pearl Harbor investigation committee appears to many people to have the 1948 presidential election in mind. It's really too bad that politicians cannot get as interested in keeping and planning the peace as they do in winning elections and throwing mud at a fallen leader.

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

The event so eagerly awaited and planned for has come and gone, but the memory of it will linger always. The seniors were a vision of loveliness as they floated through the figure on the arms of their handsome dates! Orchids to our charming Mary Walker Watts who was all the class of '46 could have hoped for! Red roses to Jane Pilihower and Ann Summers for their untiring efforts in making the dance such a beautiful one! And, of course, Bessy realized the fulfillment of her fondest dream—that Bob would be here for Senior dance.

"Bomber" is thoroughly convinced that blind dates are terrific! She was evermore carried away with Nelson. That trip to Richmond in a Model A would have been the thing. Some tight squeeze, eh "Bomb?"

Seeing is believing—but George was here for the dance. We've been waiting three years for Margaret Orange to produce George. Say, most anything can happen around here!

The man with dimples was none other than Hun's date—and he was A-1 attractive. She seems to think he was out of this world!

Wonder why Betty Brothers didn't tell us more about John, because everyone is simply wild about him.

Willis Mountain is a nice secluded spot although Virginia and Maggie claimed they only wanted to show ther date the points of interest around Farmville. No doubt they were interested!

And we were amazed when D. D. O. made her entrance at the dance with that rug cutting, jive jitter Fred Young. What a pair!

Where does Boots Bralle get those TALL, handsome men?

Bill certainly staged a quick recovery but he didn't let Ben down ever!

We have been wondering why Agnes is partial to Richmond—and now we know—Ed!

And all was harmonious for once between Jimmy and Anne. Well, they say true love is a rough and stormy affair.

Betty Cock and Ned certainly made a quick getaway after the dance. What was the hurry?

That Jane Paulette was in her seventh heaven was quite evident—the sparkle in her eye matched the sparkle on her third finger, left hand!

And Jean Riddick started celebrating her week-end on Friday—with the arrival of A-1 Marine. Thrilled! She really was—after all these months of waiting!

Martha Watkins was successful—and how!

Mr. Lee was called in to substitute for Stoneburner, and he appeared to be on the ball—with the stags trailing him around.

And Kim was happy with the man of her life—her most attractive father!

It seems that there is more than one Bob Johnson. Jane Paige is quite fascinated with the name—as well as is Bessy!

Shirley and Jackie celebrated in good ole "Lulu-Kilby" fashion. When those four get together—it's positively toodoo!

ANNA HEADLEE

This week is the week set aside by the Y. W. C. A. for the special Christmas programs. Tonight at Prayers, Betty Adams will tell a Christmas story, while tomorrow night after the banquet, Miss Rice will tell the story of "The Other Wise Man," as is her annual custom. After her story everyone will gather in the Rotunda for the "Hanging of the Greens" sponsored by the Freshman Commission. Friday night the Christmas pageant, "O Holy Night" will be presented followed by the White Christmas contributions. On Sunday night after church and the special musical concert, the college students go caroling through the residential section stopping at each window in which there is a light.

The various church organizations are presenting their special Christmas programs. The Baptists will present a play at 7:30 Sunday night at the church, and

Question of the Week

What did you think of Modern Dance program Friday night?

Joyce Townsend: Most wonderful thing I've seen in ages! But all that exercise made me tired.

Phyllis Bagley: Say now! They did a lot of dancing on their toes.

Anne Calloway: Why should I bother to take Modern Dance when other people can do so much better?

Mary Lawless: Hubba! Hubba! Some good dancing.

"Ting": Ungowa!

"Millie": Same as "Ting".

Helen Williams: My legs ached for hours later.

Phyllis Fulcher: The music — good! The dances—better! The dancers—best!

Charlotte Grizzard: Very good, and I hope we have more like it.

Norma Soyars: I just loved it—especially the man!

Anna Kucera: I liked the originality in movement and Jane Dudley in "New World A-Coming."

Jackie Bobbitt: It was really swell—enjoyed every bit and minute of it.

Anne Boss: It was good, but I don't know anything original to say about it.

"Marie": It was different.

"Chubby": Oh-h that man! ....

Katherine Allen: I enjoyed the last half most—that being all I saw!

Betty Tipton: Thought it was swell.

Sally Smith: I liked Jane Dudley best!

Elaine Pierce: Most exciting thing I've seen in ages.

What are you looking forward to most during exams?

Eloise Stancell: Passing, of course!

Barbara Lee Myers: The last one to be over, so I can go home to see Ray.

Nellie Smith: Making an A on Organic.

Martha Wells: Messing up everything I've done so far.

Betty Minetree: The idea of having 'em over with and going home.

Pat Carter: Thursday when they are over.

Ann Martin: Exams? Golly! That's a hard question.

Betty Burchett: Plenty of sleep.

Jane Burchett: Movies every night.

Margaret Ellett: Thinking about having a lovely Christmas in Jennings Ordinary.

Nancy Chambers: Not having anything to do on Tuesday.

"Nootie" Cross: Lights on all night.

Ann Joyner: Going down town any time.

D. D. Overcash: Giving 'em while others take 'em.

Heidi Lacy: Sleeping.

Margo Skelton: Tripping off to Lynchburg.

Kakie Hundley: Packing up and going home.

"Hun" Carper: Studying twice as hard as I have been and spending more time with Jimmy.

Seniors In Heavenly White Parade Traditionally In Gym

By JEAN CAKE

Excitement? You bet 'twas when the Senior Dance tickets didn't go 'round. After all, prcatically everyone wanted to go to one of the most wonderful events of the year! There was plenty of wheedling and pleading to get those coveted date tickets for the special date coming. Finally when we did there were the limited things to do before December 8, 1945—dresses bought or borrowed, and hair washed or a new wig styled. Then the horrible thought at the last moment—"suppose my date doesn't come!" But he did, of course, so here's a description of an indescribable night.

First, the surprise that wasn't really a surprise at all—the dear, sweet things did send flowers, and they were beautiful. After spending at least two hours dressing, we met our dates and ambled over to the gym. As we entered student lounge, we were confronted by the receiving line. It wasn't really bad though—nothing could be in the dreem world we were in.

Then we wandered into the gym. It was decorated in the class colors with paper figures matching the dancers from the wall. The music was irresistible and so we floated on to the dance floor while the stag line turned gleaming eyes on the wonderful males in tuxedos and uniforms. Of course, the white dresses of the seniors were most outstanding among the beautiful colored frocks of the underclassmen.

About ten o'clock everyone assembled in the balcony for the highlight of the evening—the figure. The girls in white escorted by their dates, walking slowly to the strains of Russ Carlton's orchestra, formed a mammoth '46. The senior waltz followed, a moment long awaited by the seniors of '46.

The night was amazingly short, filled with music, dancing, laughter, and songs. New friends and old danced and chatted. When the

Orchesis To Present Program Saturday Night, December 15

Group To Portray 3 Religious Faiths

"This is our first Christmas of Peace since the dark days of 1941, but we are as ever mindful of the awful past and the prescient future in our holiday revelry. We are reminded of the traditional spirit as well as the religious in our Christmas thoughts of 1945 as we view Orchesis' presentation with the assistance of the Madrigal Singers," Miss Emily Kauzlarich has said in regard to the special modern dance program which will be given on Saturday night at 6:45 in the large auditorium.

"Processional" which is by now an established part of the annual affair will again open the program. Voices from the Madrigal group will sing "Adeste Fideles" ('O Come All Ye Faithful') as members of Orchesis proceed down the center aisle to the stage in much the same manner as in the early days of St. Francis of Assisi. If one would attempt to sing it in a slightly increased tempo, giving a lilting rhythm, its relationship to the early creche is most evident.

Betty Ellis, president of Orchesis.

"Lullaby" is the second number on the program. This year's theme attempts to portray the crooning, cradling, and fondling which is typical of mothers the world over. The Madrigal Singers are singing the accompaniment which is to one of the oldest dance tunes, "Lully, Lully Lu." As the mother rocks and sings to her babe, one is lulled by the rocking, lilting rhythm which distinguishes all cradle songs and the simple pure melody that has ever reflected the depth of mother love.

"Carol" is typical. It was suggested by Sandro Botticelli's "The Nativity" which suggested two mischievous cherubs and a fluttering ring of angels overhead. The carol as a Christmas dance has a most interesting history. It dates back to the very first religious services and signifies one of the many attempts made by the holy church fathers to combine the religious and secular music of the people.

"O Holy Night", one of the group of songs coming from those centering around the night of Christ's birth, will be sung by Esther Shevick, a member of Orchesis and director of the Madrigal group.

"Sorrow" and "Want", two short but striking compositions, open the section on "Our Christmas Thoughts, 1945." Neither subtitles nor explanations are necessary.

"Freedom of Worship" is a symbolic portrayal of our three faiths, Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant. For the first time, a group moves to a recitation of its own voices in Loyd Haberly's "The Bridge", which is the central core or theme for all of the others. The Jewish theme follows which is opened by a choral incantation to preface the Kindling of the Sabbath Lights. This is a family ritual in which the children of the household take part. Each successive night a new candle is kindled from the central or first lighted taper when the ceremony begins.

The Catholic theme begins with Gregorian chanting off stage of the "Gloria in excelsis, Deo." A lone figure, a priestly one, comes down stage as the group genuflects in obeisance. You feel the austerity, the solemnity of the occasion.

The Protestant theme is developed through use of the two most symbolical elements of Protestantism, singing of hymns and the recitation of the Lord's Prayer. It is not as ceremonious or ritualistic, but it is expressed simply and beautifully. The whole leaves one exalted yet humble to believe in One God.

Girls participating in the modern dance program include Lou Baker, Betty Bibb, Emily Carper, Claire Clark, Vicky Edmunds, Margaret Ellett, Betty Ellis, Lois Fuller, Heidi Lacy, Frances Lee, Nancy Parrish, Betty Parrish, Jean Parry, Betty Minetree, Anne Motley, Doris Ramsey, Berkeley Richardson, Esther Shevick, Nannie Sours, Hildrian Suttle, and Nancy Whitehead.

LEFT LEAD

SEASON'S GREETINGS

Y'know, when we started pinch-hitting on news at the first of the year, we wouldn't have taken on a bet that the column would be wishing the riders Merry Christmas in this issue of the paper, but, thanks again to those responsible, here we are with a stable full of nice horses . . . and a Christmas party coming up to boot! And, of course, our merriest wishes for a lot of fun over the holly-days.

But before you go . . . as those of you who are members of the riding club already know (and as we're going to tell to make those who don't ride jealous) Bobo and Mr. Wells are ringleaders in ideas, so the Riding Club party this year has turned from a tangerine-and-candy-cane affair in the Rec to a real steak dinner at Longwood, with Nanny in the kitchen to see to the steaks and French fries! All those who ride, both here, at H.-S. C., and the high school group, as well as special guests have been issued invitations, and the big night is almost here. Meet up at the stables a little before six Friday night, and bring an appetite with you. Wear your skirts 'n sweaters . . . and some holly in your hair . . . and don't be late. There'll be ample facilities for transportation . . . but they won't wait for the laggards.

CALL MEETING

At a called meeting of the riding club Monday night, president-instructor Jeanne Sauerwein asked all those who have not yet paid their riding fees to please have them in by not later than Friday. Remember, the horses have to eat too. Also, club dues are twenty-five cents per quarter, payable any time to Kim Kimmerling, treasurer.

WHOA, SPUD!

It takes Ducky! We take our lives in our hands to tell you this, but even at that we couldn't make it as interesting as 'twas told to us. It seems that Ducky and Margaret Nevins took off on Squealer and Spud one day abut two weeks ago, and ended up near the airport with a closed gate blocking further travel. Margaret gallantly dismounted to open up, and in some way, Spud walked off on his own. Margaret cautiously followed. Spud cautiously kept just out of reach ahead. Margaret speeded up a little . . . Spud took off at a trot. By the time Ducky and Squealer were in the chase, there was really some chasing necessary, and they found Spud out on the main highway, blocking traffic in each direction. The standard call as Ducky dismounted to see what she could, became "Whoa Spud" . . . and Spud's standard response was to trot on down the road a few more feet, till finally he was well beyond sight or hearing. It was a long walk in from the airport . . . What with Ducky's scratches and Nevins' torn blue-jeans causing much speculation on the part of various passers-by who had met the rideriess horse further back up the road but they finally made it to Butchers. Somewhere near here, an interested group of little training school urchins came up and helpfully inquired, "Y'all lose a horse?"

To make a long story short, the prodigal Spud had been caught about a block up the hill from the stables, and there the trail-blazers remounted and from there they rode back to the stables. All's well that ends well . . . what astounds us is the fact that it was all a big secret for two whole weeks!

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

That's all for now. . . we're leaving town soon anyhow for the holidays, so maybe we'll live through the above confession. Meanwhile, don't forget to be at the stables Friday night at six, and while you are home try out that plug down the street or take off on a thoroughbred from a regular stable and you won't be so stiff the first time you ride next year!

Stay on the bit . . .

Did you see Lucy McKenry with her darling brother? Now, we know why she raves so about him!

And once more Dave Crute has returned to our campus — this time with that blond blizzard — Kity Wright!

Speaking of sharp looking men —Mary Ellen and Vicky had one riotous time with two such hubba, hubba dates!

The hit tune of the night was Russ Carlton's version of "Who Threw the Whiskey in the Well?" There was a regular stampede every time it was played!

As ever the "Class of '45" is loyal—Lucy Messick, Virginia Abernathy, Jean Prosise, Cheatwood, Dody, and Pat arrived bag and baggage—(Mary Walker with a trunk) to see things done up right.

However, the crowning blow struck when Dody and Pat tried to catch the 5:15 bus at 5:30. They're getting "worser" all the time. And we can't forget Lucy Harvie—pride of '46 who is loyal to the last!

Latest flash! Tom and Cab here at last! And so—with the midnight oil burning low and another happy occasion having passed —Merry Christmas to all!

LOUISE BLANE'S

On the Ball

Hello, you sports fans! Due to exams and Christmas holidays approaching, this is your last week of supervised physical activities this quarter, so take advantage of it. The rainy weather for the past week does not interfere with the use of the gym and basketball practice.

Basketball practice has taken the lead in the physical activities on campus since Thanksgiving. Practices are held every Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 3:50 to 5:50.

Any person now interested in the game of basketball may come out and receive instruction under the competent supervision of Miss Olive T. Iler, physical education instructor. As in hockey, eight practices are required in order to make a class team.

There will be a varsity team selected from persons with sufficient practice to play several varsity games to be scheduled during the winter quarter.

With exams coming up it is more important than ever that we get plenty of exercise, rest, and eat the proper foods. If all you can do is take a short walk in the afternoon, those few minutes in the fresh air will clear your tired brain of its worries and give you a little relaxation. Those eight hours sleep are absolutely essential in order that your brain can function to its highest efficiency.

CHRISTMAS CHEER

In just eight more days we will be sitting in front of ye ole home fireplace, chatting with the family about what has happened during this quarter. It seems impossible that Christmas is here but it really is, and with the world at peace once again.

Good luck on your exams, and a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to each of you. Don't forget to stay in the game!

Students Practice For Basketball

Practices for the class and varsity basketball teams officially began the week after Thanksgiving. Practices are held Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday afternoons from 3:50 o'clock until 5:50. Any and all of these class periods are open for persons desiring to get in their eight required practices for a class team.

Tentative dates for the class games have been set for March 4, Frances Lee, president of the Athletic Association, announced Monday night. This date is subject to change as it is only tentative.

Several varsity games are being scheduled for the winter quarter, but the definite dates have not yet been set.

Miss Olive T. Iler, physical education instructor, is coach of both class and general basketball practice. Nellie Smith is general basketball manager. Baseketball is a major sport and gives ten points toward the color cup.

last notes sounded, we realized that wonderful night was over, and so lingering as long as possible, we said goodnight to our dates. Now only the memory remains, to be talked about and lived through again and again. Lights burned late that night each girl swooned over her special Chuck, Bill, or Ferdinand.

The seniors will long remember their own special night, but the wonderful part is, it is still to come for every underclassman.

Episcopalians will have their pageant Sunday night at 6:45 o'clock in the church. The Wesley Foundation will have its party on Friday night at the Methodist church. The Baptist students will have a New Year party in honor of new Baptist students enrolling for the winter quarter at Farmville and for all Baptist boys at Hampden-Sydney, Saturday night, January 5, at 8 o'clock at the church. Methodist girls report that the conference held at Randolph-Macon last week-end was a great success.

The party given by the Presbyterian girls last Monday was pronounced "wonderful". The councils of all the churches were invited.

Don't forget to come and join the Christmas celebrations! Merry Christmas!

The Rev. H. Conrad Blackwell, pastor of the Methodist Church, has announced that Mr. Edwin Cralle will sing at the 11 o'clock worship service Sunday morning, December 16. He has also stated that the evening worship service will be held at 7 instead of 7:30 in order that members may attend the concert at the college at 8:30.

RESOLUTIONS

An inexorable fate has taken from our midst Miss Edith Stevens who for seventeen years served on this Faculty as Associate Professor of Biology.

Miss Stevens was a distinguished botanist. After receiving her bachelor's and master's degrees at the University of West Virginia, she went to the University of Chicago where she studied under the eminent botanist Charles J. Chamberlain and received her doctor of philosophy degree. She is cited by "American Men of Science" for her researches in the field of cytology with special reference to the life history of apple rust. Her love of science and teachigg prompted her to accept membership in the following societies: Sigma Xi, Botanical Society of America, Torrey Botanical Society, Virginia Academy of Science, National Association of Biology Teachers, American Association of University Professors, and Virginia Education Association. She was a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The College in the sixty-one years of its existence has never possessed a more effective teacher and laboratory director than Miss Stevens. She spent many hours that others gave to rest and recreation in tireless preparation for her classes. Although by all educational standards she seemed adequately equipped for her tasks, she did not think so; therefore, she went to the University of Michigan and to the Pennsylvania State College to get the latest ideas and techniques for her teaching projects. She maintained a model laboratory and she gave invaluable assistance in the designing of the proposed new science building of the College.

Although she did not expect perfection, she demanded of her students their best endeavor, and in return she gave them of her time, energy and great understanding of the truth. Her unassuming manner was not due entirely to modesty. It was in part the reserve of the scientist fearful of anything but the truth. About this truth she was too much in earnest to speak freely concerning things not fully within her understanding. But within her own field she was both eloquent and interpretative. "There was more to her teaching than the bare facts," declares one of her students. "She made us feel the glory and wonder of the universe by looking into a single cell."

"To be associated with Miss Stevens," declares a colleague, "is to discover anew the full meaning of honor and integrity." Those who penetrated beneath her shyness loved her. She was devoted to her kin and to her friends. Moreover, she possessed a rare humor and an ability to enjoy the simplest things. She was a friend with whom a student could take a quiet stroll.

Therefore, be it Resolved. That the Faculty in regular session approve this tribute to the memory of a respected colleague by standing in silent meditation for a period of one minute, and

Be it further Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Faculty of the College and that copies be sent to "The Rotunda" for publication and to the members of Miss Steven's family.

Respectfully submitted by the Committee:

Kitty Maddox, general dance chairman, has named the following committee heads for the annual Mardi Gras ball which will be held this year on Saturday night, February 23, in the college gymnasium at 8:30 o'clock.

Eleanor Bisese heads up business management; Betty Adams and Margaret Wilson, advertisement; Evelyn Grizzard, orchestra; Emily Carper, floor show; Kitty East and Carolyn Bobbitt, decorations; Dorothy Overstreet, costuming; and Louise Rives, the floor committee.

This costume ball is sponsored by Pi Gamma Mu, honorary society in social science.

The officers of Pi Gamma Mu are president, Dorothy Overcash; vice-president, Emily Carper; Secretary, Eleanor Bisese, and treasurer, Betty Adams.

Garnett Elected Queen of Polio Ward

Frances Garnett of Buckingham, one of the three S. T. C. polio victims, was recently elected queen of the polio ward at the Medical College of Virginia where she is undergoing treatment. According to Dr. Moore who visits the girls frequently she is getting along fine and is in high spirits.

Cornelia Woodward of Richmond is also being treated at the M. C. V. Kitty Hankins who was the third case to be sent from S. T. C., has been discharged and is at home in Richmond with no apparent after effects.

Vacation Extended For STC Students

Christmas vacation was extended this year from January 3 to January 10 because of boiler trouble.

Dr. J. L. Jarman in a statement issued to the press this week said that it has not been decided whether or not the time will have to be made up.

The Christmas holidays began December 20 and were supposed to end January 2. The first official notice said that the school would open January 7. Because the administration feared the trouble could not be remedied by that time, a second notice was sent to all students which said that if there was no further notice girls would report back January 9 ready for classes on January 10.

Junior Class Elects Production Head

Grace Loyd, junior from Lynchburg, was elected general chairman of the Junior Production which is scheduled for the first part of February.

Grace has been active in school affairs since her freshman year. In addition to working in the productions each year, she has participated in the annual S. T. C. circus for the past three years. During her sophomore year she acted as ring master. As member of the acting group of the Dramatic Club, she has taken a part in the plays, "Cry Havoc", "Ivory Door", and "Midsummer Night's Dream."

Grace is also vice-president of the junior class.

Rabbi Speaks On Religious Sincerity

Starkoff Represents Chautauqua Society

Dr. Bernard J. Starkoff, representing the Jewish Chautauqua Society, spoke to the student body and faculty during chapel yesterday on the subject, "How Can an Intelligent Person Be Sincerely Religious?"

Rabbi Starkoff discussed several questions which, he said, might lead people to ask how an intelligent person could be sincerely religious when the questions were true. He cited the fact that countless wars have been fought over religion and because of these wars people ask the question he had as a topic. His reply was that an intelligent person could not afford to be non-religious. He compared the forces of religion to the three dimensions in a natural sphere.

Dr. Starkoff stated that an intelligent person needed the following three dimensions embodied into religion if he were to have a satisfying life. He must have height, or an exalted philosophy of life. He must have depth, or a deep and abiding faith which inspires men to defy the unknown. At this point, Rabbi Starkoff said, "Man's needs cannot be met by intelligence alone; he needs faith." The third dimension was extension, or a noble and virtuous way of living. This dimension must be "tied in with the other two," the rabbi stated.

In conclusion, Dr. Starkoff stated that the question seemed to him to be "How Could an Intelligent Person be Non-Religious?"

Rabbi Starkoff is serving as rabbi of the Chef Solomon Temple in Norfolk. Prior to his present pulpit he was assistant rabbi at the Vine Street Temple in Nashville, Tenn.

March of Dimes Campaign Begins On S. T. C. Campus

The March of Dimes Campaign, to held in the treatment of infantile paralysis victims, began here Monday, January 14 and will continue through January 31, according to an announcement made by Raymond French, chairman of the drive on campus.

The table in the hall will be open during this time for contributions, and will be supervised by the various classes. The halls will also be canvassed at night at which time students will be able to make their donations.

Last year the college and training school contributed nearly $200. Mr. French stated that he hoped that the college could do as well if not better than last year.

Fifty percent of the amount raised will go for local work, and the other 50 percent will go to national headquarters.

5 Students Selected Gamma Psi Members

On December 15 at the last chapel of fall quarter, five girls were issued bids to Gamma Psi, honorary art society. The girls who received bids are Sue Davis, sophomore from Lynchburg; Kitty East, senior from Altavista; Annette Grainger, sophomore from Farmville; Jane Paige, senior from Amherst; and Beverly Peebles, senior from Hampton.

Artists To Appear Here January 24

Brall, Danzig Will Perform

Ruth Brall, contralto, and Dorothy Danzig, pianist, will appear here on Thursday, January 24 at 8 o'clock in a joint concert in the large auditorium.

It has been stated by critics that these artists are two of the most promising young stars in America. It is further said that they captivate their audiences with each of their unusual performances.

Miss Brall, a newcomer to the concert field, is rapidly achieving a place of unusual distinction by the beauty of her voice, her superb and always musicianly use of it. She has the high qualities of a musician and interpreter.

Miss Brall was recently introduced to an audience of many thousands in Washington, D. C., and won from first-line press such praise as is rarely given the most seasoned artists. Since then Miss Brall has appeared in notable concert events in the east, oratorio performances and broadcasts and is increasingly accepted as among the most outstandingly gifted of the younger singers.

STC Commercial Club Sets Banquet Date

On January 18, 1946, the Commercial Club is having a banquet at the Farmville High school cafeteria. The speaker will be Arthur L. Walker, State Superintendent of the Office of Education, Richmond, Virginia. This will include all active members, honorary members, and guests. Kathryn Tindall is chairman with Carolyn Moon acting as co-chairmen of the banquet.

The First Area Conference of Business Education, sponsored by Farmville State Teachers College, and the State Department of Education, will be held in the little auditorium on Saturday, January 19, 1946. The first session will begin at 10 o'clock A. M.

At the last regular meeting of the Commercial Club December 12, Mrs. Thorpe Jones, a former S. T. C. student who now works in town spoke to the club on some of the experiences in her office

Anne Martin, president of Alpha Kappa Gamma which issued bids to two girls in chapel this morning.

Nine Girls Enroll As New Students

Nine girls entered college as new students this quarter, according to an announcement by Miss Virgilia Bugg, registrar.

Doris Brooks, Lynchburg; Betty Curlee, Lynchburg; Marguerite Davis, Chase City; Rose Nieto, Puerto Rico; Nancy Roberson, Roanoke, and Jane Bell Sommers, Richmond entered as freshmen. Transfer students include Edythe Dalton, Mary Washington; Helen Har, Averett; and Evelyn Mahanes, University of Virginia.

Old students who have re-entered this quarter include Mary Lou Bagley, Virginia Beach; Nanny Smith, Clover; Jean Pritchett, Petersburg; and Gwen Ackiss, Norfolk.

The enrollment at the end of the first week of school last quartr was 833. There are approximately 845 students enrolled now.

Student Secretary Resigns From Post

Miss Frances Currin, resigned as Methodist student secretary during Christmas holidays. Dr. J. E. Walmsley stated that no one has been selected for the position yet.

Miss Currin came here as student secretary in September

Fraternity Bids Adams, Ozlin

Society Organized At STC In 1928

Betty Adams, senior from Richmond, and Connie Ozlin, senior from Chase City, were tapped in chapel this morning by Alpha Kappa Gamma, national leadership fraternity.

Activities Cited

Since entering Farmville, Betty has been active in the debate club, serving as president during her sophomore year. She is, at present, vice-president of Kappa Delta Pi and treasurer of Pi Gamma Mu. Betty is also a member of the Wesley Foundation Council, the J. L. Jarman chapter of the Future Teachers of America, and head dining hall hostess.

Connie is a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Beorc Eh Thorn, the Westminster Fellowship Council, and the Colonnade staff. She is serving this year as president of the College Choir and served last year as head of the music for May Day. She also has been on the Y. W. C. A. cabinet for three years.

Purpose Given

Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary society for leadership, was organized in 1928. It represents the merging of local societies which had been founded in order to bring together groups of representative students and faculty members, whose purpose was to foster high ideals and standards of leadership. Alpha Delta Rho, organized in 1925, became the Joan Circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma and was one of the charter members of the organization.

Officers Named

The officers of the Joan Circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma are Anne Martin, president; Shirley Cruser, vice-president; Virginia Treakle, secretary; and Eleanor Bisese, treasurer.

UNO Discussed By Alpha Phi Sigma

A discussion of the United Nations Organization by eight freshmen made up the program of the Alpha Phi Sigma meeting which was held in the YWCA lounge last night, Tuesday, January 15.

Harriet Purcell, who introduced the program, made a general survey of the UNO which is fast becoming a living reality. Many months of preparation, which include the meetings held at Dumbarton Oaks during the summer and fall of 1944 and at San Francisco last spring, have passed and now the UNO is ready to actually begin its work. The first meeting of the General Assembly will make many decisions of importance. It will determine the exact site of the headquarters, which will be somewhere in the United States; elect the nonpermanent members of the Security Council; and possibly discuss methods of controlling the atomic bomb.

According to Mary Ellen Moore, the General Assembly is the organization in which all the fifty-one member nations have an usual voice and vote. It bears the responsibility of seeing that the major purposes of the UNO work to achieve those purposes. It will meet in regular annual sessions and on special occasions if necessary. Its chief work is to study and discuss anything which affects international relations. The Assembly also has numerous miscellaneous powers and elects the Secretary-General, nonpermanent member of the Security Council, members of the Economic and Social part of the members of the

Dr. Merritt Relates Stories Of His Army Career In Paris

By BETTY SPINDLER

Dr. Merritt is home again! We found him behind his desk Monday morning busy with one of the million things that come up in a librarian's day, but he graciously put them aside to talk with us. Just between us newsy folks he's the answer to a reporter's prayer. One or two questions and he began to tell such an interesting story that we caught ourselves listening with so much attention that we forgot to take down what he was saying. What we did get we're passing on to you—sorry it's second hand 'cause we can't possibly do him justice.

Most of his army career Dr. Merritt spent in Paris, from November '44 to October '45, where he was with Special Service headquarters of the E. T. O. His job was in the Library Branch and his were the administrative problems of book selection, and those of purchasing, shipping, and distribution of books to men at the front. From New York they obtain about 40 per cent paper bound editions of popular books which were distributed to all the branches every month, also an envelope containing 25 popular magazines which came in every week. In March they organized a regular library of clothbound volumes and established regular library service. Besides this some 1,500 small libraries were set up behind the lines and now there are around 100 camp libraries, girls with army training, with the army of occupation.

We might go on with his professional side but what he did after the eight hours that the army claims is much more interesting! (Don't worry, we're not telling anything Mrs. Merritt doesn't already know.) When Dr. Merritt first went to Paris he was quartered in the University (Sorbonne) dorms which made him feel as if he was at school. The Sorbonne is an interesting institution he says,

Extended Vacations Appeal To Sleepyheaded STC Girls

By JEAN CAKE

Happy New Year, Merry Christmas and Joyful Valentine to everybody! We're most all back in one piece, and glad to see the ole place too. Didja have a wonderful time? Was Santa Claus good to you? If the huge boxes everybody was dragging in have anything to do with it, I'm sure he was. We've almost recuperated from New Year's eve bust just can't get used to that 7 o'clock bell yet.

But say—how did you like that extra week of sleeping late? What things a little boiler can't do! That first card announcing an extension disrupted plenty of plans. The reactions were varied. Probably no one fainted but we were very definitely surprised. Unfortunately some of us got the cards too late and were already back up here. You can be sure, though that they hot-footed it back home plenty quick. The thought of a few more days at home was pleasant to many, with time for a couple more parties or to patch up a quarrel with the best beau. The second card was rather an anticlimax. Some of us were kinda itching to come back. After all most of our best friends were up here. We were beginning to wonder if that ole boiler was ever going to stop misbehaving.

About that time the horrible thought dawned that we would have to make up this time in June or give up spring vacation. Rumor has it that nobody is to blame but the boiler so why not forget those few days.

Dr. Jarman can be quoted as saying that this was the longest holiday he has had since he has been in education. It's probably the longest we have had or will have for some time, except for summer vacation.

After this long rest (?) we ought to do a whiz bang job of passing every subject this quarter. Eventually we will settle down again maybe and Christmas holidays will just be a wonderful memory.

Honor Code Applies To All

The real backone of our student government here at S. T. C. is the honor code. Each student upon entering college, is oriented into a thorough knowledge and understandng of the honor code, its purpose and its meaning. She then signs a pledge "to uphold and protect the honor code at all times" and to govern her college life accordingly.

It seems that this pledge is quickly forgotten by nine-tenths of the students and the other one-tenth certainly can't do the job alone! Unless each student in our college remembers and exercises her pledge, how can we ever have an efficient student government? This code gives us our privilege to govern ourselves, to make our own laws and to run our college life according to our own desires. It is a privilege, a very dear one, and until it is taken from us because of abuse, we don't realize how much it does mean to us.

If we want our student government, each student must carry out her pledge to the fullest degree. So many of us criticize our rules and laws, putting all the blame on our council. When doing this, we just don't stop to think that we are really criticizing ourselves. If something is wrong, if there is a rule that seems a little unfair to us, it's our fault that the rule is there.

We elect representatives to the student council from our classes. These girls are not a governing body in themselves, it would be impossible for a group of 14 girls to govern a student body of 800 members. They are merely our representatives. If we find fault with our government, we should take our criticisms to our government girls, not sit around and talk them out among ourselves. Reasonable or not, our grievances will then be taken to the council and given due consideration. This is why we should weigh our choice before nominating and electing our government representatives. Your vote counts as much as anyone's and you should be sure the girl you elect is worthy of your confidence.

With each year at Farmville, our student government improves. It takes time and diligence to smooth the rough places, but our goal is a worthy one. Instead of waiting for someone else to do all the work, make all the suggestions, let's all do our part.

Each of us is a member of the student government association, an organization whose success depends upon the cooperaton of the entire student body.

New Year Brings Challenges

For the first time in several years, a new year has dawned in a world of peace, a world that is striving to set-up the kind of peace that will not be destroyed by chaos and destruction but the kind of peace that will be eternal and everlasting. As we face the year 1946, the picture is a brighter one than it was three years ago, two years ago, and even one year ago. Are we adequately prepared to face the future days of this year with a zeal in our hearts to make it a successful year, a year in which we shall learn better than ever before how to live together as brothers of the great human race?

Ours is a challenge and a responsibillty to prepare ourselves to meet the challenges that are ours in this college of learning and even beyond these halls to the greater life that each of us shall face as citizens of the communities in which we live.

In preparing ourselves to serve our college, our communities, our state, and our nation, let us first of all evaluate our accomplishments, attitudes, and skills of the past year, and then as a result of these evaluations, let us resolve to set up certain goals for this new year. Of course, many times our aims may be beyond our reach, and indeed they should often be. Browning put it well when he said "Ah, that a man's reach should exceed his grasp, Or what's a heaven for." We will, in our resolutions, strive to touch the stars as it were. Of course, at times, we shall not attain that for which we strive; however, we shall be better persons for having made an attempt.

Too often, new year's resolutions are made to be broken. Frequently they are written down and misplaced. To be effective, they must be lived from day to day and week to week in our dealings with other people.

A new year has dawned; a new challenge is ours. Will we meet this challenge as level-headed college students that the year 1946 will go down as a successful year in the history of mankind?

Gleanings

Mildred Altice

At the beginning of every year a few courageous people or people who just do not care, attempt to make forecasts of the nature of the coming events for the next months. To mention a few of the predictions made for this year, untold prosperity, the greatest crime wave in our history, reaction in this country to internationalism, and general restlessness throughout the country.

As for the prediction of untold prosperity the strikes would not seem to indicate that such will be the case. The General Motors strike continues and has been joined by others with others threatening. We can only hope that a solution may be found very shortly for the labor management troubles. As long as everybody in America persists in this growing feeling that you must get everything for self, no solution will be found. Extreme thinking on the part of labor or management is not Americanism and must be crushed before anything can be accomplished toward settling the labor unrest.

Through the rising juvenile delinquency we have noted the crime wave coming for some time. The new year certainly started with a horrible kidnapping and murder which is as yet unsolved. This constitutes a genuinely serious problem which must be intelligently attacked by all groups of people and every individual.

This week the United Nations Organization General Assembly convened and elected the Belgian Foreign Minister as its president. The GI's overseas have staged several demonstrations toward getting home quicker. However just these demonstrations may be, they must injure the reputation of our nation and cause difficulties in solving the numerous foreign problems of today.

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

And it seems that a Merry Christmas and a Happy Mistletoe were had by all!

Diamonds were quite the thing this Christmas. In fact you need sun glasses to protect your eyes from the terrific glare these days!

Carolyn and "Cab" went after a Christmas tree and came back with a diamond.

As for Jean Parry, she certainly "hit the jackpot" with one on each hand.

Friday night was quite the occasion with Phyllis Watts. She celebrated her first anniversary, one week of perfect bliss.

Lucie McKenry and Pat are still blushing whenever anyone asks to see their "third finger, left hand."

And at last Lucy Bowling and Bill have made it official!

"Santa" left Martha Holman a big fat diamond. Lucky girl.

And lest we forget the fraternity pins. To Nellie Smith we dedicate "My KA Rose".

Maybe 'tis only a coincidence but these S. T .C.-ers seems to be rather partial to the KA's. Even more dreamy eyed than ever, Mar Kent is proudly displaying her KA pin.

And how about Bonnie Curtis' frat pin?

But the big event of the Christmas was wedding bells for Dot White. Here's wishing her and the fortunate man happiness and success always.

She couldn't make New York, but Washington seemed to Lohr to be a pretty good substitute, as long as Johnny was there.

What's this about car trouble, Houser?

And Margaret Harvie realized a life ambition when she took piano lessons New Year's morning. Some way to celebrate!

Hun Carper knows a fascinating story about New Year's eve and "behind the door." Don't miss hearing it.

To start the year off with a decided bang, Caroline Painter had not one; no, not two; but three lieutenants.

The details of the week end seem to be a little vague to Betty Parrish, but there's one certain fact, she got a large charge and a PiKA pin.

Fred arrived with his pocket loaded. Result? Dot May is sporting an enormous Sigma Phi pin.

It'll soon be wedding bells and satin dresses for Mary Anne Adams. The ring arrived during the Christmas holidays, and the big event will take place in June.

Still others flashing rings are Terry Jett, Virginia Tobey, Molly Reid, and Pat Carter.

Just ask Minnie, Kitty, or George Anne, if you want to hear a fascinating story about A-1 big weekend. All three are still dreamy eyed and drooling. Well, who wouldn't drool over that many precious ensigns?

It's time to go to press, so as for now—Will be listening for you.

So Many Things To Claim It, Money Doesn't Last At STC

BETTY SPINDLER

What, just one letter for me today? That family of mine gets worse every week about writing! Oh, well, here goes.—Say family, I take that back! 'Scuse me!

Do you know what they sent me? A check for $10.00—and honeyeee, can I use that! Let's see first I have to pay that bill downtown; on second thought that can wait, this is for something special. Shall I get that sweater I've had my eye on, or that album of records?

Take my advice and never pass that table in the hall if you have any money in your pocket; if you do you'll be sorry-ee! I passed it unwittingly only to be waylaid by two high-powered salesmen who promptly robbed me of $4.50—for an annual, they said. Also never inform your roommate of any increase in financial status. I did and was soon out of $3.00 more—when you cry on my soft shoulder you can put my money in your pocket, but sister don't catch me when my cold shoulder's turned!

Now I found that I had $2.50 of the original $10, an I. O. U., and a receipt for $4.50—bye-bye sweater. Oh, well, with half of that I can buy some new stationery and a book of stamps. Then I'll have enough to go to the show, and get my shoes out of the shop, pay a library fine, and . . .

Come in! Who's turn is it to pay for the paper? It isn't mine; I paid it last week. Well, if everybody's broke but me, I guess I'll just have to pay it—I won't do it next time!

With the remains of my check in my pocket, I tripped light-headedly (that's a mis-print), I distinctly wrote light-heartedly) down to dinner, only to be informed that freshman dues should be paid as soon as possible. One down, only a quarter to go!

Sandwiches, n a b s, peanuts, doughnuts, candy, cokes! I'm starved, let's have a feast; and don't worry about money, I've got scads(?)! Down the hatch goes 40c worth, and just as the last morsel is down who should dash

February 17 Beginning Date For Class Basketball Games

Require 8 Practices For Participation

Tentative dates for the class basketball games have been set for the week of February 17. This tournament will consist of six games in which each class will play every other class. Eight practices are required for any person who wishes to play on any of the class teams. Practices this quarter are held every Monday and Wednesday at 3:50 o'clock. An extra practice for third periods will be announced, and any person who wishes to practice may come out any of these times for class or general practice.

A varsity basketball team will be chosen and announced at a later date. This team will be chosen from members of the various classes who have been out for their required practices. Persons making the varsity basketball team will not be eligible for any class team, this rule was established by the Athletic Association and has been in the A. A. handbook for a number of years.

As the gym floor has been repaired and put in good condition, regulation gym shoes are required for playing on the court. Those taking the class for credit, regulation gym suits must be worn.

Ten points for the color cup will be given to the color winning the round-robin tournament in basketball.

Class Teams Play Volley Ball Games For Color Points

Class volley ball games will begin the week of February 17, Frances Lee, president of the Athletic Association announced Monday. These games will be played in a round robin torunament, and eight practices are required before any person is eligible to play on any class team.

Regular classes in volley ball are scheduled for 2:50 on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. Anyone interested in volleyball may come to these practices any afternoon.

Five points towards the color cup are given for the class winning the round robin tournament in volley ball. Regulation gym shoes must be worn on the court to all practices.

Extended Vacation Makes Girls Happy

By BETTY LEWIS SHANK

"Hon-eeee!! I'm so glad to see you! Gee, I've missed you. Did you see Jack Christmas? Oh look! Here comes Dot!" . . . "I'll have you know I got four pairs of nylons!" . . . "Look at all the mail!" — "Ugh! Do you see what I see—books!" Et cetera, et cetera. Thus the conversation ran all day the Thursday and Friday STCites filed into the halls of their beloved Alma Mater. Most were more than glad to be back (although some of the "tuffies" wouldn't admit it) after the prolonged holiday.

However—it is rumored that some were seen to steal down to the basement and give the furnace a very grateful pat on the back. But, this of course, is propaganda.

It is a little hard to get up again at the ridiculous hour of seven, but it does have its advantages—we keep telling ourselves. Ah—there's nothing like a strict schedule to be followed daily—thank goodness.

Enough of this talk—the Christmas tree is now on its merry way to the city dump; tinsel, icicles, and gay decorations have been packed safely away for next year. Time to pack up the past year with them! 1946 promises a better year and a better Yuletide. So cheer up gals—after all, it's just 349 more days!

LEFT LEAD

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Greetings again; best wishes, and all the usual hullabaloo that goes along with a new year. We feel 'twould be pointless to say here as well as everywhere else in the paper that a Gal's Best Friend is her School's Boiler, but we will add that we hope the extra week at home meant a lot to all of you. How-some-ever, we're also glad to be back and at the stables again after so long a holiday.

ANCIENT HISTORY

Remember 'way back before Christmas, when we had a beautiful deep snow? Jeanne kept wondering where the snow plows were, but all that showed up in keeping with the weather on the streets of Farmville was Bobo, with My Pal hitched up to a real honest-to-goodness straight-out-of-the song one-horse open sleigh, complete right down to the jingly harness bells, and though it may be a little late to mention it here, it's one sight that won't soon be forgotten by the lucky ones who got a glimpse before he whizzed by. If you want pictorial proof, look for the photo appearing soon on the wall of the club house at the stables.

Obviously, riding was impossible during the icy season which invaded the locality before the holidays, but after the thaw, there've been one or two days which made Spring seem just around the corner, and naturally the horses were as glad to be out in the fresh air again as we were. The combination of warm breezes and muddy roads with gay spirits and daring natures made for some really exhilirating rides this past week. Even Red Fox took off on a couple of jaunts, and he goes beautifully, but the lameness always seems to master him in the end.

BEGINNERS' LUCK

Schedules have been made out and classes officially started Monday for old as well as new riders for this quarter. It's this quarter as well as the first of the next which will tell on you comes time for the horse show, so don't miss a single ride! Just put on your red flannels under those blue jeans, grit your teeth when the wind howls over the golf course, stick your heels down . . . and canter!

And just in passing . . . don't forget to see Jeanne in case you haven't already made out your schedule, and don't forget to pay your fee as soon as possible, in any case.

CHRISTMAS GIFT!

If as many horses had arrived at the stables as came back in the suitcase, we'd never hafta worry about who would be riding who. Horses on bracelets, horses on pins, horses on scarves and handkerchiefs. Horsy book-ends and horsy pictures, and horses to park on your window-sill and books about horses. King Richard wouldn't have had far to look around here when he uttered his famous cry, but he would undoubtedly have had to trade two kingdoms to get these gals to part with any of the varied array of aforementioned horses. From colts to plow

Swimming Pool Opens For Classes

Recreational Period Held At Night

The college swimming pool has been repaired, and regular classes began this week. The dates and times of these swimming classes are posted on the A. A. bulletin board in the hall. All classes are under the supervision of Miss Mary Dabney, swimming instructor in the college.

A recreational swimming period will be held each Wednesday and Saturday nights at 9 o'clock, according to an announcement made by Frances Lee, president of the Athletic Association. These periods are open to any person desiring to practice up on their strokes in order to pass the required swimming test, or any person who wishes to swim for recreation.

A class swimming meet will be held sometime during the middle of February, and any persons desiring to enter this meet may try out. Eight practices are required for participation. This meet will consist of relays, diving, swimming free style, and dashes. Points for the color cup will be given for winning teams.

A lifeguard will be at the pool at all times it is open for class or recreational swimming periods. Regulation tank suits must be worn in the pool.

LOUISE BLANE'S

On the Ball

Happy New Year to all you good people, and here's hoping you made some resolutions in regard to sports and athletics. If you haven't made one let's do it now, and resolve to come out and support your class teams and try out for each sport.

FIN FANS

At last the swimming pool has been made ready for use and swimming classes began Monday. Recreational periods for swimming will be announced, and anyone may use the pool at these times. There will be life guards at the pool all the time it is open for use, and you who may not have passed your swimming test will have a wonderful opportunity to practice.

Class meets in swimming will be held some time during the quarter, and anyone is eligible to enter these meets.

There are probably quite a few of you girls who haven't been in the pool, so when you hear the announcement of play night in the pool, gather up the gang and come on down to the pool.

FREE THROW

Every Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon at 3:50 there is basketball practice in the gym. Practices are open to any person wishing to try out for class or varsity teams. If you haven't noticed the work that has been done on the gym floor please take notice and do not come down on the floor without your gym shoes. The gym is in excellent condition so let's all cooperate and keep it that way.

Volley ball practices begin soon, so listen for the announcement as to the dates and times of practice. Class volley ball games will be played sometimes during the quarter, and eight practices are required before you can play on a class team.

PING PONG

A ping pong tournament will be held some time during the quarter, so if you are interested you will find ping pong tables in the shower room, senior rec, and senior basement. You may use these tables at any time so practice up on your techniques and stay in the game.

Money Doesn't Last

in but my old standby in the time of need (financial). She hated to ask me, but could I let her have the 73c I borrowed last time we went home? This I did with apologies for forgetting it.

Two cents! What does one do with two cents? Perplexing, isn't it?—I know one goes into my bank and with the other I shall buy a postcard.

So I hurried down to the P. O. and bought a card for the sum of 1c and wrote:

Dear family: Thanks a million for the check; it was life-saver! Do you remember the little song we used to sing—

A penny for a spool of thread,
A penny for a needle,
And that's the way my money goes
Pop goes the weasel!

Well, at S. T. C., we sing it like this—

A book, a fee, a stamp or two,
To Shannon's and a movie,
And board to pay the whole year through,
Send money if you love me!

of ants and mice. Frankly we've gotten used to them and would be quite lonesome without the little dears.

Mice Make Life Unpleasant For College Students Here

JEAN CAKE

Mice are animals. Mice have four feet, two ears, a tail and whiskers. Mice are lice. Lice is the plural of louse. We don't like louses, therefore we don't like mice either. Mice are different from rats. Mice and rats are said to be kin but you can't kid us, we know better. Rats are people that have just come to S. T. C. Mice have always been here. Rats despise mice. Mice caused quite a disturbance in Main building the other night about 2 a. m. A little freshman issued a blood-curdling scream when she awoke and discovered a fourth roommate wandering around with apparently nothing to do but get into mischief. We admit it would be quite disturbing to discover such a thing. About the only thing you can do is to set a little trap. The horrible part is that we are more afraid of the mouse trap than we are of the mouse. Consequently, we still have a few extra roomers and boarders in the building.

To keep a little mouse company there is another species of vermin very common around here. I hardly need mention their name. They are so small you can hardly see them. "Ay, a candle that I may see my"—little pests. That would be a good way to get rid of the darn ants—burn them up! Unfortunately that would hardly be possible. Ants aren't born. They just exist. Raise the window and a stream of them march across the window sill. There's a camp of them in your soap box. They wander all over your chemistry homework and silently invade that box of candy hidden in your drawer.

We'll let you in on a little secret, though which is probably already obvious. It's not you that attracts these little visitors. It's that delicious chocolate cake you brought from home or the jar of jelly you forgot to put the top on. There are ways to prevent ants. First eat everything you have quickly and leave no crumbs to tempt them. Perhaps a wiser method would be to lock your goodies up in a tin box. An ingenious method to outsmart them is to fill a pan with water and set a jar in it. When you put your box of cookies on top of that, "peewee" will have to swim to get them.

If they still come around despite everything, you'll just have to decide whether your love for food is greater than your dislike

Disney Appliques Go Back To School

SCHOOL DAZE—and no wonder—what with high school girls and their college sisters all over the country busy with 'Disney-doodles'. What is 'Disney-doodling'? It's a way of using all of those lovable characters in embroidery or applique to dress up your old clothes or to make your new ones so original that they'll rate a line in the gossip column of your school paper.

'Disney-doodling' started when the Simplicity Pattern Company made these figures available for the first time in transfers, appliques and patterns. From that moment on the whole Disney family started going to school. Now they come into class one at a time appliqued in a huge motif on the back of coke jackets or they come in groups running willy-nilly across the back and front and down the sleeves of swagger coats. They've gone to girls' heads . . . perching proudly on the tails of stocking caps. They've stolen into the pockets of skirts and jackets and have ambushed jacket lapels as conversation pieces. They've blossomed forth on the tops of mittens and swing bravely from school bags. It's the era of higher education for the Disney family—they love school and school loves them!

In some schools they've even started Bambi Clubs for girls devoted to that soft-eyed warm-hearted fawn. As a member you take an oath that you'll take him wherever you go . . . wearing him proudly on your sleeve or slacks or skirts or whatever. In a mid-west school, girls now go out on 'Duck Dates' taking Donald along as chaperon embroidered on their socks. Mickey Mouse and Minnie have become symbols for groups trying to bring about better boy-and-girl relations and they wear this ideal couple as their emblem. Bambi the Gay Caballero, Thumper and Dumbo all have their faithful followers and are faithful followers.

Of course, the reason they've become such a fad is that Simplicity has seen to it that they are so easy to use. The applique is easy to follow and requires no special material . . . just odd scraps that you pick up in the family sewing basket. The more colors you use and the more varied the scraps of material . . . the better.

The transfers are as simple as ABC. You merely buy your assortment . . figure out where you want to use them and on what . . . and that don't press them on with a hot iron and embroider over the outline.

There's a whole world of out-and-out ways that you can adapt them to help you get a name in the school fashion file. You're limited only by your imagination . . . for they require practically no cash outlay . . . just dreaming.

horses, from sleigh bells to calendars, the trend was definitely equestrian this Christmas, and a fine selection we have to prove it.

TID-BITS

The Madam was s'posed to show up at one time or another this week-end . . . . or so we'd been led to believe. But none of the oats were missing, and things were fairly quiet, so we judged she didn't make it. Besides . . . nobody saw her around.

It's a little soon for any real news, but keep listenin' . . . and if you hear anybody yelling, "Whoa, Spud!" you'll know things are well under control!

Disney-Doodles

Bright spots for darkling hours! The famous Disney family on a neat fitting, cotton or duck swagger coat. Tailored to perfection and designed by Simplicity to be worn with everything. This coat is guaranteed to rate a piece in the school gossip column if you embroider your favorite film-family willy nilly over the back, front, and sleeves. The transfers are easy to use . . . . Just press them on with a hot iron and then get to work with embroidery needle and bright yarn to create the most amusing fashion tale of the semester.

Black Rates Best On Every Occasion

By LELA BOULDIN

All dressed up and nowhere to go! Well, that's what some seem to think, but all of us won't agree. There's always something to dress up for at S. T. C. Every Sunday the girls go to church dressed up in their best "bib and tucker." Black dresses seem to be the favorite for every occasion. There are various styles of dresses. The low necklines are becoming to most girls, but for the girl who has a long face, a high neck with a frill or bow can be worn. The extended shoulder sleeve was inspired by Madame Chiang during her recent visit to this country. Three-quarter length sleeves look "mighty pretty", too. The dresses with drape fronts are seen with the draped part in the center waistline or to the left with a ripple down the side.

Then, too, there are teas or parties to attend at which time everyone likes to look her best. Those black dresses come in handy again. Soft shades of wool or flannel are popular also just as long as you look neat and well-dressed. White flannel dresses are "just right" for such an occasion as well as pastel gabardine dresses, if you prefer tailored dresses, then that's quite all right, just so they aren't too plain.

When we have an informal dance here at S. T. C., the girls like to dress up. Well, who wouldn't, for we certainly look our best when we're well dressed!

Another time when we have a chance to wear those dressy black dresses or pretty woolen dresses is when we have a lyceum. Two piece dress suits are becoming, too. Gabardine dresses are very pretty in those pastel shades, gold, aqua, pink, light blue, or whatever color is most becoming to you. So, we see that dressy dresses are an important part of the college girls' wardrobe.

Dr. Merritt

the campus is beautiful and there is a building for students of every nation. It was not long however, before the army in its usual style moved him downtown to barracks.

Among other things he was always able to go to many concerts, etc., for there were as many as 30 stage shows (which he didn't particularly care for since they were all in French), a choice of concerts and the opera, and American movies most of which were four or five years old. There was always something interesting to do in that exciting metropolis. While he was there the French government began to put the art back into the Louvre and there was an exhibtion every two weeks; there was also an exhibition of modern art in September 1945 by the leading modern artists. He expressed his pleasure in having seen the things we so often read about.

He said that of all our cities Paris is comparable only to Washington because of its broad arenas, its monuments, and the closeness of tall buildings. One of the things Dr. Merritt particularly enjoyed he had to do alone because most of the soldiers are aversioned to walking when they don't have to, that was "poking his nose" into quaint quarters and doing some "exploring." Toward the end of his stay he got out of Paris and went to Chartres to the cathedral. On one occasion he had a six day trip by air to Rome and Naples, and said it was "quite inspiring and an exciting experience." Most of all he enjoyed an open air opera held in the ruin of a Roman bath. While on this Italian trip he saw the ruins of Pompeii and the Isle of Capri although he didn't get out to it. One of the most amazing things to him was that all the food is sold in stalls set up in the street. Here he told us about stopping at a fish still because a squid caught his eye. As he stood there looking and wondering if people really ate the things, the render picked the squid and handed it to him.

"I hope I didn't step back and look startled," he said "nevertheless, I didn't put out my hand to take the squid."

All of these little incidents he has written in his letters home in order to refresh his memory when he wants to tell his grandchildren what he did overseas. In closing he said that although he followed the same line of work he didn't feel that he had accomplished much since most of the evidences of his work were gone already. We take that to mean that he's glad to be back, and he's not one bit happier than we are to have him back at S. T. C. again.

Just Looking Thanks

By LELA BOULDIN

Just looking around the campus to see who decided to spend their week-end abroad, we find Barbara Bragg, Margaret Harvie, Azelle Hutt, Jane Johnson, Frances Lee, Mary Ann Morris, Connie Ozlin, Berkeley Richardson, Shirley Roberts, and Mary Yates in Richmond.

Finding fun in Petersburg were George Anne Lewis, Betty Minetree, Katherine Parham, Mildred Spain, Dolores Duck, and Joyce Hill.

Flashing the spotlight on Norfolk we find Ethel Harrison, Corinne Baker, Carol Jenkins, Marget Lohr, Judith Relch, Eloise Stancell, and Mary Ellen Temple.

In Lynchburg were Anna Barbara Cosey, Constance Loving, and Caroline Moore.

Lawrenceville attracted Dorothy Chambers, Alice Smith, Jane Browder, and Pauline Carter.

Visiting in West Point were Jane Page, Clare Wailes, Margaret Thompson, Stewart Buford, Sutton Bland, Virginia Ford, Constance Young, and Nannie Sours.

Seeking excitement in Roanoke were Rachel Brugh, Phyllis Fulcher, and Doris Olivia Funck.

Hitting the trail for Blackstone were Betty Spindler and Rachel Thomas.

Finding fun in other places were: Shirley Connelly in Gladys; Bobby Mitchell in Crewe; Margaret Pearson and Elizabeth Sheets in Hopewell; Martha Wells and Carmen Low in Charlottesville; Nancy Whitehead and Mary Jane King in Victoria; Cornelia Davidson and Betsy Brown in Lexington; Nancy M. Taylor in Keysville; Hilda Abernathy in Cochran; Dorothy Cummings in Williamsburg; Virginia Yonce in Eagle Rock; Norma Soyars in Rice; Doris Robertson and Jean Rock in Dillwyn; Mabel Park in Boydton, Claudine Guthrie in Sunnyside; Martha Hatcher in Burkeville; and Betty Ellis in Crewe.

UNO Is Discussed

Trusteeship Council and it helps elect the judges of the International Court.

The International Court of Justice, described by Connie Newman is the judicial branch of the UNO and all member nations are automatically members. It provides for a peaceful settlement of legal disputes between nations. It consists of fifteen judges, no two from the same country. No nation is forced to submit a dispute to the Court, but once a case is submitted, its decisions must be accepted by all parties concerned and the decisions will be enforced

Ann Owen in discussing the Security Council, said that it was the body on which rests final responsibility for preserving world peace and security. It has eleven seats, five of which will be occupied permanently by the United States, Great Britain, Russia China, and France, and the others to be rotated among smaller nations. It is to be in session at all times ready to take immediate action. The Council also helps elect judges to the International Court, recommends to the Assembly who should be made Secretary-General, and makes recommendations to the Assembly on the admission of new members and the suspension of privileges or the expulsion of members.

The Secretariat consists of a Secretary-General and a large staff to do the office work of the UNO. It will arrange the meetings, provide them with necessary clerks, and secretaries, publish reports, and keep all documents and records. This was reviewed by Betty Palret.

The Economic and Social Council, one of the most important agencies of the UNO because it is concerned with remedying so many of the conditions which cause international disputes, was reported on by Sara Rawles. It will study and make reports on trade, tariffs, food nutrition, and laboring conditions.

The Trusteeship Council, according to Anne East, is designed to oversee the administration of backward areas put under its jurisdiction which do not have self-government.

Atomic Age Brings New Note Board

Once upon a time there lived in a school an old white mantlepiece. For years, in fact, since it was first placed there it had a very important place in the school. Upon its smooth white back rested notes and announcements of every description and every tense of excitement. Then, in 1945 (the beginning of the atomic age) the shining white began to become a little chipped and cracked—the weight of the little slips of paper had caused strains and cracks, and so it was provided with two helpers—a bulletin board outside the Dean's office and board strung with wires by the post office. Of course, the majestic old fellow was left with the most honorary duties—holding the telegrams, special deliveries, and telephone calls. The Dean's board contains her summons, and the board in Post Office hall an assortment of everything else.

This board is definitely curious and interesting looking. At first glance you'd think it was a new way of bringing the students attention to their alphabet or maybe to teach those who haven't learned yet, for it is a big dark board with the letters down the left side. From each letter, a wire extends across the board. Bet if the three little kittens saw them, they'd proceed to hang up their mittens. In fact, the little wires look as though they were hung out to dry for little white slips of paper are strung all across the board.

The alphabet almost makes possible the filing of each note so if in a hurry, just cast your eye on your letter and follow it out as you speed by.

Our thanks to the providers of the board—we assure you it will get plenty of use.

Danzig, Brall Appear Here Thursday Night

Musicians Give Lyceum Program

Dorothy Danzig, pianist and Ruth Brall, contralto, will be the guest artists appearing on the lyceum program January 24 at 8:15 o'clock in the college aditorium.

Miss Danzig attended Vassar College. While there she was instructed to take up music as a profession. After graduating from Vassar, she went to New York and studied music with world renowned teachers. After presenting a successful recital at the town hall, she came under the management of Miss Erminine Kahn. Her father, Allison Danzig is connected with the New York Times. Her numbers are taken from the classic and modern school of music.

Miss Brall is a newcomer to the concert field. She was introduced recently to a large audience in Washington, D. C. There she won such praise that is rarely given the most reasoned artist. Since then Miss Brall has appeared in concerts in the east, oratorio performances, and broadcasts.

Among the selections included on the program are Bach's "My Heart Ever Faithful," Haydn's "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair," and Mozart's "Alleluia" sung by Miss Brall.

Part two selections included are Mozart's "Sonata in A Major", "Theme with Variations," "Menuetto", "Rondo Alla Turca", and Brahm's "Capriccio in C sharp minor" played by Miss Danzig.

Miss Brall will sing Schubert's "Stanchen", Brahm's "Mine Liebe ist grun" and "Oh! Mon Fils" by Meyerbeer for part three.

The fourth part includes Chopin's "Nocturne in C sharp minor." "Prelude in G minor" by Chopin, Milhaud's "Saudes de Brazil," "Concovade" and "Mumare". Mignone's "Lenda Brileira" and Khatchatourian's "Toccata" as played by Miss Danzig.

The final division includes Bone and Fenton's "Wind in the Tree Tops," Bantock's "Silent Strings", Maginski's "The Pasture", and Pedger's "The Star."

The accompanist for Miss Brall will be Alfred H. Strick, professor of music.

13 Students Make Straight "A" Report For Fall Quarter

Eleven seniors made straight "A" reports for the fall quarter ending December 1945, according to an announcement by Miss Virgilia Bugg, registrar. One freshman and one junior also made the same record.

The seniors are Mildred Altice, Rock Mount; Jane Anderson, Farmville; Carolyn Bobbitt, South Hill; Betty Brothers Suffolk; Emily Carper, Rocky Mount; Dorothy Cummings, Charlottesville; Evelyn Grizzard, Drewryville; Rosa Hill, Windsor; Evelyn Pierce, Greensboro, N. C.; Mildred Shiflett, Palmyra, and Virginia Treakle, Farmville.

"Redeeming the junior class is Margaret Skelton," stated Dr. J. L. Jarman in chapel Thursday. Mary Ann Adams, Lynchburg, was the single freshman to make straight A's.

Spanish Club Holds Monthly Meeting

The Spanish Club held its monthly meeting Monday, January 14 in the audio-visual room.

After the regular business meeting, the club had a song fest. The members sang several old favorites after which they undertook to learn a round in Spanish. June Cregar, sophomore from Tazewell, led the group.

Wheeler Selects 'Outward Bound'

H.-S. C. Students To Participate

The spring play of the S. T. C. Dramatic Club has been selected, and will be presented on March 9th (Founder's Day) according to Miss Leola Wheeler, director. The play will be "Outward Bound," by Sutton Vane, and is a play in three acts, the plot of which can not be revealed without spoiling the pleasure of the prospective audience. The cast of this spring's production has been set only tentatively, according to Miss Wheeler.

Of interest to the student bodies of both S. T. C. and H.-S. C. is the fact that this spring, for the first time since the war started, the Hampden-Sydney boys will participate in the S. T. C. production. The H.-S. Jongleurs used to take part in each play here at S. T. C, but because of the almost depleted civilian student body after Army inductions and the Navy V-12 unit became effective, they have been unable to do so within the past four years. Not even this past fall were the boys well enough organized to take much interest in the plans here at Farmville.

Plans for the play have been a little delayed due to casting and selection problems, but rehersals have begun, and according to Miss Wheeler are coming along as well as could be expected.

It has been the custom for several years to present the spring play on the night of S. T. C. Founders Day. Last year's production, "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was one of the most successful plays ever put on by Miss Wheeler and the girls of the Dramatic Club.

Stokes and Camper Will Attend Meeting

Agnes Stokes, president, and Miss Pauline Camper, adviser, will represent the Beta Epsilon chapter of Kappa Delta Pi at the National Convocation in Milwaukee, March 11-13.

Kappa Delta Pi is a national honor society in education. The Beta Epsilon chapter was formed on this campus in 1926. Its membership consists of students interested in the activities of the teaching profession but is confined to students of the junior and senior years whose scholarship ranks in the upper fourth of that of the student body.

Girls To Canvass Halls for National Clothing Drive

Jane Philhower is in charge of the Victory Clothing Drive which started on this campus today and will continue through Friday. This is a branch of the drive conducted by the United National Clothing Collection, Inc., which began January 7.

Girls will be around on each hall to collect the clothing on Wednesday and Thursday nights and boxes will be placed at various places in the halls until Friday afternoon.

The goal for the drive, which is nationwide, is 100,000,000 garments. Contributors are invited to enclose "goodwill" letters with their clothing gifts. The UNRRA pays the cost of transportation of clothing to the needy countries overseas.

S. T. C.-er Dreams of Atomic Age In Early Morning "Cat Nap"

Tell me, sorcerer, what my future in the atomic age holds for me. This I demand of the ancient sage as he bent over his radiant sphere.

My child, he replied. The ball foretells of great miracles which will befall you. I see in my glass a building of serene outward appearances, however, the inside reveals it to be something on the order of an institute for unbalanced young women.

Now what on earth can that have to do with my fortune? I thought. It sounds more like something out of my past. May I see too? I have a number of acquaintances that might be there. Heavens to Betsy! That's no insane asylum, that's second floor main at S. T. C. Hold on a minute, I'd like to see how my roommates are getting along without my sobering influence.

How in the Sam Hill did I get in there too? I can't be in two places at once or can I?

Silence little one, commanded the wise man. Let the ball tell you it's story.

Gently and silently the image rose from the depths of the crystal 'til I was once again in my own room. Somewhere in the fog a bell rang. D--n 7:00 bell and time to get up. Who wants anything to eat at this unearthly hour anyway—wake me up in time for class. No sooner had I said this and turned over than the very air seemed to form hands, the lights went on, the window slammed shut, and I was thrown rudely out of bed onto the floor. Two hands picked me up and I was dressed as though I were helpless. When I gathered my wits I looked around to see how many people had been called in to give me third degree, but my roommates were the only ones there and they were as bewildered as I.

It must be something out of that little box you brought back from the fortune tellers they told me. I didn't remember even coming back let alone bringing any box back with me, however, I deemed it wiser not to say so at the time. Nevertheless, there it was.

ATOMIC ENERGY—HANDLE WITH CARE

With a warning like that on the top none of us were so anxious to examine it. I handed it to one who handed it to the other. Thence back to my unwilling hands because it was mine. It seems that we weren't in any hurry to join our honorable ancestors just yet. Now that it's here, I might as well look at it to see what the box is for.

On examining the inside we found it to be fitted with complicated dials and I being one to try

Ellis, Lee, Bralley Are Chosen As May Day Committee Heads

BETTY ELLIS

FRANCES LEE

May 4 Set As Date For Annual Event

Betty Ellis, senior from Coral Gables, Florida, and Frances Lee, senior from Richmond, were selected as co-chairmen for the 1946 May Day program at a meeting of the student body last Wednesday night. Assisting them as business manager will be Lucy Bralley, senior from Richmond.

Betty was dance chairman of the May Day committee last year. She has also served as president of Orchesis for two years and has served during her sophomore year as sports editor of the Rotunda. Frances is president of the Athletic Association, a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, and a member of Orchesis. She served as assistant to the general May Day chairman last year.

Lucy is president of the Student Standards committee and is poetry editor of the Colonnade.

Nancy Whitehead, junior from Kecoughtan, was selected as dance chairman for the May Day. She is editor-in-chief of the Colonnade, a member of Orchesis, and active in class activities. Selected to head the costume committee are Anne Shufflebarger, junior from Bluefield, and Doris May, junior from Roanoke. Anne is head of the costume department of the Dramatic Club and a member of the College Choir, while Doris is a member of the home economics club.

Heading the transportation committee is Kitty Parham, junior from Petersburg, and in charge of the staging properties will be Pat Carter, junior from Bluefield. Kitty is also serving this year as secretary of the house council and as junior class representative on student government. Pat is assistant head of staging of the Dramatic Club.

Detailed plans for May Day have not been made as yet, however, the date is set for May 4.

"March of Dimes" Campaign Turns Into Class Contest

According to Raymond H. French, chairman of the March of Dimes Campaign, the campaign on campus has been turned into a contest between the four classes in school. The purpose of the campaign is to raise money to help in the treatment of infantile paralysis victims.

The money will be counted at the end of the contest which terminates January 31, and five dollars will be given to the class which has contributed the greatest sum of money.

This campaign began on the campus Monday, January 14. Half of the money that is contributed in this contest will go to national headquarters and half will go for local work. Six residents of Prince Edward county were stricken with the disease this fall; three of these victims were students at State Teachers College.

Last year the college and training school raised over $200. Mr. French stated that the campaign was progressing slower this year than last year.

Sophomores Elect Production Head, Name Committee

Beatrice "Bebe" Geyer of Chatham has been elected general chairman of the Sophomore Production which will be presented by the sophomore class Wednesday night, February 20. Serving under her as a general committee are Virginia Yonce, Hildrian Suttle, Mary Rattray, Virginia Tindall, and Joyce Hill.

Various sub-committees have also been appointed. They are: dance committee with Hildrian Suttle, chairman, and Clark Clark, assistant; properties, Virginia Bailey, chairman, Bet Epperson, assistant; costumes, Mary Rattray, chairman, Norma Howard, assistant; make-up, Betty Scroggins, chairman, Marian Hahn, assistant; food, Mary Ann Morris, chairman, Peepsie Brooks, assistant; music, Virginia Tindall, chairman; script, Betsy Scott, chairman; finance, Doris Ballance; lighting, Janie Hanks; publicity, Virginia Yonce, chairman; Sue Davis, assistant; and staging, Millie Shepherd, chairman; Betty Gill, assistant.

Jeffers Returns After Leave Absence

Dr. George W. Jeffers has returned to this college as professor of biology, according to an announcement by S. M. Holton, Jr., director of personnel. Dr. Jeffers has been on leave of absence for fifteen months, conducting a study for the Chesapeake Bay Fisheries. Up to the time of his leave of absence, he had been in the biology department since 1927.

Mr. Paul Davisson, who taught in the biology department last quarter, has returned to the University of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, where he is working on his doctor's degree. Mr. Davisson is expected to return to S. T. C. in the spring quarter, at which time he will resume his teaching duties again. The department then will be staffed with three persons, the third being Dr. Robert Brumfield.

Sophomores Select Bagley Secretary

Mary Lou Bagley of Virginia Beach was elected secretary of the sophomore class at a class meeting held Friday night, January 18. She replaces Anna Kucera, Roanoke, who did not return this quarter. Mary Lou was treasurer of the freshman class last year.

Business Training Group Meets Here

Farmville State Teachers College and the State Department of Education sponsored the first area conference in Virginia on Business Education. The morning session of the conference was held in the auditorium of Student Building, and was presided over by Merle L. Landrum

Members of the S. T. C. Commercial Club were in charge of registration. Dr. Jarman welcomed the group at the first session Saturday, January 19, at 10:00 A. M.

A. L. Walker, Supervisor of Education of the State Department of Education was the first speaker during the morning session. His topic was "Goals for Business Education in the Years to Come". Following this address, Charles Saeger, Associate Principal of George Washington High School, Danville, spoke on "The Remaining Eighty Percent." He said the high school programs were set up to accommodate the 20 percent who will attend college but had a tendency to neglect the 80 percent who will not attend college.

Next on the program was a Business Education panel. Dr. J. S. Turille, head of the Business Education department, Madison College, served as chairman of the panel. Other members included A. L. Walker, Supervisor of Office Education of the State Department of Education, Richmond; E. F. Burmahln, Director of Business Education, Lynchburg; and Charles Saeger, associate principal of George Washington High School, Danville. This panel offered possible solutions of class-

Cooperation Required for Effective Government

"The persons who know most at any one time about actual conditions of the college life and work are the students themselves." They not only know conditions but they are also vitally affected by them, and they think about them and discuss them. It is, therefore, justifiable to redirect student thought towards an organization whose effectiveness depends in such a large sense upon the concerted efforts of every student in our college.

In order to arrive at any proper evaluation of the effectiveness of Student Government at S. T. C., we must have criteria for judging our situation. As a basis upon which to begin a formulation, the standards of the National Association of Student Councils are given below with application to our own system:

1. A student council shall possess power, authority and responsibility.

The constitution of the association definitely delegates powers, with authority for enforcement, and responsibility to the president of the college and to the student body here at Farmville.

2. The organization must accept democratic principles in its operations.

Again in our situation, the constituton and by-laws establish a democratic procedure which is applied in practice. The method of voting, for example, secures about a one hundred percent ballot, a real fundamental for any truly representative government.

3. The student government shall be supported by the faculty and administration by a true understanding of the council's role.

Although the faculty may wholeheartedly give its approval of student government, there is a decided need here for better faculty comprehension of its relationship to student government. The recent action of the council in selecting a faculty adviser, who may serve as liaison between faculty and student government, indicates a step in this direction. This does not mean a trend towards faculty control of student government; it is a step towards furthering cooperation on the part of the faculty.

4. Student government must be a soundly functioning organization.

In noting the broad coverage of the duties of student government as outlined in the handbook, it seems questionable whether any group can deal with so many problems effectively. Because of the unweildiness of the many problems and because of the time limitation, our student council members are in danger of being too severely overtaxed to function soundly.

5. Student government shall have prestige and must enlist the ready cooperation of the student body.

Our college is proud of its able student leaders whose influence not only lends an atmosphere of dignity to the college but encourages the students to respect school rules rather than to fear its penalties. And yet are there some of you students who fail to attend your very own student body meetings—some who violate rules established by your own group to make college life happier for all?

From this brief survey, we recognize that our student government measures favorably with the accepted standards of the National Association of Student Councils. However, for effective student government it's more expedient that you individually—(not your officers, not the faculty nor the administration) play your part wholeheartedly. Let me urge you to fairly appraise your own contribution to effective student government here at Farmville S. T. C.

March of Dimes Needs Your Utmost Support

The March of Dimes Campaign is now underway on our campus. The proceeds of this campaign will be used in the treatment of the dread disease, infantile paralysis.

We, on this campus, have a personal interest in this campaign. Three of our students were stricken with the dread disease during the fall quarter.

This county has probably given a little less than $2,000 to the polio drive since it began eight years ago, yet the national organization sent Prince Edward County $5,000 to care for its paralysis victims of the past epidemic. The national fund stands ever ready to back up the local fund in case of an emergency. And who provides the national fund—our school and our county, and other schools and counties all over America. So you can see whom your money has helped—your friends and fellow classmates.

The March of Dimes was started by our late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was a victim of polio. By putting his vast popularity behind the project, it grew until a huge fund is being raised each year. The real objective of this drive is to finance the long and costly treatment of emergency cases that could not possibly be financed any other way.

Half of the money received goes to the national infantile paralysis fund, and the other half is kept by the local chapter to be used in treating this disease.

This fund would be worthy of our support, even if we didn't have a personal interest in the project. However, since we do we must give even more generously.

If we all could realize the costliness of treating polio, we would contribute every dime we could spare. Your dime added with many others can help supply braces, treatments, and medicines for many patients.

If you have not given—give; and if you can give more, please do. It is not too late. Unfortunately there will probably be people for too many years to come who need your help in this way. Maybe they will not be your personal friends and loved ones next time, but they will be some one's.

In the words of the great humanist who began the fight against this dread disease, "The well-being of our youth is our foremost concern. Their health and happiness our enduring responsibility — The good cause must go on!"

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

"Mid ice and snow
They come and go"—

With a flash! and quite a big flash from that sparkler now adorning Betty Gillespie's third finger, left hand. Fruen is certainly one lucky man!

Say, maybe Edith Colbert can tell us when it became the fashion to wear a frat pin on a rat cap.

It was bravely, but cheerily that Libby and Irene bade their two young men farewell—as they set sail for—well, that's the $64 question.

Martha Ann White seems to be decidedly taken with that Randolph-Macon man, as she practically lives on the road.

And was it good to see that ideal two come together once again—Margaret and George.

The long talked-of and eagerly-awaited event is here or rather almost here at last—Charlie is back in the dear ole U. S. A. Let's hope Virginia can survive all the excitement, because at this point she's on the verge of a powerful heart attack. "It has certainly been a long time, Ginny!"

And then there's the talk about Anna Headlee and Lucille Upshur. It all began with a letter and a walk to the downtown postoffice. And somehow two mighty attractive men became involved.

Well, "Weetsie", that six foot four inches man was evermore sharp looking. You've certainly got an eye for the men!

And who had the gayest weekend of all? Julia and Alice Ann—only they began all over again on Monday with two more men. Didn't you see those two Marines land?

"Red" and "Tobey" found all of the questions and answers on the little heart mints last Sunday night at Fellowship hour!

Hum, how about that cute man with Mary Helmer! Hubba! Hubba!

Did little Treakle have a big time on Norman's leave?

Lee Ewing had a great time looking up to her date all weekend. He's six foot three.

Cute girls on campus last weekend were Elaine Holder and Edna Earle Waters, who not only had sailors but white carnations to boot.

Becky Williams is floating on air since all those dates with Ben, humm.

It's time to "plow to press" so must grab my skates and dash —so long!

Y News

The freshmen will sign up for Y. W. C. A. commitees in the near future. They are asked to be thinking about the committees and to be sure to sign up for the one which they think they will like best and on which they will do the most good.

The Methodist girls announce that members of their group will attend a conference at Natural Bridge next week-end. They also announce that they will have suppers every other Sunday night and that one will be held this Sunday.

Dr. C. Gordon Moss has officially become the adviser of the Canterbury Club. The Club is sponsoring College Work Calendars. Anyone interested may obtain copies from the members.

The Baptist students ended their observation of Vocational Emphasis Week by a special Life Commitment Program at B. T. U. last Sunday night.

The Presbyterian College Girls Sunday School class was entertained at a tea last Sunday afternoon.

The theme for the week in Prayers is "Harken Unto His Voice." The topic for tonight is "The Peace of God," tomorrow the topic will be "His Abiding Presence," and Friday the topic will be "Finding and Following Him."

Basketball Begins

Voice of Our Readers

Dear Editor:

War did its worst to the children. They cry to us in terror and pain from among the ruins of their world. Millions of children need clothing not only to protect them from cold and sickness but to wrap their sad little bodies in love and security. Their parents have not even rags to share, the sick are without bedclothing and babies are wrapped in paper and burlap. But no one has clothes to give them. No one but us. We can't even imagine walking in snow without shoes or sleeping on hard cold ground without blankets. We have always had warm clothing—some of us, more than we need. So let's not be selfish and stingy, we don't mean to be, we just don't take time out to help. Let's all give as much as we can to the clothing drive this week. Clothing we consider old can bring new life to them.

What Can You Spare That They C'an Wear?

Head of Clothing Drive

Dear Editor:

Why can't we have more musical programs in student day chapel?

The choir and choral club could provide music once in a while. The program could be varied with different groups singing each time.

Soloists always make a big hit with the students. In a troubled world, music will prove an invaluable help to soothe nerves and help one to relax.

Our choir and choral club with the various a'capellas have always presented beautiful programs.

Popular music would be fine, but more classical selections are what we need. I'm sure the college choir and choral club would be glad to do their part.

So, how about it?

Weather Changes STC College Days

By BETTY MINTON

The weather we have been having lately has been that type of weather which offers variety between the extremes of weather.

Emerson had the situation in writing penned in his poem "Snowstorm", these words:

"Delayed all friends shut out, the housemates sit
Around the fireplace inclosed
In the tumultuous privacy of a storm".

Perhaps the weather has affected us for even the juniors have taken to playing "Jacks" for amusement in these days of snow covered ground.

The opening of the swimming pool this week will warrant its use. Those people who are interested in getting physically fit will find going swimming is just the thing to get them in shape for the coming of spring sports.

Do even as the freshmen do when falling weather comes again—knit; that is, if you can knit.

For some a change in the weather proves an opportune time to catch up on needed rest, to pursue the adventures of a favorite book, to work a Ouiji board to consult the future, to listen to

Varsity Team Plays William & Mary Soon

24 Girls Make Basketball Squad

Farmville State Teachers College varsity basketball team will play William and Mary varsity squad in the S. T. C. gym Friday, February 15. Other game dates are only tentative, and they will be announced later.

The following girls were chosen as members of the S. T. C varsity team, seniors are Margaret Orange Richmond; Lillian Elliott, Farmville; Louise Blane, Alton; Peggy T. Ross, Onley; and Rosa Hill, Windsor. Juniors are Margaret Lohr, Brightwood; Margaret Elett, Jennings Ordinary; Sue Hundley, Suffolk; Anne Hauser, DeWitt; Lou Baker, Roanoke; Nellie Smith, Norfolk; Nancy Parrish, Manassas; Betty Parrish, Manassas; and Kitty Sue Bridgforth, Kenbridge. Sophomores on the team include Alice Ann Abernathy, Stony Creek; Jean Bentley, Roanoke; Betty Burchett, Suffolk; Jane Burchett, Suffolk; and freshmen are Joanne Sterling, Melfa. Sue Ward, Boulevard; Martha Gillium, Charlottesville; Venie Buchanan, Grundy; Barbara Boyle, Roanoke, and Helen Londeree, Scottsville.

Nellie Smith is general basketball manager, for this year, with Alice Ann Abernathy assisting her.

Orchesis Banquet Planned For Tonight

The date for the annual Orchesis banquet has been set for Wednesday night, January 23 in the college tea room. Members of Orchesis who will be present are: Corrine Baker, Betty Bibb, Emily Carper, Claire Clarke, Margaret Elett, Betty Ellis, Lois Fuller, Helen Lacy, Frances Lee, Betty Minetree, Anne Motley, Betty Parrish, Jean Parry, Doris Ramsey, Berkley Richardson, Esther Shevik, Nannie Sours, Hildrian Suttle, and Nancy Whitehead.

Guests at the banquet will be: Miss Olive T. Iler, Miss Mary Dabney, Miss Mary Barlow, Mr. and Mrs. S. L Graham, Dean Smith, Dr. J. L. Jarman, Connie Ozlin, and Miss Emily Kauzlarich, faculty sponsor of Orchesis.

The town of Santa Claus, Indiana, with 250 population is the only town in the world bearing the name of Santa Claus.

Apprentices Issued Bids to Orchesis

Candidates Show Modern Dance Skill

New apprentices were issued bids to the Orchesis dance group Tuesday, January 22. The following girls received bids to the club: Betty Adams, Beatrice Geyer, Carolyn Grimes, Virginia Marshall, Peggy Moore, Mary Ann Morris, Connie Ozlin, Evelyn Patterson, Marguerite Reid, Betsy Scott, Mildred Shepherd, and Virginia Yonce.

In order that a girl may receive a bid to Orchesis, she must show skill in modern dance. After she receives her bid, she must remain an apprentice one quarter of modern dance, and she must participate in two programs before being initiated.

Present officers of the dance group are: president, Betty Ellis; Emily Carper, secretary; Esther Shevick, treasurer; Nancy Whitehead, costumes; and Frances Lee historian.

room problems presented to them.

The afternoon session met in the Audio-Visual room of the library at 2:30 p m. Dr Edgar Johnson presided over this session. James W. Brown, State Supervisor of the Bureau of Teaching Materials of the State Department of Education, Richmond, spoke on "The Use of Audio-Visual Equipment in Business Education." Dr. Johnson directed the projection and evaluation of Business Education sound films.

Members of the program committee were Christy Snead, Mrs Alice C. Wynne, Miss Ottie Craddock, Mrs. Zita Hanford, Miss Olive Parmetner, Mrs. Mary Witcher, and Merle L. Landrum.

Mr. Landrum would like to express his thanks to Dr. Jarman, Dr. Johnson, the professors, instructors, and students who attended and participated in making the conference a success.

Nearly 200 children of school age were killed in traffic accidents in the state of Ohio last year.

HOWDY

If you get tired of our not having any news to write about, think about us. Snow, ice, sleet . . . everywhere we look, there's slush and mush and nasty weather. Maybe the horses don't like standing around in the stables all day, but they sure haven't got anything on us. Of all the Sundays we used to spend before we were allowed to ride on Sundays, we just don't see how we stood it. Gray weekends make for blue spirits . . . and no swift canter possible to cheer us up.

SICK CALL

Indora is really on the "infirmary list" now . . . the Vets operated on her abcessed shoulder last week She was in pretty bad shape, it turned out, but at last reports was doing nicely. She's probably past the stage for blood-poison to threaten any danger, so after we see what the Doc says, we'll pass it on to you, and we hope it'll be good news.

SURPRISE VISIT

Not normally or anything, over a nice logical week-end, but last week right on Wednesday, in the middle of the week, in walked the Madam! It was good, as usual, to have her around. It seems Randolph-Macon was in the midst of having exams and no one had time to ride up there, so Joyce took off and headed for here. Just barely got here, too . . . that was the night the busses were laid off here in Farmville on account of the snow, and were held up for hours, not going in either direction.

NEWS-HAWKS

Ever on the snoop for material, we found out from Hoof-Prints column that some really good stallions are making their way to Virginia for the stud season this year and the next, To quote Mr. Craigie, "Imp. Jacopo, sire of winners of more than $1,100,000, has been bought by a Virginia syndicate, headed by Kenneth Gilpin of Boyce. The 17-year-old brown stallion will make the 1946 season at Cailborne Stud, Paris, Kentucky, and then will be brought to Mrs. George L. Harrison's Blue Ridge Stud, Upperville, for the 1947 season . . . By Jimminy, the top 3-year-old of 1944, has been bought by another syndicate, and wil stand at Walter P. Chrysler's North Wales Stud, Warrenton, The horse is a son of Imp. Pharamond II and Buginarug (a Blue Larkspur mare). It surely does our hearts good to see these fine sires coming to the Old Dominion."

Maybe as small-time riders we don't all keep up with the state or the nationally-famous horses, including racers, as well as we should. Try digging a little deeper into the sports pages now and then and see if you don't find some interesting bits of news you might otherwise have missed.

TID-BITS

We heard B. Bibb reliving a few moments of the one "glorious" ride she's had since Christmas . . . she and Jeanne and Ducky. Too bad Spring can't speed things up a little . . . .Hope you didn't miss the movie the first of the week which featured a short on Arabian horses. Not only were the horses themselves especially appealing (oh, those colts) but the narrative was interesting as well, and of all the beauty we've seen of color photography, none we've seen yet could beat that! . . . Robin was out Sunday morning, early. We don't know who was up, but it was Robin all right.

Well, there's nothing more we can say until the sun comes out and the puddles dry up. Except we wish the weather could be turned off and on like the water faucets!

Stay on the bit, anyway. . . .

LOUISE BLANE'S

On the Ball

Sleet, snow, rain, and hail; all seem to be racing for first place on the S. T. C. campus, and poor ole Sol has had very little chance to show his face. In spite of these factors the gym is in use daily for our athletic interests. Basketball, volleyball, swimming, and modern dance are all progressing rapidly this quarter. Spectators may see those class teams developing on the volleyball and basketball courts, and the varsity basketball team has already been selected.

As it is an established rule in the athletic association's constitution that no varsity member of the basketball squad is eligible to play on class teams, a large number of players outside of the varsity squad are needed for class teams. Come on down to the gym Monday and Wednesday afternoon at 3:50 and get in those eight required practices for a class basketball team. These games will be played during the middle of February, so don't let your practices slip up on you. Get them in as soon as possible!

Volleyball practices are held each Tuesday and Thursday afternoon at 2:50, so get yourself down to the gym at these times.

Don't forget the hours for recreational swimming on Wednesday and Saturday nights at 9:00 o'clock. Even though "the weather outside is frightful" the water in the pool is heated to a very comfortable degree so don't be afraid of "the shivers" by going in the pool.

Cooperation

Since we have so many various class games coming up in the near future, it might be wise to remind you of the importance of cooperation. Let's remember that it is cooperation that makes a team or a class a success. A good team is no better than its weakest player, and can be easily ruined by the lack of cooperation between players or lack of cooperation on the part of the players with the team's coach. Let's remember that with the true spirit of cooperation any battle is half won. The other half is merely the physical effort which anyone of us can put forth. A combination of the two makes for perfection in any game. Remember these pointers and let's have fun in the game.

Student Teachers Rely on Comfort

By EVELYN GRIZZARD

The well dressed teacher is an asset to her classroom, and a pleasure to her students. This goes also, for the student teacher.

What make a well dressed teacher? Well, neatness, suitability, comfort, and all over good grooming constitutes a well dressed person.

Student teachers at S. T. C. will find that skirts and sweaters are indispensable for comfort. These can be in any color or hue, but should be matched as to color combinations.

Suits with sport blouses are good. These are easily changed with blouses of different colors or style or with sweaters.

Wool or gabardine dresses made on simple, neat lines are in good taste. Remember to keep dresses simple and don't pile on the jewelry accessories.

Hose with loafers or saddles, or low open heeled pumps, or spectator pumps in black or brown make good teaching shoes. Remember to not appear as if you are attending a party, and that foot comfort is important to a teacher's disposition. Ill-fitting or too tight shoes can put lines in one's face.

Naturalness and comfort, as well as simplicity and neatness, all working together give a healthy, happy look that will make S. T. C. student teachers a pleasure for their pupils to behold.

Chinese Missionary Speaks In Chapel

The Reverend Mr. Bird Talbot, former Presbyterian missionary to China, spoke to the student body in chapel Thursday, January 17, on China and exhibited many interesting curios from that country.

Mr. Talbot's parents were missionaries to China at the time of his birth. He spent his early years there and later came to the United States. On his graduaton from Hampden-Sydney College, he went to the Louisville Presbyterian Seminary.

After serving a pastorate in the United States for two years, Mr. Talbot went back to China as a missionary. He was there until the time of the war between China and Japan. His family came back early but he stayed until China was actually overrun by the Japanese and all United States Nationals were ordered home. This was before Pearl Harbor, however. He now has a pastorate near Lynchburg, Virginia.

Alpha Kappa Gamma Entertain In Lounge

Members of Alpha Kappa Gamma, national leadership fraternity, entertained at a party on Wednesday night, January 16 at 9:30 o'clock in the Y Lounge in honor of the two new members who were recently bid to membership, Betty Adams and Connie Ozlin.

Officers of the Joan Circle are Anne Martin, president; Shirley Cruser, vice-president; Virginia Treakle, secretary; and Eleanor Bisese, treasurer.

Other members of the circle include Carolyn Bobbitt, Freddie Anne Butt, Minnie Lee Crumpler, Martha Russell East, Margaret Ellett, Lillian Elliott, Margie Hewlett, Frances Lee, Margaret Lohr, Dorothy Overcash, Jacqueline Parden, and Agnes Stokes. Misses Elizabeth Burger and Ruth Gleaves are sponsors for the Joan Circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma.

anything once turned on labeled MEALS. Lo, and behold there I sat at a sumptuous spread being waited on hand and foot. All day long I amused myself with the miraculous toy, taking my lessons in capsule form, having my homework automatically done, and playing pranks on other girls without getting caught.

Suddenly something went wrong and the atom box began to buzz—I took it in both hands and shook it furiously.

"Stop that, you idiot. Do you wants to break your alarm clock all to pieces? Anyway, you'll have to get up. You have just ten minutes to get to class—we didn't wake you earlier because you said you didn't want any breakfast."

some good records, to engage in a game of ping pong or shuffle board in the shower room and the "Rec."

For those who are energetic bad weather may mean there will be a chance to clean out a closet, a chance to wash or iron some garments, and a chance to sew on some buttons that have been torn off in the laundry.

So—the story goes. Each person has a task which gets accomplished and completed when the weather becomes unfriendly, and threatening.

8 Girls Honored By Kappa Delta Pi

Society Recognizes Seniors, Juniors

Eight girls were issued bids to Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society in education, in chapel today, Wednesday, January 30.

Those girls receiving bids are Dorothy Ellen Blair, elementary major from Chatham; Alice Buck, elementary major from Baltimore, Maryland; Audrey Lee Davis, mathematics major from Farmville; and Janice Halstead, mathematics major from Norfolk.

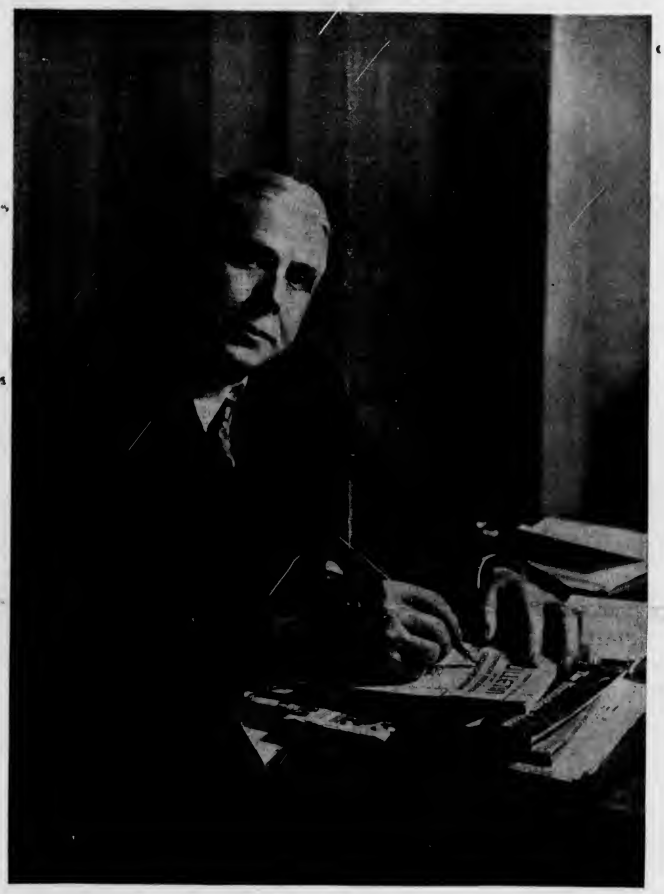
Also Rosa Hill, elementary major from Windsor; Glenn Anne Patterson, elementary major from Kenbridge; Anne Savedge, chemistry major from Littleton, and Nancy Whitehead, art major from Kecoughtan.

The society was organized as a result of a need felt by faculty and students for an organization in recognition of scholarship, character and service. The purpose of the organization is to recognize the highest intellectual achievements and outstanding interest in the field of education of students, to encourage the maintenance of higher professional and scholastic standards, and to contribute by definite forms of service to the intellectual and social life of the college.

The officers of Kappa Delta Pi are president, Agnes Stokes; vice-president, Betty Adams; secretary, Katharine Prebble; and treasurer, Dorothy Cummings.

Students To Elect May Court Tonight

Voting To Be Held Following Dinner



At a meeting of the student body immediately after dinner tonight in the large auditorium, the May queen, maid of honor, and 16 members of the court will be elected by secret ballot. The results of this election will be printed in next week's Rotunda.

Candidates for queen, as a result of yesterday's nominations, include Ann Carter, senior from Cumberland; Jacqueline Pardon, senior from Portsmouth; Beverly Peebles, senior from Hampton; and Peggy T. Ross, senior from Onley. The girl receiving the highest number of votes will reign over the May Day festival as queen, and the girl receiving the second highest number of votes will be the maid of honor in the festival.

Girls who were nominated for the court include Gwen Ackiss, junior from Norfolk; Doris Ballance, sophomore from Norfolk; Rora Lee Bell, senior from Kenbridge; Julia Booher, sophomore, fom Abingdon; Anna Lee Blanton, senior from Cumberland; Peepsie Brooks, sophomore from Farmville; Betty Brothers, senior from Suffolk; Minnie Lee Crumpler, senior from Suffolk; Martha Russell East, junior from South Boston; Margaret Ellett, junior from Jennings Ordinary; Dolly Anne Freeman, freshman from Lawrenceville; Betty Gillespie, sophomore from Grundy; Mary Jane King, junior from Radford; and Frances Lee, senior from Richmond.

Announcement On January 29

Dr. Joseph L. Jarman, 44 years president of State Teachers College, has retired, to become effective June 30, Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, announced yesterday, January 29.

The State Board of Education received the resignation at a special meeting Monday, January 28.

Dr. Jarman was born in Charlottesville, November 18, 1867, and became president of State Teachers College in January, 1902.

He attended Miller Manual Training School where he won the Miller Scholarship to the University of Virginia in competitive examination. Before going to Miller School he attended the Charlottesville public schools.

Upon completing his university course, he went back to Miller School as teacher, but after one year was made professor of natural science at Emory and Henry College. He held this position for 12 years before coming to this college.

Dr. Jarman has been prominent in the field of education for more than half a century and in 1932 was offered the State Superintendency of Public Instruction by Governor Pollard.

He was one of five Virginians honored by the Virginia Educational Association on Thanksgiving day, when the association, for the first time in its history, awarded honorary life memberships to him and four other men, noted in state and national education. Dr. Jarman was called "the great teacher of teachers," in the award address by Francis Chase, now rural education director for the University of Chicago, and formerly executive secretary of the VEA, who returned to Richmond to attend the session. Chase declared Dr. Jarman's "Influence has pervaded thousands of class rooms of the state, and he has exerted a great influence in moulding the citizens" of Virginia. Announcement of the award was

Dr. Jarman Names School Dietician

Mrs. Shelton Retires From College Post

According to an announcement made this week by Dr. J. L. Jarman, president of the college, Mrs. Betty S. Hammond has been appointed college dietician to succeed Mrs. Annie Farrar Shelton, who recently retired because of her health.

Coming to the State Teachers College in the fall of 1928, Mrs. Shelton served as supervisor of the dining room until 1937, at which time, she was made head dietician.

After being in the hospital in Radford for some time, Mrs. Shelton was able to leave and she is now living with her daughter, Mrs. John Whitehead, 802 Tyler Avenue, Radford.

Graduating from Farmville in 1923 with a major in home economics, Mrs. Hammond has also had experience in teaching home economics in the high schools of Virginia and in supervising the Farmville canning project. She came to S. T. C. as supervisor of the dining room in September, 1943 and has served in this capacity until the present. While serving as supervisor of the college dining hall, she also took nutrition courses which were offered in the home economcis department.

Welfare Drive Set For February 5

Y. W. C. A. Group Will Sponsor Drive

February 5, 6, 7, and 8 have been set for the launching of the Peace Welfare Drive on this campus. It is a combined drive for World Student Service Fund and Red Cross which is sponsored by the Pubic Affairs Committee of the Y. W. C. A. The goal set for the United States is $1000.

Miss Wheeler will launch the drive in chapel Tuesday, February 5 by presenting a talk.

A speaker representing the Red Cross will speak on Wednesday.

Reverend H. W. Curry, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Salem, will speak on the World Student Service Fund in chapel Thursday.

Members of the Public Affairs Committee will canvass the halls Wednesday and Thursday nights for individual contributions. Contributions may also be dropped into the chest on the table in the hall at any time from Tuesday until Friday night.

There will be a thermometer in the hall to record the progress of the drive.

Religious Emphasis Week Will Be Held On Campus Soon

Ann Martin, vice-president of the Y. W. C. A. and Chairman of Religious Emphasis Week has announced that Religious Emphasis Week will be held here this year on February 19, 20, and 21.

For the speaker, the Y. Cabinet has asked the Reverend Chas. M. Jones from Chapel Hill, N. C., to appear on the program.

The theme of Religious Emphasis Week will be announced at a later time.

Colonnade To Hold Poetry Contest

February 1 is the date set for the opening of the Colonnade poetry contest, according to an announcement made by Nancy Whitehead, editor-in-chief. The contest will end March 1.

The first and second place winners will receive a prize, and the poems will be published in the March issue of the Colonnade.

Any subject and type may be used. The finished product should be typed and handed in to J. M. Grainger, head of the Department

PGM, College Choir To Sponsor Program Of Special Music

Pi Gamma Mu will sponsor a folk song program during chapel hour, February 13. Members of the college choir will also take part on the program.

The folk songs of many nations will be sung, and a member of Pi Gamma Mu will give the story of each song.

Soloists for the occasion are Esther Shevick, Elaine Holder, Virginia Tindall, Kitty East, Jeanne Button, and Jean Watts.

Dr. J. L. Blair Buck and Dr. Luther Richmond will be guests at this time, Dr. Richmond will sing "All Through the Night."

President Gives Official Notice

Dr. J. L. Jarman announced that the students would not be required to make up the time lost during the extended Christmas holidays.

The exension was due to boiler trouble in the college heating plant. The holidays were extended from January 2 until January 9. Classes began January 10 instead of January 3.

Showboat To Show As Program Theme

Event to Take Place In Rec February 13

That the old time showboat will serve as the theme of the Junior production, has been announced by Grace Loyd, general chairman. This event, which will take place in the "Rec" on Wednesday, February 13, will consist of music and dances typical of the shows held on board showboats. Admission will be 15 cents.

Working under Grace is one general committee. Serving on this are the following girls: Margaret Ellett, Sue Hundley, Nancy Whitehead, Kitty Sue Bridgforth, Hilda Bennett, Gwen Ackiss, Betty Parrish, and Betty Bibb.

This production is a follow-up of the "Gay Nineties", a night club scene presented by the class last year. Nancy Whitehead was in charge of this.

Officers of the junior class are Margaret Ellett, president; Grace Loyd, vice-president; Betty Bibb, secretary; and Anna Headlee, treasurer.

Student Service Fund Needs Support Of Everyone

The World Student Service Fund provides direct relief, rehabilitation and reconstruction for students and professors in war-torn countries around the world. It provides aid where it is most needed on an international, interracial, non-sectarian, non-political basis.

Approximately two millon dollars are needed to satisfy the needs of students in the war-torn countries. Relief goes first to those whose need is most urgent such as those requiring hospitalization.

We can help in the many projects carried on by the World Student Service Fund. Already shipments of food and medical supplies have gone to university centers in Yugoslavia, Belgium, Holland, and France. Tubercular students have received treatment at the University Sanatorium in Switzerland. Student rehabilitation centers are being established throughout the world for the purpose of restoring rundown students to health again. Books and supplies are being shipped to universities. In addition to this, aid still goes to student prisoners of war, refugee students, and dislocated Japanese-American students.

The World Student Service Fund looks toward the creation of a world that recognizes moral responsibilities. The aim is toward a civilization where all men can live together peacefully.

The job ahead is great. Sacrifice and cooperation are needed to successfully complete the task. The responsibility of contributing this money falls to us, students and teachers.

Let's give in order that Chinese and other students might have the simple necessites of life! Won't you do your part?

Students Must Consider Beauty As May Day Need

Tonight we as a student body will be given an opportunity to vote on the girls who will comprise our 1946 May Court. The job is a difficult one as each student would like to see her best friend on the court. Yet, we realize that our personal likes and dislikes must not enter into our decision.

Beauty must be the primary requirement in voting for a girl to represent our college as May Queen and as a member of the court. The situation is a bit different as one votes for the circus court and for Mardi Gras court. In these two cases, the personalities of the candidates enter the picture. This is certainly not so, however in selecting our May Court. Many outsiders yearly attend our May Day celebration which is held on the first Saturday in May. They judge our festival, to a great extent, by the gracefulness, dignity, poise, and attractiveness of the girls who make up the court.

There are here at Farmville, honors for those who excel in scholarship, in athletics, and in activities. These achievements do not and must not enter into the selection of the May court. In choosing the girls, place your emphasis on beauty, paying particular attention to the way a girl walks. If the court is to appear graceful, it must be composed of girls who handle themselves with ease and grace.

Of course, as individuals, we have different conceptions of what enters into the abstract term, beauty. Yet, we all would agree, it seems, on some of the general characteristics of beauty.

Tonight as we cast our votes, let's lay aside all predjudices, all likes and dislikes, and elect the girls who will make us proud to be a part of this college and of our May Day festival.

Gleanings

Mildred Altice

The United Nations Organizations is in its infancy, but three grave problems may be thrown into its lap this coming week. It is possible that Iran may withdraw her charge against Russia because of the known friendly feelings toward Russia of the new Prime Minister of Russia. Some settlement is needed, however, in Greece and Indonesia—the other two problems for the infant.

France's new Prime Minister, Felix Gounin predicts some coming bad news for his country. France through this selection for Prime Minsiter turns squarely to the left. Many people believe that this action is only another indication that eventually all the world will become socialist. Doubtless every country will have its own type of socialism, if by socialism one means a greater regard for more and better economic and social justice.

The settlement between the Chrysler and Ford companies and the U. A. W. of the C. I. O., effected this week, is the one bright spot on the labor-management picture. The members of the C. I. O. and of the A. F. of L. are going to work for the government in the meat packing industries. That's excellent news for all meat eaters. The steel strike, which affects so many other industries, stil continues with no settlement in sight. Reviewing the acts taken so far in this strike, it may be recalled that the C. I. O. steel workers accepted the government's compromise raise in wages but management refused. There is a pervading opinion among many people that some managers in the steel industry desire labor to strike because they believe that many long strikes will wear the patience of the American people that they will become reactionary which is what the steel magnates desire. But will it? Will we fall for that?

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

"Variety is the spice of life" and it was exactly that this week.

For information about the above let's ask Evelyn Grizzard.

Bonnie, was the extended weekend at home caused by that Philadelphia man?

What's this we hear about Connie meeting her man in Richmond. Long time no see—eh!

Is that the guy that belongs to the pin, Nellie?

Does Julie have a new admirer? She received flowers this week.

And then there's that T-A-L-L guy with Nell Scott. What's cooking Nell?

We hear that Betty thinks John Taylor Brickert is the most wonderful thing out—before and after bed-check!

It must be nice, Nancy Mc., to have a town boy hanging around S. T. C.

Those eyes in the back of our heads have seen Norma Soyars and Bobby Bass together—Right, Norma?

Paradise was Jackie's when Kilby came to Farmville.

Among the lonely freshmen, Kathryn Mosteller was not listed this week.

Here's hoping Rosa Hill catches the bride's bouquet at the big celebration!

William Chapman has been seen strolling the campus with Mary Ellen Petty. Is this something new "Petty Ellen?"

That "Wolfe" has that certain gleam in her eyes when Tommy's around—it seems to be quite a case.

"Booher" took the cuts this week-end and took off to Abingdon to see "the one."

Leddie Foster gets around when the Fleet comes in, namely that wolf Bobby Slate.

Kitty Wright's latest is a dentist —Good going Kitty, it might prove to be quite nice in the future.

Vivian Elmore's Harold hit this vicinity not long ago. Notice the sparkler?

Martha Wells seems to be doing the town with Prof. Fred Young of H.-S. C. How does she get around?

Beanie has had that gleam in her eyes since Morris arrived. Keep it up. We think he's plenty cute!

An A-1 good time was had by Alice Hannah this week-end. It seems that Clint is at the top of the list.

And last but not least, orchids to the mid-winter goers at the University!

Shut-eye is scarce, so let's grab a little.

Y News

By ANNA HEADLEE

Freshmen are now active members of the Y. W. C. A. having signed up for the various committees last week. Y. W. C. A. welcomes them.

Next Tuesday marks the beginning of the Peace Welfare Drive on our campus. This drive is embodiment of the annual Red Cross drive and the World Student drive. Put your contribution in the box on the table in the hall.

Methodist girls have been notified of the change in the time of the Wesley Foundation from 6:45 p. m. They are also asked to use the special envelopes distributed by the Wesley Foundation when making their offering.

The B. T. U. study course held at the Student Center at 7:00 p. m., started on Monday and will continue through Thursday. Mr. Ralph Winders, State Student Secretary, will teach the course. Baptist girls wishing to come to the special brakfast at the Student Center Sunday morning at 8:30 are asked to sign up.

Presbyterian students had their bi-monthly Recreation Hour last Saturday night. Presbyterian girls are always invited to come.

The theme for Prayers this week is "The Call of Christ". There will be a special musical program tonight. Tomorrow night the topic will be "God's Gift of Love." On Friday night the topic is "What is Your Relationship with God?"

Patient Individual Suggests Doctor's List For Students

By BETTY DEUEL COCK

I am a healthy student and I go to S. T. C. I am a patient individual, and can put up with a lot. From the very first day 'pon which I set foot within these sacred walls I've been mushing around filling in blanks. Life has become full of blanks . . . my mind is just one big blank. There were blanks for application and blanks for matriculation. Blanks for a P. O. box and blanks for dormitory room. We've filled 'em in for eating in the dining hall, and for when we don't eat in the dining hall. Every time we leave school, we fill in 15 or 20 blanks. Every time we return, we fill in 15 or 20 more. There are date slips and package slips; we sign checks and we check ballots, and we knock ourselves out filling in schedule cards. In short, we sign our lives away filling in blanks.

The other day, though, I rebelled. Y'see, 'twas like this: I was on my way out the side door at the back of Annex minding my own business and I nearly made it safely out past the infirmary. But then all of a sudden like, I felt an irrisistible force (namely Dr. Moore) inviting me in by the scuff of my neck, and all at once about three people shoved at me, in order, a chair, a pencil, and a Blank to fill out. Okay. I thinks, I'll fill it out. But I won't like it.

It started out like the normal assortment . . . " Name, class, date, home address, college address." That part was simple. Then it says, "Reason for Reporting!" As if I coulda helped myself! But I filled it in anyway deciding that a good dose of Mrs. Packer's nose-drops never hurt anybody yet, and went on to the next blank. That's when I began to wonder. It's not enough they gotta know what classes I've had all day or am going to have all day, they wanna know do I have any tests that day?!? And it's not enough they gotta know what time I went to bed last night, they wanna know how I spent my last week end!. (Now I ask ya, as a student, don't we got some rights?) Then and there I decided to write a Letter to the Editor. After deciding that, I felt better, and went on down the list.

It was a list, too . . . was I suffering from any of the following . . . which included everything from headache to hoarseness, but the only ones I had to underline were overwork and lack of appetite. I don't suffer from much else.

Then they started getting personal again: "Do you get eight hours sleep at night, at least one hour of which is before midnight?" (Check "Yes" or "No"). "Do you eat three regular meals a day at regular times? (Heh, heh!) "Do you take time to eat?" "Do you take at least one hour's exercise daily?" (Living on the third floor and six classes a day? Is he kiddin'?) "Do you keep your room free from dust and smoke?"

Anyway, I checked all the answers and realized I was not only practically taking a test but that by gosh, I was being graded on it! Yes, sir, each one of those answers counted for or against me a certain amount, and I actually got a grade on it to see what my status was as far as health goes. (Well, I never did make very good grades anyhow.) Then something at the bottom of the page caught my eye . . . it said "Note carefully". That I've got to quote to you; 'twas news to me, and it might be news to the rest of the student body: "An excuse from reciting (being in class) automatically campuses you for that 24 hours. A medical excuse for 'in bed' in Infirmary or room automatically campuses you for all of that day and the next. Except by special permission, violation of the regulations CANCELS your EXCUSES."

Then I got to thinking. It looked pretty complicated . . . unnecessary when I first started filling it out . . . just one more blank to take up valuable time. Then I realized how much it could mean, to you as well as to Dr. Moore and

Dear Editor:

The complete indifference with which many of the S. T. C. girls are meeting the need for hostesses at the U. S. O. and service clubs at Camp Pickett strikes me as being selfish and unpatriotic. It appears that giving up an occasional Saturday night is the very least we can do. The soldiers heartily welcome girls who come to dance and talk with them. Surely, when they have done so much we can do this little. Many of us sign our names on the U. S. O. lists without realizing that we're under any real obligation to go. We seem to use Pickett as a sort of reserve—a place we can go, in case nothing better comes up. The soldiers at Camp Pickett need and deserve fun and relaxation, and the U. S. O. and service clubs are asking us to help in seeing that they get it. Here is our chance to do real service. How about it, girls?

Watts Announces Ping Pong Tourney Will Begin Soon

Winner To Receive Points Toward Cup

Phyllis Watts, manager of ping pong, announced Monday that the ping pong tournament will begin in the near future—as soon as the girls sign up for the tourney. A list will be posted on the Athletic Association bulletin board for persons who desire to enter the tournament. Any person is eligible to enter and one does not need any number of practices to participate.

This tournament will be round robin tournament, as are the other sports activities between classes and a schedule will be made and posted giving the time and persons playing. Five points will be given towards the color cup for the winner of this tourney. Phyllis also announced that when the tournament begins, the matches will be played in the rec of the main building between 10:00 and 10:30 o'clock at night, and all the matches are open to spectators.

General rules for the matches will be posted on the athletic bulletin board in the hall, and every person must know and abide by these rules. Ping pong tables are placed in the shower room and rec of the main building and in senior rec and trunk room for general practices. Anyone may use these tables for practice in senior building. See Phyllis Watts for ping pong balls and paddles. In the main building, balls and paddles will be placed in locker number 373 in the shower room for general usage. As ping pong balls are still difficult to get, all paddles and balls must be returned to the proper places as soon as a person has finished using them.

As the tournament will begin soon, any person desiring to enter must sign up on the posted list as soon as possible. Do not sign any name to the list but your own.

LEFT LEAD

HEADS UP

They're out again. In between snows, of course, when the mud is goolest and the slush is slushiest. Yup, Saturday was a beautiful day, and found half-o-dozen of the old faithfuls up and away over the trails at Longwood.

Before that, though, even the snow couldn't keep some people away from the stables, and Mr. Pal found himself pulling a hay wagon full of adventure-seekers early in the week. There may have been worse weather for hay-rides (we can't remember when) but it didn't seem to bother Pal a bit.

News at the stables is really news this week. Don't let that new stable-boy confuse you . . . it's just Mr. Reid doing his daily good deeds by feeding the horses and keeping an eye on them during the day. Also, electric lights have been installed in the barn, although not yet in the tack-room . . . and there may be curtains up yet! At least the paint's dry in the club house, and where there's curtain material, there's hope for curtains.

GOOD NEWS

Between Jeanne and the Vets, Indora will probably be back in the swing of things before too long after all. She's feeling fine and frisky, and her leg is just a little bit stiff. Jeanne even tried her out Sunday or Monday, just near the stable grounds . . . and though neither Jeanne nor Indora was exactly dressed for the occasion, both made out just fine, thanks. If somebody doesn't do something about this weather before long, however, there's gonna be a runaway supreme when the horses do get out. They're really raring to go and no doubt about it.

LIT-MINDED

Meaning literary and not literal, Jeanne wants it generaly known that she has a new selecton of books any time you want a lecture. E. T. Baker's "Home Veterinarian's Handbook" has some very useful information in it, and two books by Margaret Cabell Self not only have useful info and excellent photographic illustrations, but make more interesting reading as well. These two are "Horses . . . . their Selection, Care and Handling" and "Fun on Horseback". Also on hand for those interested are several of the C. W. Anderson books, and we're still recommending John Steinbeck's "Red Pony". Just 'cause it's snowing is no sign you have to give up your sports life altogether.

And while you're reading, pick up the February issue of Good Housekeeping and look for Harry Crocker's article called "Assignment in Hollywood." While it covers everything about animal actors from dogs to goldfish, you'll also find some very unusual notes on various hoss-opera heroes and their trainers. Next time you see "Trigger" dance for Roy Rogers in a picture like "Don't Fence Me In" you won't wonder quite so hard about how he was trained to be the horse he is!

Anyway, when it's too cold for actual riding, you still have dozens of four-legged friends you can always get to know just a bit better. And when the time comes, we'll see you at the stables.

Doctor's List

Mrs. Packer. After all, a doctor has to know these things, and it takes ten or fifteen minutes for him to ask you all the questions he needs to know. And if we do it this way, look how simple it is. Everybody is all listed and he can get right at the point of trouble in less time. Maybe all you need is a good night's sleep, if there is such a thing, or maybe you need to re-plan your whole schedule with an eye to certain times for rest, recreation, exercise, and study. After all . . . we're supppose-ed to be reasonably intelligent people . , . and you just can't be too bright in any class after sitting up half the night eating muggy pancakes and drinking black coffee and cramming for a philosophy test.

So you see, I decided that in my letter to the editor I wouldn't gripe about filling the things in after all. It's more worthwhile than a lot of us realize . . . only you've gota answer the questions truthfully if you really want to get your health score. What this school needs is a doctor's list as well as a dean's list . . . and if everybody could take that test the ones with the high perfect ratings could stay away from the infirmary any time they wanted to!

MODERN DANCE

Preparation for the annual recital under the auspices of Orchesis are well under way. Practices are being held several times weekly and the club is hard at work. The recital is to be held February 27 in the large auditorium.

Work for this year's May Day has already begun. The theme for the occasions to be western and the dance will be patterned after the western type of dance. May court was nominated and elected Tuesday and today.

ATHLETIC IDEAS

So you want to be an athlete? Not everyone is built for that, but there are many who have tried and succeeded in doing some sport well because they did try. Practice, practice, practice keeps running through your mind, but that is exactly what you have to do if you expect to get anywhere on the tennis courts, hockey field, riding ring, basketball court, or other sports activies.

Trying out for a class team does not mean just coming down to the gym, sitting around, and watching the other girls play. It means going out on the court and working just as hard as the rest of them. You might be afraid at first if you happen to be teamed up for the afternoon with all physical education majors, but you will find that although they may have had the spirit, they don't all excel in them.

Try to learn the rules and stick by them. Watch closely when you are not playing and see if you can find a foul or error as soon as the umpire or referee does. When you are in the game, remember you are a member of the team and there are other girls playing besides you. Don't go haywire and forget to cooperate. If you are doing something which calls for individual work, try to make yourself work hard as though you were being directed instead of just practicing by yourself. A good player on any team or in any game always trys to be in practice at all times. Make this one of your rules.

Russia has announcd a five year automobile industry plan, making her a rival to Detroit in the world markets. Russian 1946 models range from cars resembling the Buick and Cadillac to the Victory, a four cylinder economy model planned to roll off the assembly lines at the rate of 1000 a day. Among Russian advantages over Detroit will be freedom from interference and interruption of strikes which are against the law in Russia.

Miss Fannie Dunn Dies In New York

Dr. Frances W. Dunn, well remembered here as a professor at the State Teachers College until about 1914, died in New York City on January 17. Burial services were held in Ellsworth cemetery near her late home at Sharon, Conn.

Dr. Dunn, a native of Petersburg, was long active in the field of education. She served as professor of rural education at Columbia University, and served as supervisor in the training school at the Farmville State Teachers College. Dr. Dunn was holder of the Grace Dodge Fellowship, a member of Phi Delta Kappa fraternity and of Delta Kappa Gamma sorority.

Twelve Girls Attend Methodist Meeting

Ann Buck, junior from Farmville, was elected regional vice-president at the Methodist Conference which was held at Natural Bridge last week-end. Ann succeeds Virginia Lee Price in this position.

Methodist girls from Farmville also attending the conference were Laura Jean Comerford, Jackie Bobbitt, Marie Hutchinson, Ann Buck, Linnie Noblin, June Giannini, Lillian Staples Lorene Thomas, Jean Kent, Charlotte Thorpe, Jane Thorpe, Virginia Lee Price, Dr. Walmsley, and Mr. Blackwell.

French Circle Gives Valentine Program

At the monthly meeting of the French Circle on Tuesday, January 28, a Valentine program was presented. The meeting was presided over by Margaret Harvey, senior from Richmond.

Martha Lee White, Margaret Harvey, and Annette Grainger made some colorful Valentines. The verses were written entirely in French.

The entire group joined in singing several songs. Among these were the famous "Frere Jacques," "Au Claire de la Lune", "Sur le Font d'Avingnon," and "Ma Normandie."

Mr. Winders Teaches Bible Study Course

The Reverend M. Ralph Winders of Richmond, State Student Secretary, is teaching a study course on Baptist doctrines this week. The lectures which began Monday night, are being held every night this week through Thursday in the Baptist Student Center at 7:00. The book used in this course is "What We Believe" by Dr. W. C. Boone.

According to Miss Olivia Stephenson, student secretary on this campus, everyone interested is invited to attend even if its impossible to be there for every session.

Sophomores Begin Production Practice

"Be Be" Geyer, head of the Sophomore Production, has announced that regular rehearsals will begin this week. She also stated that everything is progressing according to schedule.

The girls assisting in the production include, Virginia Tindall, Mary Rattray, Hildrian Suttle, Virginia Yonce, and Joyce Hill.

The production will be presented on Wednesday night, February 20. The charge for admission will be 15 cents.

Reporters Interview Pianist, Contralto, Charming Lyceum Artists on Local Campus

By JEAN CAKE AND BETTY SPINDLER

Of all the artists I have been privileged to talk to, Miss Ruth Brall, who appeared here Thursday, is one of the most charming and gracious. Talking to her one readily understands why she has skyrocketed to success in so short a time, and her "stage smile" is just as natural and spontaneous as though she were being complimented by her audience's attention. For those who would like to know more about this rising young artist we have begged information from Miss Brall herself.

She was born in Philadelphia, though she lives in New York now, and her musical studies were begun in Philadelphia. On going to New York she studied under Conrad Bros. Although Miss Brall has been studying music formally for eleven years, she was brought up in a traditionally musical atmosphere; her father being a violinist and her mother a pianist. Ever since she was a little girl Miss Brall wanted a musical career.

When asked about her most interesting concert Miss Brall replied that her concert in Washingotn last year was the most thrilling. She was appearing as an assistant artist, hardly expecting much notice when lo and behold the Times Herald came out, "Ruth Brall scores vocal triumph!" Since then she has appeared in many concerts in the east and is growing more and more popular.

Last week she sang in a concert in honor of Nickolas Metner, a famous European composer and concert artist who is as yet unknown in America. She said that it was quite an honor to sing his magnificent songs, and that Mr. Metner had dedicated one of them to her.

DOROTHY DANZIG

One of the most interesting interviews I have ever had was talking to Miss Dorothy Danzig, the pretty and talented pianist whom we so enjoyed the other night. Her musical career is not hers by chance or circumstance. Since she was old enough to remember she had planned to become a concert pianist. We are fortunate indeed that her dreams have come true. Miss Danzig's father, a newspaper man connected with the N. Y. Times is justly proud of his modest daughter. He's all "for her" having a musical career. Miss Danzig is now living in Roslyn, Long Island, where she gives private lessons to promising young pupils.

Although she had chosen music for her career, Mss Danzig did not attend a conservatory. Because she wanted an all-around college education she attended Vassar, but finding various activities there prevented her from devoting as much time as she wished to her music, she returned to New York where she studied under Arton Rovinsky for several years.

Miss Danzig told us that for her listening pleasure she prefers Mozart's music. As for what she likes to play, the important thing is whether or not she likes the music regardless of the composer, although she is very fond of Chopin. Her numbers on the program were mostly classical but the French and Spanish pieces were chosen because she is extremely interested in modern music.

When speaking of her former concerts she seemed most enthusiastic about her first. She made her debut about a year ago, and the fact that many critics were there made it very exciting.

Miss Wheeler Talks At Chapel Tuesday

On behalf of the Peace Welfare Drive, a combined drive for the World Student Service Fund and the Red Cross, Miss Leola Wheeler talked to the student body in chapel yesterday on the work of these two organizations. The goal for the drive is set at $1,000; the goal for each student is placed at $1.

Saying that the Red Cross was so well known, Miss Wheeler emphasized the World Student Service Fund and what part it played in educating the college student of other countries. In connection with this, Miss Wheeler reviewed the plight of the Chinese students. All during the war, these students fled from the Japanese taking with them textbooks and equipment wherever they went. "It is our privilege to help re-establish these students in school," stated Miss Wheeler. She added that their needs could be met with money contributed by people who love and believe in education.

Miss Wheeler reminded the students that the usual contribution to the Red Cross alone was $1 and that since this is a combined drive the students should double or triple contributions.

In chapel today, an official Red Cross representative, Mr. A. Buell Trowbridge, spoke to the student body. He is a graduate of Cornell University, attended Oxford University in England as Rhoads scholarship winner, and later studied at Union Seminary in New York. He served overseas for two years with the Red Cross, working in Italy. Among his recent accom-

Grassick To Play At Mardi Gras

McHugh To Appear As Band Vocalist

Bill Grassick with his orchestra and Betty McHugh, vocalist, will set the tempo for the annual Mardi Gras ball which will be held this year on Saturday, February 23, in the college gymnasium at 8:30 o'clock. This announcement was made today by Evelyn Grizzard who is in charge of the orchestra.

Having just completed an extensive tour of the western part of the United States, this orchesra is making return engagements in the south. Bill Grassick has played at Staunton Military Academy, Monticello Hotel in Norfolk, and the Surf Club at Virginia Beach as well as other exclusive clubs throughout the country.

Kitty Maddox is general chairman of the dance. Serving under her are Eleanor Bisese, Betty Adams, Margaret Wilson, Evelyn Grizzard, Emily Carper, Kitty East, Carolyn Bobbitt, Dorothy Oversatreet, and Louise Rives.

This costume ball is sponsored by Pi Gamma Mu, honorary society in social science.

Y.W.C.A. to Sponsor Religious Programs

The Reverend Charles M. Jones from Chapel Hill, N. C., will be the speaker for Religious Emphasis Week which will be held here February 19, 20, and 21. Religious Emphasis Week is being sponsored by the Y. W. C. A.

For a number of years, Mr. Jones has worked with young people in various colleges and campuses. Last summer he was one of the leaders at the summer Y. M. and Y. W. Conferences at Camp Highland, N. C.

The Presbyterian minister will speak all three days in chapel. On Wednesday afternoon, he will speak at an open association meeting.

During that week, Charlotte Grizzard, chairman of the Prayers Committee, will have special prayer programs planned.

Y cabinet members, Ann Martin, chairman, Martha East, Agnes Stokes, and Patsy Dale are working as a committee on Religious Emphasis Week, and Anna Headlee is in charge of making posters.

Officers of the Y. W. C. A. are Minnie Lee Crumpler, president; Ann Martin, vice-president; Martha Russell East, secretary; Agnes Stokes, treasurer and Judy Reick, freshman counselor.

Berry Presents Show Of College Fashions

Miss Olive Berry presented a style show this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the large auditorium. Miss Berry is a representative of Simplicity Patterns.

Clothes that were of interest to college girls were featured on this program. Modeling was done by the college students. An assortment of dresses, skirts, and other clothing was modeled.

PGM And Choir To Give Musicale

National Folk Songs Make Up Program

Dorothy Overcash, president of Pi Gamma Mu., will preside over the program of folk songs of Allied Nations, Wednesday, February 13, in chapel. The college choir will assist with the program.

Soloists for the occasion will be Jeanne Button, Kitty East, Elaine Holder, Esther Shevick, Virginia Tindall, and Jean Watts.

English folk songs included on the program are "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" and "John Peel". Glenn Ann Patterson will give the annotation.

Folk songs of typical Scotish origin will be "Annie Laurie", and "Blue Bells of Scotland." The annotation will be presented by Dorothy Overstreet.

"All Through the Night" will be sung by Dr. Luther Richman to represent Wale's folk songs. Louise Rives will give the annotation.

Russia's folk songs will be "The Nightingale," and "Volga Boatmen Song". Ann Martin will give the annotation.

Representing American folk songs will be "Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair", "I Wonder as I Wander," and "Old Zip Coon." The annotation will be given by Carolyn Bobbitt.

The purpose of this program is to bring about a better understanding of the peoples of the Allied Nations through their folk songs.

Assistant To Dean Undergoes Operation

Miss Alpha Lee Garnett, assistant to the Dean, underwent an operation Thursday, January 31, at the Stuart Circle Hospital in Richmond. She is getting along nicely now.

Mrs. Leland Sanford is substituting for Miss Garnett for about six weeks or two months.

Juniors Will Provide Laughs At Class Stunt February 13

With songs, dances, laughs, and various other forms of entertainment, the juniors will provide excitment on the S. T. C campus next Wednesday night, February 13, with their annual production, the "Junior Jubilee." This will be staged in the "Rec" at eight o'clock.

The "Junior Jubilee', following the theme of an old time showboat, will have the captain of the boat as master of ceremonies. Members of the cast will sing old familiar songs such as Gershwin's "Swanee", and there will be all kinds of dances, even the usual black face routine. Gags galore fill the script. As for food, the usual cokes and nabs will be sold.

Red Cross Unit Gets Swiss Publication

The Farmville State Teachers College Unit of the American Red Cross has presented to the library a copy of "The International Red Cross Committee In Geneva 1863-1943." This Swiss publication is a very graphic history of the work which has been done by the International Committee.

This magazine of 78 pages contains a wide range of articles and pictures. Max Huber, president, has reviewed the work of the International Red Cross Committee from the time it was founded by Dunant until the present time. There is also an article on Ambulance Service and Transport. Then, too, there is a painting of the signing of the Geneva Convention by Ch. Ed. Armand-Mumar-

Strick Prepares Musical Programs

Special musical programs will be used in student day chapel which is held on Wednesday of each week, according to an announcement by Alfred H. Strick, professor of music.

Dr. Jarman not only approved the idea, but ordered 350 song books for the students to use.

Four Wednesdays will be given over to these programs, and if ti meets the students' approval, they will be continued.

Over a period of four weeks the special numbers will include solos, both vocal and piano, and selections from the A'capella choirs.

Soloists to appear will be Martha Ellen Jones, Jane Fox, Kitty East, and Ann Joyner. A select group from the choral club, under the direction of Mary Ellen Hoge, will sing several selections. Alfred H. Strick and Connie Ozlin will play piano solos.

An interesting feature of the program will be the opportunity for each class to select songs they want sung.

"Y" Little Sisters Entertain at Party

The Y .W. C. A. "little sisters" will entertain for their "big sisters" at a coke and nab party on Monday night, February 11 at 9:30 in the Rec. This party is under the auspices of the membership committee.

A special musical program, in which only "little sisters" will participate, is being planned.

According to an announcement made by Virginia Lee Price, chairman of the membership committee, all "little sisters" are invited to attend and bring their "big sisters."

Sixteen Girls To Attend Queen

At a student body election last Wednesday night, Ann Carter, senior from Cumberland, was selected to reign as queen over the 1946 May Day celebration, which will be held this year on Saturday, May 4. Jacqueline Parden, senior from Portsmouth, will attend the queen as maid of honor.

Five seniors were elected as members of the court, in addition to the queen and maid of honor, while seven juniors, three sophomores, and two freshmen will compose the court. Seventeen girls are listed as attending the queen; however, only sixteen girls will compose the court as Betty Gillespie, one of the juniors elected, is not returning to school next quarter.

Seniors who were selected are Minnie Lee Crumpler, Suffolk; Frances Lee, Richmond; Beverly Peebles, Hampton; Jane Philhower, Williamsburg; and Peggy T. Ross, Onley.

Representing the junior class on the court will be Martha Russell East, South Boston; Betty Gillespie, Grundy; Mary Jane King, Radford; Nellie Smith, Norfolk; Virginia Travis, Lynchburg; Nancy Whitehead, Kecoughtan; and Martha Wells, Petersburg;

Julia Booher, Abingdon; Peepsie Brooks, Farmville; and Peggy Moore, Norfolk; were elected from the sophomore class, while Dolly Ann Freeman, Lawrenceville; and Margaret Wall, Norfolk, will represent the freshman class.

Details for the program have not yet been revealed by the co-chairman, Betty Ellis and Frances Lee; however, an announcement will be made at an early date concerning the theme, dances, and costumes. Serving also on the May Day committee are Lucy Bralley, business manager; Nancy Whitehead, dance chairman; Anne Shuffleberger and Doris May, co-chairmen of the costume commit-

Freshman Class Tops Polio Contributions

The March of Dimes contest conducted on this campus between the different classes needed January 31, with the freshman class winning the $5 prize for donating the largest amount of money. They in turn contributed this to the fund already collected.

The contributions of the school, are as follows: freshman class, $37.25; sophomore class, $22.53; junior class $20.25; senior class, $18.01; tea room, $7.00; and faculty, $63.00.

Mr. French, who was in charge of the drive here, said, "I want to take this opportunity to thank all the girls who contributed in this drive. I should also like to express my appreciation to all of those students who so generously gave their time and efforts to this cause."

Holton Named Head Of Hospital Board

S. M. Holton, Jr., Director of Personnel, has been named president of the board of managers of the Southside Community Hospital. He succeeds J. B. Wall, editor and publisher of The Farmville Herald, who has been president for the last four years.

Southside Hospital opened in 1926. The preceding board presidents include J. L. Martin, E. Scott Martin, R. E. Garland, and J. B. Wall.

Jarman-Primus Inter Pares

So long as Dr. Joseph L. Jarman can smile and sing a song and stand on the platform before "his girls," he will have first place in their hearts and, honoris causa, will remain president of the State Teachers College he developed and guided. There is none like him. It is not probable Virginia will have in a century another man of precisely the same balanced ability and charm to head one of her colleges for teachers. He has driven ahead steadily, but never has let any team of untried ideas run away with him. Always he has been ready to pioneer, but he has not built a house on every site where he pitched a tent. Few there have been in Virginia education who adhered more loyally to the maxim: "Prove all things; hold fast to that which is good."

In this controlling, unswerving policy was displayed the quality of mind that was second only to the strength and splendor of his character. We speak, of course, of his remarkably sound judgment. Among those of us who have studied for many years the stirring and fascinating advance of public education in this Commonwealth, it became almost standard practice to ask in some hour of indecision, "What does Jarman say?" No Virginia president of a State institution of higher education ever was consulted more frequently by successive Superintendents of Public Instruction. They might differ in policy; they were consistent and unanimous in their recourse to this remarkable man. We repeat, we reiterate—the signing of a letter and the transfer of Dr. Jarman's office from school to home will not change in the slightest the position he holds in the public educational system of the Commonwealth. He is and he will remain "first among his peers."

We Are Grateful

And thus he bore without abuse
The grand old name of gentleman

The social philosopher of the future who attempts to analyze the intangible but powerful greatest asset of Farmville will come finally to the abiding influence of the great man who is rounding out his first period of service. To have lived for four years in intimate association with a gentleman is a rare privilege. For a college to have grown great under that influence is one of the things for which Virginia is deeply grateful.

We have no answer to the question, "What are you going to do now that Doctor Jarman is gone?", for he is not gone. For the second period of his service, he remains as our neighbor and friend. In a deeper sense, he remains as a moulding influence, as George Washington and R. E. Lee remain, ideals for the life we wish to live.

Farmville stands for scholarship, Doctor Jarman ever emphasized it; Farmville stands for teacher education, Doctor Jarman chose it as his life task; Farmville stands for cultured character, Doctor Jarman lived and breathed it. In the forty-four years in which he has lived with us and has been our faithful friend, one increasing purpose ran through the growing, widening life of Farmville, an abiding desire to do simply and naturally that which is beautiful and good.

We thank him for the life of service which he lived with us, we welcome him to his new period of service as "the first gentleman of Farmville". We know that untold generations of our girls will carry on a spirit and a faith that are finer and purer because Virginia's daughters lived for a few years in association with a gentleman of wide scholarship, of gracious culture, of loving charity, and of ruggedly honest character.

Cooperate With U. S. O.

Yes, the war is over, but there's still an army, an army filled with boys like the one next door or the guy around the corner. These boys are still doing their part, and it's up to us to keep on doing our part.

What is our part? Our part is to help entertain these boys. They've done a lot for us, and they've given of the best they have. They are willing to give their lives that we might go right on living the way we always have.

Perhaps these boys are even more homesick than ever now. They're anxious to get home and to get back to normal life. A little time each week given to cheering up a bunch of lonely G. I.'s is a very little to ask. There are still some in the army and many that must go overseas. They mus go to replace those men that have seen many, many months on foreign soil. There are those who have returned from the far-flung battle fields, and there are those who have been "over" once and must go again. These boys need to see a smiling face and to talk to someone that is interested in them and that is interesting. It requires such a little effort on our part to help our service men.

We don't want to think that our big brothers are lonesome tonight because somewhere someone is too selfish with her time to be nice to them. We must remember that every boy with whom we come in contact is somebody's big brother and somebody's dream man. They're human; they get blue and down in the dumps just like everybody else. They know that they've got a job to finish, and they can't quit now and go home. They promised their buddies from Iwo Jima and Okinawa that didn't come back that the job would be well done. They will not quit until they see that job finished.

There are many war weary soldiers that are lying on hospital beds today. They can't get out to see people and to see what is going on outside, and for many it will be a long time before they can enjoy the life that we enjoy. These boys are sick and far from home. They need a bright visitor to make the long minutes seem short.

Yes, the guy next door and twinkling eyed kid around the corner are still "in there pitching." They won the war and now they're winning the peace.

They didn't forget us. Are we going to forget them or are we going to cooperate with our college USO?

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

And wow! What a week-end for prom trotters!

To the great ole University of Virginia went those glamour gals Corrine, Margaret Wall, Carmen Lowe, "Mothball" Wells, Alice Hannah, "Jane Mantiply, and Nan-y Dickinson! Quite a super charged time was had by all!

Jane Johnson and Dot May, "the never a week-end at Farmville girls", sallied forth to that glorious place—Chapel Hill!

June seems to have a special significance for Martha Ann White—she can't wait to see that certain someone and June seems to be the month.

We can all rest easy once more—"John Edwardito" has spread the glad news again that he will be home mighty soon. From all reports Virginia is making great plans for spring Cotillion.

Frankie Bell has been flooded with phone calls recently—Alabama, Washington, and now Fort Bragg. Preacher has at last made his appearance again—is it our imagination or do we hear wedding bells—don't think that clang could be a mirage.

And Mary Ann journeyed home as usual to see her ATO man. Right at the moment, she's full of big plans for a large plane trip to Alabama next October to see John—that is a football game, so she says.

Didn't Martha Frances Morrison have a big week-end with Stuart Wells!

Jeanne Ellett was so-o thrilled over Bill's long distance call from New York just before he left for overseas.

For details of a big Saturday, ask Ethel Shockley. At the mention of Joe's name, her eyes fairly beam.

Betty Parrish and Betty Ellis had a super time in Richmond with John Taylor and Dickie. By the way, Dickie flew up from Florida just for the week-end.

Wonder if Margie Hewlett ever found out who the unidentified man was who called Sunday afternoon.

Edith Pemberton says that Gloucester is the place to go for a good time on week-ends.

On Saturday, Esther George joined the group of sparklers. Don is mighty cute, Esther.

Our own Page Vaughan's wedding bells rang last Sunday week ago, and now she answers to Mrs. Hargrave.

See you at bedcheck!

By ANNA HEADLEE

Y. W. C. A. committees will meet tonight. This is the first meeting for the new freshman members. All committees will meet at 9 o'clock.

The annual drive of the World Student Service Fund and the Red Cross under the name of Peace Welfare Drive is in full swing. The box will be left in the hall, and girls will canvass the halls for your contribution.

The Presbyterian girls had a spaghetti supper Sunday night after which Mrs. Griggs spoke on "Boy and Girl Relations." The Hampden-Sydney boys will sponsor the program next Sunday night.

This afternoon, the associate South-wide Baptist Student Secretary, Mr. William Hall Preston, was on the campus and spoke to the Baptist girls.

The Methodist girls on the World Fellowship Committee will attend a tea given by Mrs. Blackwell on Thursday, while members of the Worship Committee will go to Miss Hiner's on Friday to tea.

Episcopal students announce that they are planning for two conferences to be held this spring, one in Washington, D. C., and one in Greensboro, North Carolina. Members of the Canterbury Club will attend each.

The theme for the Week of Prayers is "Brotherhood". Tonight there will be a program of music. "I find letters from God dropped
In the street, and everyone is signed by God's name,
And I leave them where they are,
for I know that wheresoe'er I go,
Others will punctually come for ever and ever."—Walt Whitman.

Question of the Week

Have you ever profited from apple polishing? If so how and when?

Freshmen

ELEANOR FARMER: I've never had time. I'm always busy studying my Spanish!

MARY LOU FEAMSTER: Eve was more successful than I—but then maybe she never went to S. T. C.!

PAGE CALLIS: Yes. Sweet-talked my home ec teacher in high school, and graduated as a result.

KATHRYN DOBYNS: Not exactly, but one of my high school teacher's boy friend lived up the street from me, and I kept on her good side by supplying information.

JINNIE LEE CROSS: How do you think I ever got out of high s hool.

DOT PENNINGTON: Sure. That's why I'm left-handed. I wore my right arm out polishing apples!

LAURA ORNDOFF: We gave a fruit roll back in the grades to a substitute teacher who didn't know what was going on and kept us in. Haven't tried it since.

NANCY ROBERSON: I refuse to commit myself.

Sophomores

ARSTELLE PRESLEY: Not being scientific-minded, I had to pass biology somehow.

LORRAINE SMITH: No. (Editor's comment—she's the sincere type.)

GEORGE ANNE LEWIS: I've neve tried it.

JANIE HANKS: Yes, they always look prettier shiny). (She's young and innocent.).

HUT HUTTER: Too many times and too many places to relate here..

ELLEN McMULLAN: Time will tell.

Juniors

NELLIE SMITH: I don't do it. Found out it never gets you anywhere.

BETTY LEWIS: Never tried it. Crime does not pay and that's a crime.

Voice of Our Readers

Dear Editor,

This week we are given an opportunity to aid actively in the winning of a lasting peace. I hope we will all stop for a moment and realize that through just such drives as the Red Cross and the World Student Service Fund, we are given a chance to play a vital part in helping mankind along the road of peace.

This one drive is the only one put on annually by the students, is of, by, and for students. We all know the great work of the Red Cross in helping the American public combat disasters. The World Student Service Fund is an active force in the rehabilitation of students in war torn countries.

Realizing how fortunate we are as students in America, let us resolve this week to do our part by giving the most we possibly can to the Peace Welfare Drive.

Sincerely,
Minnie Lee Crumpler
President of the Y. W. C. A.

Dear Editor,

As a student representative, I appreciate having the opportunity to endorse the drive which the Y. W. C. A. is sponsoring for the World Student Service Fund and the Red Cross.

At some time, each of us has seen the great work carried on by each of these organizations. It is going to take more than words to show our appreciation. By backing this drive 100 per cent and by placing emphasis on whole-hearted cooperation, we will have a tangible means of contributing to those who have asked our aid.

Sincerely,
Jackie Parden
President of Student Government

Try Your Hand; Write a Limerick

The Poetry Staff of the Colonnade is having a "limerick revival". Have you read the new Reader's Digest or Good Housekeeping? Then look them up and write a limerick! Try a couplet too, it's lots of fun. The cleverest ones are to be published in the next Colonnade. The following examples may be helpful.

Limerick

A limerick is a five-line stanza built on two rimes with the third and fourth line one foot shorter than the other three.

Ex.

There was a young lady of Niger
Who smiled as she rode on a tiger
They came back from the ride
With the lady inside,
And a smile on the face of the tiger.

. . . . .

There was an old man of Nantucket
Who kept all his cash in a bucket:
But his daughter, named Nan,
Ran away with a man
As for the bucket . . . Nantucket!

Couplet

A heroic couplet is a complete thought expressed in two iambic pentameter lines that rime.

Ex.

"Whoever thinks a faultless piece to see Thinks what ne'er was, nor is, nor e'er shall be."—Pope.

Go ahead and try, and drop your noble attempt in the Colonnade box in the hall.

Farmville Varsity Basketball Team Wins Over Lynchburg College With 31-27 Score

Fourteen Girls Represent College

Farmville State Teachers College varsity basketball team defeated Lynchburg College Tuesday afternoon, on the Lynchburg court, with a final score of 27 to 31. This was Farmville's first varsity game of the season, and the team's first real chance of working together to know the outcome of the season's hard practice.

S. T. C.'s lineup was: Lillian Elliott, right forward; Betty Parrish, left forward; and Rosa Hill, center forward. Guards were: Jean Bentley, center; Margaret Lohr, right; and Margaret Orange, left guard and captain of the Farmville team. The only substitution during the game on the part of the Farmville team was Nancy Parrish to replace Betty Parrish at left forward position.

A close score was continued throughout the entire game. At the end of the first half, the score was 10 to 13 in favor of S. T. C. The Farmville squad kept a slight lead in points during the entire game, and the final whistle blew with S. T. C. leading by four points.

After the game, the Farmville team had dinner in the Virginian Hotel in Lynchburg. The trip was sponsored by the Athletic Association. The team made the trip in taxis, and fourteen representatives of the varsity squad went to Lynchburg.

Chaperons for the team were Miss Mary Dabney, acting coach in Miss Olive Iler's absence, and Miss Elizabeth Burger, umpire and referee for the game.

F. S. T. C. Freshmen Defeat High School

S. T. C.'s freshman basketball team defeated Farmville High's team Tuesday afternoon, January 29, in the college gym by a score of 22 to 19. The game was a practice game to give both teams a chance to improve their techniques.

Officials of the game were, Miss Mary Dabney, referee; Lucille Jones, umpire; Gina Crawford and Peggy Cabaniss, scorers; and Mary Ann Morris and Louise Blane, time keepers.

Playing on the S. T. C. team were Joanne Sterling, Elaine Owens, Sue Ward, Helen Londeree, Captain, Phyllis Fulcher, Barbara Boyle, Martha Gillum, Venie Buchanan, Ann Barksdale, and Mary Young.

Farmville High school players were Nell Chick, Florence Oliver, Jo Ann Missimer, Betty Ferguson; Kattie Bondurant, Edith Brooks, Martha Sydnor, and Rebecca Kelsey, captain.

Orchesis' Girls To Give Recital

Members and apprentices of Orchesis are working on dances and costumes for their annual recital to be held on February 27 in the college auditorium. This year's program will have a bit of the serious, sober side of dance and a rollicking, hilarious, and ridiculous side which they haven't attempted before.

"Opening Dance", the club's dance of greeting opens the program. "A Western Suite" with all of the flavor and bravado of the West follows. The three themes on Today's Freedoms now entitled, "Is There Freedom?" will be repeated from the Christmas Sing program.

A new departure points up the second half of the concert. "The Roots Are Deep" is a large group study on juvenile delinquency.. "What's Your Type?" is the second new venture. It is a fashion show with a surrealist or Dali setting.

Two of the seniors will do solos. It is a club policy to encourage such numbers only from the senior group of members. One will be a study in cerebralism; the other a hill-billy tune which will be sung as it is danced.

Question of Week

RACHEL BRUGH: No, never have and never expect to.

LOUISE BLACKMAN: I would if I had time.

Seniors

KATHARINE ALLEN: Only tried it once—made a D as a result. Wrong psychology, I guess.

CAROLINE MOON: How do you think I got to be a senior!

BOBBIE COSEY: I'd say yes, but I'd be afraid to say how and when—might want to use it again sometimes.

MR. GRAINGER: At the University of North Carolina they called it boot lickin'!

MR. MAC: I've fed 'em apple sauce!

LEFT LEAD

LET 'EM OUT

Heigh-de-ho! Give 'em rein, lots of rein . . . but not 'til you've got 'em all bridled and saddled, eh, Anna Stuart? First news of the week concerns last Friday's attempt to saddle up Eagle, and the fact that Eagle was feeling pretty playful and decided to resent the bridle Headlee was trying to put on him. Between the fun Bobo and Bobby Anderson were having with Rat (recently re-christened "Hell-Cat") and the fun Red Fox was having frisking about all by himself, Anna began to wonder whether she'd ever make it out of the stable-yard, much less to the trail, but the old tricks of lots of patience and an equal amount of tempting corn did the trick at last, and by the time Eagle was nibbling his undeserved treat in his own stall, Ducky was around to help with the saddling up. From there on 'twas a glorious day . . .

BIG MOVE

Next time you go looking for Professor Sauerwein catch your breath at the second floor and thank your lucky stars you no longer have to climb the third flight. Yup . . . just turn on down the hall to Room 91, and you'll find teacher right at home with her new roommate, Margaret Verrell. The pictures on the walls are the same horses, though. The only difference, according to the new inmate, is that every time the door slams, little Jeanne and her blue ribbon pony go galloping across the side wall, picture, frame and all! Interesting enough! Only you won't find her there 'til after next week . . . the traitor left today for Connecticut and is trading saddles for skates until after the Dartmouth Winter Carnival! Nope, we don't blame her a bit . . . only anybody else would have had enough snow for a while.

SICK-LIST

Indora stays about the same, but Phantom Lady is definitely down. The little mare keeps trying, but she's in a bad way. Mr. Reid had to practically carry her to the watering pail the other day, only to have her prove the old adage, "You can lead a horse to water but you can't make him drink." We'd hate to see anything happen to the Phantom . . . but wed hate to prophesy complete recovery. What the beginners will do, we don't know, but there'll be just as many unhappy old girls as new ones if anything should happen to Phantom Lady.

TRAIL RIDING

Which brings up a subject we all should look into. For those of you who haven't time to read it for yourself, we thought we'd list a few of the highlights which Margaret Cabell Self lists as "common courtesies on the trail" in her book, "Fun on Horseback." She suggests some of the following:

Always warm up slowly. Walking the first mile out and last mile in is best, and not to do so invites founder. Let your horse pick his way in rough places. Grip with your thighs, but give him his head, don't jerk his head up suddenly if he stumbles. Keep your weight well forward both up and down

Ping Pong Chart Posted On Board

The chart for signing up to enter the ping pong tournament is posted on the AA bulletin board. The tournament will begin as soon as everyone who is interested signs on this paper. The tournament is to be played at night between 10 and 10:30 o'clock in the main rec. Spectators are invited to these matches.

Ping pong balls will be put in a box in the main rec for use in practicing. Phyllis Watts, ping pong manager, requests that no person take the balls from the rec. As soon as you have completed practice, put the balls in the box for the next person to use them.

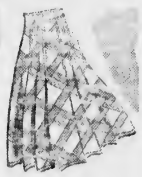
PING PONG

Back and forth across the net goes the ping pong ball. It really leads an exciting life, although to an onlooker, it seems quite monotonous spending the time bouncing a ball across a net. Ping pong is a game of skill and endurance, and is fast becoming one of America's favorite indoor sports. The tournament here at school is to be played in the near future and any person interested may enter the tournament.

Only practice makes perfect, and it isn't until you acquire the skill of knowing where you want to place the ball on the table and doing it, that you have really begun to enjoy the game. Of course, you don't have to get the air of a professional to really get anything out of the game, but it is best to understand what you are doing to help you and your opponents enjoy it. Find a partner who likes to play or who wants to try, or you can even make it doubles, and let's try to sharpen up our game of ping pong.

JUMP BALL



Yours truly is still mentioning basketball in the column and urging everyone to try out for her class team. Basketball is the major sport in circulation now and one of the most important things on the sports schedule for this year. The girls who have been out for varsity and class teams have been working hard, and under the capable directorship of Miss Olive Iler, they have tried their best.

There is nothing quite as exciting as a basketball game. The thrill when your team makes a goal, the hushed silence when someone has a free throw, and the quick passwork of the teams as a whole, all those go to make up the audience's feeling toward the game. If you aren't exactly sure about the rules and the way a

Don't canter or trot on hard pavements . . . keep to the soft shoulders or dirt trails along the sides of the highway. If you cross a brook and your horse seems thirsty, he may drink, even though hot, provided you continue your ride and don't let him stand. And watch that he doesn't roll with you in the water! Horses about to roll usually paw first, and this is the signal for you to pull his head up, and urge him along quickly!

That's all for now, but remember that much, and you'll have made up for one ride you may have missed.

'Junior Jubilee' Provides Food, Fun, Frolic for All

Excitement, fun, entertainment, laughs, and food all come along tonight with the "Junior Jubilee," a musical presentation based on an old time showboat, which will be held in the "Rec" tonight February 13 at 8 o'clock. This is the annual junior production.

According to Grace Loyd, chairman of the production, the "Junior Jubilee" will have just everything you could want in the way of a good show. There will be the old songs typical of this period; various forms and styles of dancing, including the black-face routine, and the Can-Can Girlies; and jokes, gags, and funny dialogues literally crowd the script. As for food, the usual S. T. C.'ers diet of cokes and nabs will be sold.

GRACE LOYD

The captain of the showboat will act as master of ceremonies. There will be the usual dancing chorus girls and gay chorus music.

Assisting Grace with this production are Margaret Ellett, Sue Hundley, Nancy Whitehead, Kitty Sue Bridgforth, Hilda Bennet, Gwen Ackiss, Betty Parrish, and Betty Bibb.

"Y" Little Sisters Will Entertain

All "Y" little sisters are invited to bring their big sisters to the coke and nab party which will be held in the Rec, Thursday night at 9:30 o'clock.

A special musical program is being planned by the "little sisters" under the direction of Virginia Lee Price, chairman of the membership committee of the "Y."

Spring Play Cast Is Announced

Hampden - Sydney Boys Take Roles

Those S. T. C. girls who have parts in "Outward Bound", a three act play which will be presented by the Dramatic Club in the large auditorium on March 9, are Mary Ann Adams, Martha Frances Webb, and Carlotta Norfleet.

Mary Ann as Ann plays the role of a young wife; Martha Frances has the part of the old charwoman, Mrs. Midget, while Carlotta is cast as Mrs. Cleveland Banks.

Hampden-Sydney students are taking the parts of the boys in the play. Dick Wiant has the role of Scrubby, the steward; Hugh Warren plays the part of Henry, the husband of Ann; Frank Brook is cast as Tom Prior; Frank Blanton has the role of the Rev. M. Duke; Max Perron portrays Mr. Lingley, and Bill Hart and Bill DeHardit take the parts of Mr. Thompson, and Howard, respectively.

The play, which will come on Founders Day, is under the direction of Miss Leola Wheeler.

Musicians To Give Concert Here Soon

Mary Davenport, contralto and Frances Magnes, violinist, will appear in the fourth of the artist series to be held in the large auditorium on Friday night, February 22.

Miss Magnes has appeared in many large cities of America as soloist, as well as with the Busch Symphony Orchestra. She is regarded as one of the outstanding young violinists of America.

Miss Davenport, contralto, has "an unusually rich voice; one that is very appealing to her audiences," as one of her critics stated it. She has appeared with leading choral societies under famous directors, and is soloist at one of the largest churches in New York.

The program offered will include well-known classical and modern music.

Girls Find Attending U. S. O. A Pleasure and a Privilege

By BETTY SPINDLER

If you've never been to a USO dance, then you've missed something. Take it from a veteran "200-hour" gal. The girl who wrote the letter last week on the subject of attending the dances really had the right idea; I have only one comment to add—it's not only a privilege and a patriotic duty, it's a pleasure!

Let's take a look into the diary of a junior hostess from the Pickett club. I know one that should be pretty good. Eureka! Here's the key!

"Dear Diary,

Tonight I went to the U. S. O. and met the cutest boy I've seen in a long time. He used to be an Arthur Murray dance instructor, and he taught me more new steps! Fate has me on the black list I guess 'cause he's shipping overseas next week.

"Dear Diary,

I am the proud possessor of my 200 hour award—a tiny gold U. S. O. pin. Guess my trampled toes and sore muscles weren't in vain after all! I'm sure I'm on the safe side when I say that the greatest majority of those hours were loads of fun. Why, just tonight I met a French Canadian who taught me how to say scram and shut up in French; a boy who sang with Fred Waring before he was drafted, and the most adorable blond from Georgia— a football player from Georgia Tech, and could he dance.

The U. S. O. celebrated its fifth anniversary with a big formal dance. They had a civilian orchestra and flowers for all the girls—oh, it was wonderful! Everybody had such a good time. The boys were breaking in such a steady stream that after the first half hour, I had to stop remembering names. All the old crowd was there; George, Bill, Joe, Don, Dick, Tony—that's all except Jack, who is at home on furlough. I can hardly wait 'til next week end to go back!"

For anyone who needs proof of a good thing, this should show that you really can have a good time at the U. S. O. Where there's

Dance Chairman

Kitty Maddox, chairman of the annual Mardi Gras Dance which will be held Saturday night, February 23.

Mardi Gras Dance Tickets On Sale

Tickets for the Mardi Gras ball February 23 in the college gymnasium at 8:30 o'clock went on sale Monday after lunch. Stag tickets are 60c and the drags are $1.20.

Costumes must be knee length according to an announcement by Kitty Maddox, general chairman. The men do not wear costumes. Masks may be worn. There will be someone at the door to check each costume for suitability.

Music will be furnished by Bill Gassick and his orchestra.. Betty McHugh will be featured as the vocalist. This orchestra recently completed a tour of the western section of the United States. Bill Grassick has played at exclusive clubs throughout the country.

Freshmen Sign Up For YWCA Work

Minnie Lee Crumpler, president of the Y. W. C. A., has announced that the freshmen have signed up for the various Y committees. The signing took place on Thursday, January 24, right after the chapel program.

Jennie Osborne and Elaine Pierce signed up with Mary Wyatt, chairman of the Church Cooperative committee.

Placing their names on the Library committee list were Betty Tipton and Thelma Weeks. Connie Ozlin is the chairman of the committee.

Pledging their membership with the Membership Committee, of which Virginia Lee Price is the head, were Ann Amory, Phyllis Alley, Martha Ashby, Ann Boss,

Peace Welfare Drive Goal Exceeded, Says Hewlett, Chairman

Margie Hewlett, chairman of the Public Affairs Committee of the Y. W. C. A., which is sponsoring the World Peace Drive here on the campus, has announced that our goal of $1,000 has already been reached. It is expected that the fund will exceed the goal by a large amount, since the faculty and many of the organizations are still contributing. Although our goal has been reached, it is urged that all who have not as yet made a contribution do so at their earliest convenience. Donations are still being accepted for this worthy cause, the World Student Service Fund and the Red Cross.

Pi Gamma Mu Bids Upperclassmen

Society, Choir Give Program Today

Twelve girls were recognized by Pi Gamma Mu in chapel Tuesday. Dorothy Overcash, president of Pi Gamma Mu, presided at the program.

The new members are Elizabeth Bennett, junior from Keeling; Lucy Bralley, senior from Richmond; Alice Buck, junior from Baltimore; Maryland; Minnie Lee Crumpler, senior from Suffolk; Margaret Ellett, junior from Jennings Ordinary; Luverta Gumkowski, senior from Smithfield; Margaret Hewlett, senior from Richmond; Elizabeth Lewis, junior from Hickory; Catherine Lynch, junior from Lebanon; Emily Neal, junior from Chatham; Katherine Prebble, senior from Lynchburg; Anne Savedge, junior from Littleton.

Other officers of Pi Gamma Mu are Emily Carper, vice-president; Eleanor Bisese, secretary, and Betty Adams, treasurer.

Pi Gamma Mu is a national social science honor society. The Virginia Gama Chapter, the local organization of Pi Gamma Mu, was organized in 1927.

This morning in chapel, Dorothy Overcash, president of Pi Gamma Mu, presided over a program of folk songs of the Allied Nations. The college choir assisted with the program.

Soloists for the occasion were Jeanne Button, Kitty East, Elaine Holder, Esther Shevick, Virginia Tindall, and Jean Watts.

Those girls giving annotations on the various songs were Glenn Anne Patterson, Dorothy Overstreet, Louise Rives, Ann Martin, and Carolyn Bobbitt.

Dr. Luther Richman, representing Wale's folk songs, sang "All Through the Night". Other songs were "Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes", "Annie Laurie," "The Nightingale," "Jeannie with the Light Brown Hair," and others.

Dr. J. L. Blair Buck, director of Virginia Teacher Training, also gave a short talk.

March 9 Scheduled As Founders Day

Founders day will be held on this campus Saturday, March 9. This will be the twenty-fifth anniversary for the class of 1921, and will also be the reunion for the "Six" classes. Those classes which will have reunions are the class of 1886, 1896, 1906, 1916, 1926, and 1936.

The program for the day will begin at nine o'clock when the alumnae will register in Main building; registration will continue until 11 o'clock, and at 11 there will be exercises in the auditorium. At this time the presidents of the "Six" classes will make short talks, and gifts from the students, faculty, and alumnae, will be received for the Alumnae Fund which will go towards the Jarman Organ. At one thirty o'clock there will be an alumnae luncheon in the "rec," and in the afternoon the Granddaughters Club will be hostess to the guests in a tour of the campus. There will be a formal dinner at 6 o'clock in the college dining room. The program will end at eight o'clock when the College Dramatic Club will present "Outward Bound" under the direction

Lounge To Be Open For Meditation

The Reverend Charles M. Jones of Chapel Hill, North Carolina will be the speaker for Religious Emphasis Week which begins February 19 and closes February 21. The theme for the week is "Religion—Our Greatest Challenge."

Reverend Jones was born in Nashville, Tennessee. He attended Maryville College, Columbia University, and the Union Theological Seminary in Richmond.

He has preached at Cumberland Courthouse, Gordonsville, and Brevard, North Carolina.

He will speak in chapel Tuesday on the topic "A Growing Conception of God." Wednesday at chapel hour his topic will be "A Growing Conception of Prayer." His subject for Thursday's chapel program will be "What Difference Does Being a Christian Make?"

There will be an open association meeting Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 P. M. in the Lounge. Reverend Jones will have as his topic "What Should the Y Do—And How Should the Y Do It?" Wednesday night the discussion group will be held in senior rec, the theme will be "Some Questions I'd Like to Find the Answer To."

A question box has been placed on the table in the hall, and students may drop in questions they want answered.

The Y lounge will be open during Religious Emphasis Week for meditation, and there will be special programs at prayers.

The officers of the Y. W. C. A. are Minnie Lee Crumpler, president; Ann Martin, vice-president; Martha Russell East, secretary; Agnes Stokes, treasurer, and Judy Rieck, freshman counselor.

Do Not Enter--Play Rehearsal Says Note as Play Date Nears

By BETTY DEUEL COCK

The curtains are open . . . the house-lights are on . . . the stage is hastily set with folding chairs and piano stools . . . the doors are closed . . . and a little slip of paper on each door says, threateningly, "Do Not Enter . . . Play Rehearsal!"

Yes, it's about that time of the year . . . Spring Play . . . but oh, the differences we noted between this spring and the last two or three springs! To begin with, the gals don't show up for rehearsal in blue-jeans and plaid shirts this spring. Nope . . . they're the acme of neatness. Pleated skirts and trim sweaters and hair combed to perfection. Gosh . . . they even wear socks!

Then too, there's an excess of cigarette smoke rolling from back stage, and the funniest low-pitch to the rumble of voices up in the wings. Yup . . . you guessed it . . . the presence of the Male Animals has permeated the whole atmosphere, and as usual, changed the outlook on the whole situation.

The play itself, of course, is "Outward Bound" . . three acts of suspenseful drama with its touch of comedy and round-about humor. And even with folding chairs pinch-hitting for the real thing, the setting is obviously aboard ship . . . with the curtain opening upon the scene of the bar. And there in the bar, you meet the ten characters of "Outward Bound."

To begin with, there is "Scrubby," the sturdy steward, friend to all, played by Dick Wiant of Hampden-Sydney. The love-interest involves Henry (Hugh Warren) and his young wife Ann (Mary Ann Adams). Frank Brook takes the part of the lovable Tom Prior, who introduces (and characterizes) himself to the audience when he remarks to the bar tender, "I expect to see a lot of you on this trip!"

Martha Frances Webb cultivates a beautiful accent for her part as the old char-woman, Mrs. Midget . . . and to the other extreme, wait til you catch the broad "A" and lorgnette of Carlotta Norfleet as Mrs. Cleveland Banks. In her own words, there is a woman who is very particular about her hyphen!

The clergyman in the crowd (Frank Blanton as the Rev. Mr. Duke) is vaguely unpopular be-

Parden Announces Date Rule Changes

Jackie Parden, president of the student body, has released the following simplified explanation of dating rules for juniors and seniors. This was made necessary by girls complaining of the complexity of the former rules.

A.—Returning hours on Saturday and Sunday.

1.—If a girl spends the week-end at college and goes out of town with a date in a car on Saturday or Sunday, or on both days, she is expected to return to school by 10 P. M.

2.—A girl who goes out with her parents or friends in a car on either Saturday or Sunday should be back by 10 o'clock. This also applies to a group of college girls out for the day, or part of the day.

3.—Students going away for the week-end must be back by 11 o'clock.

B.—Returning hour during week.

1.—10 o'clock is the deadline for returning from home or elsewhere when away for the day or part of the day.

C.—Where to sign out.

1.—In Miss Hamner's room.

a) Girls remaining at school for the week-end, going out of town with dates in cars should obtain permission from Miss Hamner in her room, after which they may sign up in the notebook.

b) A group of girls also going out of town in a car on the week-end sign up with Miss Hamner.

2.—In books on desk in junior and

Thanks To Mrs. Shelton For Giving Her Best

Reading the fine editorial on Dr. Jarman which appeared in the Richmond Times Dispatch last week reminded us just how fortunate we students of State Teachers College are, fortunate not only because we have the best in educational opportunities, but because we seem to have a monopoly on the finest people who could serve any school.

Mrs. Annie Farrar Shelton is such a person. For eighteen years Mrs. Shelton wholeheartedly gave her best to the students by serving in the capacity of supervisor of the dining hall and later as dietician. From the time she came to Farmville in the fall of 1928 until her recent retirement, Mrs. Shelton gave more than was required of her time to her duties. Always anxious to please the girls, she did everything she could to give us the best food, but those of us who knew her more intimately will remember her not only as the lady who planned our meals, often against odds during the war years, but as a great personage whose smile and sweetness spread contagious sunshine wherever she went, along the corridors, in the dining room and on the campus. Her quiet dignity and calmness gave us courage; her gentleness and kindness reminded us of our mothers.

Yes, we are fortunate to have known people like Mrs. Shelton, for her influence and the influence of others like her have made State Teachers College what it is. And so to you, Mrs. Shelton, we are grateful.

Cooperation Needed For Successful May Day

There are certain traditions which have become a strong and vital part of that celebrated, intangible something known as "The Farmville Spirit." A beautiful, well-organized and successful May Day is among them. But remember that it takes more than one person or even a small group of persons to make a May Day successful. It takes the interest, the willingness to work, and above all, the cooperation of every student in the college. Cooperation, "to concur to produce the same effect," is a great old word. It has been so over-used that sometimes we don't stop to consider its meaning. Just think it over for a minute. The "effect" of previous S. T. C. May Days will not be an easy standard to live up to. The help of every girl who ever danced a dance, 'plied a needle, or lifted a prop, is going to be needed. So when you sign with a committee, make a resolution to cooperate with the chairman. Stick to it, even if your part seems so insignificant that you wouldn't be missed. If you are in a dance, go to practices, and be there on time. At the end you will see how every little piece of work has clicked into its place in the whole scheme of things.

Any piece of work, well-done, is especially thrilling to those who have had a part in the doing. There is no reason why every girl in the student body of S. T. C. should not experience the satisfaction of contributing in some way, however small, to a project as big as this one.

It's your May Day. Through hard work, through your cooperation, it can be one of the most successful in a long series of successful May Days.

Gleanings

Mildred Altice

It would seem that the people occupying the site, which was chosen by the UNO commission as a permanent home, would be happy and proud to make such a sacrifice for lasting peace, but they aren't. They aren't for the same reason that will effect a great deal of trouble for the UNO at first. A Russian delegate charges that the Idonesian fighting may touch off another world war. He demands that a commission be established to investigate that problem, and warns that, unless this step is taken, the UNO is doomed. Immediately Foreign Minister Bevin of Great Britain flatly rejected the proposal, and the delegates adjourned without taking any action. It's so much easier for people and for nations to recognize the mistakes of others and to prescribe remedies than it is to recognize their own errors and to seek ways to eliminate them. It's so difficult to change from one method of action to another. It's so difficult to face reality.

* * * *

Many Republican Senators and Representatives are leaving Washington to make Lincoln Day addresses over the country. This makes me wonder whether Lincoln would agree with and support many of the views expressed by the Republicans today. He probably would not because times have changed, but I rather think that the leaders of the Confederacy would heartily support some Southern Senators without even being forced to change their ideas in the least. In fact, they would probably feel that they had gotten a portion of their revenge by the victory of a minority of the Senators over a majority of the people in the whole nation including many southern rebels.

Bed-Check

"Preacher" arrives. There's a flash of a diamond, and there'll be big doings in the town of Petersburg come February 25th when Frankie Bell becomes Mrs. Irvin Pritchett!

At last Dick has reached home once more, and Mary Emma's blood pressure is up fifteen points. Do you or don't you, Mary Emma?

Ole Santa was slightly delayed en route, but he finally located Alice Ann and left that long-awaited Christmas present! My, what good taste Loyd does have, in presents as well as women!

Life's full of surprises, isn't it, Peg? And Fitchit seems to believe in arriving unannounced.

No one but Minnie Lee and Mary Virginia seemed to know the complete story of the sharp looking lieutenants. However, the riot of the week-end was when one backed slowly away from Jackie in the Rotunda, evidently entranced by her charms, and fell backwards over a chair into some perfectly innocent bystanders lap. You have to watch that potent Parden woman.

George Ann had to momentarily stop all activities Saturday night when she received that long distance call from Cyrus. Too bad ole Man Weather prevented that much anticipated visit.

The week-end of a life time was claimed by Carmen, Martha, Sue, and Minetree, who made a non-stop trip to New York. Sounds like a dream, doesn't it? Well, they're still living in one.

That twosome, Maggie and Cully, is getting to be quite a tradition around here. They had to try a bigger pond this week-end, so took off for Hampton, accompanied by Ben and Lee Oliver.

What promised to be a rather dull week-end turned out to be a rip-roaring one for Lohr—and is she in a state of confusion! Turner returned, bringing a beautiful Swiss watch! Man! It served its purpose—quite a peace treaty! Try flipping a coin, Lohr?

Say, who is getting all the phone calls these days? None other than Anna Headlee, and she has quite a gleam in her eye each time she steps out of the phone booth.

Mary Lou, when is that cute boy from Florida coming?

Grace Shriver has certainly been doing some tall entertaining for the last couple of days. Guess they are making up for lost time.

The girls who traveled to Pickett certainly attracted quite a crowd. The soldiers who came this week-end were too numerous to mention.

While we're on the subject, get Anne Verser to recite that little toast made to her when she made her last appearance at Pickett.

Bernie and Morris had quite a hep week-end in the metroplis of Richmond.

Why is Louise Dalton always "doodling" a certain name?

The time is drawing nigh, so better start dishing up the dirt. Pardon me, I mean men for Mardi Gras.

Y News

By MARTHA RUSSELL EAST

A world-wide day of prayer will be held on next Sunday, sponsored by the World Student Christian Federation. In our college we will observe this day at a service immediately after lunch in the large auditorium. This service to which all students are invited, will last half an hour.

Religious Emphasis Week will be held on our campus February 19, 20, and 21. The Rev. Charles Jones of Chapel Hill, N. C., will be the speaker. Chapel programs, an open association meeting, and several discussion groups will be held during this time. The topic for the week will be "Religion — Our Greatest Challenge," and a very good program is planned. Our Y Lounge will be open each afternoon during this time for meditation.

The Freshman Commission will open the Browsing Room of the library each Sunday afternoon for all students who would like to read there. Classical records will be furnished for those who would like to hear them.

The annual "Big Sister- Little Sister" party will be held on Thursday night of this week. All "little sisters" be sure to make a date with your "big sisters" for

"Junior Jubilee"

Question of the Week

If you were cupid what would be the first thing you'd do on February 14?

Sue McCorkle: Good gracious, I'd fly straight to Leyte.

Christ Shifflet: Well, I think I'd put some clothes on first.

Teddie Diggs: I'd point my little bow and arrow at a certain guy at V. P. I.

Anne Homes: What do you think!

Bobbie Graham: Sharpen my arrows, and hope for a Bow!

Marion Lotts: I'd catch the first bus to Washington and Gordon.

Shirley Reaves: I'd shoot Van Johnson a thousand times.

Mary Anne Loving: Buy some new arrows—the kind that stick.

Barbara Lee Myers: Send all the arrows to Ray 'cause he's my bow.

Louise Rives: I'd spend all my time flying toward Tokyo Bay.

Anne Haskins: I'd peep over the Rotunda and watch results!

Hope Worsham: I don't know. Tom and his marine skin might not take arrows so well.

Clie Sarver: Something like Vera Vague—go get a man, Oh!

Louise Dalton: Well, I wouldn't play around with darts!

Evelyn Mahanes: Strike out for the Pacific pronto!

Boots Brailey: I'd tie a strong string to my arrow and heave in what I hit—I'm tired of hit and run.

Lou Baker: 'Fraid that would be telling.

Alice Moore: I'd hop the first train to Camp Crowder.

Mrs. Cox: I'd send all the girls a valentine!

Luverta Gumkowski: I'd shoot an arrow to Connecticut.

Dr. Moss: I would rush to S. T. C.!

Mrs. Laing: I would send my dart to the man nearest my heart.

Betty Burchett: Shoot through all the hearts I could find.

Julia Booher: I'd make him love me like he's never loved me before.

Margaret Wilson: I'd take a vacation, 'cause I've already fixed my suite-mate up!

Letter from Miss Frances Garnett Describes Richmond Polio Club Work

By JEAN CAKE

All of you, of course, remember the unfortunate polio epidemic of last fall when several of our girls were stricken. They are now at the Medical College of Virginia, Richmond. We are glad to be able to say that they are doing nicely and improving rapidly. They are keeping up their spirits remarkably well and are interested in the organization and function of the DePaul Polio Club of Richmond. We know you will be glad to read the following letter which I received from Frances Garnett, recently elected Polio Queen.

"Hi, everyone! Gee, I really miss all of you! It seems years since I was there. I hope to be right back next year and it will be a great day!

Your reporter wanted me to tell you something about our amusements and pastimes; so, here goes—

Since I have been here we have organized a polio club which meets every Tuesday night. We really look forward to these meetings as we always have some entertainment and refreshments. As you know, Kitty Hankins was elected vice-president.

During the day most of us are able to get in wheelchairs and this is when we have the most fun. We then can play cards, chess, work jigg-saw puzzles and play most any other games imaginable. When we are in wheelchairs we go around and talk to those patients who are unable to get up.

Just before the March of Dimes, we were busy making woolly dogs which were placed in Thalhiemer's window to raise money for the March of Dimes. The race is now in full swing.

You asked me how it felt to be a queen. Well, it was a surprise to me, but a pleasant one, believe me.

Thanks for everything and remember I miss all of you.

Frances Garnett.

Westward Trek Forms Theme for May Day

The westward trek is beginning. Are you going?

Indians form to the left. Trailbreakers follow as Indian scout, trapper or hunter. You'll end up in a rendezvous.

The line on the right is for those who want to stake a claim, fence it in and look ahead, then look back and cry, "I was a homesteader."

Down the center with a rule in hand and a site in the eye come surveyors, plotting the land. What a stampede followed! The town boomed! "I struck it rich!"

Last come the settlers, all circling around—the last to come, but the first to settle down. What a house raisin' we had! Were you there?

Now what is all this talking about? May Day, of course. Just the ghost story as the Indians told it to me. I'm looking for the trailbreaker to help me. See you soon!

S. T. C. Varsity Team Meets William And Mary Team Here February 15

Farmville's varsity basketball team is scheduled to meet the William and Mary squad Friday night, February 15 in the S. T. C. gym. The game is scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock, and a silver offering will be taken at the door, proceeds of which will go to help the Peace Welfare Drive.

The Farmville squad defeated the William and Mary team last year in a game played at Williamsburg. Two more varsity games have been scheduled for the team, one to be played March 1 and the other March 2. On these dates the Farmville team will meet the Harrisonburg and Bridgewater team.

The William and Mary team will arrive here Friday in time for supper and will be the guests of the school for the night and breakfast Saturday morning. The team will leave Saturday morning for Sweet Briar College where they will clash with that school's team on Saturday night.

Sophs Announce Production Theme

"Happy Holidays," a review of the holidays from Valentine's Day straight through New Year's will be the theme of the Sophomore production, announced "Bebe" Geyer, chairman today. This presentation, will take place in the "Rec" Thursday night, February 21, at 8 o'clock.

Included in the script are jokes, songs, several of which are original, every kind of dance imaginable, dialogues and monologues, and even a saxaphone solo. Food will be sold by the class. Everyone will find entertainment in watching the cast whiz through the good times of a complete year.

"Bebe" Geyer is chairman of the production this year. Serving under her are Hildrian Suttle, Virginia Tindall, Virginia Yonce, Mary Rattray, and Joyce Hill.

LEFT LEAD

JOGGIN' ALONG

Fooled you Friday, didn't we? The weather turned out so beautifully no one stopped to reason why . . . we just headed stableward regardless! 'Course there were only four . . . and we didn't leave 'til 4:30, but by garsh, we took advantage of that one gorgeous day, anyhow. Joyce Townsend and Susy Smithher jogged along like veterans behind Anna Stuart and yours truly . . . and maybe you think the horses didn't enjoy it, too. There was no holding 'em in . . . and the Pony really made up for lost time. Eagle, natch, was snooty as usual and led the way clear to Longwood by several city blocks, but the rest of the ride was chummy enough, and the air echoed with the gay notes of "The Ole Cowhand" and "The Shaggy Burro." Red Fox never limped once (cross your fingers!) and Creeper held his own in the nicest canter ever.

NGHT-MARES

'Twas too threatening Saturday to risk it . . . and besides, you'll know what we mean when we announce that Joyce dropped in for a surprise visit Friday night and everyone honored, spent Saturday afternoon sleeping it off. The only thing that halted the day-break ride after we spent the night in much boot-polishin' and saddle - soapin' . . . heh, heh, heh! . . . . well, you saw for yourselves the varying degrees of the weather which fell Sunday. We feel more at home in the snow anyway these days.

Monday, however, B. Bibb and little Scotty proved that boggy weather underfoot can be overcome, and they took off on Eagle and Fox for a gay ol' afternoon on the trail. Tuesday? You figure it out!

"LEFT LEAD"

We talk so much about "left lead" and "right lead" and "change your lead" we seldom stop to think about those who may not exactly know what we're talking about. So to quote an authority, we turn again to Margaret Cabell Self's "Fun on Horseback" and give you lesson Two in what-you-might-like-to-know about riding. She says:

"As all horsemen know, it is very important in traveling in circles (in the ring) or in turning corners at a canter that the horse leads with his inside legs. If he leads with his outside legs, there will be no leg under him to

Class Games Begin Wednesday, March 6

Class volleyball and basketball games have been scheduled to begin Wednesday, March 6, Frances Lee, president of the Athletic Association, announced Monday night.

These tournaments will consist of six games each in which each class will play every other class. Winners of the basketball tourney will receive 10 points for the color cup, and winners of the volleyball tourney will receive five points toward the cup.

Varsity basketball players will not be allowed to participate in class games, and eight practices are required before a person is eligible to play. A scholastic average of "D" is required for any person who wishes to participate in these games.

MISS MARY DABNEY

Dabney To Assume Duties of Coach

Iler Withdraws Because of Injury

Due to a right arm injury received, Miss Olive Iler, physical education instructor, has had to withdraw from further coaching of the S. T. C. varsity basketball team. Miss Mary Dabney, swimming and physical education instructor, will assume the duties of coaching the team through this season.

Miss Dabney came to Farmville State Teachers College in the fall of 1944 from Lynchburg as swimming instructor, and she has worked with various teams and classes since she has been here. She is present adviser of the sophomore class.

Miss Iler is faculty adviser of the present junior class, Athletic Association and Monogram Club. She is also active in other organizations and activities on campus.

As war prevented transportation for the varsity team during the past four basketball seasons, few games were played during that time. This year is the first since 1941 that any schedule for the varsity team had been attempted.

Ping Pong Tourney Date Posted by A. A.

The list for signing up for the ping pong tourney has been removed from the AA bulletin board, and a chart showing the date and time of matches for all entrants will replace this list.

The tourney will be played in the rec of the main building between 10 and 10:30 o'clock at night. Spectators are welcome.

Five points will be given towards the color cup for the winner of this tourney. The matches will consist of a round robin tournament, in which every player plays everyone else. If a person fails to show up for her match with a person that match will be forfeited by the person who fails to come.

LOUISE BLANE'S

On the Ball

Last Thursday afternoon Farmville's varsity basketball team had its first game with Lynchburg in which Farmville won with a score of 31-27. This game gave the playwrs a wonderful opportunity to see their faults and how they could improve their playing techniques before the next game.

This Friday night, February 15, the Farmville team will meet William and Mary's varsity team in the S. T. C. gym. Everyone come out and support your Blue and Whites and show the good old Farmville spirit. Let's give the William and Mary team a hearty welcome and show them our interpretation of good sportsmanship.

Class Games

The class basketball and volleyball games will be played in the near future. Don't forget to get those last-minute practices in before it is too late. Eight practices are required before a person is eligible to play on the class team.

A varsity basketball player is not eligible to play on class teams, and so plenty of people are needed for the teams. The points for basketball and five points for volleyball are given to the class winning these games. This will bring up the points on that color cup, and so everybody is urged to work hard. If you aren't playing on a class team, don't forget that you can still support your team by cheering for them at the games. Listen to the announcements for the date and time of these games and come down to support your players.

In all of these class games, good sportsmanship is the greatest asset to your team, and so let's show our cooperation and good sportsmanship in every phase of the game. Here's wishing luck to both green and whites and red and whites. Don't forget the way to the gym, and let's stay in the game.

Orchesis

Orchesis (the word) comes from the Greeks, meaning to dance, but its advocates here at Farmville are beginning to wonder if the Greeks had another word for it.

First they go all western. Imagine dancing while riding a horse. Then they go to the slums. What they do isn't in print yet, but delinquents aren't until it's too late. They're working hard and fast at be oming so.

And Ellis' number—you'll just die. "Gee Gee" howls and Betty dances by "a-wailin' down the road."

Then you're asked to state your type. "Blood?" No! Just a fashion show with all of you on parade. wanna see yourself?

this party.

The Peace Welfare Drive, held on our campus last week for the benefits of the World Student Service Fund and the Red Cross, was a big success. We went over the top. Many thanks to all who helped make this drive successful.

Committee meetings will be held tonight in the usual meeting places. All committee members are urged to attend.

Dr. Baker James Cauthen spoke to the Y. W. A.'s last night at a banquet held in the Recreation Center at the Baptist Church.

The Westminster Fellowship joined the Presbyterian Young People in their meeting last Sunday night, when Mr. Ace Tubbs, a ministerial student from the Union Theological Seminary in Richmond spoke.

Mardi Gras Dress Need Not Be Fussy

What to wear to Mardi Gras? Now, that's a question which looms large for most of us right now. Let's see now, what we can put together that would make an acceptable costume?

Have you looked into the trunks in the attic at home? Maybe, you can find some dress that great-great-grandmother used to wear to balls, and then you could be a southern belle.

Then, there are always the Mexican senoritas with their mantillas, or gypsy dancers with their multi-colored shirts or blouses, excessive jewelry, and flowers in their hair.

Perhaps you can find the makings of the native dress of a Russian, Chinese or South Sea Islander. Flashy, full skirts and peasant blouses with little jewelry make a Russian; a straight, square-line smock with a high round neck and pigtails make a Chinaman; and some kind of cotton blouse and skirt with gardenias over your ears make a South Sea Island gal. (Grass skirts are taboo!)

Perhaps you have a tight fitting evening dress, which you can load down with jewelry and a turban which you can pile high with flowers, pineapple, or what-have-you, and be Carmen Miranda for one night.

Get your heads to thinking and we'll see on February 23, how original and clever you can be! And don't forget your masks!

senior building.

a) Students going with their dates on week-ends to hotel or Cactus Inn for dinner sign out in the desk book of their respective building. They do the same on week-ends when going to the movies with boys.

b) A group of girls going to the hotel or Ca tus Inn for dinner should also sign out in the same manner.

c) Juniors and seniors who desire to go away for a week-end sign out on going away slips provided they have permission from the home department to leave school.

D.—Week Dates

1.—During the week, dates whether in the day or at night, must be in the dean's parlor or in the "rec" of the main building.

2.—All dates at night during the week must be approved by the Dean or by someone in the home office.

3.—Dates may accompany juniors to the door of Cunningham Hall. They leave at 10 P. M.

4.—Seniors may go with their dates down town from 10 to 10:30, or they may remain in the Dean's Parlor. They may be accompanied by their dates to Cunningham Hall. Dates are expected to leave at 10:30.

E.—No dates are allowed in parlors or in the "rec" during meal hours. Neither are dates allowed during church hours. Either the girls go to church with their dates, or have the boys wait until the church hours are over to come to see them. This applies to church hours at night as well as in the morning.

F.—When going out to meals with dates be ready to go when the college bell rings for meals.

G.—When dates are supposed to leave:

1.—Juniors and seniors are responsible for seeing that their dates leave on Saturday and Sunday nights at 11:45.

2.—Remember that during the week juniors have their dates leave at 10 P. M.; Seniors' dates leave at 10:30 P. M.

Play Rehearsal

cause of a vague superstition about clergymen aboard ships being unlucky, but his all around good humor finally endears him to the hearts of all concerned. Tom is convinced that he's a good fellow when his reply to, "You aren't going to preach a sermon, are you?' is a healthy, "Good lord, no."

Max Perrow puts on a convincing portrayal of Mr. Lingley . . . a harrumphing old gentleman somewhat of the "Man who came to dinner" type. With his pills and his papers and his eternal blood pressure, he's very apt to steal more than one good scene. And deservingly enough. Then adding to the confusion of the third act, we find Billy Hart as Mr. Thompson and Bill DeHardit as Howard.

The play is progressing nicely, to coin a phrase. The human element of rehearsals very naturally includes a few forgotten speeches, several missed cues, and the informal backstage buzz of conversation. The costume girls and the property group sit scattered about the auditorium, and the make-up people wander in to see how they are going to make out with beards and things. All in all, the auditorium is alive with the normal activity of a play in progress, and comes Founders' Day,- results will be ready for all to see. We say, "Here's to it! and may it be the biggest successful comeback ever staged by the combined forces of the S. T. C. Dramatic Club and the H.-S. Jongleurs.

act as a bearing leg and the horse may fall."

By inside, we mean of course, the legs toward the center of the ring, "outside" being those next to the fence.)

"The rider 'lifts' a horse into a canter by walking the horse toward the fence applying pressure with the outside leg and at the same time 'lifting' the head with the reins, giving more freedom with the reins as soon as he feels the horse has taken a step or two, he should be straightened out so that he is not traveling on a diagonal.

"When the horse has learned to take the canter evenly and smoothly on either lead while traveling in a large circle, he must be taught to do the same thing while traveling in a straight line. This is followed by teaching him to take a 'flying change' of lead. Care should be taken to make certain that the horse changes lead both behind and before. Many animals change only in front, travelling disunited (leading with one front leg and the opposite back leg) which is both uncomfortable and extremely dangerous."

Now then . . . ready for your mid-term estimate on left and right leads? See if you can note it on other people's mounts as well as your own. And if you start on the wrong lead, learn to change without stopping and starting over.

This can be done by cantering straight into the fence at the end of the ring, turning sharply just before you make your circle. Not too sharply, though! and don't forget your grip! If your horse has been well-trained, you should have little trouble.

Now relax . . .. you won't really hafta take an exam!

Lyceum Artists to Appear Friday Night at 8 O'clock

Program Slated For Auditorium

Mary Davenport, contralto and Frances Magnes, violinist, will appear on the lyceum program in the college auditorium, Friday, February 22 at 8 o'clock.

Miss Davenport attended Wells College before entering the University of London. She studied music under Albert Garcia while in England. When she returned to the States, she studied with Mme. Elizabeth Schumann at the Curtis Institute of Music. She has appeared as soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Bach Festival in Philadelphia, and an oratorio appearance in Cumberland, Maryland.

Frances Magnes has just returned from a tour of the Middle Western States that was directed by the Lucius Pryor Concert Service. Critics acclaim her as a splendid young artist with an amazing technique and a tone of rare beauty.

The first to appear on the program will be Miss Frances Magnes. She will play "Suite in E Minor," "Preludio," "Adagio Ma Non Tonto," "Allemande," and "Gigne" by Bach. The final selection of the first part will be Saint-Saens "Introduction" and "Rondo Capriccioso."

For the next part Miss Davenport will sing Schubert's "Die Forelle," Brahm's "Immer Lester Wind Schlummer," Brahm's "Vergebliches Staendchen," Fauere's Apres un Reve" and "Guitares et Mandolines" by Saint-Saens.

Miss Magnes will return for part three with Brahm's "Hungarian Dance Number 1," Brahm's "Hungarian Dance Number 6," Sarasate's "Romanza and Aluza" and Paganini's "Caprice."

The final selections on the program will include Sibelius "The Tryst," Carpenter's "The Player Queen," Barber's "Sure on This Shining Night," Davis's "Nancy Hanks", and Grieg's "The Dream."

Bertha Melnik will be the accompanist for the guest artists.

Miss Davenport will also appear as guest soloist at the Presbyterian Church Sunday night, February 24, at 7:30 o'clock. All college freshmen are particularly invited to attend this service.

Mardi Gras Court

Sophs To Present "Happy Holidays" In Auditorium

Show Will Feature Solos, Dances, Gags

Fun, frolic and food will be featured at the sophomore production "Happy Holidays," which will be given in the large auditorium tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

According to "Bebe" Geyer, chairman of the production, there will be a variety of entertainment. Special features will include a sax solo, some original songs, gags, dances, solos, and monologues. Bright scenery and costumes will lighten up the place.

Food will be sold during intermission by members of the class. The usual cokes and nabs will be on sale.

Tickets are now on sale at the table in the hall after each meal. They also may be obtained from members of the class.

Serving on "Bebe's" committee are Hildrian Suttle, Virginia Tindall, Virginia Yonce, Mary Rattray, and Joyce Hill.

Chairman of the various subcommittees are, dance, Hildrian Suttle; costumes, Mary Rattray; music, Virginia Tindall; script, Betsy Scott; properties, Virginia Bailey; make-up, Betty Scroggins; food, Mary Ann Marris; finance, Doris Ballance; and lighting, Janie Hanks.

Stephenson To Talk In Chapel Friday

The Reverend Mr. Richard Stephenson, a student at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., will speak in chapel Friday morning.

Mr. Stephenson, brother of Miss Olivia Stephenson, Baptist Student Secretary, is on the campus this week speaking to the Baptist students in observance of Student Evangelistic Week. He spoke at the Student Center Monday and Tuesday at 5:15. He will also speak there Thursday and Friday afternoon at the same hour.

Mr. Stephenson was graduated from Hampden-Sydney College in 1943. He was president of Student Christian Association there, and was also in Who's Who In American Universities and Colleges that year. When he graduates in June, he will accept a pastorate at Ft. Myers, Florida.

Murdock To Sing In Local Church

Corporal Richard Murdock, tenor, will appear on the musical program at the Presbyterian Church, February 24 at 7:30 o'clock. He will sing Mallott's "The Lord's Prayer" and Harker's "God Shall Wipe Away All Tears."

Corporal Murdock is now stationed at Camp Pickett. He was the former soloist of the First Presbyterian Church of Detroit and has appeared on the program with the Ford Sunday Evening Hour. He is a former student of the graduate school of Juilliard School of Music in New York.

Girls Give Program On Puerto Rico

Carolyn Bobbitt, senior from South Hill; Kitty Maddox, senior from Lynchburg; Emily Neal, junior from Chatham; Nancy Parrish, junior from Manassas; and Lorene Thomas, senior from Lawrenceville were recently issued bids to Beorc Eh Thorn, English honor society.

Founded on this campus in October 1935, Beorc Eh Thorn seeks to encourage creative writing and the study of literature. It gives its active support to the publication of the college literary quarterly and sponsors visits of distinguished writers to the campus.

At a meeting of Beorc Eh Thorn last week, Virginia Shackelford presented a program on Puerto Rican literature. Julia Perez, Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, spoke to the group on the history of that island after which Isabelita Maldonado reviewed the literature of Puerto Rico. In concluding the program, Felicidad Avellanet read a Puerto Rican short story which has been translated by Virginia Shackelford.

Jane Philhower, Williamsburg, who will reign as queen of Mardi Gras Saturday night, February 23, in the college gymnasium.

Chapel Speaker Tells Girls That Faith Must Increase

The Reverend Charles M. Jones, speaker for Religious Emphasis Week, the theme of which is "Religion—Our Greatest Challenge", began a talk in chapel yesterday on the subject "A Growing Conception of God." He completed that theme in today's chapel.

Mr. Jones opened his discussion with the challenging statement that unless the college student allows her faith to grow, it will die or else become meaningless. He then reviewed the way in which the Hebrew and Christian peoples have allowed their conceptions of God to grow. Mr. Jones said that to Moses God was confined to Mt. Sinai. Then when the Hebrews migrated to Palestine, they no longer associated God with just Mt. Sinai but also with their land. As the people moved from one country to another their God became "not only a God of all lands but a God who sat in heaven looking down on a people who might be compared with grasshoppers."

The Reverend Jones reminded the student body that it is hard to change our minds about something we already believe and that it is confusing but that if we want to keep our religion, our minds and our faith must grow.

This afternoon at 4:30 o'clock there was an association meeting in the student lounge at which time the students had an opportunity to have some of their religious problems discussed.

Tonight at nine o'clock a discussion group will be held in Senior Rec. Special prayer programs are being held each night. The students are also reminded that the "Y" Lounge is open all week for meditation.

A resident of Chapel Hill, N. C., Mr. Jones attended Maryville College, Columbia University, and the Union Theological Seminary in Richmond.

Rehearsals For Play To Continue Monday

Play rehearsals for "Outward Bound," the spring production of the S. T. C. Dramatic Club and H.-S. C. Jongleurs have been discontinued this week because of examinations at Hampden - Sydney. The cast includes several members of the H.-S. student body, and the boys are unable to attend rehearsals during the examination period.

Miss Leola Wheeler, director, has been ill in the infirmary with a cold, but expects to be out by Monday, February 25 when practices will be resumed, according to Cariotta Norfleet, president of the Dramatic Club.

Orchesis Dance Group Will Present Recital To Students Next Wednesday

Orchesis sings and speaks as it dances this year in its annual recital next Wednesday. It is a date long awaited for by both dancers and spectators.

For the former (dancers) it is a seemingly impossible task. Last week rehearsals on the stage often necessitate a complete change from the plan worked out in the gym or Rec. Costumes have to be made, and most members of Orchesis have never shown an ability to sew a fine seam. Staging props add to the staging and lighting problems this year. But the most arduous task is to keep an outward composure when the director calls—"Do it over"! And, you thought you were through.

The spectators see only the finished composition, which lasts from a half minute to three or five. But the dancers will know how difficult it was to put on. Some bodies just won't work well together. When that is true, the grind is hard. But the policy of the club is for everyone to have at least one part, and if a girl isn't particularly fitted for a certain composition but wants to be in it, she is allowed to do so providing the group is large enough to absorb her technically. The spectator can tell who he liked, disliked, but can not give definite reasons for either. The wise procedure is to find out all you can before attending the performance.

"Opening Dance" is the first number on the program. It is a policy with Orchesis that only the members and no apprentice dance in this.

"Western Suite" which is in three parts—"Hail," "Lean Years," and "Stampede" follows. "Hail" catches the western spirit of "Hi, fellow! H'yere?" "Lean Years" is the picture of the women of the plains of prairies. You sense their loneliness, desolation of the treeless horizon. Men went West with

Frosh Elect Cake Production Head

At a recent meeting of the freshman class, Jean Cake was elected general chairman of the Freshman Production which will be held March 28.

Production practices will begin in the near future, and as a result committee chairmen have been appointed by Jean Cake, Evelyn Patterson will be in charge of tickets and publicity, and Ann Galloway and Martha Gillum supervise the staging and properties groups. Betty Spindler and Frances DeBerry will manage the music and dances and Gwen Cress will supervise the make-up and costuming groups.

Raymond H. French, a member of the chemistry department, is sponsor for the freshman class, while "Tootsie" Hamilton, West Point, is president of the group.

MaddoxAnnounces Dance Chaperones

Grassick Will Play For Costume Ball

The receiving line for the Mardi Gras dance, annual costume ball, which will be held in the college gymnasium Saturday night, February 23, at 8:30 o'clock will consist of Dr James Elliott Walmsley, Dean Martha Smith, and Pi Gamma Mu officers, Dorothy Overcash, Emily Carper, Betty Adams, Eleanor Bisese, and dance chairman, Kitty Maddox.

Kitty Maddox has also announced the chaperones who are Dr. J. L. Jarman, Mrs. Hallie Laing, Miss Olive Iler, Mr. S. M. Graham. Miss Pauline Camper, Miss Virginia Wall, Miss Florence Stubbs, Miss Leola Wheeler, Miss Willie London, Miss Virginia Bedford, and Miss Lucille Jennings. Mr. R. H. French and Dr. C. Gordon Moss will be at the door.

Music for the dance will be furnished by Bill Grassick and orchestra, featuring Betty McHugh as vocalist.

Costumes, which should be worn by all girls, must be knee length; however, the men do not wear costumes. There will be someone at the door to check each costume for suitability.

Jane Philhower and her court consisting of Margaret Orange, Beverly Peebles, Peggy T. Ross, Ann Carter, Margaret Elliett, Julia Booher, Barbara Krebbs, and Margaret Wall, will reign over the festival.

Dance tickets went on sale Monday of last week. Stag tickets are 60c and drags $1.20.

Committee heads for the dance are business, Eleanor Bisese; advertisement, Betty Adams and Margaret Wilson; orchestra, Evelyn Grizzard; floor show, Emily Carper; decoration, Kitty East and Carolyn Bobbitt; costumes, Dorothy Overstreet; and floor show, Louise Rives.

Shufflebarger Named Cigarette Official

Anne Shufflebarger, junior from Bluefield, West Virginia, has been appointed an official Chesterfield campus representative, according to an announcement made this week by Ruth Brooks, business manager of the Rotunda.

Anne is active in campus activities serving this year as costume chairman of the Dramatic Club, and as co-chairman of the costume committee of the general May Day committee.

110 Alumnae Attend Luncheon In Roanoke

One hundred and ten alumnae attended the luncheon in Roanoke on Saturday, February 16. Those from the faculty and administration present were Dr. J. L. Jarman, Miss Emily Barksdale, Miss Winnie Hiner, Miss Pauline Camper, Miss Virginia Wall, Mrs. M. Boyd Coyner, and S. M. Graham.

Miss Wall and Mrs. Coyner left Farmville on February 13 and visited high schools in Lynchburg, Bedford, Salem, Christiansburg, Blacksburg, and Roanoke, concluding their trip with the alumnae luncheon.

Jarman Organ Fund To Honor President

Each year, we as students are given an opportunity to contribute to the Founder's Day fund, and each year, our contributions reveal that we are actively interested in the work that is being carried on by Farmville daughters who have gone before us.

For years, Dr. Jarman has wanted to start an organ fund; however, each year there seemed to be more immediate demands for the Founder's Day fund. Nineteen hundred forty six brings forth a different picture of faith and hope for the establishment of the Jarman Organ fund, a tribute to the one who has served this college and the State of Virginia in his high ideals of education for almost half a century. This will be an undertaking in which every member of the faculty, administration, student body, and alumnae association will have a part in raising the money and an undertaking to which all Founder's Day contributions will go. To date, many alumnae have sent their contributions to this fund, expressing their joy at having an opportunity to help establish the Jarman Organ fund in honor of their beloved president who loves music as few people do.

This fund is a tribute to a life of service in this college, a tribute to a great lover of music, and a tribute to the one person above all others who is "the first gentleman of Farmville."

Student Building was erected largely through the efforts and cooperation of the alumnae and student body. Scholarship funds have been established to make it possible for worthy girls to remain in school, portraits have been put in the library as a result of contributions, and books have been added to the library shelves. Gifts from the alumnae and student body of other years prove our loyalty to Farmville and our continued interest in education.

This spring we have a new undertaking, and we as college students are happy of this chance to pay tribute through our contributions to one whom we love.

Religious Week Offers A Challenge To Students

During the past months, we have been shaken and awed by the use that has been made of atomic energy. We have thought seriously and deeply about the effects that the use of this power can have upon our world. When we think of the tremendous importance of world problems such as this, we begin searching for a solution to them. Then it is that we realize that we should think more deeply of the power that is greater by far than any atomic energy, that power is the power of God and religion.

To help us reach more definite conclusions as to the place that religion holds in our lives and in our world, the Young Women's Christian Association is observing Religious Emphasis Week. These few days are planned so that we may realize the significance of religion to us as individuals and of the power that our religion has in solving the moral and ethical problems that are of such importance today.

We are offered this week a challenge—the challenge of religion. Each of us, as world citizens, should take advantage of the opportunities that are given us this week to find the true meaning of our Christian faith. Let us work and think together this week about the most important thing in our lives, our religion, so that we may be able to say that the challenge that had been given to us did not go unheeded.

Minnie Lee Crumpler
President, YWCA

The news of this week is good and bad, both the domestic news and the foreign news. Most weeks are like that, but this week's news shows advances of progress and also shows stagnation in some phases.

As a result of the government's submission to industry, the steel strike has ended. Chester Bowles, O. P. A. Director, first said that the steel industry could have only a $2.25 raise, but the steel men wanted $5, and Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles granted a $5 raise. General Motors strike still continues, but a settlement is expected immediately. It is hoped that the new wage and price policy which was set forth by the President this week will not lead to inflation but will pave a way for a great period of production and prosperity here in America.

The UNO General Assembly and Security Council both adjourned this week intact. The next meeting will be held March 21, in New York City which was approved as the temporary headquarters of the UNO before adjournment. Just before the Security Council adjourned, Russia voted and used her veto power to veto a proposal by America for Britain and France to make direct settlement with the Levant state for eventually removing their troops from Syria and Lebanon. Russia did not get a commission sent to the Dutch East Indies either.

Several personalities appeared outstanding in the news. Harold Ickes, an excellent offical which is admitted by his most bitter antagonists, resigned; either because he was very stubborn or because he had principles which he did not feel that he could compromise. Clare Booth Luce, Congresswoman from Connecticut, joined the Catholic Church.

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

It was all to quiet on the S. T. C. front this past week-end, but things should be rolling come Mardi Gras.

And Minnie, after a week of experiencing butterflies, agrees most heartily that Bruce is simply divine! From all reports the feeling seems to be mutual!

Just exactly what were the contents of that telegram that thrilled Betty Bibb so?

And how about Dot May's orchid that has never come—out of the box. It seems that she ran quite a variety of men on her week-end, but none belonged with the orchid so it died a placid life!

Midst the flurry of valentines, flowers, etc., Cay Lynch had that "million dollar look" with a gorgeous orchid from Pete. Mike also turned her room into a florist shop with lovely red carnations from Heyman.

Agnes Milliner's one and only is coming Monday, and she's got that certain gleam in her eye.

Just who is getting to be the most familiar couple seen around campus? Betty Ellis and John Taylor, of course!

Washington and Lee was charmed this week-end by Kaki Hundley who led the figure with that cassonova from Lynchburg, Jimmy Watson. Margo also had quite a big week-end "tripping the light fantastic" with Willie.

Now, as for Margaret Orange and Philhower—did you two enjoy dancing? There's no doubt about the fact that they had a knocked-out time!

Dolly had dates too numerous to mention at West Point. Don't ask her—because she only says, "Which one?" Maybe it was that hour and a half of sleep she got, but anyway she seems to still be in pretty much of a daze!

"A word to the wise is sufficient"—so, am just warning you! Clear the Rotunda Friday if you value your life—for Bessy is going home to see Bob and she's going to be in a powerful big hurry!

Hank did it up well and called Terry all of the way from Switzerland.

Joyce Townsend, tell us about the H-S lad, Jesse Thompson. We think that you know.

Wedding bells rang on Saturday for Jean Parry. She is going to live close by us, too, over at the Whitaker homestead.

Just where did Anne Summers get the new title of M. P.?

Drag out your glad rags and we will see you at Mardi Gras.

"Happy Holiday"

Question of the Week

What did you like best about Junior Production?

Ann East: 'Cile' Sarver singing "Swanee."

Anonymous: H.-S. C.—The Can-Can costumes!

Dot May: The minstrel man, Cile Sarver.

Ann Taylor: Being able to see.

Mary Ellen Hoge: Betty Parrish's tap dancing.

Charlie Hop: You know—that little "fan-fan" dance — whatever you call it and Pete Ellett really set me off!

Martha Sours: "Mammy!"

Lee Stapes: Mar Kent Stevens' and Heidi Lacy's dance.

Betty Scroggins: Betty Parrish's dance.

Lee Palmer: It was all okay..

Lucille Jones: The general theme of the Showboat.

Phyllis Scherberger: The "Pretty Maiden" dance.

Kat Tindall: That Mammy.

Frieda Dansberger: The girl who sang "Swanee."

Craig Farrier: Barbara Kellam's dress!

Jean Taylor: The Can-Can girls.

Kitty East: Why, Birdie, naturally.

Rosa Hill: I didn't go; I was in the Infirmary.

Ann Nichols: The Captain's daughter was a thriller!

Jane Crum: I liked Ann Nichols best.

B. Cock: "Captain" Minetree.

Kitty Maddox: Mar Kent in those pants!

Margaret Lohr: The captain of the Show Boat.

Ting Rattray: Birdie and Swanee.

Liz Maxey: Birdie's singing.

Betty Ellis: The surprises which it was full of.

Rime Offers Suggestions For Mardi Gras Costumes

In a mood poetic I'd like to express
My thoughts on how you might want to dress
For the Mardi Gras dance to be held in the gym
Whether goin' by yourself or with some special him.
There's Mother Goose with suggestions galore,
So her characters may well abound on the floor.
There's Little Boy Blue and Little Bo Peep
And some of wolves could go dressed as sheep!
Poor Humpty Dumpty we'll have to leave out
Because when there's dancing I'm sure he's too stout.
A plain evening dress they say is taboo,
But here are some things you might like to do—
Marie Antoinette may be seen all bedecked
If you wear all the crinoline you can collect.
Wear your hair as high on your head as you can
And don't forget the provocative fan!
With bangles and bracelets and jewels so bright
You're sure to be bell o' the ball "Sad'day" night
Since ballet shoes are now a la mode,
You'll look like the dream that the ballet showed
If you take that old dress with the skirt of net,
Cut it off at the knee—if it isn't your pet.
With a bodice tight and the neckline low
To the ball as Columbine you'll go!
No Mardi Gras would be complete
Without the gypsies that stroll in the street—
In ruffles and patches, bracelets and junk,
Red and orange, anything you find in the trunk.
Come as a pirate in boots and short jeans,
Paint fierce black mustache on your amiable mien,
A bright red scarf and a table knife dagger,
Get your ego high, try a masculine swagger!
As sweet Little Buttercup with "watches and knives"
And "ribbons and laces for pretty young wives."
You'll fetch the hearts of all the tars
And set your rank among the stars.
From this delightful task I must desist,
Writing such doggerel I can't resist
But I must remember that you must read
And follow the words where'ere I lead
Therefore I would that you go now
And buy your ticket for the big pow-wow,
Tho' unpretentious this rhyme has an aim—
To show you that making costumes is a game,
Now I've run out of rhymes and my Muse have flew
So take my advice while I bid you adieu.

S. T. C. Basketball Team Defeats W. & M. Squad 35 to 15

Hill Scores High For Local Team

In the college gymnasium, S. T. C. defeated William and Mary on Friday night February 15, 35 to 15 in the second varsity game of the basketball season for Farmville. High scorer for S. T. C., was Rosa Hill with fourteen points, while Vineyard of William and Mary scored ten points for her team.

Players from William and Mary were Grant, Vineyard, Beinbring, Beatty, Wolfgram, Black, Fehse, Hochstrasser, and Borenstein. Farmville players were Lillian Elliott, Rosa Hill, Louise Blanc, Betty Parrish, Ann Hauser, Betty Burchett, Nancy Parrish, Margaret Orange, Kitty Sue Bridgforth, Margaret Lohr, Alice Ann Abernathy, Jean Bentley, and Peggy Ross.

At the end of the first half, STC was leading 14-10. In the second half of the game, substitutes were sent in to replace the first string players. It was a well-matched game up until the half, at which time, Farmville ran away with the ball. William and Mary put up a good games, and both teams showed fine sportsmanship on the court.

Miss Reeder of William and Mary was referee, and Miss Elizabeth Burger of STC was umpire. Armor and Burchett were scorers, and Smith and Hochstrasser were timers for the game. Betty Ellis and Betty Lee led the spectators in cheers during the quarters and half of the game.

The S. T. C. varsity team will play Bridgewater College in Bridgewater on March 1, and Madison College in Harrisonburg on March 2.

Volleyball Heads Will Be Chosen

Volleyball captains for class teams will be elected Thursday night at 7 o'clock. Margaret Lohr, manager of volleyball requests that all girls who are out for volleyball both as a class, and class team practices to be sure to come.

The class games will begin on March 6, and the tournament will be round robin.

Captains will be chosen from those who have obtained the eight practices, and they will be chosen according to ability and organization.

W&M Basketball Team Entertained

The Athletic Association entertained in student lounge for the basketbal lteam of William and Mary College after the game on Friday night.

Invited guests included the two basketball team, Miss Olive T. Iler, Miss Mary Dabney, Miss Elizabeth Burger, Miss Mary Barlow, and the coaches from the College of Wiliam and Mary.

Notice

Basketball captains will be elected Monday, February 28, at 3:50, Nellie Smith, manager of basketball, has announced. The basketball tournament will be round robin and will be played in the near future.

Academic requirements are: 16 selected units of High School and at least one year of College, including College Chemistry, and College Biology or College Zoology.

Tuition cost is $100 per year for 3 years. This covers the cost of instruction and maintenance.

Duke University School of Nursing offers the B.S. in Nursing upon completion of the 3-year nursing course and 60 semester hours of acceptable College credits.

Because of the many applications to the School, it is important that those who desire admission submit their credentials promptly. Application forms and catalogue can be obtained from: The Dean, Duke University School of Nursing, Duke Hospital, Durham, North Carolina. Adv.

LEFT LEAD

BLUE SKIES

Now you see it, now you don't. The sun, of course. Sunday was "a beautiful day to ride" . . . everybody in the school thought so, and the result was two, instead of the usual one, trail-rides. It's been "thimble-thimble, who's got the key to the stables?" ever since Jeanne left, but now she's back, so maybe with this lovely cooperation from the U. S. Weather Bureau, we'll get some regular classes in.

TACK-ROOM TATTLE

The old faithfuls, namely Anna Stuart, B. Bibb, Ducky, and some of the others have been practically living on the trail, nor are the new-comers far behind. It's a fight to the finish to see who'll be the lucky gal who takes Eagle out, and a fight to the hand-blistering finish to see how long you can hold him in once you're out! Phyl Scherberger even came back with a worthy arm-ache after an hour or so on Creaper! There's life in those bones yet. And maybe you think the Pony hasn't a mind of her own! Ye the cutest sight ever, was Mr. Reid's grandson, Dennis, being led around on a very docile Lady's back. Maybe she just doesn't know Denny was up! But that feila's a regular . . . he's the only one around here who can ride Mr. Reid's Beauty and stay in the saddle! And to think, he's not yet three years old.

It's good to see Professor Sauerwein back after lo, these many days of fun and then the flu. Next, stop, blue-jeans and the tack-room.

Mr. Wells and My Pal provided entertainment for the onlookers Sunday afternoon. When they took off up the hill at a hasty canter, by-standers scattered like chickens. There was hope of using the wagon, but Sherlock wasn't around to drive, and after the Christmas carolling experiences with Spud in harness, we have a few doubts which have yet to be overcome!

One thing about Indora's illness is that it has gentled her down from the nervousness she used to show. In fact, she's almost as spoiled as Eagle; even if not as cute about it.

After literally knocking themselves out, Jackie Watson and Phyllis Bagley finally got around to a real ride the other day, and whether the trouble they went to was worth it or not, they seemed to enjoy it. At least we never saw two more determined jocks, anyway.

Bobo and Mr. Wells have hopes of parting with a couple of our "wuss specimens" and getting in a couple new horses. We hate to see any of the old favorites go, but . . . who knows? Another Spud, or possibly, but not as probably, a new Eagle . . . 'twouldn't be bad.

"POEM"

Why the sudden trend to go poetic of late, we aren't quite sure, but here's one Ted Malone introduced as "Sunday in the park" . . . breezing along the bridle-path . . . and which Helen Frazee-Bower, who wrote it, calls "Discovery" . . . (We'd call it "Bareback, No Doubt").

The horse has a place on his back that is made
Not cuddly and cushioned and plump,
But sticking right up like a sharp
little blade,
Half-way from his neck to his rump.
It's some like an island, but most like a hill
With acres of soft sand around it.
Not everyone knows that it's there
. . . but you will
If you trot. That's the way I found it.
Watch your diagonal!

On the Ball

PING-PONG

Back and forth across the net goes the ping-pong ball. It really leads an exciting life, although to an onlooker, it seems quite monotonous spending one's time bouncing across a net. Ping pong is a game of skill and endurance, and it is fast becoming one of the favorite American indoor sports.

JUMP BALL

Yours truly is still mentioning basketball in the column, for it is the major sport in circulation now. The girls who have been out for varsity and class teams have been working hard.

There is nothing quite as exciting as a basketball game. The thrill when your team makes the goal, the hushed silence when someone has a free throw, the excitement you felt as a girl tries a long shot, and the exaltation you feel if she makes it, all these go to make up the audiences' feeling toward the game.

This year let's have larger crowds out for the class games. Come down and support your colors, not only for loyalty, but because you will find it interesting to watch your class mates on the court.

ATHLETIC IDEAS

So you want to be an athlete? Not everyone is built for that, but there are many who have tried, and succeeded in doing some sport well because they did try. Practice keeps running through your mind, but that is exactly what you have to do, if you expect to get anywhere on the tennis courts, hockey field, riding ring, basketball court, or in other activities.

Until next week adieu, and don't forget to stay in the game.

Just Looking Thanks

By LELA BOULDIN

To points south, east, west and north journeyed S. T. C. girls over the week-end.

To Richmond went Marian Gunn, Nancy Foscue, Barbara Bragg, Nancy Holton, Lucille Beazley, Margie Hewlett, Hilda Bennett, Claire Clark, Betty Gillespie, Muriel Crostic, Iris Davis, Doris Elliott, Margaret Lohr, Mary Lee Jordan, Mary Kennedy, Nancy Litz, Mary Ann Morris, Virginia Marshall and others.

To see the folks in Homeville, went Patsy Dale; in Branchville, went Thelma Davis, and to Stony Creek went Alice Ann Abernathy. Windsor was appealing to Alene Alphin and Barbara Crowther.

Lawrenceville attracted Virginia Bailey and Shirley Hawks.

In Chatham were Nan Sours, Dot Bennett, Beatrice Geyer, and Imogene Moore.

Midwinter dances at Washington and Lee called Cornelia Davidson, Sue McCorkle, and Betsy Ann Brown to Lexington.

Carolyn Bobbitt went to South Hill, and Jean Boyd went to South Boston. Alice Buck and Nadine Lewis journeyed up to Baltimore, Maryland.

To Petersburg went Anne Baer, Kitty Parham, Ruth Barrow, and George Ann Lewis.

Evelyn Goodman, Betty Jane Brockway, Augusta Hargan, Cary Beard, Mary Ann Dove, Ethel Shockley, Rachel Brugh, and Helen Jackson answered the call to Roanoke.

Visiting in Charlottesville were Dot Cummings, Carol Jenkins and Evelyn Mahanes.

In Suffolk were Betty Brothers and Muriel McBride and to Emporia went Dorothy Porch.

Granddaughters Have Valentine Banquet

The Granddaughter's Club held a Valentine banquet on February 12 at 6 o'clock in the college tea room.

Guests attending the banquet were Dr. J. L. Jarman, Mr. and Mrs. M. Boyd Coyner, and Miss Virginia Wall, adviser. Toasts were given to Dr. Jarman, Miss Wall, and the new members. As a part of the program, the entire group of girls and visitors sang "Onward Farmville" and the "Alma Mater."

Phi Zetas Celebrate With Banquet, Tea

Phi Zeta Sigma sorority celebrated its annual Founder's Day week end with a banquet in the tea room on Saturday night and with a tea in the chapter room on Sunday afternoon.

Invited guests at the banquet included Dr. J. L. Jarman, Dean Martha Smith, Miss Ruth Gleaves, Pan-Hellenic adviser, Miss Grace Mix, former Pan-Hellenic adviser, Miss Lila London, and Miss Willie London, adviser, as well as past and present members of the chapter.

Former members who were back for the week-end included Estelle Smith, Doris Smith, Isabel Key, Mary Lou Dondley, Alice Feitig, Alice Nichols, Mary Elizabeth Grizzard, and Roberta Davis.

an adventuresome spirit but women feared the plains. The women's lot was a hard one. The years were too often lean. If it wasn't grasshoppers, it was locusts but most often the drought and the dust storms were the most dreaded. "Stampede" needs no explanation. It is just that in rodeo style.

"Is There Freedom?" is a three part suite which was shown for the first time at the Christmas Sing program. "From Sorrow", the first part has been reworked completely as a duet. When the ladies move in a duet, one's movements have to complement or enhance the others. Here you see the sorrow of today through the eyes of two women—the young and old.

"From Want" brings to mind the millions of starving peoples of today. It is not a pretty picture but a dramatic one. The facial expression and the outstretched reaching hands leave you with a strange feeling as if you had looked into the far recesses of the fathomless eyes of a person stupified with hunger.

"Of Worship" is the third part of the suite. It is a symbolical portrayal of our three faiths, Jewish, Catholic and Protestant. A chorus or group moves to the recitation of its own voices, each time changing its movements so that at the end you feel that one is what he is by birthright, that all believe in one God, that elements of religion are symbolically the same.

The Jewish theme portrays "the Kindling of the Sabbath Lights," which is a family ritual of every household. The Catholic theme is a symbolical exemplification of the mass in Sarabande (a dance form still used in Latin American countries). The Protestant theme uses two predominant elements, the singing of hymns and prayers treated simply and beautifully to leave one exalted, yet humble to believe in one God.

"The Roots Are Deep" is in two parts. The first will appear entertaining, but it is not meant to be. It shows apparent innocence of a juvenile delinquent. He does what you see for want of something to do, some place to go. What you see is not the true juvenile. You see a tough- talking guy, slangy in his expressions who thinks it is smart to shoot crap, steal, drink, and carouse the streets at night.

The second part shows what is underneath this hard-guy pose. First of all, he wants love, a feeling of being wanted, a feeling that he matters to himself and to others. Instead he is treated cruelly, shunned, discriminated against, or neglected. Society makes him what he is.

"A Goin' Down This Road" is a poignant tale sung as it is danced. The humor is broad. It was meant to be.

"What is you type?" is a college fashion study. To tell you about it would spoil it for you. Just don't be surprised at anything you see or hear. It's pointed! It's funny! It's zany!

Minister's Interview Shows Many Interesting Facts of Life Study

By JEAN CAKE

We have with us this week on the campus, the Rev. Charles M. Jones. Since this is not his first visit, I'm sure many of us have had the pleasure of renewing his acquaintance. From the programs distributed in chapel, those of you who do not know him have learned that he is now minister of the Presbyterian Church in Chapel Hill, N. C. He attended Maryville College, Columbia University and Union Theological Seminary in Richmond. When I talked to him he told me that it would be incorrect to say that he was educated in those places. Although college is an important part of a person's life, only knowledge is gained there. One is really educated by living. Mr. Jones firmly believes that other activities besides college life have served to more fully complete his education. For example, he ran a restaurant in Texas for a while where he was able to observe people and conditions to get a more complete view of life. He worked in the Hudson Motor Company in Detroit also. He learned a great deal while doing ordinary labor in a silk mill. In these places a person can face true facts and understand actual conditions. This is very necessary to a man of his profession if he is really going to help other people.

One reason, says Mr. Jones, that college cannot fully educate a person is because while in school one leads a more or less sheltered life. He is not in a position to know what is going on else where in the world. His viewpoints and opinions are curbed and he does not have a chance to come in contact with factors to change them.

Mr. Jones suggests that a good way to improve this would be to take a person out of school when he is a junior in college and give him a job for a year in the type of work he is studying for. This would give him a chance to find out exactly what he needs to learn. When he comes back to school to finish his course he would have this experience to guide him.

Classes Excused On Founder's Day At STC, March 9

Contributions to Go Toward Organ Fund

No classes will be held on campus on Founder's Day, Saturday, March 9. This will be the twenty-fifth anniversary for the class of 1929, and will also be the reunion for the "Six" classes.

Registration will begin at 9 o'clock Saturday in the Main building. The Farmville alumnae will have a coffee for the guests in the Student Lounge at 10 o'clock, and members of Granddaughter's Club of which Rosa Lee Bell is president, will assist with the serving. The alumnae luncheon will be held in the Rec and 1 o'clock. There will be a formal dinner at 6 o'clock, in the college dining hall.

The final event scheduled will be the play "Outward Bound" which will be presented by the Dramatic Club under the direction of Miss Leola Wheeler. The play will be presented in the auditorium at 8 o'clock.

All Founder's Day contributions from alumnae, students, faculty, and administration will go toward the Jarman Organ Fund. Some day, Farmville will have a bigger and better auditorium, and at that time, a pipe organ will be needed.

Dr. Wynne Attends Educational Meeting

Dr. J. P. Wynne, professor of education and philosophy and director of teacher education, is attending the meeting of the American Association of School Administrators in Cleveland, Ohio, this week. This convention should be an important one because it is the first meeting since the beginning of the war.

The American Association of School Administrators was formerly the Department of Superintendents of the National Education Association.

Resume Practices For Spring Play

Play Will Be Given On Founder's Day

Rehearsals have been resumed for "Outward Bound", spring production of the S. T. C. Dramatics' Club and H.-S. C. Jongleurs, according to Carlotta Norfleet, president of the Dramatic Club. Practices had been discontinued during the past week because of examinations at Hampden-Sydney which prevented the male characters from attending the nightly rehearsals.

The cast includes Mary Ann Adams, who plays the role of Ann, the young wife of Henry, played by Hugh Warren, Martha Frances Webb as Mrs. Midget, a charwoman; Carlotta Norfleet as the prim Mrs. Cleveland-Banks; Dick Wiant as Scrubby, the steward; Frank Brook as Tom Prior; Frank Blanton as the Rev. Mr. Duke; Max Perrow as Mr. Lingley, and Bill Hart and Bill DeHardit as Mr. Thompson and Howard, respectively.

Masked Mardi Gras Ball Proclaimed Huge Success

The masked ball—smacks of mystery like anything, doesn't it? Well, glamour anyway—the masks didn't last long at S. T. C.'s Mardi Gras. A thing can get too mysterious when it comes to being sure you've picked the right man to break on. But even without the masks, there was color and hilarity, and a general rare old time in the gym last Saturday night. And talk about "one world" — Chinamen, Indians, Dutchmen, and goodness knows what else were knocking themselves out living together in harmony. (High-brow pun).

We also saw the Queen of Hearts, the Jack of Spades, various versions of Scarlet O'Hara, a Tom Sawyer or two, even one gentleman in side-burns. In short, there was a little bit of almost everything. And if you've never seen a stately colonial lady manipulate her hoops through a dance — boogie variety—you haven't lived.

The judges had a bad time, but finally came through with a decision. Congratulations to Kitty Sue, whose black taffeta bustled affair was judged the prettiest; Juanita Davis who won the prize for the second prettiest in her grandmother's wedding dress; Ann Nichols, who was most original as a stick of candy; and Martha Ellen Jones, who was right behind her.

Queen Philhower and her court, presiding over the whole works, were royally entertained by Kitty East, singing "Beautiful Dreamer", Betty Ellis and Rosie Ramsey, dancing a speeded-up version of the minuet, and a chorus of five voices singing "In the Gloaming," and "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes."

The band, to say the least, was really on the beam. That rhumba! And, as Mr. Graham put it, that "slinky blond soloist"! There was enough of the slow and sweet to the most ardent jitter-bugs, and enough of he slow and sweet to make the court happy. They would have had a tough time with too much swing.

The spectators had almost as much fun as the dancers. With the aid of a little detective work, we managed to recognize most of the old girls who were back. There were Mully Bugg, Mary Walker, Marilyn Bell, Helen Wilson, Little Higgins, and even Jac Hardy. They looked so good!

When last seen Kitty Maddox and Dottie Overstreet were doing as well as could be expected. They really did a good job. Congratulations, and three long cheers for Mardi Gras.

Regional AKG Meet Will Be Held Here

The regional Alpha Kappa Gamma convention will be held at S. T. C. in Farmville, April 12 to 14. This announcement was made by Ann Martin, president of the Joan Circle chapter on this campus.

Alpha Kappa Gamma is a regional honor society for leadership. It was organized in 1928 and Joan Circle was one of the charter members. Its field of work is the promotion of desirable coordination of various activities and interests of the college.

Officers of the local chapter are: Ann Martin, president; Shirley Cruser, vice-president; Virginia Treakle, secretary; and Eleanor Bosese, treasurer.

Methodists To Hold Regional Meeting

The Methodist Regional Conference will be held at the Farmville Methodist Church on March 2 and 3. It will begin at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon and end Sunday at noon.

Guests will be served supper by the women of the church on Saturday night. On Sunday the delegates will have dinner in the dining hall in the college.

Girls attending the meeting will stay in the dormitory, the boys will stay in homes of the Methodist congregation. These conferences are held at different college campuses from time to time during the year. Also as a special feature of this conference an Inter-Faith Panel will be conducted by a Rabbi, a Catholic priest and a Protestant minister.

Among the guests will be Mr. Gerry Speidel of Charlottesville.

Virginia Lee Price, president of the local Wesley Foundation, has stated that all girls, regardless of denomination, are invited to attend any of the meetings.

Uncertain Destination Leaves Play Cast in Confused State

After a week or so of vacation (just because the boys had to take exams didn't stop it from being a vacation) from rehearsals, the cast of the spring play, "Outward Bound," has settled back into the old routine with a vim, vigor, and vitality never shown before, and the show will go on!

Even the fact that Orchesis practice and performance shoved the dramatics group down into the Rec for a night or two didn't cause too great a disturbance and things are well under way toward a big night on Saturday, March 9.

The plot of "Outward Bound" cannot be given wholly without revealing too much of the outcome and spoiling the entertainment for you, the audience. The main point we'd like to bring out is the fact that the plot, while well-sprinkled with clever and humorous lines, is nevertheless of a serious theme and quite dramatic in some of its tenser scenes. The action takes pace aboard ship, and the uncertain destination of the passengers seems to baffle the characters of the play as well as the members of the audience. Particularly baffling do we find the actions of Henry, and his young wife Ann, although the mystery concerning them clears itself as the story proceeds. Another angle of mystery concerns likeable Tom Prior, who manages to stay pleasantly out of of the catagory of being sober during most of the three acts.

More humor is provided in the contrast of the two characters, Mrs. Midget and Mrs. Cleveland-Banks. The comparison of personalities here is clever and well-acted. Then, too, there's another contrast in the gentle calmness of the Rev. Mr. Duke as contrasted to the nervous excitability of Mr. Ling-

Inter-Varsity Meet Will Be Held at STC

The Farmville Chapter of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship has charge of the Annual Inter-Varsity conference which will be held on this campus March 23 and 24, Jane Anderson, local president, has announced.

Among the speakers and directors of the conference will be Miss Ethel Smith who organized the Inter-Varsity Bible Study group on this campus last year, the Reverend Robert N. Oerter, Jr., from Princeton Theological Seminary, and Dr. Elwyn Smith, director of the Westminister Foundation in the National Capital area.

The Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship is an inter-denominational organization which was founded in the Holy Trinity Church of Cambridge, England, for college students. Soon the movement had spread to other countries and after being in the U. S. for less than four years, 150 colleges and universities have chapters.

The local chapter meets every Tuesday night at 7 o'clock in the student lounge. Everyone is invited to attend these Bible discussions.

Special Music Given In Chapel Program

This morning the first in a series of Student Day music programs was presented in chapel at which time Mary Ellen Hoge was in charge of the program.

Numbers on the program included Schubert's "Serenade" sung by Edith Pemberton, and Nevin's "The Rosary."

The student body joined in singing some folk songs from the song book, "Burst of Song."

Ballance, Helmer To Assist Heads

3 Girls Selected Business Managers

Sue Hundley, junior from Suffolk; Shirley Slaughter, junior from Lynchburg; and Margaret Wilson, junior from Washington, D. C., have been selected editors-in-chief of the three college publications, The Virginian, The Rotunda, and The Colonnade, Julia Messick, chairman of the publications committee, announced this week.

Doris Ballance, sophomore from Norfolk, was named managing editor of the Virginian, while Mary Helmer, sophomore from Newport News, was appointed as managing editor of the Rotunda.

Sue McCorkle, junior from Lexington, will serve as business manager of the 1947 Virginian; Mary Agnes Millner, junior from Danville, will be business manager of the Rotunda, and Barbara Lee Myers, junior from Danville, was appointed busineses manager of the Colonnade.

Sue Hundley, who will edit the 1947 Virginian, is serving as managing editor of the 1946 Virginian, is a member of the Spanish Club and Kappa Delta Pi. She succeeds Lillian Elliott as editor-in-chief.

Shirley Slaughter, who succeeds Virginia Treakle, is at present the managing editor of the Rotunda. She transferred to S. T. C. from Agnes Scott College in the fall of her sophomore year. Shirley will assume her new duties at the beginning of the spring quarter.

Margaret Wilson, who succeeds Nancy Whitehead, has been a member of the Board of Contributors of the Colonnade staff for some time. She is also a member of Beore Eh Thorn, English honor society. Margaret will edit the May issue of the magazine.

Doris Ballance has been working on the annual staff since her freshman year and succeeds Sue Hundley in this position. She has also been active in the activities of her class.

Mary Helmer, who succeeds Shirley Slaughter as managing editor, served this year as news editor of the Rotunda. She is also a member of the Choral Club.

Succeeding Shirley Cruser, Sue McCorkle has been active for some time on the busines staff of the Virginian. Mary Agnes Millner, who succeeds Ruth Brooks as business manager of the Rotunda, is a member of Inter-Varsity Christion Fellowship, and the Choral Club. Barbara Lee Myers who succeeds Catherine Lynch as business manager has been active on the Colonnade staff as business assistant.

The picture of Margaret Wilson, editor-elect of the Colonnade, is not available at this time.

$1059 Contributed To War Chest Drive

One thousand and fifty-nine dollars is the total amount raised for the Peace Welfare Drive which was launched on this campus early in February. Of this amount, $860 was contributed by individual students and various organizations, while $199 has been donated by the faculty and administration.

Contributions are still being taken by Margie Haweitt, chairman of this drive, and Dr. Jeffers; therefore, students may still give to this cause even though the goal of $1000 has been reached.

The Peace Welfare Drive is a combined drive in behalf of the World Student Fund and Red Cross. This drive is sponsored by the Public Affairs Committee of the Y. W. C. A.

Are We Good Neighbors?

We have read and heard a lot about the good neighbor policy in the last few years, but do we apply this policy in our school life? When we came off to college, people told us that we would have to adjust ourselves to living with a group of girls. They said we would have to practice the "give and take" rule. It's a good time now to take an inventory of ourselves to see if we have done just that.

The good neighbor policy involves a lot of little things that never cross our busy minds. It doesn't hurt us to check up here because a great number of people judge us on our daily courtesy and not our party manners. How many of us think to walk on the right side of the hall when we trudge from class to class? It is most inconsiderate of us when we see a friend in the hall to yell to her and then stop in the middle of a thoroughfare and chat for a few minutes. We should pick a more appropriate corner for our gossip sessions. You might argue that you have to see someone on important business and you don't have time to find a nice spot to carry on your business. If we would think to step to the side of the hall, if it is only for a minute, this would remedy a great deal of confusion.

When we are talking in the hall, we should all keep our voices down low, then nobody would have to scream to be heard. It is annoying both to the teacher and the students when a group of girls come strolling by their classroom and give out their version of the latest hit tune. When we're in class we wish they'd be quiet, but when we're the one on the other side of the door, do we practice what we preach?

This policy of politeness and thoughtfulness applies also to our dormitory life. Here again we must mention noise in the halls. We might not think that someone around us is studying or trying to catch forty winks when we thoughtlessly go out leaving the door to our room open when the radio is blasting forth with all its power.

We might not have to study or we might not be tired but the girl next door might feel differently. It is thoughtless and childish of us when we stick our head out of the door and yell "bloody murder" for someone at the other end of the hall. If you happen to be near the phone when someone upstairs is so lucky that she gets a telephone call, walk quickly up to her room. It will only take a few seconds, and the energy that we would exert would certainly do us no harm.

The same things apply to our behavior in the dining hall. If we speak quietly, all can be heard, and the terrible buzz that hovers over the room would be eliminated.

Check up on your daily thoughtfulness. Do you practice the good neighbor policy every day?

Support Music Programs

Something new in the way of chapel programs was presented in chapel this morning as the choral club gave a special Wednesday music program. This plan is being tried on campus for one month, and if it proves successful, the idea is to continue it indefinitely.

Various musical groups on campus will participate in the programs from time to time, followed by student body participation. Three hundred and fifty books were ordered for this purpose.

This kind of program will give an enriched meaning to the Wednesday chapel programs. It will offer opportunities for relaxation during the busy day as well as opportunities for student body participation of favorite old songs.

Music lifts one from the dull, busy-day world to the realm of something finer. It gives one a new approach to life and a new desire to help solve the daily problems.

As college students, we need to have an appreciation of the finer and better things of life. Especially should we appreciate and enjoy music, the foundations of which were laid by medieval men.

These programs are being prepared for our benefit and for our enjoyment. The destiny of this plan is in our hands. It is ours to make or to break.

Gleanings

Mildred Altice

Revolution is rampant throughout the world. It almost seems to be contagious. An an interesting aspect of the revolutionary movements in both China and India is that the students are active participants in these uprisings. After the first World War Lenin sincerely believed that there would be a proletarian revolution throughout Europe and eventually over the entire world. It did not come then, but now the subjugated peoples of the world are showing signs of restlessness. One begins to feel that the British Empire may be in real danger of crumbling; indeed, all empires may be very seriously imperiled. This week the British have experienced either major or minor troubles in Egypt, India, Palestine, and along with the Dutch and Americans in Indonesia. The British insist that these are only minority uprisings, but only time will tell to the world the importance of these widespread troubles.

In America the revolutionary germ finds expression in strikes. From one industry to another, from one city to another, they continue, preventing reconversion. In the meantime inflation is becoming increasingly a serious problem to all groups of Americans.

It looks as though Edwin Pauley will have almost as much trouble in obtaining Senate confirmation as Under-Secretary of the Navy as Henry Wallace had last year for another office.

Elections were held in Argentina this week. During the earlier period of the election no riots were reported. Both the democratic and the non-democratic candidates express confidence in victory.

Corrective Physical Education Class Visits McGuire General Hospital

Students of the Corrective Physical Education class made an all-day field trip visiting the physical and occupational therapy departments at McGuire General Hospital, Medical College of Virginia, and the Crippled Children's Hospital last Thursday.

The first stop was at McGuire where everyone was reluctant to leave. The physical plant was ideal. No form of treatment was lacking for the cases treated there. The captain in charge of the touring group prepared the girls for what they might see. It was hard to keep an outward composure at times. Amputees, peripheral nerve injury cases, and paraplegics (spinal injuries where there is paralysis below the injury) were seen in various stages of convalescence.

The tour began in a ward for periphal nerve injury cases where bedfast patients were exercising in bed. A trip to the gym for amputees followed. The boys were hard at work relearning to walk with a prasthesis instead of their own leg. As the group made back for the wards, the occupational therapy units (both mobile and workshop) were viewed in actual operation. A hurried but instructive trip was made through the workshop where artificial limbs were in the process of the making. Some were actually being refitted right on the spot. After that, everyone got at least a glimpse and most often an operative one of every mechanical contrivance used for all treatments. It was virtually a physical therapist's dream. Every imaginable and conceivable means of treatment by heat (diothermy) electrical stimulation (electrotherapy) massage and manipulation (mechano-therapy) and water (hydro-therapy) were there. Just as the group was getting interested in how this or that worked, Captain Cisley said it was time for the paraplegic class.

The boys were just trying to ease their partially paralyzed bodies out of wheel chairs onto exercise mats. It was unbelievable what the boys could do with atrophied (wasted) bodies. But it was time to end the tour there.

At the Medical College, a chubby, bustling woman physician met the group that was then ushered into the inner sanctum of the Physical Medicine Unit. A civilian hospital unit was explained and an instructive comparison made with that seen at the army general hospital. The thought back in everyone's mind was there to be a visit to the Polio (Infantile Paralysis) wing or center? There was! Both Cornelia Woodward and Frances Garnett were surprised when the group walked in for a ten-minute visit. From then on, everyone perked up. The trip to the gym was like a veritable unknown to a curious child. When the doctor left the room and Miss Kay's back was turned, everyone pounced upon some contrivance. The rowing machine and the shoulder muscle apparatus, which was shaped like a ship's steering gear were the most fascinating. And when the doctor in charge showed patients getting treatment in whirlpool baths, everyone asked if they could use the foot one.

Question of the Week

What is your favorite place in Farmville and why?

Eckie Geninie: Southsides — 'cause I'm always eating while I'm there.

Jeanne Sauerwein: The stables —need I say more. After all the horses are there.

Martha East: CH 27 — 'cause there's a bed there and sleep is something I never get too much of.

Faye Wolfe: Shannon's for good food and so forth!!

Claire Wailes: Shannon's—sweet memories!

Peggy Henrick: Post Office—to get mail, silly!

Claire Clarke: The bus station —you guess why.

Millie Shepherd: Bus station too 'cause then I know I'm homeward bound.

Gene Harrison: Chappell's—'cause I just love pie.

Jayne Hawpe: The theatre—love those shorts.

Hillbilly and Nancy June: The 10c store—'cause that's where we get our collection of bracelets!

Elinor Overbey: Shannon's—decent food.

Dot Anderson: Shannon's — of course! Silly.

Lillian Elliott: My living room—need I say more?

Doris Ballance: My bed—obvious.

Margie Hewlett: S. T. C.

Miss Dabney: The pool!

Lou Elves: Close to Joe's picture. Reasons too numerous to mention!

Alice Ann Abernathy: Post Office—guess why?

Elizabeth Harrell: Why, S. T. C., of course!

Andrea Garrison: My 8:05 Physical Ed. class, naturally!

Mr. Landrum: Room 37, where I keep my books and papers.

Nancy Squire: High Street, 'cause it reminds me of home.

Mary Ann Morris: Those beautiful homes 'cause it reminds me of something.

Berkeley Richardson: Tea room —I couldn't live without it.

Betsy Scott: The Biology Lab.—need I say more?

Dance Recital

Y News

ANN MARTIN

Last Thursday marked the end of our annual Religious Emphasis Week. For three days, we had the Rev. Charles M. Jones from Chapel Hill, N. C. with us as our guest speaker. Tuesday and Wednesday in chapel, Mr. Jones spoke to us on "A Growing Conception of God". Thursday, his topic was "Brotherhood". Wednesday afternoon at an open association meeting of the "Y" he talked to us on "A Growing Conception of Prayer", and Wednesday night at a discussion group, he answered many questions on religion that the girls raised.

Mr. Jones' messages throughout the whole week were on the subject of growth; growth in our ideas of God, our ideas of prayer, and our attitudes toward others. He gave us his ideas in order that we might think them through.

It is hoped that each and every members of our student body profited from the week-end and that each students accepted the challenge set before her, "Religion, Our Greatest Challenge."

The "Y" Lounge was open each day for student meditatoin, and special programs were planned for Prayers each evening during the week.

On Tuesday night, the Y. W. C. A. cabinet entertained at a reception in Student Lounge in honor of Mr. Jones, at which time, members of the faculty and administration, heads of all campus organizations and representatives from all organizations were invited to meet the guest speaker.

Bed-Check

Orchids go to Kitty Maddox and Dotty Overcash on the success of Mardi Gras. Lovely Jane Philhower and her court graciously reigned over the dance, a sight that made all of S. T. C. swell with pride.

It was wedding bells for Frankie and "Preacher" Monday night. It's our loss but "Preacher's" gain.

Miss "Winniefree" commonly known to her friends as "Minnie" came into the limelight last week-end with one of those attractive Bergwyn twins from Petersburg.

Anne Bear honored "The Trade-School Boys" (Annapolis Naval Academy to you) with her presence this past week-end. You lucky boys!

It's mighty good to see so many of the old boys back at Hampden-Sydney. Welcome home with a capital "W".

Speaking of returning veterans at H.-S.—ask Ann Hauser.

Wonder if Betty Gillespie found any helpful hints for the color scheme in her kitchen from "Better Homes and Gardens."

All you people who are lagging on your Virginia history see "Pete" Ellett concerning the historical data of Jennings Ordinary. The title of the chapter is "George Washington Slept Here."

Imogen Moore went away and returned with exciting evidence. Notice the glow in her eyes.

Cute Cunningham 24 is being redecorated, thanks to the carpenters on Oahu. Does anybody know how to assemble furniture?

S. T. C. was well represented at the dances in Blacksburg. Betty Bibb and Vicky Edmunds can supply the glorious details.

Martha Ann White seemed all smiles at Production Thursday night. We can't blame her!

Familiar sight around campus, Barbara Krebbs with Ray and Kathryn Mosteller with Marshall.

Sarah Mangum was sporting her O. A. O. from Duke this week-end. Wasn't Sunday a nice day for a trip to Lynchburg? Or do you remember?

Cute couples at the dance Saturday night were Dot Overton and Cale Harvey and Norma Soyars and Scott Overton.

And did you see Jane Mantiply with S .T. C.'s hubba-hubba man, Boyd Coyner?

I'll bet "Corky," "the Rev." and Ned were actually glad to get back to old Hampden-Sydney Tuesday. That is, glad to get back to Farmville, and Betty Jo, Janie, and Jane.

William Chapman is a frequent, almost daily, caller at S. T. C. Nice, isn't it, Petty Ellen?

Flash—surprise of the week. Our

Orchesis To Present Recital Tonight in College Auditorium; Members, Apprentices Dance

Miss Kauzlarich Directs Students

Tonight at 8 o'clock in the large auditorium, Orchesis, modern dance group, will present its annual recital under the direction of Miss Emily Kauzlarich.

Beginning the program, the members of Orchesis will dance the traditional dance of the club, "Opening Dance" by Kosa. Cowell's "Western Suite" will be the next number of the program. This number is divided into three parts, "Hail," "Lean Years" and "Stampede."

For the next part of the recital, the girls will present a three-part suite which grew from the Four Freedoms. "From Sorrow" will be seen through the eyes of two women, the young and the old. The next part of the group, "Is There Freedom?" will include "From Want," a dramatic but not pretty picturing of starving people whose facial expressions, and ever-seeking, out-stretched hands speak for their countless numbers. "Of Worship" is a symbolical portrayal of the three faiths, Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant. Portraying the Jewish faith, the girls show the Kindling of the Sabbath Lights as a family ritual in every household. The Sarabande is a dance form still danced in Latin American churches. This will represent the Catholic faith, while song and prayer in unison simply and humbly point "The Way" in the Protestant faith.

Following this part of the program, a short intermission will be given, after which a study of juvenile delinquency will be portrayed under the caption, "The Roots Are Deep". The delinquent will be shown as one who is shootin' Crap, stealing, drinking and as a pick-up. The first division of this dance will present the delinquent as the world sees him, while the second division will show him as he sees himself.

"A-goin' Down This Road" by Siegmaster is a poignant yet humorous tale which is to be sung as it is danced.

The final selection on the program will be a fashion study, "What Is Your Type?" which will include such fashions as early a m. rush, 8 o'clock; lunch show off; tick, tick, tock; and dorm fashions.

Class Games Begin In Gym Next Week

Color Points To Winning Class

Class basketball and volleyball games will be played next week in the form of a round robin tournament. Each class team will play every other class team, and the class winning the most games will receive points toward the color cup. Ten points will be given for the winners in basketball, and five points will go to the winning volleyball team.

For a girl to be eligible to play on a class team she must have a scholastic average of "D", and the eight practices in each sport. Captains for the individual volleyball team were chosen Tuesday. Basketball captains were chosen Wednesday afternoon. The duties of these captains is to get their team together, and with the help of Miss Olive Iler, choose their team. Captains must check on the grades and practices of the people they choose to represent their class on the teams.

own Ruth Brooks and Carl Soyars took the fatal step Friday in Richmond.

Phyllis Watts and Betty Adams had a gay week-end at the University of Richmond mid-winter dances.

Lucy Bowling and Bill Lacy tripped off to Charlottesville Saturday. You cute people, how was the Jefferson City?

Rosa Hill looked mighty pleased with her date for the dance. How these Navy men do rate! You'd better watch these S. T. C. girls, Rosa.

Please girls, if you see rats crawling up your walls, don't think you've been on a "Lost Week-end."

Congratulations to the class of '48 on that superb production.

See you next week after bed-check.

Basketball Squad To Play Madison, And Bridgewater

Athletic Association Will Sponsor Trip

Farmville State Teachers College's varsity basketball team will play two varsity games this week-end, March 1 and 2. Friday, March 1, the team will meet the Bridgewater team at Bridgewater College, Saturday, March 2, the team will meet the undefeated Madison squad in Harrisonburg.

Miss Mary Dabney, S. T. C.'s coach, will chaperone the trip, which will be sponsored by the Athletic Association.

These are the final games of the varsity squad for this season. So far, the team has not lost a game this season. They defeated Lynchburg in Lynchburg earlier in the season. They also defeated the William and Mary girls in the S. T. C. gym Friday, February 15. Rosa Hill, senior, is high scorer for the season so far. Margaret Orange is captain of the varsity squad.

Due to an arm injury sustained early in the season, Miss Olive Iler had to transfer the duties of coach to Miss Mary Dabney. The team has worked hard during the entire season, and so far, have been rewarded for their efforts by two victories and no losses.

Wear Sunday Best To Orchesis Recital Tonight at Eight

You will laugh with gusto, cringe with fear and perhaps shed a tear at Orchesis' recital Wednesday, February 27 at 8 o'clock in the college auditorium.

This year's concert will have many new innovations heretofore untried by the group. Themes vary from the sad and heavy to the light and entertaining. You might be shocked at the audacity taken in "The Roots Are Deep", particularly in the first part but the second part will show the moral behind the theme. You will feel humble yet exalted after "Is Their Freemom?" Western Suite is a trial experiment on the Western theme for May Day. "What is your Type?" promises surprises galore. It is, and it isn't a fashion show. "A-goin' down this Road" will leave you wet-eyed with laughter —of course!

Wear your Sunday best. This is a concert too, though not a part of the regular lyceum.

Bring your silver token! Leave it at the door! The offering will be given to the Red Cross as has been the policy of the club for the last five years.

Applause will be relished after every number but refrain from it after "Is There Freedom of Worship?"

Read your program before each number. It explains as simply and clearly as possible just what is going to happen. If you aren't fortunate enough in getting one, read your neighbors.

One last request, don't forget to tell them what you enjoyed. And, if you didn't, tell that, too. All dance is not pretty, nor funny, nor serious. Just take it for what you went to get out of it.

LEFT LEAD

News and more news. Wonder how much of the following all you jocks have heard about? To begin with, and beginners take note, Squealer is improving with age and seems to have acquired a better nature in the last few weeks than she's had since she joined forces at our stables. The trouble arises that we may even have to change her somewhat revealing title, 'cause where there's a name like that, there should be a reason, and she's swiftly overcoming the reason.

Jeanne says (and we know it'll snow before this goes to press) that since the weather has been so nice the classes have been coming along much better. Which is only to be expected. It's almost another quarter, you know . . . better start checking up on your make-up rides.

EMPTY SADDLES

And now some sad news. Regardless of age or infirmities, we have a reputation for undying affection for our horses, any of 'em, and we hate to part with even the worst of them. Therefore, when the news came that Creaper and the Phantom Lady have both been sold . . . and we don't know to whom . . . there was promise of distress, even when we know that their leaving makes room for two better mounts, which we definitely hope to have. Creaper was the beginner's favorite, and the shaggy little black proved his worth more than once on a long trail ride or a cold session in the Longwood ring. As for the Phantom . . . what can we say? She left last year and returned this year, heaves and all, but still our Phantom Lady. We have yet to hear anyone say anything against her, unless perhaps it was about her lack of speed . . . and now they won't even be able to complain about that. We're sorry to see the two Old Faithfuls go, but here's to the one we hope will take their place.

SQUARE DEAL

In the form of an "I will if you will" request from Jack Fore, caretaker at Longwood, we have the following compromise suggested: If we, the riders, will stick to the trails, the roads, and the bridle paths at Longwood and around the edge of the woods circling the golf course, Jack in turn has promised (and already begun) work on keeping up the somewhat dilapidated fence around the ring. We are not passing the buck, but if any of our worthy fellow-riders from H.-S. C. should read this, please remember that our girls have tried to follow this through during the years past, and a swift gallop across the green is not exactly the best treatment for a golf course as beautiful as the one at Longwood. There's something about several hundred pounds of horseflesh tearing across the turf that invariably leaves something akin to tell-tale hoof-prints, and it isn't fair of us to take advantage of definite privileges. How about it? Let's stick to the gravel roads or the dirt roads across the

MARY HARRISON'S

On the Ball

This week proves most eventful in the athletic calendar for winter sports. The volleyball-basketball tournaments will begin soon; while the ping pong matches are being played off now. Good luck to green and white, and red and white.

SWIMMING

The pool has not opened as yet, but you will soon be going down to the old swimming hole with the gang for an hour of fun during recreational swimming hour. Since swimming is required in Physical Education, try to get in a class when they begin. You can always make the movies at night and still have time afterwards for a swim.

BASKETBALL

Captains for the class teams have been elected in basketball, and the round robin tournament will be played off soon. Each team plays the other team. The team scoring the most points or the one winning the most games, will be declared champions of the basketball tournament. Ten points will be awarded to the two teams scoring the most points, these points will be toward the sought-after color cup. Eight practices are required of those who wish to participate in the games, so get your practices in before the tournament gets under way.

PING PONG

The round robin tournament is well on its way. This is an individual game, and it is up to each girl whether she wins or loses. The winner of this tournament gains 5 points toward the color cup. Good luck to our ping pong tournees.

HIKING

A person needs to get away from the trials of school once in a while, and there is nothing like a good walk under blue skies to clear one's mind and help her physically, too. We don't suggest hiking in cold rainy weather, though some like walking in the rain. Walking is definitely good exercise, slow brisk walk, or just meandering around. You can enjoy the sights here in the neighborhood, or down a country lane. Walking downtown for a coke and a chat really is not getting out at all.

Until next week, be a good sport.

Moore Elected Head Of Christian Girls

Glennis Moore, junior from Richmond, was recently elected president of the Christian girls. This organization was organized on campus last week by the Rev. John McCaw, national director of student work in the Christian Church.

The girls plan to have a Christian speaker on campus once a month. The two denominations included in this organization are Congregationalist Christians and Disciples of Christ.

Other officers are vice-president Yvonne Sayers, sophomore from Roanoke; and Jean Dailey, freshman from Chuckatuck, secretary and treasurer.

Clothes Pointers Given By Expert

By EVELYN GRIZZARD

Do college girls know what it means to be well dressed? According to the experts, you are well-dressed if—

"You know your type and make the most of your possibilities. Your coloring, build, and the sort of clothes you are most comfortable in help to determine your type.

"You are always neat, and well groomed, and your clothes are perfectly fitted.

"You realize you must accent your good points and play down your bad ones.

"You are natural and at ease. You are not self-conscious of clothes or appearance. You don't fidget or pose.

"You use color effectively to accent your personality and the design of your own clothes.

"You carry yourself well. Your head is out of your shoulders, your shoulders out of your waist, and your waist out of your hips.

"You show self-discipline and good judgment in your clothes and accessories you buy. You never buy a garment, hat or accessory which throws your wardrobe out of balance and isn't becoming to you anyhow.

"Your 'inner self' shines through and is given expression in your general appearance."

Check yourself against these standards and see where you stand in the "well dressed" woman poll.

Lucy Bowling, president of the J. L. Jarman Chapter of the Future Teachers of America. This organization is sponsoring during the next few weeks an election on campus to select the most outstanding prospective teachers in the freshman, sophomore, and junior classes.

A similar election was held on the campus last year, at which time, one girl was elected from the freshman class, one from the sophomore class, and one from each curricula in the junior class as the most outstanding prospective future teachers. The election last year was held by secret ballot at the table in the hall, while this year, the voting will take place at class meetings.

The whole cast forms a unity of concern over their more unified experiences, and yet keep their individual personalities easily in the course of the play. And the whole play itself will do much toward setting its watchers to thinking along a few unusual lines. It's a new type of play and it's different. And classes or no classes, you'll be sorry if you go home . . . and miss it!

Soph Program Hits All Time High Spot In Entertainment

By JEAN CAKE

"Should auld acquaintance be forgot?" No, of course not and neither will the Sophomore Production, "Happy Holidays". "Honey", if you didn't see that you missed something. Merry Christmas, Happy New Year, Joyful Easter, and Valentine Greetings were piled into one grand evening.

Don't you guess that 'bout the best Valentine we got this year were the charming couples on those big red hearts? 'Twas a couple of cupids that gave life and grace to the dances.

Following the Easter Parade was the irresistible Bugs Bunny who chattered and sang as only he can do.

Fourth of July was celebrated with tap routines to the tune of giant firecrackers. And, don't admit you weren't scared when Halloween rolled 'round. The screams and moans were just too realistic for comfort.

Thanksgiving took a turn to the serious side with a reproduction of the first Thanksgiving. Pilgrims and Indians pantomimed while appropriate music was softly playing.

And then "'Twas the night before Christmas" and down the chimney came Santa to delight his little girl with dancing dolls and an animated jack-in-the-box. The Christmas tree and stockings lent an air of a typical Christmas eve to the scene.

The climax of the occasion was the Sophomore orchestra. They could have passed for a name band the way they rendered their version of "Let's Dance". When the New Year arrived, the sax player struck up "Auld Lang Syne", with the entire cast including Father Time and Baby New Year.

Besides the holiday celebrations, there were special numbers between acts that brought cheers and encores from the audience.

We wish to congratulate the sophomores on the success of this production. It certainly took some good ole S. T. C. spirit and cooperation to put it over.

Just Looking Thanks

By LELA BOULDIN

In spite of Mardi Gras Saturday night, many S. T. C'ers left for the week-end, seeking entertainment elsewhere.

Attending the dance at V. P. I. this week-end were Betty Bibb, Nancy Blair, Jean Cake, Jean Daiey, Vickie Edmunds, Jane Ellen Fox, Mary Lee Graham, Mary Hunter, Mary Ellen Hoge, Peggy Murray, Constance Newman, Geraldine Newman, Nancy Parrish, Jackie Parden, Jane Page Reade, Lee Staples, Gwen Smith, Virginia Yonce, and Charlotte West.

Back to their Alma Mater for the Mardi Gras festivities were Martha Higgins, Betsy Caldwell, Bobby Stott, Mary Walker Watts, Pogue Massey, Frances Livesy, Jean Givers, Nell Coleman, Marilyn Bell, Helen Wilson, Betsy Fox, and Ann Masloff.

Fishing for fun in Lynchburg were Jean Watts, June Tolley, Virginia Travis, Shirley Slaughter, Martha Showalter, Margaret Shelton, Virginia Hollifield, Kakie Hundley, Dorothy Ramage, Mary Ann Adams, Doris Brooks, Dorothy Manning, Gwendolyn Cress, Mary Frances Evans, Elizabeth Driver, Frances Farley, Nancy Jesse, Charlotte Hutter, Anne Ford, Betty Gillespie, and Connie Loving.

Attracted to Petersburg were Grace Anderson, Rosa Lee Bell, Gloria Moore, Jean Pritchett, Glenn Patterson, Mildred Spain, and Mary Virginia Walsh.

Roanoke proved exciting for Jean Bell, Ethel Shockley, Earlene Kimmerling, Laura Orndoff, Dot Pennington, and Yvonne Sayers.

In South Hill for the week-end were Carolyn and Jackie Bobbitt, Ida Lee Allen, Inez Cleston, Jean Guthrie, Jane Paulette, and Sara Smithson.

Charlottesville attracted Lucy Bowling, Elizabeth Crockett, Martha Gillum, Coralease Hall, Shirley Irving, Evelyn Mahanes, Elaine Owens, and Mildred Sadler.

Seeking amusement in Norfolk, were Anne Barksdale, Shirley Cruser, Eleanor Bisese, Martha Moorehead, Nancy Pitts, Hattie Hyatt, Phyllis Scherberger, Mary Rattray, and Lucy Lee Rives.

Among many others who left S. T. C., this week end were Freddie Ann Butt, Portsmouth; Constance Pemberton, Warsaw; Mildred Davis, Paces; Alice Ann Abernathy, Stoney Creek; Hilda Bennett and Edith Jane Kirkland, LaCrosse; Betty Cock, Virginia Beach; Nancy Taylor, Jean Edgerton and Mary Catlett, Greensboro, N. C.; Mary Jane King, Newport News, Nancy Litz, Bluefield, W. Va.; Dorothy Gelston, Danville; Virginia and Kathryn Tindall, Franklin; and Daphne Pittman, Waverly.

Corrective Class

The tub was spared and the group was wisked atop the hospital to view what will some day be the most outstanding unit of four to be set up in the country. A view of a temporary exercise room where mattresses were laid on the floor was too much for the tired group and they were quickly whisked back to the gym in the basement. A breath of air revived them for the third lap of the journey.

The last step was at the Crippled Children's Hospital where all types of cases usually found in such a hospital were viewed. Those doomed to spend their days within the walls of a hospital tugged at the girls' heartstrings in much the same way as the paraplegics did at McGuire. After the first two or three cases, one thought of them as children with a handicap to overcome, and interest centered on what was being done to overcome a deformity, anomaly, or injury. Each case was an individual matter depending on the handicap. That was true for those found in the army hospital as well as the civilian.

It was a weary, foot-store, bedraggled group who climbed into the station wagon for the trip home but one convinced of the normalcy of themselves.

Lucile Jones, Margaret Orange, Dorothy Owen, Grace Loyd, Regino Portinaro, Phyllis Watts, and Miss Emily Kauziarich made the trip.

Annual Founders Day to be Observed Saturday

Four State Teachers College Faculty Members to Retire

Resignations Are Effective in Summer

Miss Lila London, professor of mathematics; Miss Wilhelminia London, associate professor of English; Miss Ida Penney, primary grade supervisor; and Miss Minnie V. Rice, professor of Latin, will retire from the faculty of the State Teachers College during the summer of 1946, according to announcements made recently by these faculty members.

Born at "Soldier's Joy", the London ancestral home on the James River in Nelson County, the Misses London are now making their home in Farmville, and will continue to stay here after their retirement. Miss Lila London received her B. S. degree from the George Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn., and her M. A. degree and teacher's diploma from the Teachers College of Columbia University. In 1903, she came to this college from a teaching position in the Salem High School as assistant in the mathematics department with references to supervising the teaching of arithmetic in the elementary school. In discussing the work, Miss London remarked that the elementary supervision work is still her major interest. Later, she was made head of the department of mathematics, the position which she holds at present. She has travelled extensively during her summer vacations, having visited Europe twice. As a member of the math department, she has also been very active in the committee work of the administration.

In the fall of 1919, Miss Willie London came to Farmville as assistant in the department of English. Prior to this, she had taught in the high school in Roanoke and had also been connected with the Y. W. C. A., serving as secretary in the South Central Field during the first world war with headquarters in St. Louis, Mo. At the end of her first year in the college, she resigned to accept the secretaryship of the South Atlantic Field with headquarters in Richmond; however, she soon returned to Farmville as Y. W. C. A. student secretary and held this position for four years. After the establishment of the London home in Farmville, she returned to the faculty of this college as associate in the English department, the position she now holds. Miss London has served on various committees of the college, both academic and social, and she has also served as

H-S, STC To Give Founders Day Play

Students To Raise Curtain at 8 P. M.

Saturday night at 8:00 in the large auditorium, the S. T. C. Dramatics Club and the H.-S. Jongleurs will present their first combined production in four years, as a final part of the Founders Day program.

The play, "Outward Bound", is a serious drama in three acts, with an air of suspense to the plot which will hold the attention of the audience straight through to the last scene. All action takes place aboard a ship, of who's destination none of the passengers seem certain. Scenery for the play lends the definite atmosphere for the bar of the ship, and through the silvered port-holes and outer doors come glimpses of the outer deck and seascape beyond. Staging is being done under the supervision of Betty Bibb and Miss Wheeler.

According to Miss Wheeler, director of the play, tickets for students will go on reserve in Mrs. Watkins' office Thursday morning, and each girl will be allowed to get her own ticket only. Three hundred and fifty seats have been reserved for the alumnae who are expected to return for the anniversary, and if any student should find she cannot attend the play she is asked to return her ticket at once to Mrs. Watkins, to Kitty Maddox, business manager of the club, or at the door of the auditorium.

Announcement will be made later concerning the students' wearing formal dress, which is a lyceum number, according to Carlotta Norfleet, president of the Dramatics Club.

Cast of the play includes Mary Ann Adams, Hugh Warren, Martha Frances Webb, Carlotta Norfleet, Dick Wiant, Frank Brook, Frank Blanton, Max Perrow, Bill Hart, and Bill DeHardit.

In charge of costuming is Ann Shufflebarger, lighting, Rose Ramsey, properties, Louise Harrell and make-up, Nancy Pitts.

Dedication

On behalf of the student body, faculty, administration, and alumnae, we, the staff of the Rotunda, dedicate this Founders Day issue to Dr. Joseph L. Jarman, beloved president of this college for over forty-four years.

Cotillion Girls Set March 30 For Dance

Providing music for the annual spring Cotillion dance which will be held in the gym on Saturday night, March 30, will be the Vagabonds of Lynchburg. This orchestra is well-known here since it has played for many previous dances.

K D P Will Sponsor Convocation Meet

Miss Camper, Stokes To Represent STC

Kappa Delta Pi will hold its fifteenth bi-annual convocation at the Schroeder Hotel in Milwaukee, Wisconsin March 11, 12, and 13. Miss Pauline Camper, counsellor of the local chapter, and Agnes Stokes, president, will attend as delegates of this chapter.

Miss Camper and Agnes Stokes will leave Saturday. Between 200 and 250 delegates will attend representing about 135 chapters.

The program will include round table and group discussions and speakers, Tuesday night, March 12, a banquet will be given in the Crystal Room of the Hotel Schroeder. At that time, Dr. Charles H. Judd will address the group on the subject, "Teaching the Evolution of Civilization."

Agnes Stokes has been selected a member of the committee to make revisions in the national constitution.

The Beta Epsilon chapter, national honor society in Education, was established here in 1928 when Pi Kappa Omega, local honor society, was merged with Kappa Delta Pi.

Choir Of College Bids 10 Students

Choir Activities Enumerated

New choir members selected to date by Alfred H. Strick, professor of music, are Phyllis Alley, freshman from Roanoke; Ann Amory, freshman from Hampton; Ruth Crush, freshman from Oriskany; and Jane Fox, freshman from Alexandria.

Also, Joyce Frazier, freshman from Salem; Augusta Hargan sophomore from Roanoke; Ruthellen Mears, freshman from Eastern Shore; Ethel Shockley, freshman from Roanoke; Joan Sterling, freshman from Eastern Shore; and Nancy Taylor, freshman from Eastern Shore.

Officers of the choir are president, Connie Ozlin; vice-president, Julia Messick; secretary, Esther Shevick; treasurer, Virginia Lee Price.

The choir sang in Richmond over radio station WRVA, December 2. The girls also gave a concert of sacred music at St. Giles Presbyterian Church and at the Boulevard Methodist Church at that time. Also during the year, the choir has presented concerts of sacred music in the churches of Farmville.

Formal Program Will Begin at 11

Many Alumnae Return For Day

Many alumnae are expected to return for Founders Day on March 9, Mrs. Ruth Harding Coyner, alumnae secretary, has announced.

Much interest is being created this year by the reunion classes that are working for the Jarman Attendance Cup which is presented to the class having the largest per cent of attendance at alumnae luncheon. There are two probable reasons for large attendance. The first reason is that it is Dr. Jarman's last year as active president, and the second that only a few were able to attend during the war because of transportation difficulties.

No classes will be held on campus on Founder's Day, Saturday March 9. This will be the twenty-fifth anniversary of the class of 1921 and also the reunion for all the "Six" classes.

The Founders Day program will begin Saturday with exercises in the auditorium at 11 o'clock. It will consist of the following:

Hymn—America
Invocation
Student Program:
1. The Lord's Prayer—Mallotte
   The College Choir
2. a. Charm Me Asleep—Subian
   Folk Song
   b. Late in My Rash Accounting—Fellows
   Madrigal Singers
3. The Bells—Rachmaninoff
   The College Choir
4. Keep on Hopin'—Heron-Maxwell.

(Request number for Dr. Jarman)
The College Choir
Presentation of Gifts: Miss Jacqueline Parden, President of Student Body

Alumnae Luncheon

At one o'clock, an Alumnae Luncheon will be served in the Rec. A formal dinner will take place in the dining hall at six o'clock P. M. The concluding event is the presentation of Sutton Vane's "Outward Bound" by the S. T. C. Dramtic Club and the Hampden-Sydney Jongleurs directed by Miss Leola Wheeler. This will take place in the auditorium at eight o'clock P. M.

Among the outstanding members of the reunion classes who are expected to return for the Founders Day exercises are Mrs. Madeline Mapp Barrow from Keller, who was a member of the class of 1886 and Mrs. Fannie Bugg Blanton of Farmville, also of the 60 year reunion class. Mrs. Mary Cralle Richardson who was a student here in 1884 has registered for the alumnae luncheon and she will be accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Leilia R. Williams of Trenton, N. J., of the cass of 1916.

Representing the class of 1896 will be Miss Rosalie Stuart Bland of Boykins, Va., and Mrs Elizabeth Smithson Morris of Martinsville. Mrs. Morris' daughetr, Lieutenant Elizabeth W. Morris of WAVES, class of 1931, will be with her.

Miss Henrietta C. Dunlap of Lexington, represents the reunion class of 1906. The president of the class of 1916, Mrs. Louise Childs Weisiger of Augusta, Ga., is coming and quite a number of the members of this class are expected.

The twenty-fifth anniversary class will have among delegates,

We Dedicate This Issue

On behalf of the student body, faculty, administration, and alumnae, we, the present staff of the Rotunda, dedicate this issue to the one above all others in this college who is loved, esteemed, and honored, Dr. Joseph L. Jarman. For over forty-four years, he has given of his talents, abilities, and interests to the furthering of education in Virginia. His influence has been felt throughout the entire country wherever Farmville daughters have carried the torch of learning. Thousands of students have passed through these halls of learning during the period of his administration, and thousands of girls love and respect him for the life he gave and is giving to us and for the lofty ideals which he chose as the pattern for his own life and for the life of "his girls."

It is fitting that we, at this time, join hands with alumnae, the present student body, the faculty and administration, as well as with all educators throughout the state and nation in paying tribute to a life of outstanding service, to a man of unusual integrity, and to "the first gentleman of Farmville."

Doctor Jarman had visions for this college and he carried out his idea of scholarship, teacher education, and character, thus making our college one of the best of its kind in the country. For what Farmville State Teachers College is today, we owe a great deal to its president for almost half a century.

There is consolation, however, in knowing that our beloved and revered president will remain in Farmville as an ever constant friend and companion to the students, serving in the capacity of president emeritus of this college. As one editorial writer stated it, "He is and will remain 'first among his peers'."

Because we love you, Doctor Jarman, we dedicate this Founders Day issue of the Rotunda to you as a token of our appreciation of all that you have done and are doing to further education in the Commonwealth.

Welcome, Alumnae

This week we at State Teachers College are welcoming our alumnae. We especially want to welcome the "Six" classes and the class of 1921 which is celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary. It's good to have you back with us.

Founders Day for the past few years has been celebrated quite differently because of the war, but this year we are going to celebrate it in the spirit of years gone by. Daughters of this college from throughout Virginia and other states are returning to pay homage to their Alma Mater. There are daughters who are scattered all over the world and can not be with us on this occasion, but their hearts and minds will be turning to Farmville State Teachers College which has been a guiding light to thousands of women since the year of its founding in 1884.

The alumnae whether they graduated two years ago or twenty years ago will find that their Alma Mater has changed. They will find new buildings, they will learn of added courses that have kept this school an up-to-the-minute school, and they will hear of new organizations and of the work that they are doing. However, they will look further and see, although the style of dress might have changed, that the spirit which kept these same halls alive when they were here is still prevailing. They will hear us sing, and though the songs be different from the ones they used to sing, they will be hearing and seeing themselves. Perhaps they will envy us, even though we gripe or complain because we have so much to do or because we didn't get the grade that we had hoped we would on our last term paper. They will find a different bunch of girls now decking their beloved halls; however, they will see the same type of girls that buddied with them when they were in college. They'll see the same Farmville girl.

Loyalty to Farmville

Whenever and wherever one meets anyone who has been in any way connected with Farmville, either as a faculty member or as a student, one is sure to hear someone speak of the "Spirit of Farmville". Some years ago, I was talking with a man widely known in the state as an educator. He had a thorough knowledge of colleges in Virginia and was acquainted with colleges in other states. He was telling me about his daughters and the reason he was sending them to Farmville instead of to some other college. He spoke of a "something" about Farmville that impressed him as making it different from some other colleges that he had considered. He said, "There is a spirit and a cultural quality which creates an unusual atmosphere here. It is hard to define, but it is something that one feels deeply."

I, myself, found that intangible something, a spirit of love and loyalty to the college, in the Farmville chapter of alumnae in New York City, with which I had the pleasure of being connected when I was living in New York a few years ago. Those girls came together to talk of Farmville because they loved it. It was the spirit of loyalty that drew them, even though they had been students at Farmville at different times and were women of widely different interests. This is the same spirit of loyalty and devotion to the college that all new faculty members feel, and that new students begin to realize before they have been here many weeks.

What is this "Spirit of Farmville?" It means, it seems to be, that those who have lived here and caught this spirit have learned that the college means something greater and more enduring than their own individual purposes and achievements. In a word, loyalty comes from learning humility as to oneself here at Farmville, and a devotion to the larger aims set-up—aims that call for service and devotion to the needs of others. We sing the college song, "Alma Mater." Sometimes I wonder if we realize all that the words mean. They meant a great deal to the girls of an earlier day when the song was written. Through the years, the example of Dr. Jarman in his unselfish devotion and loyalty to Farmville has been a great inspiration to us all. We have, too, a precious heritage of tradition which the alumnae of Farmville and many others who have lived and worked in the college have left to us. A realization of this heritage among the students of 1946 will help to keep the Farmville Spirit alive and will continue to make our college worthy of its great calling—to prepare teachers for the schools of Virginia.

HEARD AFTER

BEDCHECK

Maybe Spring hasn't arrived yet, but there are quite a few evidences of it—sun baths, spring fever—and how! (that's always a good excuse anyway, although some people seem to have a perpetual case of it) as well as — a young girl's thoughts turning to—the usual thing—MEN!

Talk about being excited — "Pete" Ellett was certainly in an uproar last week-end. We'll have to admit that seeing Tom after an absence of a year (in Uncle Sam's service) must have been quite a thrill!

Exactly what is this we hear about Margie Vaughan and an M. P.? Why don't you want to ride the good ole Norfolk & Western to Lynchburg, anymore, Margie?

The cutest couple and quite a frequent one seen about Farmville these days is Neal Oliver and Martha Russell.

Orchids to Miss Kay and Betty Ellis for their splendid Orchesis Recital. It's the best yet. The only complaint we could possibly make was that it was too short. We could have sat there all night. Let's have more of these excellent performances!

Did you get an eyeful of that TALL man from Lychburg with Jean Waits? Why aren't there more like Bill?

Now wait a minute! It seems as though Virginia Hollifield is involved in one of those eternal triangles.

Hope you've seen Virginia Shackelford lately, because she is certainly glowing with happiness. It seems that Captain John Smith, who finally arrived on the scene, has lived up to everyone's wildest expectations.

Perhaps we didn't take George and Corrinne seriously enough at first, but something more than friendship seems to be blossoming—and it isn't spring flowers either.

Was that cute soldier taking pictures to select his pin up girl or just exactly what he was trying to prove. We'll have to admit he must think the Annex girls are mighty photogenic.

Were we glad to have Spot Hunnicutt back again! Why doesn't she do that more often?

Needless to say, we're mighty proud of our basketball team. We only wish we could have been there!

Goodness! Don't believe we've mentioned Camp Pickett!—Well, that's where Charlotte comes in. She can tell you all about it!

Cruser is getting excited again—you might know. It's that "Lulu". If he could sing—he'd probably be tuning up on "S. T. C. here I come—right back where I started from."

And Nancy Ingle was with her one and only(?)—Well, she can't seem to make up her mind. Only time will tell, but at least he's not discouraged.

The crowning blow is Carmen, and "Bo" Wall. You'd need a blood hound to keep up with him. At least variety is the spice of life.

That seems to be a case and a half between Mitty and Ralph. Lucky boy!

Lorraine Smith joined the list of sparklers as of Sunday when LeRoy presented a beautiful solitaire. Congratulations Roy.

Cutest man on campus is Janie Belle's husband, Lt. Somers.

Too bad Jim's leave fell through, Mary Harrison, but haven't you seen that gleam in her eye? He's coming this week-end even if—well, he has to take drastic action. Now, Jim we don't want any bloodshed over this matter.

Margie Hewlett says if you wish hard enough it always comes true—and that date of hers was no mirage.

It's time to blow out the light—but those who are going to be here had best prepare for the army of alumnae returning. I'm afraid we are going to be outnumbered.

Gift to Library

An illustrated commentary on the Old and New Testaments, published in 1873 was included in a group of sixteen interesting volumes recently presented to the S. T. C. Library by Miss Martha W. Coulling, former head of the College Art Department. The commentary will be particulary useful to the Student Union members and other students of the Bible.

Other religious books included, "Jesus, the Master Teacher," "The Poetry of the Psalms," and "Father Ryan's Poems."

Many of the other books reflect Miss Coulling's love of art. Representative titles are: "The Meaning of Art," Vallentin's "Life of Leonardo da Vinci," "Hindu Art," "Lorenzo the Magnificent", and "Outdoor Sketching."

ANNA HEADLEE

During the month of March, the Y. W .C. A. emphasizes "Going to Church" during which time students are asked to try to go to church at least once every Sunday.

Union vespers will be held Sunday night at the Presbyterian Church at 6:45 o'clock. The Presbyterians will have the worship service and the Methodists will have charge of Fellowship Hour. Everyone is invited.

Rev Parks Wilson of Harrisonburg is the special speaker at the Presbyterian Church this week. He will speak every night at the church at 8:00. Everyone is invited to come to hear him.

The Methodist girls are quite enthusiastic over the conference here last week-end. It was a state-wide conference for college students interested in evangelistic work of the Methodist Church.

There will be early communion services at 7:30 each Sunday during Lent at the Episcopal Church. Plans are under way for a corporate communion followed by breakfast at the Rectory. Each Sunday during Lent, there will be special out-of-town speakers at church services.

The theme for the Week at Prayers is "Faith or Failure."

Services will be held in the Episcopal Church at four o'clock Friday, March 8, in observance of the World Day of Prayer. "The Things that Make for Our Peace" will be the theme.

This day will be observed in 51 countries all over the world and in many different languages. It is observed in unison by all denominations.

Letter to Editor

Dear Editor,

The Orchesis recital on last Wednesday night was one of the best performances we have had on this campus for some time. The entire performance from beginning to end showed hard work on the part of Miss Kauzlarich and members and apprentices of Orchesis. Not only did the dance techniques reveal constant practicing, but also the costumes for the different dances showed much originality.

The fact that the silver offering at the door for the Red Cross totaled $43.88, shows the interest of the students in attending this concert.

Orchids to Miss Kay and her girls for such an outstanding recital. We loved it and want more.

Tally-Ho! What would we write about if we didn't have the warm weather which, incidentally, has surpassed itself in the past couple of days? Over the week-end, as a matter of fact, with the exception of the early part of Saturday, when it just had to rain.

One of the most enthusiastic of our beginners, Martha Sours, won't even let these March winds get her down. She never misses a ride, not without ten good reasons. Kitty and Blane found ten good reasons!

Sunday was "The Day" for four of us. Ducky, Anna, "Loocil" and yours truly decided a ride between church hours never hurt anybody, and if you don't think morning is the time to ride just you try it! The horses were full of anything but religion, and we ended up six miles out in less time than six mi'es should take, and found ourselves fording creeks and opening gates until we pranced into the front yard of Troy Johnston!

8 Chapters To Send Delegates To Meeting Of Inter-Varsity

Jane Anderson, president of the Farmville chapter of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, has announced that representatives of eight chapters are expected to attend the Annual Conference of Inter-Varsity which will be held on this campus March 23 and 24.

It is expected that the following schools will have students attending the conference, University of Virginia, William and Mary, Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Duke University, Westhampton, University of North Carolina, the University of Maryland, and American University. Special groups will also be represented.

Mu Omega Attains Highest Average

Mu Omega sorority attained the highest average in the Pan-Helenic Association for the fall quarter, according to an announcement made this week by the president of the Association, Evelyn Grizzard. The average of Mu Omega was 1.85.

Placing second in the Association was Alpha Sigma Tau with an average of 1.83, while Alpha Sigma Alpha had an average of 1.80. Phi Zeta Sigma and Theta Sigma Upsilon had an average of 1.79; Gamma Theta 1.76; Sigma Sigma Sigma, 1.74; and Pi Kappa Sigma, 1.59.

At the Pan-Hellenic tea in the student lounge last fall, Mu Omega was announced as the winner of the year with an average of 1.87. Alpha Sigma Alpha placed second last year with an average of 1.86; Phi Zeta Sigma, third, with a yearly average of 1.85; and Theta Sigma Upsilon, fourth, with an average of 1.81. Attaining fifth place was Sigma Sigma Sigma with average of 1.70; Alpha Sigma Tau, sixth, with an average of 1.69; Gamma Theta with an average of 1.65; and Pi Kappa Sigma with an average of 1.61.

Mrs. Ann Smith Green of Chevy Chase, Md., president of the degree class of 1926, has written that she will be back and that her class is working for one hundred per cent attendance. Mrs. Itasca (Tac) Waters Mapp of Newport News who was president of the class of 1936, will also be back and this class is expecting a large representation.

Registration will begin at nine o'clock Saturday in the Main building. Because of unavoidable circumstances the Farmville alumnae will not serve coffee at 10 o'clock as was previously announced. The alumnae luncheon will be held in the Rec at one o'clock. There will be a formal dinner at six o'clock in the college dining hall.

"Town alumnae who are members of reunion classes," said Mrs. Ruth H. Coyner, alumnae secretary, "are urged and invited to attend the luncheon and dinner."

sponsor of several college organizations. Miss London received her B. S. degree from Farmville and her M. A. degree and teacher's diploma from Teachers College of Columbia University.

Coming to Farmville in 1924, Miss Penney served as second grade supervisor; however, today she is serving as third grade supervisor in the Training School. She received her A. B. degree from Winthrop College and her M. A. degree from the Teachers College of Columbia University. A native of South Carolina, she has adopted Lake Junaluska, N. C. as her home. Prior to coming to S. T. C. Miss Penney held teaching positions in Sumter, S. C.; Tulsa, Okla., Greensboro, and Winston-Salem, N. C.

Miss Rice came to the faculty of the college in September 1891, having taught for nine years prior to her teaching career at this college, making a total of 64 years. She is a native of Farmville and received her education in private schools, at Farmville Female College, Columbia University, Harvard University, and the University of Chicago. She also took foreign language work under a foreigner in Richmond. During her period of teaching, Miss Rice has taught Latin, French, German, English, mathematics, and science. In addition to her work in this college, she has coached many young men for Hampden-Sydney College and for several universities. About thirty years ago, she started the public health work in Farmville. Also for thirty years, Miss Rice served as chairman of the classification committee and for thirty-five years, she served as chairman of finance of the Normal League.

Institute Slated For College Campus

An Institute on Latin America will be held on this campus on April 2 and 3, sponsored by Beorc Eh Thorn, the Spanish Club, and Gamma Psi.

Speaker for the Institute will be Mrs. Muna Lee de Munoz Marin, division assistant of the cultural division in the state department in Washington, D .C. She will lecture on Tuesday night and Wednesday night at 8 o'clock in the large auditorium and will also speak during the chapel hour on Wednesday, April 3.

Russian General To Speak Here Saturday Night

Victor A. Yakhontoff, a Russian general, will speak in the local college auditorium at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, March 16, on the question "Is Cooperation with the U. S. S. R. Possible?" No admission will be charged to attend this lecture, and no seats will be reserved.

At thirty-five, General Yakhontoff served as a general with the Russian armies in World War I. He was sent to England and to France to aid in coordinating the spring offensives of 1916 and later was stationed in Japan. Recalled to Russia when the Czar was over thrown, he served as Assistant Secretary of War and as Acting Secretary in the Kerensky cabinet. When the Bolsheviks came to power, he went back to Japan and later to the United States where he became naturalized and mastered the English language, both spoken and written.

In this country, General Yakhontoff was placed in charge of the publishing activities on Russia of the International Committee of YWCA's from 1919 to 1922. He has spoken many times on Manchuria, China, and Mangolia in which places he has spent much time. He has also revisited Russia in recent years and is an outstanding authority on Modern Russia and the Far East. In the 1944-45 season, he appeared before more than 150 audiences. Since 1944, he has been conducting courses at the New School for Social Research in New York.

General Yakhontoff is author of "Eyes on Japan", "The Chinese Soviets", "Russia and the Soviet Union in the Far East",

Frosh Production Practices Begin

Having discovered some unusual talent in their midst, the freshmen have settled down to serious work on their class production which will be presented Thursday, March 28 at 8 o'clock in the college auditorium.

The theme of the production will be disclosed at a later date, but the program will be filled with monologues, dialogues, songs, dances, and various other forms of lively entertainment. The usual food will be sold during intermission.

Jean Cake of Hilton Village heads the general production committee. Serving under her are Ann Galloway, who heads a large staging and properties committee; Gwen Cress, who is in charge of make-up and costumes, Frances DeBerry will work out the dance routines; Betty Spindler, Martha Anne White, and Jean Bell are working out the musical arrangements and Evelyn Patterson is publicity chairman.

Meeting To Begin Saturday, March 23

As announced by Jane Anderson, president of the local chapter of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, the theme of the Inter-Varsity Conference to be held on this campus March 23 and 24 will be "Christ Meets Our Needs."

This is a conference for the chapters established in the colleges and universities in Virginia, Maryland, and North Carolina.

The Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship is an association of groups of Christian students in colleges and universities in North America, who wish to further student Christian work and Bible study on their campuses.

Among the speakers for this gathering will be Robert N. Oerter, Princeton Theological Seminary; Dr. Elwyn A. Smith, University Pastor in Washington, D. C.; Albert Newport and Miss Ethel Smith staff members of I. V. C. F.

Registration for the conference will begin Saturday morning at 12:30 after which the representatives from the different campuses will be served their first meal in the college dining room. Next on the program will be reports from the different chapters. This is scheduled for 2:30 in the student lounge. A recreational party is to follow Saturday night's message. Following the Sunday program there will be communion, which is the climax of the conference.

The students and faculty of S. T. C. are cordially invited to attend all the meetings of the conference.

Venezuelan Visits Campus For Month

Spanish Club Backs Education Project

Coming to Farmville under the Division of International Education Relations of the United States Office of Education, Mrs. Marita Osuna de Soto, Caracas, Venezuela, will arrive on this campus, March 15. She will spend one month here, improvng her understanding of the U. S., the country, people, and way of life; learning this country's system of education; and improving her own knowledge of English and teaching English.

A group of sixteen teachers from eight countries will spend three months in the United States, six of which will be spent taking intensive courses in English at the University of Florida. Then in order to complement this period of study, these teachers will be placed singly in some of the educational institutions and school systems for a period of one month. Because of Farmville's interest in Inter-American relations, this college has been asked to act as host to one of these teachers.

The plan is to assign a teacher to a school system in order that the teacher may not only observe various phases of educational activities in this country but also to participate to some extent in the activity of a few selected classes.

In discussing this procedure, one of the authorities in the U. S. Office of Education stated, "Of all educational programs which contribute to a more friendly international relationship, none is more far-reaching in good influence than the exchange of teachers."

New Officers Assume Duties At Beginning of Spring Quarter

Margaret Lohr, junior from Brightwood; Martha Russell East, junior from South Boston; Kitty Parham. junior from Petersburg; and Betty Parrish, junior from Manassas were elected president of the Student Government Association, president of the Y. W. C. A., president of the House Council and president of the Athletic Association, respectively as a resu't of major elections yesterday.

Margaret has served on the Student Council for two years. During her sophomore year, she was sophomore representative and during her junior year, she has been serving as secretary of the Council. She is also manager of volleyball on the A. A. Council and a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma.

Martha Russell is at present secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association, a class representative on the Student Council, a member of Kappa Delta Pi, and Alpha Kappa Gamma. During her freshman year, she served as secretary of her class.

Kitty has been on the House Council for two years, serving as hall president her sophomore year as secretary her junior year. She is also a class representative on the Student Council.

Betty is secretary of the Athletic Association, a member of Orchesis, modern dance group, and a member of the varsity basketball team. She has been active in all sports activities during her college career.

Minor elections will be held on campus on March 25 and 26, at which time, vice-presidents, secretaries, treasurers, and other officers will be elected.

Retiring presidents of the four major organizations are Jacqueline Parden, Minnie Lee Crumpler Freddie Anne Butt, and Frances Lee, respectively, of the Student Government Association, the Y. W. C. A., the House Council, and the Athletic Association.

New officers will assume their duties at the beginning of the spring quarter.

Students Select Future Teachers In Class Meetings

Bowling Announces Election Results

New members of the J. L. Jarman chapter of the Future Teachers of America were recently elected by the freshman, sophomore, and junior classes, according to an announcement made recently by the president of the FTA group, Lucy Bowling.

Nancy Parrish, junior from Manassas, was elected from curricula I and II; Anna Headlee, junior from Norfolk, was elected from curriculum III; Anne Shufflebarger, junior from Bluefield, curriculum VI, and Lucille Upsher, junior from Cheriton, curriculum VII.

Doris Ballance, sophomore from Norfolk, was chosen by the sophomore class as the most outstanding prospective future teacher, while Mary Ann Adams, freshman from Lynchburg, was selected by her classmates as the most outstanding future teacher from her class.

Officers of the J. L. Jarman chapter of the Future Teachers of America include Lucy Bowling, president; Betty Adams, vice-president; Katherine Prebble, secretary; and Anna Headlee, treasurer.

Dr. Merritt Speaks To French Circle

Dr. LeRoy C. Merritt, college librarian who recently returned to this college after serving overseas in the armed services, spoke to the French Circle on February 26 on his experiences in France. He was presented to the group by Ellen McMullan, program chairman.

Dr. Merrtt told the group of his first impressions of Paris, the wide boulevards, the complex naming and numbering of streets, and the quaint old narrow streets that one must find for himself.

During his talk, the librarian spoke of the Lauore, the famous museum of Paris and also of art shops which are almost as common in Paris as are drug stores in America.

As result of questions from the students, Dr. Merritt assured the group that not all French girls are pretty, but, he continued "a larger than average number are both pretty and well-dressed." He recalled a common saying with the American soldiers that if you pass a pretty girl on the rue, you need not turn around and look after her, for there is always another one coming.

Margaret Harvey, senior from Richmond and president of the French Circle, presided at the meeting.

Swan Song

One year ago, we, the present staff of the Rotunda, accepted the challenge that was ours to give to the student body and faculty an up-to-date record of the events on our campus. That year has swiftly passed, and now we pause to write our final words as editors of the Rotunda, for with this issue, we turn the publication of the Rotunda over to a new editor and to a new staff; however, to an editor and a staff much more capable and efficient than we. We pass to them a great challenge to carry on the editing of this paper which was founded on our college campus on November 26, 1920. Their heritage is that of many years of traditions long established by this college. Their job will be a big one, and yet it will be one which they can take in their stride and perform as few before them have done.

We are grateful to the students and faculty members of our college who have helped to make the publication of the Rotunda possible. The staff alone could not put out a weekly newspaper without the coöperation of our entire college and without the backing of our college. You have given us your support and your allegiance for which we are grateful. As staff members we have shared our joys and our sorrows, and to be sure, there are joys and sorrows, there are happy hours and sad hours in recording the events of seven busy days in a busy week on our campus. The experience which we have received has been valuable. We perhaps shall breath a sigh of relief, knowing that our work is done, that we have had our chance, and done our best. Yet we shall also shed a tear of regret as we sing to you our Swan Song.

Editing a college weekly is a real experience as we have endeavored to keep a middle course and to avoid radicalism or favoritism. We have tried to be fair and square in our handling of college news and events and above all, we have tried to voice the feelings of the entire student body and of not just a chosen few. We have tried to give praise where praise was due through the columns of our weekly paper.

As we write our Swan Song, we pause to thank our faithful adviser, Mr. S. M. Holton, for his undying efforts to further the cause of good journalism on our campus through his advice and counsel. Also, we are grateful to the Farmville Herald Office personnel who have faithfully and diligently helped us record for you our college events.

Twelve months have passed since we accepted our challenge. The time has now come for us to bid our fond adieu.

Our Appreciation

In last week's Rotunda Miss Lila London, professor of mathematics; Miss Wilhelminia London, associate professor of English; Miss Ida Penney, primary supervisor; and Miss Minnie V. Rice, Latin professor, announced that they will retire from the faculty of State Teachers College during the summer of 1946.

For many years these teachers have given the best they had to prepare girls to teach. Not only have they given the required number of hours in a class room, but they have given of their spare time that we might be better prepared to enter schools. They have always been willing to stop to hear our many problems and to render a little advice where advice was needed.

These fine women have truly been a part of Farmville. They have entered into the spirit that has made Farmville what it is. They have done much to help in the work of the numerous organizations on this campus, and to influence the lives and work of the thousands of girls from Virginia and all parts of the world who have studied under them. Not only do we, the present student body, hate to see them leave, but the alumnae joins with us in our feeling.

The Misses London, Miss Penney, and Miss Rice were not satisfied to get their degrees and then teach. They have continued to study that they might be better suited to instruct us. They never felt that their education was complete, and they were always willing to accept a better way or method. State Teachers College will not be the same without them.

We have indeed been fortunate to have them with us for this long for they have helped to make this college what it is.

Gleanings

Mildred Altice

This week Winston Churchill caused quite a lot of people to talk about Anglo-American relations. He made a speech in Missouri in which he advocated an Anglo-American military alliance. At the President's press conference this week he refused to make any comment on that item at the present. Many people are of the opinion that the speech was aimed at Russia. It makes many people who remember facts or rumors for sometime wonder whether the rumor during the war was true that Churchill and Stalin never got along very amicably. Was England's former wartime Prime Minister using his right of freedom of speech in this country to ally Americans definitely with England to oppose Russia at some future date openly? No mention was made in Mr. Churchill's speech to the General Assembly in Richmond to the military alliance, but he did mention the need for the two countries to cooperate in all things for the best interests of both countries.

There is unrest in many places throughout the world. In Manchuria fighting has broken out again between the Chinese Communists and the government troops. Russian troops are reported to be moving toward the fighting. That dream of world peace seems to be cyclical. It fades and then grows brighter. At this particular time, it is almost nonexistent. It is the darkest just before the dawn so they say, but darkness is relative; therefore, who knows when it is darkest. World events may get much, much worse before they get better. In fact unless Christian people start abiding by Christian principles instead of economic principles, it might take the explosion and destruction of some atomic bomb to make that dream a reality. After some atomic bombs surely the few people left would realize that brotherly love and understanding are the most important things in the world.

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

Some few souls were brave enough to venture amidst the flock of founders who roamed these sacred halls last week-end.

Especially that sharp looking man, Mary Elien Hoge had in town. Those two were here, there and everywhere!

And did you see Joyce Townsend's luscious flowers? What was the special occasion?

Our most hearty congratulations to Miss Wheeler, the cast of "Outward Bound," as well as everyone else who helped make the play such a spectacular success.

And if Norma Howard didn't evermore have an "out of this world" week-end! She only sighs in perfect bliss when questioned about it.

Have you met him? The pillar of S. T. C. has at last returned—why—Tynes of course! Philhower has that sparkle in her eye and now we know Farmville is getting back in the groove again! Girls, the war is over!

Maggie McIntyre seems to have certainly gotten herself involved. Is it Pat or Cully? Anyway, one 'ooks mighty forlorn when he is unfortunate enough to be "The Lone Ranger."

Paige and Paige are getting to be quite the familiar sight around S. T. C. — mostly Shannon's, though!

To beat all, Ruth Ellen Mears "brought back the bacon". Quite a successful week-end! That sweetheart pin is proof enough!

Phyllis A. and Phyllis B. were charming Camp Pickett—or when last seen Camp Pickett wasn't doing so bad itself!

Anne and Martha Russell, tell us about that dinner date you had in Farmville Saturday night.

Ned Wariner was certainly looking lonely this week-end because Jane went to Petersburg.

Billie Pruett had a big time on Sunday with her cute date.

For details of a nice week-end, ask Kitty Wright about her "Manor."

How about that boy who is working in Roanoke, and last night on the bus insisted that Virginia Marshall take his seat. We want to hear more about it.

What caused tha radiant expresson on Martha Hatcher's face this week-end? Could it have been Randy's visit from Randolph-Macon?

For the dttails of A-1 exciting week-end, see Nancy Jessee and Gwen Smith. These Covington boys must be cute stuff!

Seen together a great deal lately have been Linnie Noblin and Pat Striplin.

And so goes another week — with exams ahead, but don't worry—they (?) say every cloud has a silver lining. Here's much sympathy for everyone, including yours truly.

Will see you bookworms after bedcheck, burning the midnight oil!

With the coming of the alumnae to the campus for Founders Day, there were great reunions not only at the college, but also at the churches in Farmville. The Baptist Student Union Council entertained the former B. S. U. alumnae at a breakfast at the Student Center on Sunday morning.

The World Day of Prayer was observed in Farmville by a union service held at the Episcopal Church Friday at 4 o'clock. The church was open all day for meditation.

Union Vesper Services were held at the Presbyterian Church last Sunday night, at which time, members of the four church groups in Farmville met together. Fletcher Hutcheson, a veteran of World War II, spoke to the students on his experiences overseas as he served in the Army of his country. At the Presbyterian evening worship services, a Brazilian minister spoke to the congregation. Following the worship service, the Methodist girls were in charge of the Fellowship Hour.

Reunion of STC, H-S Results In Big Production March 9

By MARGARET WILSON

Well, the Big Three — Miss Wheeler, S. T. C., and Hampden-Sydney—were back on the ball, and living up to all expectations with Sutton Vane's "Outward Bound". There's almost nothing like a man for a man's part, and when it comes to men H-S has 'em Now take for instance Scrobby—Dick Wiant, everybody's still talking about his voice. And Hugh Warren, as Henry, the bewildered lover, and Max Perrow, as Mr. Lingley, M.P., Ltd., who organized himself into a company years ago. Poor Lingley—all the time in a hurry. Then there was Frank Blanton, as Duke, who was "awfully keen about organizing concerts, but turned out to be a pretty decent sort after all, and Frank Brooke, as the lovable drunk. Poor Mr. Prior— "so unfortunate. Tsk, tsk." Bill Hart, the awe-inspiring Examiner, who was really just one of the boys, completes the Hampden-Sydney roster. Which leaves Mary Ann Adams, wistful and sweet as the unhappy half-way; Carlotta Norfleet, as Mrs. Cleveland Banks, who even on Judgement Day?" would really prefer to precede the drunk"; and Martha Frances Webb, whose Cockney accent was a masterpiece! There was never an 'aitch where an 'aitch should be, but Midget married her, and she could prove it!

The setting, the smoke-room of a liner, bound for both Heaven and Hell, was beautifully done, and the lighting effects, under the direction of Rosie Ramsey, added much to the atmosphere of the story. And pity the poor girl! English oval cigarettes, coins to be put in pockets, whistles to be blown, and dogs to be barked—it was quite a job.

Backstage, of course, was a small mad-house. There's more work to the production of a play than is generally dreamed of—and more things happen! Scrubby, having cut himself or something, was dripping blood all over a handkerchief, and my goodness, everybody knows that dead men can't go around bleeding! Mr. Lingley was having stomach trouble of more kinds than one. That bay-window was a bit unwieldy in getting through doors. Then of course, there had been the mad two or three days when Frank Brooke, Dr. Moore, and Miss Wheeler had it out with a streptiecoci—and won. The play must go on, and dawgone if any bug's

Question of the Week

What did you enjoy seeing most this week-end?

Mary Preston Sheffey, '45: It's wonderful to see everybody, "Charlie Hop" in particular.

Blanche Conwell Hanbury, '21: I came back to see Dr. Jarman.

Mrs. Josie Lee Taylor (Josie Lee Cogsdale), '40: Ten of my old friends had a reunion this week-end.

Mrs. Grace Noel Mister, '26: I have really enjoyed seeing the faculty and talking to my old teachers.

Miss Katherine Hancock, '21; I have enjoyed seeing everybody again and the meetings were very interesting.

Mrs. O. F. Northington (Etta Belle Walker), '22: Seeing the new buildings.

Miss Julia Smith, '42: The play, definitely.

Mrs. F. S. Bock, Jr., (Linda Wilkinson): The same school spirit and friendly girls.

Edna Mae Wilkinson, '30: I was so glad to see Dr. Jarman.

Lillian Triveile, '24: I was so glad to know that Miss Carter, my training school supervisor when I was here, still recognized me.

A Group of '21 Girls: We came back to find out if our classmates had aged as much as we had or more. We found out.

Matty Lee Grigg Scott, '12: This is my first time back and I certainly enjoyed the Founders Day program.

Mabel Gregory Craig, '31: On Friday night, my bed mostly.

Mary Lou Gregory '33: Dr. Jarman and my former teachers.

Genevieve Bonnerwell Altweig, '23: It was a pleasure to see my old room on White House.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I should just like to express my appreciation and my thanks for the draperies now hanging in our student lounge. They give color and new life to the lounge, making it a much more desirable parlor in our college. It is in this lounge that our college receptions and teas are held, and for this reason, it is only fitting that it should be one of our most attractive rooms on campus.

I have understood just recently that Mrs. Laing is also planning to cover seats in the lounge. This, of course, will improve the room even more.

I feel that I am expressing the sentiments of the student body when I say that we like the improvements which have been made thus far and that we are looking forward to the additional improvements which Mrs. Laing is anticipating.

Final Basketball Games Will Be Played March 13

Final games for the basketball teams will be played tonight, March 13, in the college gym beginning at 7 o'clock.

The freshmen will play the sophomores, and the juniors will play the seniors in the final games of the season.

Captains for the class teams are Lillian Elliott, senior from Farmville, Christine Shiflett, junior from Churchville, Josephine Goodman, sophomore from Stony Creek, and Helen Londeree, freshman from Scottsville.

The winning team of these class games will gain ten points towards the color cup for their color.

Miss Mary Dabney, swimming instructor, is official referee for all the class games with various class members as umpires, scorekeepers and time keepers.

Eight practices are required for a person to play on any class team. Any person who has played as much as 75 per cent of the time in the varsity games is not eligible to play on the class teams.

NOTICE

Anyone interested in trying out for photographic editor of the Rotuna, please see Shirley Slaughter immediately.

Seniors Tie Sophs Volleyball Clash

Juniors Win Over Frosh In 2 Games

Class volleyball games began last Thursday, March 7, in a double header game between the seniors and sophomore, and the freshmen and juniors.

The senior team and sophomore team tied, with each team winning one game. The juniors defeated the freshmen two games. These games were practice games to give all of the teams practice in playing with their group. Tuesday, March 12, the seniors defeated the freshmen two games and the juniors and sophomores each won one game for their class.

Captains for the various volleyball teams are Louise Blane, senior; Dot Owen, junior; Betty Minton, sophomore; and Phyllis Fulcher, freshman.

The final volleyball games will be played Thursday night beginning at 7 o'clock in the gym. The winning team in volleyball gains five points towards the color cup.

Eight volleyball practices are required for any person who wishes to play on any class team.

LEFT LEAD

SWAN SONG

"Tis with a most peculiar feeling of mixed sorrow and relief that your Ridin' Reporter sits down to peck out her last attempt at the Pegasus column. Some three years ago Left Lead came about as the brain-colt which has grown into the wildest night-mare yet reared up for a staff-writer, but trying to train this colt into a filly "fit for the ring" so to speak has been a job of never-failing satisfaction. There was need for a place the Riding Club could call its own . . . a system whereby those unlucky people who do not ride could learn about what they're missing and a place wherein those fortunates who do participate in this sport of sports could be sure of notices and glean other bits of stable-gossp and possibly, we hope some useful information on riding and horses in general. There have been times when the weather alone kept us going . . . and other times when we could've printed a slip-sheet on Pegasus news alone, and though the readable oats may have grown a bit stale under the hand of one stable-gal for so long a time, still we hope you've enjoyed the weekly feed-bag partially as much as we've enjoyed handing it out.

Before we leave, though, we'd love to remind you once more that we christened the horse in the cut up there "Printer's Ink", and he's a thoroughbred if there ever was one!

TALLY-HO!

Despite the intervention of week end leavers and week-end comers, the stable remained its usual place of busy activity. Jeanne came back from Maryland filled to the brim with stories of fox hunts and fast jumping, and Anna Stuart and M. Lohr retaliated with tales of the 35-miler which led them through the mountains of Virginia for a whole day Saturday. Sunday at Longwood provided the usual weekly entertainment for onlookers when the whole stable-full with the exception of Hell-Cat showed up in the ring for a few high-jinx under the combined forces of our own girls and the H.-S. C. boys. Eagle was in his glory as usual, lending his gaits easily to each of the number of different riders who just had to borrow him for just "once around"! Red Fox, to our sorrow, was limping again, and Martha Sours found out for sure what people mean when they say, "Oh, you rode a pony!" As for our gal, Honey . . . well, she's still honey-colored, anyhow. It was a long and wonderful week-end . . . and here's to more of 'em.

Just in passing, we add that

On the Ball

There will be a lot of excitement this week in the line of sports! Volleyball games will be played off, along with basketball! Volleyball will be played off on Tuesday and Thursday nights! Ping-pong tourney will end this week, so, watch the A .A. bulletin board for final scores.

SKATING

This is excellent weather for this activity. Get out the oie skates, and oil can, and check the straps and roll down the avenue. There are excellent hills around school to provide thrills. Take a group of girls and take to the sidewalk! The weather is just right for skating.

HIKING

With exams facing us, you can still find time to take your books and go find a quiet field. You'll find peace and quiet for concentrating. With spring here, least soon, you can sit in the sun and can cool your toes in a brook.

Once not too long ago, groups left campus and took hikes for the afternoon—this should not be dropped entirely, it is lots of fun to explore.

VARSITY TEAM

Our congratulations go to our own S. T. C. varsity basketball team for their good performance in inter-schoiastic games. Also, the sub-varsity, for the excitement they have provided for the spectators in intra-mural games in the gym is to be congratulated.

SWIMMING

Don't forget the pool will be ready for you. Now that the weather is getting back to "time for swimming" you can make use of the pool. Recreation hours, and regular classes will be held soon. Find time in your day for a cool dip. You won't regret it 'cause it's fun for all.

going to mess it up. Then there was the problem of which way to Heaven—right or left. Everybody seemed averse to going any place else, until both the Examiner and Miss Wheeler practically pushed 'em.

Of course there were the usual problems of lost make-up and misplaced props and sticking doors, but it was worth all of the work that went into it. The Founders, the students, and just everybody loved it. Loads of congratulations go to Miss Wheeler, the cast, and all of the departments of the Dramatic Club. It was a rousing reunion of S. T. C. and Hampden-Sydney, and we're looking forward to lots more like it.

May 18 Scheduled For Pan-Hel Dance On College Campus

May 18 has been set as the date for the annual Pan - Hellenic dance, Evelyn Grizzard, president of the Pan-Hellenic Association, has announced.

Betty Adams and Virginia Shackelford will serve as general chairmen of the dance, while Evelyn Grizzard will head the music committee and Dorothy Overstreet the floor committee. Heading the invitation committee is Betty Brothers; the publicity committee, Virginia Treakle; and the ticket committee, Lucy Bowling. Carolyn Bobbitt and Kitty Maddox were named as heads of the decorations.

★ SENIOR ★ ★ PERSONALITY ★

MILDRED ALTICE

Our first senior personality is one that comes near the top of the alphabet and one that is "tops" to us all! Who else could this be other than our own Mildred Altice! Mildred probably has one of the most remarkable scholastic records at S. T. C. You can always count on her to get the highest grades with the greatest ease!

One outstanding trait that will always be remembered about Mildred is her tinkling, high-pitched laughter and her charming friendliness accompanied by a constant smile. She is always willing to help a "friend in need" and has time for anyone or any organization that requires her help. This latter is exemplified in her excellent and hard work done for Beorc Eh Thorn, Kappa Delta Pi and Pi Gamma Mu.

Most of us have often marvelled at the rapid speed with which Mildred can type and the perfect work that she turns out. Aonther accomplishment she possesses and one that has rarely been displayed to us is her ability to play the piano so beautifully. She also loves to dance and is a grand dancer.

Mildred is historian for the senior class, but in addition to this excellent piece of work which we know she will present at our class day exercises, she will always be remembered at S. T. C. as one of the finest, friendliest and most faithful girls of our Alma Mater. She is certainly "our ideal" in every sense of the word.

Students May Still Sign Up For Dances In Annual May Day

Those who were away last Thursday at May Day sign-up should see Frances Lee, Nancy Whitehead or Betty Ellis, before the spring term begins.

Students are asked to see Frances Lee to sign up for one of the square dance groups—"Star by the Right" or "Forward Up Six and Fall Back Eight" or as a "Lady of the Chorus for Boom Town.' Sixteen girls who are tall and lanky are needed as "Dandies" in "Boom Town" and as escorts for the Court in the "House Raisin'.'

Students are requested to see Nancy Whitehead if they are interested in being a Hunter, Trapper, Indian Squaw, Homesteader, or Surveyor Modern dance experience is not necessary. You must be free to practice at 2:50 or 3:50 Monday, Wednesday and Friday when the dance classes meet. All Orchesis members and apprentices and both dance classes, fundamentals and composition, see Nancy Whitehead who is in charge of all modern dance sections.

All choir and choral members see Betty Ellis who is in charge of assiging you a part as a man, woman or child. More children are wanted as the feature of these two groups is a singing school in which only young 'uns participated. Then, too the costuming problem will be simpler. The children need only to finda suitable pinafore and to make pantaloons.

Practices will start when the spring term begins, May Day schedules will be posted in the hall and in the Home Office. Pans are that only the folk dance groups will practice at night, probably on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. Choir and Choral Clubs will learn their songs at their regular Monday and Thursday night sessions. All modern dance sections will practice at regular dance class times, 2:50 and 3:50 Monday, and Wednesday, and a long Wednesday night session will be a part of the week's plan until May Day.

A general meeting for everyone in May Day will be called for the evening of the first Wednesday of the new term, March 27 at 7 o'clock in the gym.

Helen Har Performs For Town Girls' Club

Helen Har of Honolulu, Hawaii, highlighted the program of the regular Town Girls' Club meeting Friday, March 1, with her dancing and stories of Hawaii.

"Honolulu in my opinion," said Helen, "is a lot like the big cities here in the United States, especially Akron, Ohio, only it's much nicer. We have houses like yours, not grass huts like many people think. Since we have warm weather the year around, our houses aren't heated. Everything in the city is nice and clean because there is little dirt and smoke. Beautiful flowers are in bloom all the time and orchids are quite common. We have the most modern conveniences, even the latest movies."

The attractive Hawaiian described their parties, which she said are very similar to those in America. They enjoy games and dancing, even jitterbugging. The hula dance, which is often considered typical of Honolulu, is done only as entertainment for tourists and during the war, for servicemen.

In telling more about the hula, Helen said a good hula dancer does not accentuate her hips, but her hands. The hands convey the meaning of the song while the hips are used mainly to keep the rhythm.

In conclusion, Helen did the hula dance in a colorful costume.

Helen Har is a junior this year coming here as a transfer from Averett College, Danville.

A writer in the Open Forum, Haverhill, Mass., recently said of General Yakhontoff, "He has the judicial mind that enables him to impress his audience with the fairness of his attitude; in the question period he was especially fine. He was keen and witty, but always kindly. It was one of the finest evenings we have had for many years."

Venezuelan Visits

During Mrs. Soto's visit on this campus, students will be able to gain a better understanding of the people and of the country which she represents. Students and teachers desiring to have her visit their classes are asked to get in touch with Miss Emly Barkdale, or with Miss Helen Draper, of the Modern Language Department.

Mrs. Soto has studied English under private auspices for several years. She is a graduate of the Normal School of Caracas and attended the University of Puerto Rico and a commercial school in Caracas. She has taught in and American School in Caracas, and her present occupation is that of teacher and homemaker. Mrs Soto's future plans are to continue as a teacher of English with better preparation.

During her stay in Farmville, Senora de Soto, will be the guest of Miss Draper at her apartment on Beech Street.

Members of the Spanish Club will entertain at a tea in Student Lounge for the South American teacher soon after her arrival on the campus in order that students may have the opportunity of meeting her and knowing her.

Helsobeck Speaks To Christian Girls

At the first meeting of the Christian girls held Wednesday night at 7 o'cock in the Dean's parlor, Dr. Fred Helsobeck from Lynchburg spoke to the students. He gave valuable suggestions as to some types of work that may be done on the campus by this organization.

Mr. R. B. Wilson from Green Bay was also at this meeting, representing the nearest Christian church.

With the help of Mr. Wilson, this group is trying to find a person in town who will act as leader or adviser.

This group has not yet been thoroughly organized. It is planned that a call meeting will be held soon at which time a name for the organization will be selected, and committees will be appointed.

Ellett, Brooks, Hamilton Named Class Presidents

Other Officers Chosen Last Night

Margaret Ellett, Jennings Ordinary; Louise Brooks, Farmville, and Cornelia Hamilton, West Point, were elected presidents of the incoming senior, junior, and sophomore classes at class meetings held last night.

Elected as vice-prsidents of the of the incoming senior class was Grace Loyd, Lynchburg; while Betty Bibb, Lynchburg, was named secretary; and Anna Headlee, Norfolk, was named treasurer. Student Government representatives are Margaret Skelton, Lynchburg, and Lucile Upshur, Cheriton. Representing the senior class on student standards will be Helen Lacy, Richmond, and Ann Pullen, Danville.

Margaret has been president of her class for the past three years, is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, Beorc Eh Thorn, and Kappa Delta Pi.

Louise is a member of the J. L. Jarman chapter of the Future Teachers of America, and Alpha Phi Sigma. She served as president of her class her freshman and sophomore years.

Cornelia Hamilton was elected president of the freshman class at the beginning of this year.

Julia Booher, Abington, was elected vice-president of the incoming junior class; Mary Lou Bagley, Virginia Beach, secretary, Doris Ballance, Norfolk, treasurer; and Virginia Tindall, Hatton, and Rebecca Winn, Wilson, representatives to Student Government Association. Janie Hanks Hampton, and Peggy Cabaniss Farmville will represent this class on student standards.

Jean Cake, Hilton Village, was elected vice-president of the incoming sophmore class; Marjorie Miller, Christianburg, secretary and Lee Staples, Lynchburg, treasurer. The freshman class will elect government representatives and student standard representatives at a later date.

AKG To Convene Here April 12-14

The National Spring Convention of Alpha Kappa Gamma, will be held on this campus April 12, 13, 14. This is its first of such meetings since the war.

There will be delegates here from the University of South Carolina, Columbia, S. C.; Queens College, Charlotte, N. C.; and Columbia College, Columbia, S. C. The national officers will be present also.

Th convention will convene Friday afternoon. Meetings will be held Saturday, then the delegates will go to Longwood for a banquet Saturday night. They will remain at Longwood for the remainder of the weekend.

Alpha Kappa Gamma, National honor society for leadership was organized in 1928. It represents the merging of local societies which had been founded in order to bring together groups of representative students and faculty members, whose purpose was to foster high ideals and standards of leadership. Alpha Delta Rho, organized in 1925, became the Joan Circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma and was one of the charter members of the organization Its field of work is the promotion of desirable coordination of various activities an interests of the college. The officers of Alpha Kappa Gamma are president, Ann Martin; vice-president, Shirley Cruser, secretary, Virginia Treakle; treasurer, Eleanor Bisese.

Freshmen To Give Class Production On March 28

Show To Center Around Magazine

"The Freshman Gazette" will be the theme of the annual freshman production which will be held in the auditorium Thursday night, March 28, at 8 o'clock. This presentation will center around a magazine, and according to Jean Cake, production head, "There will be pages and pages of good entertainment, and everyone should get their subscription as early as possible."

JEAN CAKE

The cast has been practicing for some time and are ready with monologues dialogues, songs, dances and various other forms of entertainment. The script is literally filled with gags, jokes, and laughs, and a merry time is guaranteed. The usual food will be sold during intermission.

Tickets for the performance will be sold by members of the class, and at the table in the hall. A special section will be reserved for members of the freshmen's "Sister Class," the juniors.

Serving under Jean are Ann Galoway, who heads a large staging and properties committee; Gwen Cress, who is in charge of make-up and costumes; Evelyn Patterson who is in charge of publicity and tickets; Ann East and Lee Staples who head the refreshment committee; and Ethel Shockley and Jean Bell who will handle the music.

Vagabonds to Play For Cotillion Club Saturday Night

Spring Cotillion dance with music by the Vagabonds of Lynchburg will be held from 8:30 to 12 Saturday night, March 30, in the gymnasium. Tickets, which will be $2.40, stag or drag, will go on sale this week.

Chaperones for the dance will be Dean Martha Smith, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. McCorkle, Mrs Hallie Laing, Mrs. Eva Warren, Mrs. Katherine Tabb, Mrs. Mabel McCoy, Miss Pauline Camper, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Coyner, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Graham, Dr. and Mrs. F. B Simkins, Mr. Raymond French, Miss Evelyn Hamner, and Dr. and Mrs. G. W. Jeffers.

Mr. and Mrs. M B. Coyner, Dean Martha Smith, and officers of the Cotillion Club will compose the receiving line. The officers are Anne Summers, president; Katharine Prebble treasurer; Nancy Pitts, figure leader; and Peggy T. Ross, business manager.

Nancy Pitts will lead the figure at 9.45 and an intermission will be held immediately after until 10:30.

The gym will be decorated in green and yellow. Jane Philhower is chairman of the decorating committee and she will be assisted by the Goats.

Other committee working on the dance are music, Peggy T. Ross, chairman; and program and figure chairman, Nancy Pitts.

$2,500 Received For Organ Fund

Approximately $2,500 has been contributed to the Jarman Organ Fund which was launched by the Alumnae Association on Founders Day according to an announcement made this week by Mrs. M. Boyd Coyner, alumnae secretary. Half of this sum was contributed by the alumnae. The faculty, student body, and college organizations contributed the remainder. The largest single contribution was received from the Norfolk Alumnae chapter.

The Jarman loving cup was presented to the Class of 1926 for having the largest number present for the Founders Day exercises. The cup was received by Mrs. Ann Smith Greene of Chevy Chase, Maryland, president of the class.

About 300 Alumnae were back for the annual celebration, and 250 attended the business luncheon in the college recreation hall. Mrs. Louis Ford Waller, Richmond, president of the National Asociation of Farmville Alumnae, presided at all meetings during

Sighs of Relief Are Familiar As Students Finish Exams

By JEAN CAKE

Once upon a quarter there were four little days, extremely feared by everyone—not that there was anything drastically wrong with those bright sunny little days. It was just an ominous air that seemed to hang over them. For weeks everyone knew they were coming, but other things crowded them out of mind. It wasn't until a few days before that students decided to do anything about them. Numerous little "busy signs" went up in defense of any intruder who might divert good intentions of preparing to protect herself against those 'lil days. Complete (?) silence reigned on the halls, and lights burned late. Some isolated themselves in classrooms surrounded by books and notes. Girls staggered down to breakfast with notebooks in hand, still cramming for the important event. According to the teachers, cramming never does any good, but sometimes girls wonder.

The only cause of this strange behavior could be exams. It seems that the teachers feel it necessary to probe into minds, and get a few facts that students have gathered during the quarter down on paper. Despite many protests, students still have to suffer these days all through school.

It was wonderful to have them all over, but there were still the grades to face. All dashed to the class rooms as soon as they were posted. "Whew! I passed!" was most often heard, but there some who had to face the disappointment of failure. Now, there are still the grades for the quarter to go through with. Jeepers!

The best part about those four little days is that freshmen can go down town anytime, and there is no "lights out." Believe your reporter tho' girls had rather have a week of campus than to struggle through examinations.

A.; Betty Parrish, Manassass, president of the Athletic Association, and Kitty Parham, Petersburg, president of House Council.

Ackiss Takes Place On May Day Court

Gwen Ackiss, junior from Newport News, will take the place on the May Court of Virginia Travis, junior from Lynchburg, who did not return to school this quarter. Gwen received the next highest amount of votes in the election which was held January 30.

Anne Carter will reign over the annual May Day celebration which will be held this year on May 4. Jackie Parden will attend the queen as maid of honor, and other members elected to the court are Minnie Lee Crumpler, Frances Lee, Beverly Peebles, Jane Philhower, Peggy T. Ross, Martha Russell East, Mary Jane King, Nellie Smith, Nancy Whitehead, Martha Wells, Julia Booher, Peepsie Brooks, Peggy Moore, Dolly Ann Freeman, and Margaret Wall.

Personnel Director Attends Meeting

Mr. S. M. Holton, Jr., Director of Personnel, has gone to Memphis, Tennessee to attend a meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Mr. Holton left Monday, March 25, and will return Friday, March 29. He will be in his office Satuday morning, March 30.

Support New Officers

We, on this campus, recently elected major officers for the next school year. These officers are capable ones, but they need our support.

In order to have the best possible organizations on our campus, each of us has to do her part. The officers of the organizations guide it, but without our cooperation little can be done. We owe it to our school, our fellow students, and our officers to give our best. If each student takes an active part in the organizations, we can count on them to be good.

When we vote for an officer, we automatically pledge her our support. This pledge is not made for that moment, but for the term of office. We put our trust in the major officers of our school, and they, in turn, feel free to call on us. When we are called upon, let's do our best.

We, at Farmville, have always been noted for our school spirit, and one of the things that make up school spirit is loyalty. We must be loyal to our officers and organizations, if we are to retain this distinction.

Let's do our part, and make this next school year the best one possible. We can do this, only if we do our part.

We are fortunate to have such capable leaders at the heads of our organizations. However, they alone can not run the student affairs of the school. They need not only the backing of a few faithful followers, but of the entire student body. The job that lies ahead of these leaders is a large one, and we must be good followers, so that their term of office will be a successful one.

We Need Your Help

With this issue of the paper, we, the new staff of the Rotunda, take over our new positions. We are faced with a hard job, a job to live up to the high standard that staffs in the past have set up for us.

In our weekly newspaper we strive to express the opinion of the majority of students in college, and to keep the students informed as to the school happenings. Often the editors of the Rotunda do not agree with all of the opinions expressed in this paper, but it is our policy to take the middle course. We want you to be interested enough in your school and in your school paper to tell us what you think. Your suggestions are always appreciated and considered. Often we have our heads so far in copy paper, and our faces so smeared with printer's ink that we fail to see room for improvement.

This is your paper; we try to make it the best for you, so it is up to you to help. The staff alone can not put out a newspaper. We need the cooperation of administration, faculty, and students. When a member of the staff comes to you for a story, cooperate with her. Do not fail to meet appointments, and give her the full information that she needs. We can not put out the kind of paper you want unless you are willing to help. One person who fails to do her job can hold up the entire paper, and there are dozens of jobs, large and small, that must be done each week. It is hard for everyone to realize that our little appointment not met can hold up the "wheels of progress."

Sometimes an article might not have the position in the paper that you think it should. We show no favoritism. A news story is given its place with regard to the other news of that week.

Our work on the paper never stops. Before you get your paper we have started to work on the next issue. The midnight oil never ceases to burn. Don't do a good job this week and disappoint us the next. We don't lay aside our copy paper on Wednesday night, and say, "Thank goodness, that is over." We will try to keep you up with the news the best we know how, and we need your support not only this week, but in the weeks and months that lie ahead.

Remember we have a "deadline" to meet. Those dreaded words, "come back later" turn our hair grey. If you will help us, we will strive to give you a paper that you will be proud to say is yours.

Fight Spring Fever

A week ago today we had our heads buried in textbooks. Today we stand at the beginning of a new quarter. The last quarter for this school year is ahead of us.

Spring is the hardest quarter for many students. Many people are contracting the dreaded disease, "Spring Fever". We are thankful, however, that the disease is curable. There is hope for the worst case. When the clear blue sky, the soft green grass, and the luscious flowers call, it is hard not to heed the call. There is a solution to the problem. Don't think we're a kill joy when we say this, but take a book out under the tree and kill two birds with one stone. Maybe the outdoor freshness will help to stimulate your minds.

When spring comes you're tired of staring at four bare walls, and you just must get out. Well, if you can't mix books with the outdoors, prepare your lessons before you go out. We guarantee you'll enjoy your stay in the fresh air more, if your lessons, lesson plans, and lab experiments are behind you.

Those who have done well the past two quarters, do not want to fall down the last. They have a record to live up to during the preceding quarters. Don't be discouraged, don't quit the job now. Start off this quarter with a new determination to come out on top. "You can't keep a good man down." This is the last quarter in college for our seniors. Make this your best quarter yet.

Fight the battle against "Spring Fever". We haven't got much longer before we can loll in the sun all day.

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

Tra la, tra la! Spring has at last sprung—or at least the calendar says so.

The roof is the new setting for the lily white maidens—who return looking like lobsters—all but one and that is Kathryn Mosteller and we hear she has hours now for people who wish to get her sun-tan formula.

And, speaking of spring, we don't know what it is, but ask Mary Ellen Hoge all about it. She may be able to explain just what it is that gives her that certain sparkle.

Saturday night the Rotunda was buzzin' with excitment. Boxes of flowers eagerly awaited their owners to claim them, and the air was filled with the low murmurs of voices and the rustling of formals. For particulars of the dance at Hampden Sydney see Margaret Wall and Jennie Sue Webb.

Mary Stuart is still walking around in a daze over last weekend. That sailor sure was attractive, Stuart. Where did you find him?

It sure was good to see Dody Jones and "Boo" Giesen back here for the weekend, but we hear it wasn't so much S. T. C. that welcomed them as did others.

Who in the world was the Hubba Hubba boy you were with Sunday, Page? Your public demands an answer.

Margo Skelton makes dates through the room-mate these days. The dates talk to "roomie" and she makes the dates for her. Must be nice.

Shirley Cruser perked up considerably Friday when "Lu Lu" called. Seems as if she was kind of down and out before that, envying Bessy, Bob, Jackie and Killby in Norfolk.

Lynchburg was the center of attraction for Margaret Lohr and Turner last Sunday. Maybe they wanted to get away from it all.

What could the attraction be that holds Ann Carter's attention in Richmond—It couldn't be Frank perchance, could it?

"Ecky" Gianini is still up in the clouds over "Toney"—but then, who wouldn't be!

Norma Soyars and Leddie Foster's attentions have been attracted by the fair town of Crewe—We wonder what the outcome will be.

Seen at Osburn's Friday night were "Peepsie" Brooks, Bill Wall, Peggy Cabiness and Earl Andrews. It looked like a fine time was had by all.

Andrea Garrison took in the sights at THE University last week end, and what sights! Sounds like a good time to us.

Betty Ellis did a fine job as chaperone for the group that went to Greensboro last week. She attempted to chaperone the whole group including the chaperone.

And speaking of this trip to Greensboro, ask Carolyn if she still likes shrimp cocktails.

Bye for now—See you again next week—meanwhile—watch out for that Spring Fever. It's liable to sneak up on you.

ANNA HEADLEE

A group of Baptist girls will attend the Association Meeting of the Baptist Training Union to be held Thursday night at Darlington Heights. Tonight at 8 o'clock Mid-week Prayer Services will be held at the Baptist Church. All students are invited to attend.

The Methodists had a very nice supper last Sunday night followed by a musical program presented by Hampden Sydney students.

The Canterbury Club announces that Miss Helen Turnbull, director of Windham House, N. Y. will be her April 5 through 7 to meet with the girls and to tell them something about vocations open to women in the church.

Rev. Dick Gillespie will speak at Westminster Fellowship meeting next Sunday night. The association meeting was held last week for the election of officers for the coming year.

The theme for the week at Prayers is "Christian Faith for Today and Tomorrow." Tonight the topic will be "Modern Affirmation of Faith," tomorrow "Dimensions of Our Faith, followed with "By Faith" on Friday.

Spring Cotillion Dance

Question of the Week

How did you study for exams, and what do you think the results were?

Teddie Diggs: Ah yes—Exams—If I told then we'd all be ignorant' !

Evelyn Goodman: Give away my secrets ! ! Ha. Ha!

Evelyn Mahanes: Don't bother me, I'm asleep.

Mary Morton Fontaine: In the senior kitchen with a cup of coffee, and high hopes, and I dunno.

Cile Sarver: At a bridge table, and you can guess the rest.

Judy Rieck: With a book in one hand, and a coke in the other and hope in my heart. Results: Ugh!

Hope Worsham: Well—and dont' print that!

Mary Anne Loving: I didn't—Had the pleasure of giving a few for a change.

Barbara Lee Myers: A letter from Ray Baby in one hand and a "hoping heart." Result—Time will tell!

Lou Rives: With Joe on my mind and in my heart—and I'll let you kno' if exams did a good job of taking care of themselves!

Pat Carter: At the bridge table. The result is the sixty four dollar question.

Heidi Lacy: By staying up all night drinking Nescafs, and result—same ole grades.

Carmen Low: Borrowed Bug's wabbitt brain—the result's wabbit stew.

Ann Shufflebarger: Kept the midnight oil burning all night long. Results? Missed the Honor Roll again!

Ann Baer: My goodness—what a question!

Kitty Sue Bridgeforth: I stayed up all night thinking about 'em. Hope I never find out.

Frontier Days Will Make For Interesting May Day

(Editor's Note—This is the first in a series of articles written about the West in order that the students may better understand the May Day festival which will be held on the campus this session.)

In America we have had two types, as well as two epochs, of pioneering, first of the forest and last of the plain. As we look back on these two contrasting adventures, the plains experience seems more remote and unusual, softened by the glamour that diffuses and sometimes makes grotesque our view of distant things.

In a given region the frontier has but a brief and transient existence, and the experiences in that region are not repeated or even approximated by generations that follow. For this reason a certain glamour diffuses itself around the frontier. People look back upon its hardships and sufferings with a feeling of vicarious adventure.

The frontier experiences on the Great Plains were not a repitition of frontier experiences in the region East, South or North from which the settlers came. A frontiersman from the woodland region found on the Great Plains many novelties, many new experiences. Woodcraft was there displaced by Plaincraft.

The mystery of the plains, like that of the sea to which it is often compared, still remains unsolved. We do know that the plains give man new and novel sensations of elation, of vastness, of romance, of awe, and often of nauseating loneliness.

For the first time in our history men, whether they were from the East, the South, or the North, met common problems whether in western Texas or the Dakotas. There was no North and South in the West. The whole nation came to look on the West in the same way as to Indians, as to cattle, later as to wheat and dry farming, as to its romantic and spectacular aspect, and as to its lawlessness.

The West then represents pictures of survival of the land itself, of the Indians,of wild animals, of the early American stock. We are too close to it to see these pictures. We can only sense them. It is our Far Country. It is a land of innovation and survival. It is different. Things go on there as they should in a far country—the prairies (Mid-west). It is for us essentially to view it not as an outsider looking on. It is our heritage, too. But it is native to us.

Lucille Jones Places First In Annual Ping-Pong Tourney

Red and White Win 5 Color Cup Points

Lucille Jones, senior from Staunton, placed first in the annual ping-pong tournament, according to an announcemet made this week by Phyllis Watts, manager of ping-pong.

Jeane Bentley, sophomore from Roanoke, placed second and Frances Lee, senior from Richmond, placed third. Lucille won all 30 games that she played. Jeane won 29 games, and Frances won 27 games.

Lucille, a Red and White player won five points toward the color cup for her class colors. She has held the title of ping-pong champion since her freshman year.

Annually, the ping-pong tournament is played and counted for points toward the color cup. Red and White has held the title for the past four years; Green and White four years prior to that.

S. T. C. Students View Greek Play

"Don't believe a word we say." Ask those who went. They journey all day to view a Greek play, "Prometheus Bound," and sat through the whole performance tired, hungry, and a little forlorn. That is true devotion to the arts, isn't it?

Their professed intentions were to view all the arts collectively. Sometimes it appeared that the arts turnd tables on them.

A tall, gaunt, sparsely grey-haired gentleman with twinkling b'ue eyes started the turn table going. He was the Sheldon Chenied, a famous art critic. We understand that a person has to be famous before he can talk of the commonplace. If it is true, Prometheus, who ever heard of hanging your best print in your bathroom? Why do we look for the familiar in a picture? You are supposed to cast your roving eye thus and "thereabouts" until it finds a rhythmic or organized path. We concluded that modern art had something there.

Did you know there isn't an American theatre? No, there isn't! It is schools like our own S. T. C. which is the biggest force in keeping aliva an art which has hit rock bottom. Curiously, we started looking for a rock pile. But it isn't in the rocks. It is up to man who holds the purse strings. We concluded it was Hollywood

We always thought a round table discussion went around. This one had "televisic" sparks that the speakers' microphone picked up. Imagine great men not agreeing in public. What do you imagine they do in private? We wouldn't want to know. You wouldn't either if you had been there. Verbal atoms flew hither and mostly yon about the kinds of promises the arts of music, painting, and writing were making today.

Writing being the oldest in the modern sense, took a middle ground and a negavistic attitude. But our good friend, (by now) Mr. Cheney, said what we always thought was true, painting points the way for all the arts. We did arrive at a conclusion. No matter what the art may be, we, in America are to the point where we are developing recreators as well as creators.

The last day was gruelling. Have you ever danced hours at stretch? Neither had we. The very thought of movement elicited a responsive groan. We are still a little creaky in the joints, never knew we had so many (creaks or joints). But Chrarles and Peter and Paul (as we were calling them after the lesson) showed us it was worth it at the concert that evening.

What do you think? Will we have modernism? Nativism? Regionalism, We like a little of each.

LEFT LEAD

AFTER THE SWAN SONG—WHAT?

Fair readers, now you must expect the worst and hope for the best since your former Pegasus editor has vacated the saddle, leaving a struggling junior to bring you the news and views of the horsewomen of S. T. C. Before further elaboration on said news and views, allow us to toss this Pegasus fan, Betty Deuel Cock, a huge bouquet of hay and horseradishes for an excellent job of keeping this column in tip top shape for so long. She's really earned a rest, so here's to you, the Colonel, Eagle, and all the rest you love, Betty Deuel . . . Good luck and good riding!

Those that didn't hit the trail early last week didn't ride at all 'cause those grey, rainey skies are made for sleeping and not trail rides. However, a few braved the chilly winds to the early morning —yes—the BEFORE class riders! For proof, ask Mr. Holton's class if B. Cock and Martha Sours didn't rush in one morning, wearing full evidence of their morning madness. Duckie and Anne seem to enjoy these refreshing 7 o'clock rides, too, but Yours Truly is afraid she coudn't SEE that early in the morning.

For real information, ask S. J. Youngblood what NOT to do when you don't want your horse to run away from you.

Changing the subject from bleak, wintry weather to warm, spring skies, you'll be wanting to go on those trail rides next quarter. The air is sweet and the world is aimost "mad with whiteness," and a ride down a country lane is nearly perfection on a clear spring day—Therefore, without delay, you'd better sign up with Jean right away.

Spring brings note of the horse show, which we hope will be bigger and better than ever before. To ride around that ring just once makes all the aches and saddle burns worthwhile.

'Til the next pretty day, I remain your weather-bound

Dr. Gilmer Speaks At Annual Meeting of Inter Varsity

"The book of John gives us samples of what Christ can do for us," stated Dr. Graham Gilmer, the principal speaker for the annual Inter-Varsity conference which was held on the campus March 23 and 24. Dr. Gilmer is pastor of the Rivermont Presbyterian Church of Lynchburg.

The Reverend Mr. Gilmer further stated that John tells us of seven signs or miracles which Jesus performed for other people. He related the story of Christ's turning the water into wine, the healing of the nobleman's son, the healing of the man at the Pool of Bethesda, the feeding of the 3,000, Christ's walking on the water, the healing of the blind man, and Lazarus' return to life. His enumeration of these stories was in keeping with the conference theme, "To know Him and to Make Him Known."

Other speakers were Mr. Robert Spiro, of the Universisty of North Carolina, and Mr. Albert Newport Princeton Theological Seminary.

On Saturday night the group had a social hour in the gym. The program was closed Sunday afternoon with a communion service. The Reverend Philip Roberts, local Presbyterian minister, officiated at the communion.

STC Dramatic Club to Sponsor Contest

Farmville S. T. C. Dramatic Club will again sponsor a one-act play contest to be held April 5 and 6. Six high schools will participate.

On Friday, April 5, the three smallest schools, Clarksville, Altavista, and Randolph-Henry, will perform. Vying for honors Saturday night will be Culpepper, Orange, and Famville high schools. Farmville High School won the contest in 1942, the last year it was held. The school winning for three consecutive years is allowed to keep the cup.

★ SENIOR ★ ★ PERSONALITY ★

ELEANOR BISESE

First in the hearts of the senior class is its president, Eleanor Bisese. Known to all as "Bessy," she is the true embodiment of the friendly spirit for which our college is so well renowned. Her untiring efforts for the class of which she has been an officer all four year, serving as vice-president her freshman year and as pesident the other three years, as well as her services to the college as a whole have made "Bessy" a valuable asset to S. T. C. Some of the organizations which have claimed a greater part of her time and energy have been Pi Gamma Mu, in which she has served as secretary and Alpha Kappa Gamma of which she is the treasurer.

History and biology are "Bessy's" main interests as far as studies are concerned, and golf is her favorite sport. Her versatility also runs along the lines of cooking and of "fixing up" just about any and everything that might be asked of her. In addition to this, we cannot fail to mention Bob Johnson who rates high among her partialities, and whom we finally had the pleasure of meeting at Senior Dance when he fulfilled "Bessy's" greatest desire to lead the figure with her.

"Bessy" has been teased a great deal about her small stature, but the ability with which she has always been able to take a joke, as well as the ability and willingness in all matters which we have found her to possess, have endeared her to the hearts of all who know her.

Tea Given in Honor Visiting Teacher

The Spanish Club enterained with a tea on Thursday, March 1 from 4 to 5 o'clock in the Student Lounge in honor of Mrs. Marita Osuna de Sota, visiting teacher on campus from Venezuela.

Dean Martha Smith Smitr poured tea and girls from the Spanish Club helped to serve. During the hour the Madrigal group sang several southern numbers, and Elaine Holder sang a solo. June Cregar rendered a piano solo, "To Spring."

the day.

The program for the day began in chapel at 11 o'clock in the auditorium. This year the reunion class presidents responded with short talks instead of having one speaker for the occasion.

Spring Means Suits To College Girls

Spring has almost sprung again; therefore it is time to be thinking of that new spring outfit. The restrictions have been lifted a bit on the amount of material that can be used in a suit, but the selection this year is not any more varied than in previous war years.

The new big sleeve and wide shoulders are shown in almost all of the new suits. Here's a word to the wise though, go easy on this type, you short girls, because they tend to make one wider and shorter. The new bulky type is very good on you tall slender girls.

Belted waist lines are back in suits, and so are the short ties in front. The skirts are straight and narrow in some and pleated in others.

The jackets may be very short or very long, bordering on the shortie coat.

The colors are more varied than the styles this year. Black, navy blue, cherry, fuschia, lime green or chartreuse, grey, tan, baby blue, hound's tooth check or pin striped, can all be found. Patent leather accessories are very plentiful and seems to be in more favor than in previous years. Either simply cut blouses or frilly ones are being worn, depending on the lines of the uit and the occasion.

Get in step, S T. C.'ers and join the march of those suited for the spring.

Goat Rules

COSTUME

On Monday, April 1, all goats must dress to portray faculty members, school administration, or town personalities. Regardless of costume, wear one green and one yellow stocking. Make up a poem of eight lines about the person you are portraying, and carry a large pocketbook with chewing gum and matches at all times.

On Tuesday, you are coming to Founders Day at S. T. C. in 1970, bringing a gift for the school, and a sign reading "Goat—". Make up a song about who and what you are to the tune of one verse of "Chickery Chick." Wear no makeup and carry a box with your books, matches, and peanuts or popcorn in it.

RULES

Goats must call all Cotillion members "Miss" and must know the names of all members. Be as polite and helpful as possible at all times. Attend all meals, including breakfast, and do not enter the post office until after lunch. Meet in the gym both mornings at 6:45 and in front of the Colonade at 12:30 and immediately after lunch.

Goat rules are not in effect after 5:30 p. m.

Goat Court, which must be attended by all new members, will be held in the small auditorium at 10 o'clock Tuesday night. Goats must dress in green and yellow and wear their colored hose.

Mrs. Marin To Speak Tonight In Latin American Institute At 8 O'clock In Auditorium

Professor Smith Speaks in Chapel

Mrs. Muna Lee de Munoz Marin will speak at the Latin American Institute tonight at 8 o'clock in the large auditorium on "Our Cultural Program with the Other Americas."

The Latin American Institute which is being sponsored by Boerc Eh Thorn, the Spanish club, and Gamma Psi began on campus yesterday when Prof. Robert C. Smith specialist on Latin American art, now teaching at Sweet Briar College, spoke on "Masterpieces of Latin American Art." He illustrated his talk with kodochrome slides.

Mr. Smith divided the Latin American art up into three periods, the time before Columbus, or the Indian art, the Spanish and Portugese Empire art, and the period of independence. He compared the great temples and pyramids with the gigantic and colloseal figures of the Egyptians and the Babylonians.

The professor from Sweet Briar went on to contrast the art of the Colonial period with that in Virginia. He said that the painting of the Latin Americans was an expresion of religious work. They painted to give the impression of human feeling. In conclusion he said that painting was an expression of the personality of the great artists.

Mrs. Marin spoke last night on "Parts of the Other Americas," and again this morning on "Cultural Ties of Puerto Rico and Virginia."

Known as Muna Lee, the poet, the speaker is also identified as the wife of the man John Gunther calls "the most important Puerto Rican," Luis Munoz Marin, president of the Senate of Puerto Rico. In 1928 Muna Lee was requested to speak before the Pan American Conference in Havana. This was the first time a woman was ever invited to address an international congress on equal rights for women. She is also a member of P. E. N. Club, the Poetry Society of America, and is president of the Society of Women Geographers.

There is no admission to the institute. An exhibit is now on display in the college library which carries out the theme.

Methodist Sponsor Concert April 10

Randolph-Macon To Present Musical

Appearing in a concert in the State Teachers College auditorium at eight o'clock Wednesday night, April 10, will be the Randolph-Macon Glee Club of Ashland, Virginia. This program is being sponsored by the Wesley Foundation, local Methodist student group, of which Virginia Lee Price is president.

The Randolph-Macon Glee Club is composed of fifty members which at the present time constitutes approximately one-fourth of the student body. Mr. William S. Troxell who is head of the music department at Randolph Macon is the director of the group and Miss Gladys Coulter, one of the few co-eds attending the school, is the accompanist.

This concert will be divided into two parts. During the first half, the Glee Club will render several sacred songs, three folk songs, three spirituals and then a mixed group of selections.

The second half will be a "Mellow-dramatic Variety Show" entitled Who Struct John? Outstanding features will be a brass band, "Little Nell," comedy skit, quartette, numbers by the Dormitory Four, the Burlesk Boys, real hillbilly songs, "Carmen Miranda" by Travis Stanley, and "Moments in Magic."

Besides Farmville, the Glee Club will appear this year at Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg, Mary Baldwin College in Staunton, Richmond Professional Institute in Richmond, and in Portsmouth and Ashland.

Charlotte Grizzard is in charge of the sale of tickets and they may be obtained from members of the Wesley Foundation or at the table in the hall.

Miss Mix to Speak At AKG Banquet

Miss Grace Mix, a member of the faculty and administration of this college for 22 years, will be guest speaker at the banquet given by Alpha Kappa Gamma, Saturday night April 13. She received her B. A. and M. A. degrees from the Teachers College of Columbia University. There she was a member of the faculty for two years. She is a life member of National Association of Childhood Education. Miss Mix was an initiated member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, then adviser, and now she is an honorary member. The National Convention of Alpha Kappa Gamma will be held on this campus April 12, 13, and 14. This is the first of such meetings since the war.

Delegates will be here from the Universisty of South Carolina, Columbia S. C.; Queens College, Charlotte, N. C.; and Columbia College, Columbia, S. C. The national officers wil be here also.

Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary society for leadership, was organized in 1928. It represents the merging of local fraternities which had been founded in order to bring together groups of representative students and faculty members. The purpose of this organization is to foster high ideals and standards of leadership.

The officers of Alpha Kappa Gamma are president Ann Martin; vice-president, Shirley Cruser; secretary, Virginia Treakle; treasurer, Eleanor Bisese.

Newton Announces Head Yesterday

State Educator Follows Dr. Jarman

Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster, Virginia Superintendent of Public Instruction, resigned from that position yesterday, April 2, to become president of State Teachers College, succeeding Dr. J. L. Jarman. The announcement was made by Blake T. Newton, chairman of the State Board of Education.

Dr. Lancaster will leave the State department sometime before July 1, the date when Dr. Jarman, for 44 years president of the college, retires.

Considered one of the top educators in the state, Dr. Lancaster succeeded Dr. Sidney B. Hall as state superintendent in 1941. Since that time he has been a leader in the movement to increase teacher pay and has placed great emphasis on vocational education and supervision of instruction in Virginia.

A native Richmonder, Dr. Lancaster came to the position that he held before his resignation yesterday from Sweet Briar College, where he was executive secretary of the board of trustees.

Prior to that Dr. Lancaster was dean of men at the University of Alabama from 1929 to 1937, and when he resigned, 3000 students signed a petition asking that he remain at the university.

Dr. Lancaster received his AB degree from the University of Virginia in 1911. After graduation from the University, he was an associate master at St. Christopher's School in Richmond and did graduate work at VPI, receiving his MS degree in 1915.

From 1914 to 1923 the new college president taught agricultural education at VPI, and then began a six year association with the State Board of Education. For two years he was supervisor of agricultural education and from 1925 to 1929 was secretary of the State Board of Education, a position which at that time was comparable to the assistant superintendency.

Dr. Edgar G. Gammon, chairman of the state board's committee named to find a successor to Dr. Jarman, and president of Hampden-Sydney College said, "We are delighted that Dr. Lancaster decided to accept the Farmville post. We feel we have made an exceedingly wise choice and that he will be an excellent president at the college."

Mr. Newton in making the announcement yesterday stated that Dr. Lancaster was leaving with the regret of the entire State Board of Education. He added, "We congratulate the fine college at Farmville for acquisition of

Kellam Will Head Commercial Club

At a recent meeting of the Commercial Club Barbara Kellam, junior from Norfolk, was elected president of the club for the coming school year 1946-1947.

Other officers elected at this time are vice-president, Virginia Marshall, sophomore from Richmond; secretary, Jacqueline Bobbitt, freshman from South Hill; treasurer, Barbara Lee Myers, junior from Danville and reporter, Annie Ellis, junior from Gasburg.

Mrs. Alice C. Wynne, associate professor of business education, was re-elected advisor to the club.

The outgoing officers of the Commercial Club are Minnie Rose Hawthorne, president; Mary Virginia Walker, vice-president; Barbara Brown, secretary; Alice Davis, treasurer; and Jean Kent, reporter.

Freshmen Select Student Standards, Government Members

Ann Ford, freshman from Lynchburg, and Jane Fox, freshman from Alexandria, were elected as representatives to Student Government for the incoming sophomore class.

Elected to Student Standards were Evelyn Patterson, Winston Salem, N. C., and Violet Ritchie, Richmond.

Other officers of the class are president, Cornelia Hamilton; vice-president, Jean Cake; secretary, Marjorie Miller and treasurer, Lee Staples.

Last night at prayers, new officers and representatives of Student Government were installed. The new officers are president, Margaret Lohr; vice-president, Betty Minetree; secretary, Jeane Bentley; treasurer, Alice Ann Abernathy, and campus leagie chairman, Jacqueline Bobbitt. Class representatives are Margaret Skelton, Lucille Upshur, Virginia Tindall, Rebecca Winn, Ann Ford and Jane Fox

Vagabonds to Play For Pan-Hel Dance

Evelyn Grizzard, president of the Pan-Hellenic Association, has announced that the Vagabonds from Lynchburg will play for the annual dance May 18. Each sorority will have one special no break dance. The advisors of each of the sororities will be chaperones, others will be announced later.

Betty Adams and Virginia Shackelford will serve as general chairmen of the dance, while Evelyn Grizzard will head the music committee and Dorothy Overstreet the floor committee. Heading the invitation committee is Betty Brothers; the publicity committee, Lucy Bowling; Caroiyn Bobbitt and Kitty Maddox are head of decorations.

Charming Lady Sees Places of Interest

Mrs. Marita Osuna de Soto has been with us for two weeks now so we are sure that everyone on the campus has met her in some way, yet not many girls have had the opportunity to talk to her in an informal way. From meeting her at teas and other such affairs one receives the impression of her charm and friendliness but when one talks to her informally she seems even more gracious. There have been numerous articles written on the "business" side of Mrs. Soto's stay here so we shall only touch up on it briefly so that we may devote this article to the more personal, informal side.

We presume that all the students know that Mrs. Soto was sent to us to spend four weeks in which she shou'd meet the Spanish classes and attend those which apply to the work she is performing for the government. Before coming here she was given a seven teachers who are now at other colleges doing the same thing, then she went to Washington where she was given her assignment. After her time here is up she will return to Washington for a vacation of two weeks before the meeting of the entire group which completes her mission. She told us that it is her desire to go to New York during those days of vacation and among the things she has planned are a visit to the "Met" at the invitation of Dr. John Erskin, a great deal of sight-seeing and a "taste of night life on the Great White Way". Lincoln Memorial, the Library of Congress, and the Capitol are on her Washington list.

The little general questions have been put to this charming lady so much that she answered them for us in the course of the conversation without our actually having

Attend the Lecture On Latin America

We are indeed fortunate to have on our campus this week the Latin American Institute, which is being sponsored by three organizations. We very seldom have an opportunity of this kind.

The institute is a valuable means of understanding Latin America. We, as students, should take advantage of the opportunity presented to us.

Much thought and work has been put into this meeting in order to present to us an accurate picture of Latin America. Latin America is playing such a large part in world affairs today, that it is necessary to learn and understand as much about her as possible.

We can learn about Latin America in many ways, but one of the best ways is by having a speaker who is well acquainted with the subject. We are very fortunate to have a well informed person as our speaker for this program. Since so much effort has been made on the part of many, both teacher and student, we can best express our appreciation by attending all the lectures. This is an unusual opportunity, one that may come only once in a lifetime. Let's show our gratitude!

Let's try to arrange our period of study so as to allow time for us to attend all the lectures. We realize that it is impossible for all of us to attend, but we do want to make a good audience. This lecture series can not be a success unless everyone takes an active interest in it. Attend the Latin-American Institute.

Telephone Situation Needs Improvement

The most popular places on this campus are the telephone booths. Yet these places are the most neglected. The telephone situation in the Home Office is well taken care of, but the telephones on Annex and in Senior Building are a nuisance to those unfortunate people who happen to live around them.

Perhaps there are not enough telephones in school to accommodate all of the girls, but this situation is not in our hands. It will be a long time before conditions will permit us to have more. It is not the fault of the administration or the telephone company that we can not have more telephones at this time. At this point telephones are almost a menace to society. They are just that to anyone who lives within hearing distance of them.

Something could be done about this bother. A schedule could be worked out for night whereby each girl would give an hour or so to answering the phone, and all of the trouble and confusion would be remedied. Every student is interested enough in getting her own telephone calls to give a little of her valuable time to this cause.

Often if a girl is not in, she never gets her telephone call because someone is either too busy to record it or too lazy to walk up a flight of steps. We do not stop to think that the message might be a very important one. If someone was on duty every night to record messages that come through, each girl could get her call without any mistake.

The students that live near the phone booths are constantly being interrupted in their work to answer the phone. It is not fair to them to have to run at the least jingle or to be bothered by other girls who drop in to see whether or not the latest flame called tonight. Those who do not live near the popular places know that they would not want to be bothered, and the least we can do is to help these unfortunate people.

It would take a very little of our time, if we would volunteer to be telephone operator for one night. If we will work out such a plan, we would not only help the girls who live around the phone, but also those who live within yelling distance, the Farmville operators, and ourselves.

Continue Attending Some Church Service

Last month, March, was stressed here at S. T. C., as the month to march to church. The importance of attending the religious services of the various churches was emphasized and the response was marvelous. Many renewed their interest in religion with noticeable vigor.

Now that March has passed and April with sun baths, spring fever, and general laziness is at hand, our interest must not grow lax. An hour or two of quiet meditation and an inspiring sermon is restful and definitely beneficial to our disposition and outlook on life. After a full week spent gaining food for thought punctuated with a little fun and relaxation, we should refresh our souls with spiritual nourishment.

To some people, nothing is so invigorating as to get up early on Sunday and attend the morning services. Others, who think the quiet and stillness of evening adds to the mood and atmosphere, prefer to worship at night. Many would not miss either. Whichever you choose to do, spend at least one hour in the church of your choice.

The Sunday morning and evening preaching services are not the only ones we can attend. S. T. C. girls are urged by every church to take an active part in the Sunday School and the evening young people's meeting. By joining and working with these groups, every girl has an opportunity for spiritual advancement. Mid-week prayer services are also held on Wednesday night by the various churches and this quiet hour of meditation has proved a help to many who attend.

Even though March has marched on, as it does inevitably, there is no reason for us to stop. Let's continue our march to church throughout the months to come.

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

To say the least—S. T. C. was buzzin over the past week-end—and we do mean buzzin—

Cay Lynch was never seen without a smile and "Pete". Those lights in her eyes couldn't have been produced from the idea of the week-end, or could it?

Wedding bells rang on Sunday for Frances Seward in Petersburg. Best wishes are in order for Frances from those of us who couldn't make it.

All we want to know is this. Just what did Lucille Upshur think was so funny about "Goat" week? Everytime any of us saw her she was just about rolling on the floor.

Mary Morton seemed to be all excited over her Saturday night date. He must have been simply out of this world. How about it, "Morty?"

And then there's the story about "Fitchit"—but you had better ask Peggy T. about that.

That phone call from Norfolk must have been quite the thing because "Sutton" was last seen taking off from the phone booth.

Sure was good to see Pat Maddox. Mary Walker, "Johnny", "Cheatwood", Mary Watkins and others, not to mention "Beckie" Lacy with that diamond sparkling on the third finger, left hand.

Looks as if Anne Martin is doing all reet as far as Hampden-Sydney is concerned also "Maggie" Mac. How 'bout it girls?

Excitement was really on first floor senior annex when "Bev" found out that William was in the states.

The floor show at the Cotillion dance was definitely Bill Burchett and his cute way of jitterbuggin'. What he couldn't teach Arthur Murray!

"Julia", just what is it that made your date have a stiff neck Sunday?

Betty Ellis seems to be getting pretty good at getting Commercial letters these days, what's happened to the personal letters—Huh??

Ask Jane Paulette about the past week-end at home for the gloried details about Johnny.

Those boys from N. C. State sure do like Farmville. It couldn't have been Evelyn and "Babs" that bowled them over, could it?

Hilda just couldn't let Shuffle get away with her diamond, so up she comes with a fraternity pin, only she wasn't the only one—Frances Livesay received one too!

"Skeeter" Crockett's date caused a lot of girl's eyes to wander her way, but can you blame them?

Those cute girls that picked up on Saturday and went to the University of Virginia were just about

Y News

By ANNA HEADLEE

Congratulations to all the new officers of the various church groups; the Y. W. C. A. wishes all of them the best of luck and success in their coming year's work.

The Baptists girls entertained Tuesday night at the Student Good Will Center in Richmond for Miss Greenup, Director of the Center, at which time she spoke to the Y. W. A. on her work at the center.

Episcopalian Students! Please note! Miss Turnbull will be here Friday through Sunday. If you are interested in church work for women, make an appointment to see her!

The Methodist young people will meet at 7:15 beginning next Sunday. They will elect officers tonight after supper in the Dean's parlor. The Wesley Foundation is sponsoring a concert to be given by the Randolph Macon Men's College Glee Club on April 10. Tickets may be obtained from members of the foundation.

The Presbyterans will have a supper meeting with an outside speaker Sunday night at 6:00 p. m. at the church.

At the last business meeting of the Christian girls, held on Wednesday, several committees were appointed and work was begun on a special Easter program. A name for the group was decided upon. From now on they will be known as the Christian Youth Fellowship.

Tonight at Prayers new officers of the Y. W. C. A. will be installed at the annual candlelight installation service.

Spring

Question of the Week

What did you like most about Freshman Production?

Dot Bradley: "Love Letters".

Jane Underhill: Ruthellen's night-gown.

Jean Turner: Muriel McBride.

Virginia Elliott: The gown that Mosteller wore was really "on the ball".

Virginia Marshall: "While a Chesterfield Was Burning" — it was wonderful.

Charlotte Hutter: "Pete" Patterson's red dress—Hubba!

Harriette Sutherland: The singing chorus.

Maude Savage: Jean Watt's singing "Love Letters".

Dottie Hubbard: Ruthellen in that "nightie".

Mildred Davis: Jean Watt's singing "Love Letters".

Shirley Connelly: Muriel McBride was a scream.

Sue Steel: Galloway's "This burns me up".

Janet Dunlap: "While a Chesterfield Was Burning"—it brings back old memories.

"Ting Rattray: Oh, I liked the song about "Charlie Hop".

Lelia Bouldin: I liked the fashion show, also, the "Three Feathers" dance.

Jerry Colgin: The End—(I mean the last number).

Peggy Moore: The cracks "Aunt Jemima" made.

Bebe Geyer: The thrill it gave "Charlie Hop".

Carolyn Murphy: Say, after all, let's not forget Nancy Dickerson—she was grand!!!!

Pages of 'Freshman Gazette' Reveal Fun and Excitement

By MARGARET WILSON

The pages of the Freshmen Gazette turned and turned, and there was something different on each one. "She's lovely—she's engaged, and by golly, she uses Ponds." If everything in S. T. C. doesn't start right now to develop that "skin you love to touch" it won't be for lack of inspiration. The back-ground of page one really set us thinking!

Then there was the triangle—the eternal one, which has nothing at all to do with plane geometry. Just like all good things, it will be continued in the next issue, and the terrific question is "Whose husband or whose fiancee is who?"

"Startling Styes for Stella"—well now! Some of 'em were startling from way back. Sweet and sophisticated, and all kinds of things like that. But the movie previews! Somebody was sure enough "Gone with the Wind" and no fooling. Now, as to "It Happened One Night"—and it could happen, too—that was really one for posterity. The Freshman class—may they rest in peace.

There's no mistake about who's getting Love Letters around here either, but, Jean, did he really write 'em? Remember the sad case of Jennifer.

And then there was Charlie Hop's triumphant march down the aisle, and the beautiful green and white and polka-dotted tie, which he wore by popular request.

The crowning blow was the question—and of all places to ask it!—"Are you Hungry?" My goodness! Fortunately for the peace and quiet of S. T. C. we had just consumed a conglomeration of cokes and mint patties and things during intermission. Anyway, the can-can girls, emerging from a can of tomato soup, can-canned all over the place, L'l Abner delivered a knock-out punch to the amorous villain, and Mammy "lay my cards on the table" Lou managed a little bit of everything.

For a realistic picture of barrack life in S. T. C. see the Freshman! "Mur-le!! The toast is burning!"; "Mr. Rie-d! We blew a fuse!"; "Who'll make a fourth?"; and so on. We felt so at home!

"While a Chesterfield is Burning," "Deep in a Dream of You," and "Good Night, Readers," brought an end to the proceedings, which, as far as the student body was concerned, could have gone on indefinitely.

Congratulations to Jean Cake, Charlie Hop, and the whole cast, 'cause it was really a knocked-out performance!

Sun Worshippers Set Up Shrine on Roof

By BETTY SPINDLER

"The spring is sprung
The grass is riz
I wonder where the Flowers is?"

That spring has arrived is only too evident in the flowering trees and shrubs on the campus, but the blooming complexions of the girls are also infallible signs. The ever popular P. O. is even losing its place to the roof where the sun-worshippers have set up their shrine. Now there is a constant stream of "pilgrims" going up to pay their prostrate hommage to the giver of ultra-violet, the source of these gorgeous tans.

If Home-Ec. majors exchanged food recipies like the rest do sun-

The softball games will be played between classes in a round-robin tournament similar to the ones held during hockey, basketball, and volleyball seasons. The color winning the most games wins ten points toward the color cup.

Betty Minton of Roanoke is now manager of softball and Jean Bentley, also of Roanoke, is assistant manager.

Softball is the major sport of the spring quarter and everyone is urged by the managers to come out of her eight practices in order to play on the class team.

LEFT LEAD

TALLY-HO

It's really "tally-ho" because we're off again, starting down a long glorious Spring of trail-rides and ring work. That is, between showers and freezes! Despite the fact that both horses and riders were occasionally victims of Spring Fever, the stables saw quite a bit of activity last week. Anna and Ducky indulged in another of their early morning rides, leaving us to wonder what charm the grey hours of dawn hold that a warm bed doesn't. And if your date is bored on a Sunday afternoon, Vickie Edmunds knows just what to do to entertain him . . . If you don't believe it, just watch Reggie walk! But if you ever feel the urge to hit the saddle and the sky is overcast with big, grey clouds, take a tip from Yours Truly and suppress that longing. If you go, you're liable to find yourself miles away from the stables right in the midst of a hard shower and nothing is more comical to see than a thoroughly drenched horse and rider go streaking down the road for shelter. Eagle is hardly dry yet.

EXIT THE GHOST

The old girls of the Riding Club were dismayed to find that their favorite haunted house is haunted no more . . . At least not by ghosts and banshees but by quite ordinary humans. Last year this o'd house was the objective for many rides because not only was it fun to explore its spooky empty rooms but you could always pick an armful of jonquils for your room. Imagine the disappointment to find curtains fluttering in the breeze and the jonquils picked already. The new occupants cordially gave us permission to ride on the premises at any time; however, so things aren't too bad. A couple of new riders discovered this pleasure Thursday. You can't keep these freshmen in the dark for long! With that amazing statement we'd best bid adieu—Keep your ears tuned for news of the Horse. Stay on the Bit!

Orchesis Selects New Apprentices

Fourteen girls have been named apprentices of Orchesis, modern dance group, according to Betty Ellis, president of the group.

Those girls named apprentices are Jean Babb, sophomore; Virginia Beaver, sophomore; Nancy Blair, junior; Julia Booher, sophomore; Betty Burchett, sophomore; Nancy Dickenson, freshman Virginia Elliott, sophomore; Janie Hanks, sophomore; Anne Haskins, sophomore; Mabel Lewis, sophomore; Helen Owens, freshman; Nancy Robbins, junior; Celia Scott, sophomore; and Mary Virginia Walsh, freshman.

All apprentices must participate in two major dance events of the dance year. These new apprentices will take part in May Day this quarter and in the annual Christmas Sing which the dance group puts on each year before they will be initiated as members.

tan formu'as what a wonderful bunch of scholars they would be! But if some of the concoctions heard of were actually tried in the chemistry lab, S. T. C. might find that she fostered another Mme. Curie or we'd have to build a new lab building. Take for instance the baby oil-vinegar-iodine combination; the baby oil is to keep the skin smooth and prevent it from burning, the vinegar is to make the rays "sink" in, whereas the iodine is for goodness only knows what, unless it helps give that well-done look. This is only one of the many mediums through which a golden-brown exterior is acquired, for there are literally hundreds of commercially prepared lotions and creams for the unimaginative who don't care to make their own. The ointment, however, is only the pre-requisite to sunbathing; the real art lies in the actual acquiring of the tan.

First it is necessary to clad oneself in the proper attire — the amount depending upon the individual. Next, one takes her pallet to the roof where she hunts for enough space to spread it; then lies down to the torture of an Oriental priest with the gravel of the roof to poke holes in the ventral while the sun sheds its infernal rays on the dorsal and vice versa.

After a week or so of such sacrifice the rewarding tan begins to show through the lobster red and the patient soul is well on her way toward the envy of those less persevering. It's great fun.

Physical Ed. Teachers To Attend Conference

Miss Mary B. Barlow, head of the physical education department, and Miss Mary Dabney, swimming instructor, will attend the National Convention of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation at St. Louis, Missouri, from April 9 to 13. The theme for this convention, which is the fifty-first of such annual conventions, will be "Fitness for the American Way of Life."

to ask them; for instance she told us about her family when we talked of her shopping trip to Richmond. Neither did we have to ask what she particularly wanted to learn on her visit here, for she said several times that her primary aim was to learn the methods of teaching that she was to make a study of with the rest of her group. However, we did learn an interesting sidelight; she wants to learn three things to take back to her personal friends—to play Bridge (in Venezuela they play Rummy, etc., but Bridge was not known to her), to learn the new popular songs and the old favorite folk songs, and to jitterbug. So far she has become so adept at Bridge that she has won all her games, she has bought some songs (she said that she plays the piano "a little" and the organ at church,) and so far she has had on'y one jitterbug lesson.

Since she has been here Mrs. Soto has been to Richmond and Charlottesville as well as out to Hampden-Sydney and she plans to visit Williamsburg soon. When we asked what she found most impressive in Virginia she replied that the culture and the interest in higher education. She said she was almost amazed at the number of colleges in rural areas.

As we left her she said that she considered it an honor to have been sent to Virgina and that she has enjoyed being with us at Farmville very much. Mrs. Soto came to us in the interest of education for all, which is also Farmville's aim, so we are sure that all of you will join us in wishing her success!

On the Ball

April showers may bring May flowers, also our spring sports—archery, softball, golf, tennis, and riding. Have you been by the tennis courts lately, if not—do. The courts are being scraped, and raked and rolled, sprinkled, and lined off—one sure fact, if you go down and get in a couple of sets, your tan will be smooth. More fun than sitting on the roof all day and getting red on one side and not on the other. Tennis is fun, and you may want to brush up on your form, make use of your extra time! Keep in mind the idea of spring tourney, and be on the lookout for a doubles partner.

SOFTBALL

Come on out gang, you will find the game fun and the class games always prove exciting. Your team needs you, but you will need to practice and keep up your pitching and batting form. Check the bulletin board by the post office, for hours of practice. Every team member counts, and plays her part in the game, won't you try?

ARCHERY

This sport is already on the go. If you have not joined a class, find time in your day's extra-curricular activities, and take some third periods in archery. To be a good archery player it takes skill and that can only come through practice.

RIDING

Have you tried your horse skill and joined a riding class this quarter? You would enjoy a cool spring trot along the riding trail to Longwood. The instructor will be there to help you if you are a beginner. You can always stimulate your appetite after a ride.

The sports mentioned will prove fun, won't you join in at least one of them? Be a good sport!

Colorful Cottons Say Spring's Here

Material Available in Various Patterns

By HELEN WILLIAMS

Spring has sprung; sunny days are here again, that means it is time to get out your cotton dresses and give them a pressing, girls!

If you have been worrying because your supply is so few, just stop fretting right now. Downtown you will find a collection of latest styles, textures, and colors to suit your taste and type. Or maybe your problem is the financial one, then why not select an easy pattern, a piece of material, and solve your problem on someone's sewing machine. Even though it will require time you will find it is much easier for your allowance.

Cottons have always been featured in "springy" colors. They may be solid colored, plaids, stripes, figured or two tone combinations. Pastels have always been popular but last spring brought black into the scene. You ought to be able to find a color becoming to you.

Two-piece; high round neckline; low neckline; sleeves, cap, tailored, short or even sleeveless. These are just made for the tanned girl, and oh, so cool and comfortable. Maybe the gathered skirt is your pet. Some dresses open to the waist, some all the way to the bottom and some half way.

Eyelets, seersuckers, chambrays, poplins are all found in the spring parade of cottons. You could have yours trimmed with buttons, bows, belts or ruffles. To make them ever brighter try contrasting rickrack braid, embroider or saddle stitching.

Sorority Entertains

Theta Sigma Upsilon sorority celebrated its founders day, March 22, with a formal banquet in the college tea room. Toasts were proposed to Dr. Jarman, Miss Lucille Jennings, the guests, and Lucy Bowling, president of the Tau chapter.

Among the guests attending the banqquet were Dr. J. L. Jarman, Dean Martha Smith, Miss Alice Carter, and Mrs. Mabel McCoy. Also present were Miss Jennings, the advisor, and the chapter members.

★ SENIOR ★ PERSONALITY ★

CAROLYN BOBBITT

Our senior spotlight this week turns to the retiring vice-president of our Student Government Association, Carolyn Bobbitt.

Since the beginning of her freshman year, Carolyn has been active in extra-curricular activities and has excelled in scholarship. During her sophomore year, she was the winner of the Alpha Phi Sigma scholarship key for maintaining the highest average of any member in her class for the longest period of time. Whenever the list of students who made all A's is read in chapel Carolyn's name is among them. Her abilities have been recognized by Alpha Kappa Gamma, Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Gamma Mu, Boerc Eh Thorn, and Alpha Phi Sigma.

In the midst of her busy senior year at college, Carolyn found time for her social life. In fact, she was one of the seniors who returned to school after Christmas with a diamond from "Cab" and plans for a summer wedding.

A personality sketch of Carolyn would not be complete without some mention of her musical ability and some recognition of her work in the college choir and in the other various choral groups. An accomplished pianist, Carolyn has showed her talent with others at Farmville and has given some of her time to plays for the children in the Training School.

In summing up her attributes, one would say that she is one of S. T. C.'s most well-rounded students and that "to know her is to love her."

Phone Ring Causes Mad Confusion

By BETTY LEWIS SHANK

Mary is studying her biology. But, wait—is she really? If so, why does she leap from the bed into the air with each ring of the hall phone, upsetting reference books, notebook paper, pen ills, coke bottle, chewing gum, and other scientific data? Could it be that Mary's mind is not on the anatomy of a frog? It could, and is! Alas, her hopeful shrieks are driving her roommates daffy. They just can't understand it. But we are privileged—we can look into the inner sanctuary of Mary's mind and find out what is going on there. Shall we?

She said he wou'd call. He's just got to call. Oh, I wish he would come up this week-end. He's just got to come up this week-end! I—the phone again. Oh, shucks, it couldn't be—not this late."

Poor Mary, she is in the depths of despair.

"Ma-ryyy! Telephone!"

One more leap—one more shriek and are the roommates glad this is the last.

At last she returns from the home office. Only Bill's voice could have put those stars in Mary's eyes.

Collapsing on the bed and also on all the scientific data she tells her roommates that Bill is coming up this week-end. Isn't it wonderful—a week-end guest!

"Yes, it's wonderful, but you had better read that biology instead of sitting on it. It's almost time for bed-check."

Terrible, isn't it, what news of a week-end guest can do to us? But, we couldn't live without 'em?

Mantiply, Bennett Named Church Heads by Various Groups

Officers of Westminister Fellowship and Baptist Student Union for 1946 and 1947 were recently elected. The remaining church young people's groups will elect their officers at a later date.

Jane Mantiply, sophomore from Fishersville was elected president of Westminister Fellowship. Betty Bennett junior from Keeling was elected president of the B. S. U.

Cile Sarver, junior from Abingdon was elected vice-president of Westminister Fellowship. Other officers of the group include Christine Shiflet, secretary and Mary Lou Graham, treasurer.

Lee Carter, junior from Concord Depot, was elected first vice-president of B. S. U. Second vice-presidents are Ella Stone Smith and Maria Addleman. Other officers include Evelyn Hair and Jane Browder, third vice-presidents; Audrey Hudson, recording secretary; Rosa Chandler, statistical secretary; and Grace Anderson, treasurer.

Also elected on the B. S. U. council were publicity director, Edith Apperson; reporter, Ethel Shockley; music director, Elaine Holder; S. S. representative, Virginia Tobey; B. T. U. representative, Patsy Dale; Y. W. A. representative, Geraldine Joyner; day student representative, Alice Jordon; freshman representative, Ruth Tillet; and external relations representative, Rachael Brugh.

Wash Undies

Frequently there is excess dye on the surface of dark undies, which may rub off to stain skin or other clothing. A preliminary washing in lukewarm suds will remove this possibility.

Just Looking Thanks

By LELA BOULDIN

Well, folks, let's see who got the "traveling itch" this week-end. In Richmond we find Janey Bell Sommers, Lucy Bralley, Virginia Hanks, Glennis Moore, Mary Kennedy, Pauline Barnes, Erla Brown, Jean Edgerton, Rosa Lee Ewing, Frances Lee, Jean Matthews, Katherine Tindall, Marion Wittkamp, Becky Williams, and Jean Babb.

Round the bend to Roanoke went Mary Spradlin, Ethel Shockley, Betty Lewis Shanks, Augusta Hargan, and Betty Jane Brockway.

Chase City bound were Virginia Love, Neva Brankley, Jean Moss, 'Bo Peep" Watterson, and Carol Hupp.

In Alexandria this week-end were Jean Tolley, Jean Phillips, and Ann Motley.

Suffolk attracted Mary Virginia Walker, Alice Wilkins, Maxine Gayle, and Mildred Rountree.

Putting Littleton on the map were Ann Savedge, Alice Davis, Mary Robertson, and Ruth Rowe.

Painting the town "red" in Red House were Dot Chambers, Alice Smith, Jane Browder, and Elizabeth Scott.

Lawrenceville proved exciting for Sara Youngblood, Stewart Buford, and Shirley Hawks.

Finding fun in Chatham this week-end were "Bebe" Geyer, Dot Anderson, and Martha Sours.

In Charlottesville were Hope Frank, Mildred Spain, Helen Jackson, and Shirley Irving.

Those finding excitement in other places were Jean Bratton, Waynesboro; Lois Boone, Carrsville; Edith Jane Kirkland and Barbara Bragg, La Crosse; Mary Catlett, Gloucester; Jean Dailey, Chuckatuck; Mary Frances Evans, Concord; Martha Russell East, and Dorothy Shotwell in South Boston; Jean Anderson and Betty Martin in Lynchburg; Evelyn Roger, Brookneal; Carolyn Beaver, Crewe; Mary Young, Rice; Janie Hanks, Hampton; Audrey Williams, Emporia; Margaret Wilson, Keysville; Betty Tilson, Marion; Ann Taylor, Hague; Gladys Smith, Dennistown; Dorothy Poarch, Covington; Mary Agnes Milner Danville; Catherine Lynch, Burkeville; Evelyn Grizzard Drewyville; Lucille Bell and Rosa Lee Bell, Kenbridge; and Josephine Leary, Ashland.

Venezuelan Teacher Honored at Tea Given by APS

A'pha Phi Sigma gave a tea in honor of Mrs. Mareta Osuna de Soto, visiting teacher from Venezuela, in the Student Lounge, Tuesday night, March 26. Also present at the meeting were Miss Helen Draper, Miss Emily Barksdale, and Miss Mary Peck, sponsor of the fraternity.

A musical program was presented. Annette Grainger, Mae Ballard, Catherine Bickle, and Virginia Tindall played several of Stephen Foster's songs. Tucker Winn played several selections of popular music on the saxophone, accompanied by Virginia Tindall at the piano. The whole group joined in singing favorite Southern songs.

Randolph Macon Gives Music Program Tonight

Songs, Comedy Will be Offered

Tonight at eight o'clock, the Randolph Macon Glee Club of Ashland, Virginia will present a concert in the college auditorium. This program is being sponsored by the Wesley Foundation, local Methodist student group, of which Virginia Lee Price of Farmville is president.

The concert will be divided into two parts. The first part will consist of several sacred songs, one of which will be "A Mighty Fortress is Our God", by Luther; three folk songs "Sweet and Low", "Summer Evening" by Palmguen and "John Peel" by Andrews; three spirituals "Wade in de Water", "Shortin' Bread" by Jocques Wolfe, and "Sit Down Servant", and a mixed group of selections which will be made up of "Winter Song" by Bullard, "The Lost Chord" by Sullivan, and "Invictus" by Bruno Huhn.

The most spectacular number in the program is the spiritual "Sit Down, Servant" which features many unusual effects. Two selections, "Shortin' Bread" and "Invictus", have been retained from last year's program because of their popular reception.

The second half will be a "Mellow-dramatic Variety Show" entitled Who Struck John? Outstanding features will be a brass band, "Little Nell" comedy skit, quartette, numbers by the Dormitory Four, the Burlesk Boys, real hillbilly songs, "Carmen Miranda" by Travis Stanley, and "Moments in Magic".

"Moments in Magic" is also a holdover from last year, and either Ernie Dettbarn or Paul Isenberg will be the magician.

Besides Farmville, the Glee Club will appear this year at Mary Washington College in Fredericksburg, Mary Baldwin College in Staunton, Richmond Professional Institute in Richmond, and in Portsmouth and Ashland, Virginia.

Charlotte Grizzard is in charge of tickets which went on sale early this week. They may also be obtained at the door.

Nola Brisentine Heads Town Girls

Nola Brisentine, junior from Prospect, was elected president of the Town Girls' Club for the coming year at the meeting held Friday, April 5. She is succeeding Martha Holman, senior from Farmville, in this office.

Other officers elected were vice-president, Betty Pairet, freshman from Farmville; secretary, Rachel Kelsey, junior from Farmville; and treasurer Wilma Allen, freshmen from Prospect. A reporter will be elected next year from the incoming freshman class.

Miss Winnie Hiner, treasurer of S. T. C., who has been the Town Girls' sponsor, has resigned.

At this meeting several amendments were made to the constitution of the club. The meetings will henceforth be held at four o'clock on the first Wednesday of every month rather than Friday. Anyone missing a meeting without a good reason will be fined ten cents.

Notice

The junior class will sponsor the annual May Day dance which will be held this year on Saturday, May 4, according to an announcement made this week by Margaret Ellett, president of the junior class.

The dance which will begin at eight-thirty o'clock will be held in the gym and will be open to all students. A dance chairman will be appointed at a later date.

Graduate of 1945 Reported Missing

Fay Johnson Victim of Hawaiian Storm

Fay Byrd Johnson, graduate in the class of 1945, is among those reported missing in the earthquake tidal wave which struck Hawaii, Tuesday April 2.

Fay is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Johnson of Route 2, Vinton. She served as chairman of Student Standards Committee last year, was a member of the staffs of the Rotunda and Colonnade, business manager of the Dramatic Club, giftorian of the senior class, and representatives to Student Government Association her freshman year.

FAY BYRD JOHNSON

Fay went to Laupahoehoe last summer before the Japanese surrender to teach. At the time of the disaster she was teaching 25 miles northwest of Hilo, capital of the island of Hawaii which was hardest hit of any of the Hawaiian chain by the successive waves.

According to reports, after the first wave came in and receded, the children and some of the teachers went down to the beach from the school building. They were caught by the second huge wave. Fay was reported to have been one of those so caught. At the same time, reports said that a number of survivors, clinging to wreckage in the water, had been located by airplanes, and emergency supplies were being dropped them by navy patrol craft until such time as rescue could be effected.

Bobbitt, Treakle Named Senior Honor Graduates

Announcement by Faculty Members

Carolyn Bobbitt, of South Hill, has been named first honor graduate of the class of 1946, according to an announcement made last week by the faculty. The announcement was made in chapel Thursday, April 4. Carolyn will deliver the valedictory address at commencement exercises in June.

Virginia Treakle, of Farmville, who was named second honor graduate will deliver the salutatory address.

Carolyn served this year as vice-president of Student Government Association. Her sophomore year she was winner of the Alpha Phi Sigma scholarship key for maintaining the highest average of any member in her class for the longest period of time. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, Kappa Delta Pi, Pi Gamma Mu, Beorc Eh Thorn, and Alpha Phi Sigma. Carolyn was cited in Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges early last fall.

Virginia was editor-in-chief of the Rotunda during the past year. She has been on the newspaper staff since her freshman year, serving as managing editor during her junior year and news editor, her sophomore year. She was chairman of the membership committee of the YWCA for the year 1944-'45, and is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, Beorc Eh Thorn, Kappa Delta Pi, and Alpha Phi Sigma. She has also been cited in Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges.

Twelve Girls Make Straight A Grades

Ten seniors, one sophomore, and one freshman made all A's on their grades for winter quarter. Of these twelve girls, four made straight A's last quarter. They are Mary Ann Adams, from Lynchburg; and Carolyn Bobbitt, South Hill; Emily Carper, Rocky Mount; and Virginia Treakle, Farmville, seniors.

Others attaining this average are Anna Lou Blanton, Cumberland; Edith Carr Bryant, Branchville; Annette Grainger, Farmville; Lucie McHenry, Arlington; Kitty Maddox, Lynchburg; Katherine Prebble, Lynchburg; Agnes Stokes, Kenbridge; and Lorene Thomas, Lawrenceville.

Thirteen girls made all A's in the fall quarter.

Student Council To Submit Suggestion That STC Reduce Amount of Bread, Butter Eaten

Food Saved Will Go To Help Relieve Situation In Europe

Margaret Lohr, president of Student Government Association which is backing the campaign to cut down on food for the remainder of the quarter to help the starving people in Europe.

Students to Vote on Plan Tomorrow

The student body will vote tomorrow night, Thursday, April 11 after supper in a student body meeting in the large auditorium on the suggestion made by the Student Council that the girls pledge themselves to cut down throughout the remainder of the quarter on the bread and butter that they normally consume.

Upon the request of several students to reduce the amount of flour and fat used in the college kitchen to help the starving people in Europe, the Student Council appointed committees to investigate the situation. The investigation showed that the surplus lies not only in the actual amount of bread and butter eaten, but also in the food that students take to their rooms and waste. If the students adopt the suggestion they will not take food from the dining room. If the plan is carried out, it will enable the dining room force to cut the amount of bread, flour, and fats purchased. This will enable the government to ship the savings overseas.

According to Margaret Lohr, president of the Student Government Association, the adoption of the suggestion is left in the hands of the students. The effectiveness of the campaign depends upon each girl individually.

Miss Leola Wheeler, speech professor spoke in chapel Tuesday, April 9, on the desperate food situation in Europe. Dr. C. Gordon Moss, associate professor of history and advisor to the Student Council, spoke in chapel this morning on the worthiness of the campaign.

Miss Wheeler said in her talk in chapel that the only way to help the starving situation was through "voluntary effort" on the part of everyone in the United States. She said that it could not be 100 percent in the whole country, but that she believed that it could be 100 percent here in the college.

She went on to say that we were asked to cut down on wheat and fats because they could be transported better to the Euro-

Regional AKC To Convene Here

Program Scheduled for April 12, 13, 14

The regional convention of Alpha Kappa Gamma will begin on this campus Friday, April 12 when the delegates will register in the Rotunda from 3 to 5 o'clock. This is the first of such conventions to be held since the beginning of the war.

At 6 o'clock the delegates will have supper in the dining hall, and the opening meeting will be at 7:30 at which time the officers will give their reports and various committees will be appointed.

On Saturday morning, April 13 the convention will begin with group meetings at 9 o'clock, and at 11 o'clock there will be group discussions of circle reports and individual problems. At 2 o'clock the delegates will attend the various committee meetings. From 3 to 5 o'clock there will be a group meeting at which time the committees will make their reports to the convention.

Miss Grace Mix will be guest speaker at the banquet to be held at Longwood at 6 o'clock. The topic of her talk will be "Leadership."

The group will spend Saturday night at Longwood, Sunday morning April 14 at 9:30 there will be installation of officers and at 10:30 the 1946 convention will adjourn.

There will be delegates here from the University of South Carolina, Columbia, S. C.; Queens College, Charlotte, N. C.; and Columbia College, Columbia, S. C. The national officers will also be present.

Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary society for leadership, was organized in 1928. It represents the merging of local fraternities which had been founded in order to bring together groups of representative students and faculty members. The purpose of this organization is to foster high ideals and standards of leadership.

Alpha Kappa Gamma has as its officers this year, Ann Martin, president; Shirley Cruser, vice-president; Virginia Treakle, secretary; Eleanor Bisese, treasurer.

AKC Recognizes 4 Upperclassmen

Senior, Juniors Bid by Honor Fraternity

One senior and three juniors were tapped by Alpha Kappa Gamma, honor fraternity for leadership in womanly service, Thursday, April 4, in chapel.

Those girls who received bids are Anna Headlee, junior from Norfolk; Sue Hundley, junior from Suffolk; Betty Minetree, junior from Petersburg, and Jane Philhower, senior from Williamsburg.

Anna was recently elected freshman councilor for the Y. W. C. A. She has served as treasurer of the junior class, and was re-elected treasurer for the senior class in class election held March 26. Anna has been publicity chairman of the Y. W. C. A. during the past year.

Sue has been selected editor-in-chief of the Virginian for 1947. She is also a member of Kappa Delta Pi, Beorc Eh Thorn, and the Spanish Club.

Betty was recently elected vice-president of Student Government Association. She served as treasurer of the association during the past year, and was treasurer of her class her sophomore year.

Jane was elected queen of the annual Mardi Gras Dance which was held in February this year. She was ring master last fall for

Grizzard Named Head of Methodist Girls

Officers of Wesley Foundation for 1946 and 1947 were elected at a recent meeting. The Canterbury Club and Newman Club officers will be elected at a later date.

Charlotte Grizzard, sophomore from Drewryville was elected president of the group. She succeeds Virginia Lee Price.

Katherine Rainey, sophomore from Andersonville will serve as vice-president. Louise Harrell, junior from Suffolk was selected secretary. Elizabeth Watts sophomore from Austinville will serve as treasurer.

Spring Colonnade To Feature Articles on Latin America

According to Nancy Whitehead, editor-in-chief of the Colonnade, the spring issue of the Colonnade will come out some time next week.

The theme of the magazine will be a Latin American one. It will feature an article by Mrs. Marita de Soto visiting teacher on campus from Venezuela. There will also be articles written by two of the Puerto Rican girls, Isabelita Maldonado, Mayaguez, Puerto Rico and Julia Perez, also from Mayaguez, Puerto Rico. Several translations from Latin American authors and two poems of Gubernla Misteral, first Latin American to win the Nobel Prize, will appear in this issue.

The prize winning poems in the recent Colonnade Poetry Contest will be published at this time. Betty Deuel Cock and Anne Willis tied for first place in the contest. Betty Deuel's poem is entitled "Greeting" and Anne's is "Quiensabe."

Pictured above are the members of the Randolph Macon Glee Club which will put on a music program tonight in the auditorium at 8 o'clock.

Save The Children

Upon the request of several students that we cut down on bread and butter because of the starving people in Europe, Student Government Association decided to appoint committees to investigate the situation. Thursday night the entire student body will vote whether or not to accept the plan.

This seems to be one of the most worth while campaigns that has been started on this campus in a long time. College students were affected about as little as any people during the war, and now that we have the opportunity to help those who underwent so many hardships, we should consider it a privilege to help. The people of Europe have had their homes destroyed, their land torn up, and all of their possessions taken away from them. We can sit down to three well balanced meals today; those people have neither a table to sit down to nor bread to put on it.

There is not a girl on this campus who does not eat more bread than she needs and that does not waste bread. Now that it has been brought to our attention, we can not sit down to a meal and stuff ourselves with bread, and not get up without the feeling that we could have sent that flour that went into the bread we ate, and perhaps could have saved some child's life. These helpless children are not to blame for the awful conditions that exist. They are victims of circumstance. Picture your little brother, or sister, or the curly head tot next door starving. Though these little fellows are thousands of miles away, they are our little brothers and sisters. They are more than hungry; they are starving. One of our snacks, as we call it, would be a real feast to them. These people are human beings, they want to live as much as we do. If we were starving and the people in Europe had more food than they needed, we would want them to share a little with us.

There is a little food in Europe, but it is black market food, and the people that need the food can not afford to pay the black market price. We must remember that those who are hungry are those that have lost everything. These people had the war fought right in their own front yards.

The returning soldiers tell us if you once see a starving child you will never forget it whether it was a child of an enemy country or one of our allies. We have heard the soldiers tell and we have read about how they gave their rations to the little children. Yes, they gave food to the children of an enemy land. Perhaps, the child's father was at that moment away fighting, yet our soldiers gave them some of what they had to eat. If the fighting soldiers, without the comforts of home, could give their rations to a hungry child; we protected here at school, can share our bread and butter with these starving people.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 10, 1946

Welcome, Dr. Lancaster

We, students, faculty, and administration feel fortunate in having Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster as our new college president. We feel that he has all of the necessary qualifications, and that he will be one of the best presidents that this college has ever had.

Dr. Lancaster who was formerly the Virginia Superintendent of Public Instruction has had much experience with students. He was formerly executive secretary of the board of trustees at Sweet Briar College, and served as dean of men at the University of Alabama.

Dr. Lancaster was a teacher of agricultural education at V.P.I. from 1914 to 1923, and since then has been connected with the State Board of Education.

Dr. Edgar Gamman, chairman of the state board's committee to find a successor to Dr. Joseph L. Jarman, who served as president for 44 years, said, "We are delighted that Dr. Lancaster decided to accept the Farmville post. We feel we have made an exceedingly wise choice and that he will be an excellent president at the college." Everyone connected with this college feels the same way.

Dr. Lancaster has long been considered one of the top educators in the state. We are sure that he will keep the standards of Farmville high.

Our new president has a difficult task ahead of him. We want him to know that he has our support and respect.

The State Board of Education has suffered a loss, but by their loss, we gain.

Tribute To Fay Johnson

We, here at State Teachers College, are fortunate in having outstanding student leaders. Just such a leader was Fay Byrd Johnson, graduate in the class of 1945. Fay was reported missing in the earthquake-tidal wave which struck Hawaii last week. After her graduation last June, Fay went to Laupahoehoe, Hawaii to teach in the high school there.

Fay was certainly considered one of the most outstanding girls in her class. She entered into the activities of the school, and she was not satisfied with being just a silent member. She was interested in and active in all of the groups to which she belonged. Her senior year Fay served as chairman of the Student Standards Committee, was an important contributor to both the Rotunda and Colonnade staffs, business manager of the Dramatic Club, and giftorian of the senior class. She was elected to represent her class on Student Government soon after she came to school her freshman year.

Possessing great charm and grace, Fay was definitely an individual, and will long be remembered as such. When she believed in a thing, she believed with all her being. When we think of Fay we also think of her warm smile and the impression will linger in our memory. She had a smile for all of us, a smile that made us smile from the bottom of our hearts. When we saw Fay or talked to her we would always resolve to try to be more like her, for she had the ability, character, and personality, that we all want to have. She enriched the lives of all of us who knew her. We are proud that we, here at Farmville, could know and love her.

Here just as everywhere else, she has endeared herself to the students, faculty, and administration. We loved her for what she was and for what she made of us. We pay tribute to one of the finest of Virginia's girls, Fay Byrd Johnson.

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

There's no two ways about it. The Kappa Sig. picnic takes first place on being the "crowning blow" and the rarest time anyone's had in quite a while. Seems as tho' everyone liked the idea tremendously and there are rumors in the air of several such follow up affairs.

Jane Johnson seemed to be in a state of confusion. She had a couple of surplus men trailing her around.

How about that baby talk, "Picky Dicky"?

How did it happen that "Saphonia, Mabel and Lilly" got lost in the woods?

And honee, Ge Ge does evermore love that kind of carrying on.

Cutest couple at the picnic was Martha Russell and Neal.

Wonder if Minnie Lee rested up this week end. Anyway it made a fairly plausible excuse, Spencer! Maybe there's more to that rumor than we at first thought.

To make the occasion even more perfect "Queeky" and Bill arrived in time for the Bear Creek Lake frolic.

After several week ends of no success the University of Virginia finally arrived to see Glenn Ann. When last seen they were burning up the road towards Burkeville.

Say! What's this George Ann is in such a dither about? Don't suppose the prospect of that week end at V. M. I. could cause such a rise in her blood pressure.

Battered and worn Minetree and Carmen dragged back to S. T. C., after a red letter week end in NEW YORK. Those girls are certainly B.T.O.'s.

Did Charlotte Hutter's week end come up to her expectations? We're sure it did if the one and only arrived.

Becky Williams was turning on more than the usual amount of charm Sunday night in the Rotunda. The lucky recipient was a raft rider.

Hun Carper found a large time in Kenbridge. How was that SMOOTH "Blackie" Hawthorne, Hun? Along with this we'd like to know who was the H. S. gent asking about this same magnetic young lady?

Peace and quiet reigned supreme this week end with half the school population attending Mike's blue jean and plaid shirt convention at ye old farm.

Before signing off perhaps you'd like to know Ann Summer's latest nickname — "Bedcheck". Maybe she'd like to elaborate on that.

How about that cute date of Lee Ewing's, Sunday? Maybe he accounts for that gleam in her eye.

Marjorie Miller was charmed with that man of hers. We think he's cute, too.

They say "a word to the wise is sufficient" and Easter is just around the corner so you people had better get on the ball!!

Y News

By ANNA HEADLEE

With the installation of officers, new committee heads have taken over their duties for the coming year. Let's support them to the best of our ability so we may have a fine year.

Baptist students announce that they will send about twenty members to the state-wide retreat to be held Friday, Saturday, and Sunday at Danville. Approximately 200 students from various colleges in this region will attend.

The Wesley Foundation will sponsor the Randolph - Macon Men's Glee Club which will give a concert in the large auditorium tonight at 8 p. m. The student body is invited to attend.

The Episcopalians announce that Miss Turnbull's visit was a big success and they are looking forward to her next visit.

The theme for the week at prayers is "Brotherhood". Tonight the topic will be "From Philosophy to the Jungles". Tomorrow night the topic will be "Living Together as Brothers" followed by "Sharing Our Bread" on Friday night.

Question of the Week

What Do You Like Best About Spring and Why?

Charlotte Thorpe: In the spring a man's fancy turns to baseball—or does it? Hubba.

Clare Wailes: Looking forward to Tom's leave in late spring.

Jane Page: Jeepers. It means I'll "see Johnny in just eight months and that man really "jars" me!

Betsy Scott: Easter vacation!

Margaret Orange: It means only two months 'til June, and then I'll get that little piece of paper I've been waiting for.

Lorene Claiborne: Getting home for some rest and sleep Easter.

Sutton Bland: Windows go up, and I can hear voices of my classmates —therefore, third floor senior seems to be within civilization after all!

Stewart Buford: Out of hibernation—back to nature; in other words, shorts and bare feet!

Ann Carter: The "Birds, bees 'n flowers" and those "big fat" walks to Longwood.

Barbara Cosey: Spring means cotton dresses and a reasonable facsimile of good ole Florida weather.

Kitty Maddox: Opening the windows because we can have our choice of radio programs coming from Junior Building.

"Bobbet" Graham: The "birds" that sing at 6 o'clock A. M.

"Gee Gee" Younce: The wonderful picnics that Hampden-Sydney has started having. What a life!

Betsy Brown: Spring means that my "Georgia Cracker" will soon be home!!

Mary Jane Dunlap: Those good ol' Sunday afternoon walks toward Lexington.

Alice Moore: I'm glad to see Spring this year so we won't freeze to death at S. T. C.

Andrea Garrison: Springtime's visit to Farmville—That's what I like about the South.

Frances Jennings: The lovely green trees and colorful flowers.

Anonymous: Onions in the milk!

Ex-Wac Tells of Experiences During Two Years Army Service

By JEAN CAKE

While roaming the halls at S. T. C. we found an ex-WAC living on Library Hall. Her smile looked interesting so we stopped in to talk to her. Her name is Olive Berg and she hails from Minneapolis, Minnesota. She was a corporal in the Third Service Command and has received the Good Conduct medal, the American Theatre and Victory ribbons and the Meritorious Citation. Olive was in the service for two and a half years. After receiving her basic training at Ft. Oglethorpe, Georgia, she was sent to Indiantown Gap, Pennsylvania where she remained throughout her service career.

Her first assignment was in a hospital as a medical technician. Olive said this was the hardest part of her work in the WACs because she was on twelve hour duty besides drilling and regular duties. While in the hospital she worked in the contagious ward among meningitis and scarlet fever cases. A surprising fact is that she wasn't scared at all. In fact she considered it a challenge to help the boys recover.

Later on her headquarters was the information desk. After that she got the assignment she'd been waiting for. She was transferred to the chaplains corp where she remained for the rest of her service. She was made assistant to Chaplain Scott of the Farmville Baptist church. It was Chaplain Scott who talked Olive into coming to college. She had seriously considered taking nurses training but decided in favor of Farmville after considering several other schools. At first going to college seemed only a remote possibility but after visiting Chaplain Scott here and seeing the college she was highly impressed. Only three days elapsed between her discharge and her enrollment here.

In Olive's opinion, military training is a wonderful thing for women as it teaches them cooperation, discipline, and work. She wouldn't give anything for her two and a half years n the WACs. Miss Berg is very much in love with the South and is crazy about Farmville. One of the things she particularly likes about the school is the Christian atmosphere and the organizations that promote it. "The girls are all so friendly," she says, "and I'm crazy about my lil' southern room-mate.

Olive is taking a two year business course and is finding it difficult to adjust herself to studying again. When through school she would like to go into church secretarial work or social welfare work. We wish her every bit of success in her career and with her high standards and ambitions we know she will go far. Olive, we welcome you to our campus.

Five Students to Ride Horses In Lynchburg Show Saturday

Girls to Compete for SPCA Prizes

Five S. T. C. students will participate in the horse show to be held Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in Lynchburg. The horse show is being sponsored by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals of Lynchburg. The event will be held at Bailey's Farm on Link Road.

COME SPRING, COME SHOWS

Yes, indeed, even before Spring gets here, plans are being formulated for horse-shows of every type and kind. London is claiming her old place again in the show field, much to the happiness of her pleasure starved people. Even so, Farmville is due another spring show on May 18. Word has gotten around that the treasured ribbon is here, buttons included, and soon they'll be ready for some lucky girl and horse. It will probably be printed this week and the girls will start making them immediately.

Switching the scene from Farmville to Lynchburg, the forecast shows a big show there on April 14. We have to get our fingers in such a delicious, inviting pie, so four Farmville horses will be shown there, too. They'll have to do their stuff and prance like they've never pranced before, for they're competing with the V. M. I. cavalry, Randolph-Macon, and others. The fortunate ones to go are Ducky Anderson, Betty Deuel Cock, Betty Ellis, Anna Headlee, and of course, Jean Sauerwein. Let's hope they all come back with two ribbons apiece.

No one could really appreciate the beauty of last Sunday unless they saw it from the back of a horse.

"He'll jump his shadow" applies to the one and only pony, who almost does just that. He and Bill had a fine time with Jean making the rounds. (That is to say, the jumps).

Meanwhile, good luck in Lynchburg, both riders and horses, and—

Annual Horse Show Will be Held May 11

S. T. C.'s annual horse show will be held May 18 at two o'clock in the afternoon at Longwood, according to an announcement by Jeanne Sauerwein, general chairman of the event.

Horses and riders from Farmville and vicinity will participate. There will be four classes, the equitation class, jumping class, five-gait class, and costume class.

Judges for the horse show will be Miss Elizabeth Burger and Miss Joyce Cheatwood. The admission price will be 15 cents.

Committees for the event have been named by Jean Sauerwein. Betty Deuel Cock and Betty Ellis head the ribbon committee, Anna Headlee and Betty Deuel Cock are in charge of the prizes, and Sara Youngblood and Thelma Hillier head the program committee.

Other committees are fence, jumps, and parking, Virginia Anderson, and food, Margaret Verell.

Secretaries for the occasion will be Dorothy Gelston and Margaret Lohr.

Hard Life of West Full of Excitement for Men, Not Women

(Editor's Note—This is the second in a series of articles written about the West in order that the students may better understand the May Day festival which will be held on the campus this session.)

In the development of our West, far country, we must consider our Mid-West, near country. You ask why. First, because pioneer women feared the plains. The men were attracted by the plains, but the women were repelled. Many a family on its Westward Trek had to stop at the edge of the forest because the women were unwilling to go farther.

There was too much of the unknown, too few of the things they loved. The early conditions on the Plains precluded the little luxuries that women love and that are so necessary to them. Imagine a sensitive woman set down on an arid plain to live in a dugout or a pole pen with a dirt floor, without furniture, music, or pictures—no trees or shrubbery or flowers, little water, plenty of sand and high wind. Beret Hansa's pathetic explanation, "Why, there isn't even a thing that one can hide behind!" gives one the best clues to privacy, no friendly tree — nothing but earth, sky, grass and wind. The loneliness women endured must have been such as to crush the soul provided one did not meet the isolation with an adventurous spirit. But this lonely life was not without its compensations. Every man was a self-appointed protector of women.

Men loved the Plains with a primitive simplicity. However hard the life was, it was full of zest and joy. The early period of our frontier history was strictly a man's country—more of a man's country than any other portion of the frontier. Men loved the Plains, or at least those who stayed there did. Men developed a hardihood which made them insensible to the

Hello, sport fans! It looks like old man weather is a little on the tempermental side these days. Here's hoping the sun will shine and the field and courts will stay in ship-shape for the events of the coming week.

TENNIS

The courts have been rolled and lined, and are in good shape for the spring session. Let's keep them that way by remembering to wear the regulation tennis shoes. The courts have been the most popular places on campus since the first signs of the sun, and we hope they'll stay that way.

The tournament is a week closer now than it was the last time we started to peck out this column on our typewriter. There is nothing better than to see everyone out supporting her colors. For those that haven't as much experience on the court, as some, don't let that stop you. With a little experience in wielding the racket, sure foot movement, you could easily be on your way to becoming a first class player. Let's get out from behind the four walls of our dorm room, and give it a try.

SOFTBALL

The turnout for the outstanding sport of the season has been great, but it can be a lot better. Every girl with or without knowledge of how it's done, should be out on that field during the class periods scheduled for softball to take part. Softball rules are simple, and once you've learned to catch a ball and make the bat and ball connect, you're all set for an hour of good healthy activity.

GOLF

Golf is rating high with the S. T.C. sports lovers again this quarter. Have you noticed the red cheek, wind b'own girls who rush in each afternoon just in time for supper after a wonderful game at Longwood? We are fortunate in having such a marvelous golf course. Take advantage of it.

Until next week,
Stay on the ball.

Hard Life of West

hardships and lack of refinement.

The advance frontier was more democratic than any portions following. Men were democratic in deed and in truth. Every man felt as good as every other. The realities of life, overcoming the Indian, subduing raw nature, and adjusting to a general environment kept both men and women too pre-occupied in learning what every man for himself meant. But there was a hospitality, a friendliness which accepted a stranger. The broad expanse of earth, sky, grass and wind made man feel his smallness, his need for fellow man. E. M. K.

MINNIE LEE CRUMPLER

You seldom see her when she isn't beaming with that engaging smile of hers and bubbling over with the true Farmville spirit. That's our retiring "Y" president, Minnie Lee Crumpler.

She has worked sincerely and untiringly for the Y. W. C. A. ever since she has been at S. T. C. During her first year she was on the Freshman Commission and served as freshman counselor her sophomore year. Minnie Lee was treasurer of the "Y" when she was a junior and made a splendid president this year. Among her other extra-curricular interests Pi Gamma Mu and Alpha Kappa Gamma rate high.

Minnie Lee really gives of her talents. She has been a member of the College Choir for four years and has also sung many solos as a member of the Methodist Church Choir. She is gracious about singing for her friends' enjoyment, too.

During her sophomore year Minnie Lee served on Mardi Gras Court and has been elected to this year's Mary Court. As Queen of Hearts at the annual AKG circus she captured many hearts.

Minnie Lee is very enthusiastic about her likes. Attending the Y. W. C. A. president's school at Columbia last summer is one of her favorite experiences that she can get enthusiastic about at any time

She is truly a leader and the possessor of a high character and pleasing personality.

Students Pledge To Conserve Bread

At a student body meeting held Thursday night, April 11, the student body voted to accept the proposals made by the Student Council to cut down on the bread eaten to help the starving people in Europe.

Upon the request of several students the old and new girls of the Student Council met and appointed a committee to draw up the proposals. The committee met with Dr. C. Gordon Moss and Miss Leola Wheeler.

The following proposals were submitted by the Student Council and accepted by the student body:

1. Ask Mrs. Hammond to purchase one fourth less flour and bread.

2. Not take bread from the dining room except when given by Mrs. Hammond and be sure that this bread is eaten.

3. Pledge not to waste bread.

a. Eat all bread that you take on your plate.

b. Eat the inside of rolls.

4. Pledge yourself to substitute something else for bread at parties and in restaurants.

According to Margaret Lohr, the pledge is left up to each girl when she is away from school also. She asks that the girls do all that they can to spread their influence upon other people.

Mrs. Sophie Packer, school nurse spoke to the student body Thursday night, when they met, on the need to save bread.

Mrs. Hammond has announced that since the proposals have been adopted, the students have cut down on the bread eaten on an average of 25 per cent.

As Glee Club Recital Ends S. T. C. Girls Utter Groans

The Randolph Macon Glee Club has come and gone, but the dining room, Shannon's, the auditorium, and Farmville in general are still echoing. There hadn't been so many men around since Cotillion, and whether its the gym or the auditorium—where there are men, there is S. T. C. Lot of us remembered last years performance and showed up in corresponding numbers. Others, who had been in the dining room, or downtown for dinner in Shannon's when the Glee Club demonstrated its talent, followed suit, and the house was slightly packed.

The Club's 54 members, under the direction of Mr. William Troxell, and accompanied by Miss Gladys Coulter, opened with a series of selections "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," "Sweet and Low," a la Waring, and the old English hunting song, "John Peel."

Miss Coulter's piano solo was one of the most popular events of the evening. Nobody could really cover a key-board that fast. It's just done with mirrors.

"Shortn'n Bread" of course literally stopped the show. The boys, by popular demand, did it all over twice—with appropriate gestures.

No Glee Club would be allowed to depart from S. T. C. without having sung "The Lost Chord" at least once. There's just something about it—like "Clair de Lune," or "Night and Day."

Part two, a variety show entitled "Who Struck John," or a fit in three spasms, was opened slightly explosively by the R-M Rockettes and their rhythm routine—Hon-ee, whew-w, and a few other little things like that.

Oh, goodness—we forgot the brass band. Well, they were loud. And, by the way, what ever became of the cheerful little murderer with the red and yellow ties? Such a bloody murder, too. Ketchup all over the place.

And pore Little Neil, and her little Dumbell. The villian pretty near twirled one side of his mustache off. He stopped twirling though, by gosh, when Paw got him fined a dollar and a quarter. As for Carmen Miranda, did anybody introduce him, or her, or whatever it was, to Painter?

We Commemorate Easter As Holidays Approach

Sunday, April 21 we will celebrate our first peacetime Easter in four years. Tomorrow we will go home for the holidays. A young girls' thoughts naturally turn to Easter bonnets and good times. This is all very well, but let us not forget the true meaning of Easter. When Sunday morning comes and we go to church all decked out in our spring best, let's not forgt why we celebrate Easter. When we go to church let us remember that we are going to commemorate the resurrection of our Lord and not to criticize our neighbors new outfit.

We are fortunate in this country to be able to go to a church that has not been wrecked by war, and to be able to have a new dress. We are fortunate that when we get up Easter morning that we can have a good breakfast before we go to worship in the house of Lord. Let us not forget this, and not to forget to thank God for the blessings that He has bestowed upon us.

The world is fresh with peace this Easter. The sun seems to shine brighter and the air fresher than it has in the past few years. We, as college students, must do our part to help preserve this peace. There is no better time to practice brotherhood among our fellowmen than now by sharing bread with the starving people of Europe.

When we begin the Easter parade Sunday morning let us think why it is that we have a holiday at this time of the year. Happy Easter.

S. T. C. Looks Forward To Coming May Day

We have long been anticipating this year's May Day. Much time and effort by both faculty and students has been taken up with May Day. We want to show our appreciation by cooperating with them. If we have a part in the program this year, we must give our best in order to make May Day a success.

Our May Day programs have always been beautiful. They are a delight to both visitors and students. We want this May Day to be better than its predecessors. The organizers of our May Day program have a hard task ahead. With the annual event close at hand, we must give them our support.

Under the capable direction of Miss Emily Kauzlarich, assistant professor of Physical Education, May Day should be a success. She needs your help. Let's lend a helping hand!

We Need To Improve Our Chapel Behavior

Chapel conduct is one thing that we must watch. The noise and confusion that is going on before and during chapel is disconcerting to the speaker.

We don't want to give visitors the impression that they are not welcome or that we are not interested in what they have to say. Even if we are not interested, we can be courteous. We should be courteous not only to visitors but to any person who is conducting the chapel exercises. They can not talk above our talk.

Chapel hour is supposed to be a quiet time for meditation. In the midst of a busy day, we need to stop and think. After a girl has reached college, she should certainly know that college life demands courtesy. We need to imagine ourselves in the speaker's place. We would not have the patience that they have. There is no excuse for the rattling of papers, reading of letters, and eating that goes on during chapel. When one person talks, that leads to group talking. It would be much better if everyone would refrain from talking.

Transact all your business before or after chapel, and do not talk during chapel. It is hard to refrain from talking when you have received a long awaited for letter or have the most tantalizing bit of gossip, but we must cut out talking. One of the most needed things is getting to chapel on time. It is important that chapel begin on time, so that the alloted time will be sufficient.

Let's do our part in making chapel what it should be.

Campus Clean Up Time Heralded in by Spring

Spring has come! We thrill to don our crisp, fresh frocks; to dance; to sing; and to be gay-hearted. Doen't it just make you feel as if you were a flower—so neat, so gay, so airy? We have a feeling of joy for everything that's beautiful, and a sense of pride for things that are ours. The campus is one of these things for which we have great pride. To mar such loveliness would be a shame; yet, it can happen if we allow ourselves to clutter up our campus with paper and rubbish. Think twice before you throw that next piece of paper down.

Yes, spring is the time when we are conscious of the beauty around us; so let's keep our campus a thing of beauty for ourselves and others too. It's up to you. E.P.

Indians Will Play Big Role In Western May Day Program

The Plains Indians must be included in the story of Near Country—Far Country. They were survivals of savagery even when compared to the Indians to the East and to the West. "They lagged in the nomadic state when practically all other tribes had progressed to some form of agriculture and settled village life." They were called "wild" Indians, to distinguish them from the docile tribes of the timberland.

It is today, however, that the Plains present the Indians as survivals. Practically all Indians in the United States are found now in the West, most of them within or near the margin of the Plains. They were pushed in there from all directions. When there was nowhere else to push them, they were permitted to settle down on the reservations. The map of the reservations as looked at by a student a thousand years from now will probably present the Plains as a region of survival of the native races.

Ceremonies are as much a part of the Indian as his blanket or horse. This year's dance follows the theme of survival in that it is representative of the three-day sun dance in which the Arapaho and Shoshone tribes still try to out-do one another.

The dance never takes place twice on the same ground. In the old days it was the ultimate in tribal incantation; its object seems to have been to conquer certain cosmic elements, and by strong medicine, compel the thunderbird to release rain.

Legend tells that it originated when a warrior wondered forth to find relief for his starving tribe. He met a deity and learned ritual when it was performed, buffalo came, Asyears passed, the dance grew in mystic significance; it furnished a vehicle for the expression of emotion in rhythm; it knit the tribe in closer unity by renewing the ranks of chiefs. Because Indians patriotism mounted to fervor during the ceremony, the white conquerors frowned on it. It was outlawed for a time; when revived, it was Christianized.

The dance takes place around the medicine pole, the fetish of the thunderbird which also is the Indian's conception of the white man's God. The outer poles set up as twelve uprights around the center pole are symbols of the Great Eagle's tailfeathers. Here they may be understood to symbolize the twelve Apostles as well.

From the top of the medicine pole where once a captured enemy was suspended alive, hang two bunches of red willow (for peace and tranquility); a buffalo head (appreciation of blessings received); a beaver pelt (industry); a long braid of hair instead of the old-time scalp (sacrifice); and the tailfeathers of an eagle, one of the indispensables of Indian ceremonials.

The dancers face the East each day at sunrise, and as the rays reach their bodies, their whistles wail and the drums are beaten. They keep their eyes on the sun throughout the dance. At night, a big fire takes the sun's place. The women sit with the drummers outside the lodge chanting and shaking dry willows to the throbbing of the drums. The half hypnotized dancers move forward and backward, blowing whistles. At intervals they touch the medicine pole

Question of the Week

What did you like about Farmville?

Kendall Parker: So many girls from home are here.

Mac Reynolds: I'm prejudiced.

Bernard Via: The girls!!

"Viv" Garner: All those beautiful girls in the Rotunda!

"Speck" Burnette: They can bury Mary Baldwin.

Ernie Dettbarn: The curtesy of the Wesley Group when we arrived.

Roddy (M.C.) Jones: The girls—naturally.

Warren Denton: The girls!!

Bill Wallard: The people.

Clare Cotton: What's here!

Clyde Tucker: I just like Farmville—period.

Frank Ferguson: Just Farmville.

Paul (magic man) Eisenburger: My dinner.

What did you like about the Randolph Macon Glee Club Recital?

"Tootsie" Hamilton: It was all wonderful!

Jackie Watson: I saw somebody from home.

Betty Lou Eaver: The can-can.

Marie Hutchinson: The blond in glasses on the back row.

Becky Williams: Sherlock Holmes was really on the ball.

Mary Lawless: O honee! the blond on the front row (reminded me of somebody).

Jean Edgerton: Shortin' Bread.

"Poddy" Portinarro: Well, there were men there anyway.

"Pete" Peterson: The trumpet player in the brown suit.

Easter Time

HEARD AFTER

Bed-Check

Headlines of the week—Margo's Bill is on his way home and Margo is walking around in a great big dream—but then it's spring too and she can always blame it on that.

Strolling around Sunday in the bright sunshine were Bo Wall and Sue Davis. We overheard a part of Bo's conversation. When asked by some soldiers if it would be all right to go into the Rotunda—he replied, "Sure, just go on into the dining hall and have supper, they would love to have you".

"Rickie" King seems to be getting around these days with some cute "civie"—Come on tell us how you charm them, "Rickie".

"Kakie" has been one big grin since she came back from W. and L., but then we know "minks" always make women smile.

All of us are wondering why Dot Owen goes around here singing "Hubba, Hubba, Hubbard! I just got back".

"Bev" was seen in the train station screaming at Bill who was passing thru. Next thing we knew she had taken off for Portsmouth.

The Patterson sister's are all agiow over the wonderful prospects of the Easter holidays. Shirley Slaughter seems to have the same feeling about it. Ah! Winston!

Alice Anne's foot might ache and pain when no ones around—but just wait until Lloyd comes and she an really trip the light fantastic. How 'bout it "Abber"?

Off to Lynchburg Sunday went Jane Johnson and Dot May with two very attractive men. Sunday was a beautiful day for driving, wasn't it?

Most of us think we're pretty cute to get one man these days but we saw quite a few eyes rolling around on the ground when Nancy McCauley walked up with two.

Jane Anderson's man is home, and Jane was having the best old time Sunday. Watch out for that next cloud Jane, it's a lu lu!!

Corinne almost didn't make it to Virginia last week end. We found out later that she really had a wonderful time the short while she was there.

Kitty Wright, the "blond blizzard" was enjoying the beauties of nature with Gordon Vanness, Sunday. Weren't the flowers pretty, Kitty?

Edith Pemberton returned to school all aglow after that big time date in Richmond.

We hear that Helen Jackson, Nancy Holton, and Marjorie Miller had a knocked out weekend in Roanoke.

Betty Spindler's date was completely oblivious to all else but her Sunday night. Tell us your secret Betty.

Well, Peggy Smith, you seem to be doing all right for yourself. Letters addressed to other people often bring nice results, don't they?

Connie Christian and Ben are an inseparable twosome. These Hampden-Sydney boys certainly get around.

Time to stop this meandering,, so, in the words of the great poet, Bugs Bunny we'll say, "Easter time is the time for eggs, and the time for eggs is the Easter time". Bye and have a wonderful holiday!

Athletic Association Announces New Changes In Constitution

According to Betty Parrish, president of the Athletic Association, the association has felt it necessary to make several changes in their constitution.

The revised articles now read as follows:

Article IX. Section I. Sports

A. Major sports will include hockey, basketball, tennis, swimming, volleyball, and softball.

B. Minor sports will include golf, archery, badminton, and ping pong.

Article X. Teams. Section II.

No girl shall make a team in any sport unless she has been present at 8 practices for that sport and has participated in 50 per cent of the games played in that tournament.

Article XI. Awards. Section I Individual Blazers.

Awards will be given to those seniors whom the executive council selects according to a general and outstanding participation in a variety of sports, sportsmanship, scholarship, and their contribution to college athletics throughout the four years.

The white blazers will be awarded on a basis of varied participation in sports, and the blue for one or more sports.

Section II. Color Cup.

A. Points toward the Color Cup.

1. Championship in any major sport .....10 points

2. Championship in any minor sport .....5 points

3. Highest number of girls making each varsity team ....10 points

Recreational activities now include ping pong, Saturday playnight, croquet, shuffleboard, badminton, and the cabin.

9 Members Added To A. A. Council

Nine new members have been added to the Athletic Association Council, according to Betty Parrish, newly elected president of the association.

Julia Booher will serve on the social committee; Peepsie Brooks, assistant manager of hockey; Betty Burchett, manager of tennis; Beannie Dudley, assistant manager of tennis; Phyllis Fulcher and Doris Funk, heads of archery; Joyce Hill, freshman manager of basketball; Helen Londree, manager of basketball; and Mary Evelyn Miles, manager of softball.

The new council members were appointed by the executive committee of the association.

The officers of the A. A. are Betty Parrish, president; Kitty Sue Bridgforth, vice-president; Jane Burchett, secretary; and Mary Ann Morris, treasurer.

Tennis Deadline Set For Tonight

According to an announcement made by Betty Burchett, manager of tennis, students will have until after supper tonight, Wednesday, April 17, to sign up for tennis doubles. The winners will gain five points toward the color cup for their class.

Miss Olive T. Iler, Athletic Association advisor, has asked that everyone using the tennis courts wear regulation tennis shoes as the courts have just been fixed and should be kept in the best possible shape.

The Athletic Association decided at a recent meeting to make posters advertising each sport in its season. These posters will be put up in order to attract the attention of more students to the athletic contests.

Dedicated to Mary

For centuries ladybirds have been known and beloved and the very name by which they are popularly known alludes to their dedication to Our Lady, back in the Middle ages. Even the childhood rhymes still repeated by the youngsters had a similarly remote origin.

LEFT LEAD

Show Story

The name of this column should simply stand LEFT this week,for that's exactly what the illustrious Farmville horses were on Saturday, April 14. Four horses that had been fussed over until they hardly knew how to act were left standing in their glory in the dark, dank stables, while their riders streaked off to Lynchburg in a station-wagon.

Yes, 'tis a sad experience that Jean, Ducky, Anna, and B. Deuel have to relate. Friday night saw B. Deuel's suite turned into a tack room where a mob came to polish saddles, bridles, boots and all other essential horse-gear. The wee hours of the morning saw Ducky frantically trying to decide whether to go as Puss-in-Boots or a jockey in the costume class.

Saturday morning everyone gaily wished the riders luck and all that sort of thing, y'know, therefore the world was bright and cheerful. The sun was shining and the girls were all dandied up in their very best-looking riding outfits. Soon the sun faded—it got darker and darker because —the man with the truck never showed up to carry the beautifully groomed horses to the horse-show.

However, the girls pulled themselves together and hiding (?) their disappointment they started dolefully off toward the show. Fifteen minutes later saw them standing on the side of the road, staring at a blow-out in the tire—dismayed but not discouraged, S. T. C. ingenuity and charm soon had them well on the way again. This time the whole gang made it to the show in time to see about half of it. Betty Ellis was about to saddle two cocker spaniels and ride them in the pair class, for she and Cheatwood had given Farmville up as lost.

Happy Ending

Never let it be said our story doesn't have a good ending, however, for S. T. C. had to be represented. Betty Deuel came forward with a dashing Robin Hood costume, a borrowed Randolph-Macon horse, and a third place ribbon from the costume class. Ribbons without a horse . .

And to top that off, V. M. I. invited Farmville up to their show to be held soon, and talked of bringing some of their nags (pardon, beautiful horses) down to our show in May. And those cadets are really good . . . They even have a Superman that rides and jumps standing in short stirrups. If you don't believe Superman rides that well, ask for a command performance if V. M. I. does come down.

So there's the big trip which was both fun and disappointment. Now we'll have to work and work to show our horses off to a good advantage in May. Stick to your practice at every oportunity, and we'll see you in the ring.

May Day Players Toss for Top Honors

"Near country—Far Country" is fast taking on western airs as time draws the participants and principal players closer to mass rehearsal dates. The men have caught the adventuresome spirit, the women look with foreboding at what faces them in the Trail-breaker section or episode, but the Indians are still having a hard time convincing the Scout, Janie Hanks, that they can grunt satisfactorily and do eat the dogs they are reluctant to part with in the Pow-Wow scene.

The Choir and Choral Clubs with a combined group of one hundred voices are jo keying one another for key positions in the caravan of the Westward Trek. An actual ox cart with a real, live ox will lead the caravan. Never has such an attempt been made as part of a May Day program. The group sings as it moves along, some in conveyances, many on foot, while the Indians and the brave lone scout break the trail ahead.

A Singin' School which was a favorite pioneer practice is another feature, perhaps the biggest which the combined groups are working on under the direction of Mr. Alfred Strick of the Music Department with Esther Shevick, Dorothy Cummings and Margie Hewlett as student leaders. The Singin' School was a forerunner of the church and the school. People met all day in a grove to sing hymns ranging from the religious to the secular and the folk types. "Rock of Ages" and "Faith of Our Fathers Living Still" were two favorites of the pioneers.

The Boom Town section will show the gaudy side of life in a town which grew up over night. Celia Scott as "The Girl with the Baimoral" is an eye-catcher for the dandies. Grace Loyd as the tender of the moving bar saloon will probably steal the show, but not for long as law and order in the person of the circuit preacher —Martha Showalter breaks the gaudy spell. To date, Martha has a good record as an English bobby (policeman) but being a preacher where lawlessness and godlessness

On the Ball

You eager beavers in sports should really make use of this spring sunshine—old man weather has changed a lot lately, but maybe we can settle down to our sports again.

Tennis

Have you signed up for the spring doubles tennis tourney, if so, you are in for some exciting games. Five points will be issued out to the class whose twosome walks off with the finals. These double matches will be grand. Bring a friend and park on the sidelines and watch the smash shots, and follow the ball around, once the tourney gets underway.

Swimming

The pool is ready. You sports fans, and H20 lovers can have your swim now. Classes have been posted on the A. A. Board. Check the bulletin board for the exact hours for classes, recreational and life saving. We have all waited for the pool to re-open. Now, make use of the pool, and make the place lively with swimmers.

May Day

The big day isn't too far away. A lot of hard work has been put out on completing the western theme. Your cooperation is of utmost importance—if you have signed up for the dances, please go to the practices. Give up some of those movies, and go to your practice. It is our May Day, and up to us to see that the hard work Miss Kay has put into the May Day is not in vain.

See you sports fans after Easter—until then, get in a game, and be a good sport.

The House Raisin' scene like the Indian and Staking a Claim one is concerned with props. The changing of scenes is accomplished in pantomime dance form as part of each episode. The bride, Ann Carter, who has newly arrived from the East is as excited about living in a log cabin as the bride of today dreams of her little white cottage. The housing shortage did not exist in those days. Neighbors (court) came for miles around. By night fall the cabin was completed. Everyone joined in the House Warmin' which went on until the wee hours of the morning.

★ SENIOR ★ PERSONALITY ★

FREDDIE ANN BUTT

Our retiring president of the House Council, Freddie Ann Butt, claims our attention this week as the senior spotlight is focused on her. Freddie Ann has been in the spotlight, so to speak, during much of her college career as an officer of the House Council during her junior year and as chief during her senior year.

Her scholastic achievements have won for her a place in this college as a member of Kappa Delta Pi, and Beorc Eh Thorn. Her leadership ability was recognized by Alpha Kappa Gamma in the fall of 1945. Climaxing her work at Farmville, Freddie Ann was one of twelve seniors selected to represent Farmville in Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

Our senior celebrity this week will long be remembered for her late hours on Annex, her cups of coffee, and most of all her cheerful grin. The men in her life are many, but little brother, Fawley, seems to get talked about the most and no wonder, the things that kid will do! This untiring devotion to her family and friends has endeared her to us all

Whitehead Appointed Chairman of Dance

Nancy Whitehead, junior from Kecoughtan, has been named as general chairman of the May Day dance according to announcement made by Margaret Ellett, president of the junior class. This dance, which is an annual event, is sponsored by the juniors and will take place in the gymnasium Saturday, May 4, at 8:30 o'clock.

Jack Saunders and his orchestra of Roanoke will provide the music for this occasion.

Other committees will be appointed at a later date.

Margaret Ellett is president of the junior class; vice president, Grace Loyd; secretary, Betty Bibb; and treasurer, Anna Headlee.

Mrs. Soto Speaks to Business Girls

At the last Commercial Club meeting which was on Wednesday night, April 10, Mrs. Marita Osuna de Soto spoke to the club members about business girls in Venezuela. She also told about the opportunities there for American business girls.

Before Mrs. Soto's talk, the new officers for the club were installed. They are president, Barbara Kellam; vice president, Virginia Marshall; secretary, Jacqueline Bobbitt; treasurer, Barbara Lee Myers; and Reporter, Annie Ellis.

with their hands or with feathers, to transfer to themselves the healing power the pole takes from the sun. When exhausted, they retreat within their stalls to rest and pray and, perhaps, to see visions. The dance ceases abruptly when the Day Star rises. On the fourth morning, medicine men and dancers face the sun and give thanks.

The Rendezvous is another event of survival. Trappers met to swap their catch for the powder, traps and other things they needed. It became an annual affair sometimes an orgy, but with the coming of the missionaries the violence subsided.

Love of land is another element of survival more true for the Indian, than we suspect. It was his before the white man came. He was tricked into giving it up and moving on but as the great Indian Chief Black Hawk said in his autobiography, "My reason teaches me that land cannot be sold. The Great Spirit gave it to his children to live upon, and cultivate, as far as it is necessary for their subsistence; and so long as they occupy and cultivate it, they have the right to the soil . . . . Nothing can be sold but such things as can be carried away."

Other officers are vice president Mary Stewart Buford, Lawrenceville; secretary, Margaret Wilson, Washington, D. C.; treasurer, Betty Bennett, Keeling; and faculty member, M. Boyd Coyner.

Pi Gamma Mu is a national social honor society. The Virginia Gamma chapter, the local organization of Pi Gamma Mu, was organized in 1927. In addition to a high standard of general scholarship required for entrance each member must show an oustanding interest in the social sciences and must carry on while a member of the society a piece of original work in some of the social sciences.

"Once Upon a Time" Story Found In Students' Names

Once upon a time there was a little White Hutt in a Vail beside a Green Hill. A Short Brown Lane led to this charming Low Cottage where a Loving couple lived. All was happy in the little house where the Renn and the Robins sang their Lively songs in the Rountree, for at night in Summer, especially in May, by the Light of the Moon the couple built Castles in Spain.

Now back of the Hutt, behind the Barnes and Stables, there stood a Wood in which a Savage Wolfe lived. This did not worry the Young Couple, however, for they thought him to be Miles away; so every day the Goodman left his wife to do the chores while he went to town to the Temple where he played the Orgain and rang the Bell, for he was a good Christian. The wife, who had Youngblood, worked very hard. Brite and early in the morning she would Churn and then she would Wash in the Waters of the Brooks on a flat rock, where a Jett of water would Treakle from Underhill. Then she would rush home, spread the clean Sheets on the Couch, and Cook Cale and Cake for her husband's lunch. Finally, she would comb her long Whitehead of Hair and put on a clean Bibb; meanwhile she set the table with Bowles and waited for her spouse's return.

One day, however, all did not go well at the little Whitehouse While the sweet little wife was at the creek the Wiley Wolfe came out of the Wood and Ate the Elder Chuck. With his Sharp teeth he was about to Slaughter the old goat, who had Butt him when the woman returned.

"Help, help," she Walles "he's getting my goat!"

Just then Fran, a neighboring Farmer who was a good Driver, happened to Cruser by in his Ford He heard her cries and Fleet as a Fox did he Rush for his Gunn, and because he Shotwell he did Pierce the Lawless creature through the heart.

"Ah, my hero," sighed the lady, "when Thomas comes home he will reward you."

But the young dandy was full of Ayres so he said, "My love, go West with me and we will have Lotts of money also a Castle with 100 Chambers in a Dale with a Wall around it. We can go Miles away and find Moore happiness than there is here, then you won't have to soil your Lilly White hands with work."

He was about to take her in his arms and Winn her with a kiss when her husband returned. It would take too Long to Reade what happened then, so I shall just tell you the end.

Memories of Easter Bring Smiles and Beams From Girls

By BETTY SPINDLER

It really doesn't seem possible that little over a week has passed since Easter holidays! We consulted all the calendars on the hall to see if ours wasn't mistaken. Honestly, it seems like months. But no matter how long ago it was it certainly hasn't been forgotten; it was all too wonderful to forget. Those delightful mornings when one could wake up at any time and eat breakfast at leisure without fear of being late or locked out. Those days with no schedule to block the way to freedom, but best of all the nights when the crowd got together to "paint the town red" or going out with the O.A.O. What bliss! Would that we had spring vacation every quarter.

If you had Easter holidays all over again what would you do? Go fishing, maybe?

A number of our out-door lovers were wondering where they left their fishing rods and where the best place to get worms was so that they could head for the river as soon as possible after they get home. Fishing seems to be quite popular with S. T. C. girls in the spring—both kinds. It appears to the casual observer that there are three classes of fishers here: those who have only a little experience and fish for minnows and the fun of it; those who are sportsmanly and go in for it in the sporty way according to rule—those who catch real fish! and finally the most common group, those who go in for it wholeheartedly with skill and finesse and catch suckers. Well, what "poor fish" wouldn't fall for a pretty girl's line? It's Spring, ain't it?

"In Spring a young man's fan-

Improvement Needed

Recently an editorial appeared in the Rotunda criticizing chapel deportment and giving several ways of improving it. A notable change has already taken place which makes the programs all the more enjoyable. This just shows what S. T. C.'ers can do if they try. Although we don't like to keep harping on the same things week after week, there are many other little things which we do without thinking that would improve the looks of things if we'd stop.

For example, there are sidewalks completely circling the school and leading out from every exit. Is there any good reason why we should have to cut across the lawn? Of course the benches are in the middle of the lawn but it's the cutting corners that leave barren, ugly paths. Seed has been sown in most of these places and it is up to us to see that we have a nice stand of grass on the campus this year.

Then there is the everlasting problem of girls hanging over the Rotunda rail to get a close-up view of all the dates. Thanks to the Campus League, there has been an improvement in this situation. There are still a few, however, who have to have their curiosity satisfied. Chances are that if these people went on to the movies and Shannon's they would see most everybody anyhow and what they didn't see would get to them by way of the grapevine. We're sure that if these same people could see the view from downstairs, they'd think twice before doing it again. So we suggest that sometime you try it, that sometime you stand downstairs and look up.

There are some girls who spend most of their time sitting in the windows of the Rotunda or of their rooms. These girls just can't seem to resist the temptation of whistling or yelling to people on the lawn or passing on the street. This certainly doesn't help improve the appearance of the school.

As most of you have no doubt noticed, many containers have been placed on the halls for cigarette stubs. We've been given the privilege of smoking in our rooms and on the upstairs' halls. Let's not abuse this privilege by dropping our "cigs", and keep the halls cleaner.

We aren't really trying to find fault with the behavior of the girls here. We are just suggesting a general spring cleaning to rid ourselves of all the little things that we could just as well leave undone.

Visit Library Frequently

One of the most valuable assets of our college is its library, yet comparatively few ever discover the amazing things the library has. The library is well stacked with good books, magazines and references, and those timely exhibits and posters add to the charm of the library.

We are suggesting to you that you go over one afternoon and browse around and see for yourself what the library has to offer. What better way is there to spend an afternoon than in the company of Dickens, Browning or some other favorite of yours.

One of the nicest things about our library is the quietness that greets you when you open the door. After spending a day chattering every minute, quietness is just what you need.

One thing we must be careful about, however, is not to consider the library a meeting place for a bull session. Encourage your friends to meet you there, not to chatter but to read and enjoy books together.

The staff of the library is so willing to help you that you needn't have any qualms about asking questions. Very few people know all there is to know about the library, so ask questions and learn.

Since we have such a charming library, we must do our best to keep it neat and clean and in tip-top shape. Show the staff your appreciation by keeping the library clean.

Everyone likes praise when it is due, so if you like some particular exhibit in the library, tell them so. Then too, if you think anything is lacking, make a suggestion.

We say we appreciate the fine library we have. Let's show that we do by visiting it frequently and not abusing the privileges it offers.

Minimize Confusion

Confusion in the post office is becoming quite a problem. Signs have been put up, but they are ignored by the students.

One of the best ways to minimize this confusion is by going in and out of the correct doors. Another way is to stay at your boxes only the necessary length of time. Perhaps the greatest need, however, is to cut out the standing about and talking. If you have anything to say to someone, wait till you leave.

We all want our mail, and are determined to get it as quickly as possible. We rush in not thinking of anyone else. We push and hit anyone who gets in our way. This is not considerate. Our fellow students want their mail as much as we do.

If the students who are waiting for packages will form a single line, it will make more room in the hall for others to pass by. Some students wait until late in the morning to get their mail because they cannot fight the crowd. There is no excuse for the crowd's being such a nuisance.

The blame for this confusion cannot be placed on any one student, we are all guilty. Mail call is the bright spot in our college day. Let's do our part in making less confusion in the post office. We all want that letter or card we've been waiting for.

HEARD AFTER

Bed Check

Dot Owen was last seen taking off for that overseas phone call she received at dinner Monday. Hubba! Hubba! What are we saying?

The cutest couple up at S. T. C. this week end was Bob and "Bessie". That shining glow around them wasn't from the sun!

Ask Margaret Orange and a few others, a couple of hundred to be exact, what the University has to offer over Easter week. It couldn't be an Easter bunny, could it?

Strike up the band and bring out the banners! "Gertie's" back and aiready the whole school is rocking with laughter! Glad to see ya back "Gert".

George Anne and Doris Elliott took off for V. M. I. and came back all aglow- Seems like a good time was had by all from the reports.

Marilyn was up for the week end with her glowing smile. So glad to have you back with us, girl!

Virginia Shackleford had a fine time in Washington. Must have been the environment!

Bonnie Curtis and Mae Cardwell are sporting rings on the third finger left hand. It's nice work if you can get it, and they've got it.

Frances and Leddie proved to be so entertaining that their dates missed the bus and had to hitchhike back to Lynchburg.

Elaine Holder is so excited over her prospective date. When is he coming, Elaine?

Minnie Lee and Spencer are seen together frequently. In fact, Minnie Lee, we are waiting for that report on last week end.

What we really want to know, Martha Frances Morrison, is what's up between you and Bob. He must be pretty special for you to get up at five in the morning to see him.

Vickie Edmunds and Reggie are still going strong. When are you going to see him, Vickie?

Frances Blanton and Ralph had a rare time in Richmond. Does he always bring candy?

Agnes Milliner is so-o-o lonesome since Biffie left. We think she really misses him.

Nancy Jessee didn't give us much of a chance to see that cute sailor who came to see her Saturday night. They took off for Lynchburg before he hardly got here!

Betty Jo and Corky seemed perfectly oblivious of everything going on in the Rotunda Sunday night. It must be nice!!

Bye for now—but we'll see you at May Day and at the dance. Have a good time!

Y News

By SUE DAVIS

I speak for everybody when I say we all enjoyed hearing Dr. B. M. Persinger from Richmond who spoke to us last week.

The Baptists weren't the only ones that had a big picnic at Longwood last week end. The Presbyterians had a picnic and overnight retreat for the Young Peoples Council. Then last Sunday night the new council members were installed. Dr. Jack Thomas from the Union Theological Seminary in Richmond spoke last week at the Presbytery Wide meeting of the Westminister Fellowship at which time Hampden-Sydney, The University of Virginia and S. T. C., was represented. Everyone enjoyed him very much.

All Presbyterian students make plans for the Annual Hayride to Longwood which will be May the 13th. You will be missing something if you don't come.

Baptist girls, don't forget the Baptist Student Union installation of Executive as well as Greater Council Members at 8 o'clock Sunday night at the Baptist Church.

Methodists girls, don't forget the District Methodist meeting on May 7th at the Methodist Church. However, all girls are cordially invited to come.

The Christian Fellowship will have their regular meeting tonight at 7 o'clock. Be sure and come.

The topic for prayers this week is "The Christian" and services will be held in the Episcopal Church.

May Day

Question of the Week

Sue Davis: When will the cows come home? When the m-m-moon comes over the mountain, they'll be there holding the bag.

Jackie Watson: Where are the boys? Just a'waitin' for the train to come in.

Jean Edgerton: Who threw the whiskey in the well? The guy in Lost Week end.

Pauline Carter: What happened to Library hall on the night of April 26th? Total war declared, then peace conference with Mrs. McCoy.

Mary Frances Squire: We sure missed Charlie Hop this week. Where's he been? Two timin' us with those Chapel Hill girls.

Eleanor Farmer: When will my man come home? When he gets good and ready, I guess.

Muriel McBride: Why can't we have pink and blue rooms in the freshman dorms? 'Cause then the seniors wouldn't have anything on us.

Elaine Holder: Did anyone come back on time from Easter Holidays? I think Dean Smith showed up.

Kacky Acree: Will I be lucky in love? Sure! If you use Ponds, Lifebouy, Colgates, and Toushay.

Birdie Gumkowski: Where does all the hot water go in the morning when we want to wash? Down the drain.

Betty Mottsmith: How do you get rid of hiccoughs? You tell me. hic! hic!

Frieda Dansburger: What would S. T. C. do without it's kitty cat? It wouldn't have kittens.

Becky Williams: Who is John's other wife? Rinso's own Big Sister.

Vivian Harrison: What would S. T. C. do without Hampden-Sydney? Not much, but there's always Camp Pickett.

Tootsie Hamilton: Who killed Cock Robin? He committed suicide.

Mary Morton Fontain: What's Dr. Moore's biggest trouble? S. T. C. girls.

Ginny Walsh: Why isn't S. T. C. co-ed? What do you want—a school or a country club resort?

Martha Gilliam: Why do Phy. Ed. majors have to take modern dance? You couldn't be a Phy. Ed. major if you didn't have something to make you stiff.

Grace Mallory: Why don't I get some mail? Handle your male right and your troubles will be over.

Mystery of Plains Offers Man New, Novel Sensations

We, in America have had two epochs of pioneering, first of the forest and last of the plain; and we look back on these two contrasting adventures, the plains experience seems the more remote and unusual, softened by the glamour that diffuses and sometimes makes grotesque our view of distant things.

Of the four episodes depicting the early development of our Frontier each follows the preceding one in chronological and historical order.

The first need of the pioneer was water, so cabins were usually built along creeks or rivers. The earliest settlers were of necessity hunters and trappers, not farmers. After the axe, the six-shooter was the most essental tool. Plains Indians were an ever-growing and constant menace.

In a given region the frontier has but a brief and transient existence, and the experiences in that region are not repeated or even approximated by generations that follow. For this reason a certain glamour diffuses itself around the frontier. People look back upon its hardships and suffering with a feeling of vicarious adventure.

The mystery of the plains, like that of the sea, to which it is often compared still remains unsolved. We do know that the plains gives man new and novel sensations of elations, of vastness, of romance, of awe, and often of nauseating loneliness.

For the first time in our history men whether they were from the East, the South, or the North met common problems whether in Texas or the Dakotas. The whole nation came to look on the west in the same way as to Indians, as to cattle, later as to wheat and dry farming, as to its romantic and spectacular aspect, and as to its lawlessness.

There was credulity, extravagance, burlesque and a taste for contrast. There were hardships and disappointments, but always a sense of optimism prevailed. There was humor, too, typically American, which has cut a deep, perhaps the deepest stratum in the geology of the American soul.

As a frontier it drew the "irreligion of the times". It was lawless as well as godless but the appearance of the missionaries foreshadowed the wave of families and plows that was to transform the West.

We are too close to see the pictures of survival which the West represents—survival of the land itself, of wild animals, of the early American stock. We can only sense them. It is our Far and Near country—a land of innovation and survival. It is for us to view it not as an outsider looking on. It is our heritage, too.

Cheatwood, Burger To Judge Annual Horse Show, May 18

Sauerwein Names Committee Heads

Miss Joyce Cheatwood, riding instructor at Randolph Macon Woman's College, and Miss Elizabeth Burger, associate professor of science, will judge the annual college horse show which will be held at Longwood on Saturday, May 18 at 2 o'clock.

Joyce graduated from State Teachers College last June. While in school here she was riding instructor.

All girls taking riding can participate in the show. Residents of Farmville and vicinity, and boys from Virginia Military Institute will probably take part also, according to an announcement made this week by Jeanne Sauerwein, general chairman of he show.

There will be equitation, hunter classes, jumping classes, and gaited classes.

Margaret Lohr will assist Jeanne Sauerwein and other committee chairmen are ribbons, Betty Deuel Cock; prizes Anna Headlee; program, Sarah Youngblood; fence, jumps, parking, Virginia Anderson; secretary, Dot Gelston; food, Margaret Verell; and gate, Martha Lee.

Joyce Cheatwood, Randolph Macon Woman's College riding instructor who will judge the annual college horse show.

Tennis Tourney Date Set by Manager

According to an announcement made by Betty Burchett, Tennis manager, the first round of the tennis tournament must be played by Wednesday, May 8. It was announced earlier that the date for the first round to be played was Wednesday, May 1, but because of bad weather and May Day practices the date had to be changed. The annual tournament will end May 15.

In the first round Phyllis Wyatts and Frances Lee will play Sue Hundley and Nellie Smith. Mary Harrison and Betty Parrish will play Betty Burchett and Hazel Lewis. Betty Minton and Lois Steppe will play Mary Jane King and Bennie Dudley. Jane Burchett and Jeanne Bentley will play together in the tournament.

Longest Footpath

The longest marked footpath in the world is the Appalachian trail which runs from Mount Katahdin in Maine to Mount Oglethorpe in Georgia, a distance of 2,050 miles. Constructed between 1921 and 1940, it traverses parts of 12 states, 2 national parks, 6 national forests and some 20 state parks and forests.

Dabney Announces Swimming Schedule

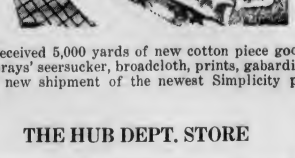
Recreational swimming hours for the remainder of the quarter have been announced by Miss Mary Dabney, swimming instructor.

The pool will be open on Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday nights from 9 until 10 o'clock. It will also be opened from 4 until 5 o'clock on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. Senior life saving is now being given at 1:50 on Monday and 5 o'clock on Thursday.

It was also announced at this time that any freshman who passes the swimming test will not be required to take Physical Education 210. Freshman can take the required swimming test on Monday and Wednesday nights from 3 to 9 o'clock or Tuesday afternoon from 3 to 4 o'clock.

Regulation tank suits and capts mus be worn in the college swimming pool.

The swimming pool was opened April 16 for the first time since the beginning of the year. The pool had to be closed this year because a vital part of the heating system of the pool was broken.



Rotunda Lawn Scene of Early May Days

In the early part of the twentieth century Farmville State Teachers College began to have their first May Day Festivals. The first festivals were held on the lawn in front of the Rotunda. They consisted of a pageant and folk dancing. From 1907 to 1912 Mrs. Herbert Stokes, now a resident of Farmville, was in charge of the programs.

Miss Mary B. Barlow, present head of the physical education department, came to join the faculty here in 1920 and from that time until 1928 she took charge of the programs. The festivals were still held in front of the Rotunda, and during that time the training school sudents had a part in May Day as well as the college girls.

In 1929 the first May Day was held at Longwood under the direction of Mrs. Fitzpatrick and Miss Leola Wheeler. The festival was held at the side of the house at Longwood for several years until the present dell was built. During

NOW THAT EASTER'S OVER

"All play and no work makes our horse-show a big flop" quoth the almighty committee headed by Jeanne Sauerwein. As with every other event of worth, we would have the show go off with seemingless effort, but truthfully it will be more effort than seeming less. To take care of all this effort, the followlng committees have been appointed and are duly functioning, we hope: Ribbons, Betty Deuel Cock; Prizes, Anna Headlee,; Programs, Sara Jane Youngblood; Fence and Jumps, Virginia Anderson; Entries, Dot Gelston; Food, Margaret Verell, and Gate, Martha Lee.

Assisting Jeanne, the chairman and chief instigator of the whole affair—will be Margaret Lohr.

The judges of all classes, as previously announced, will be Miss Elizabeth Burger, member of our S. T. C. faculty and Miss Joyce Cheatwood, riding instructor of Randolph Macon Woman's College.

May we gently yet emphatically prod all Pegasus fans into the realization that the ring looks more attractive white than grey; this only means that when Ducky calls for volunteers to whitewash the fence, we hope she'll be overwhelmed with offers. Betty Deuel will need patient hands to work on those cherished ribbons, too, so prepare to do your part to make the annual horseshow a success!

HORSES COUNT, TOO

In the midst of all this manual labor, leave us not forget the stars of the whole show. The horses, too, have been going through their paces repeatedly because they have some pride, as well as their riders. Both need to polish up on their ring manners and get the diagonals and leads worked down to a fine point. All of these things count when the judges give you the once over.

Speaking of judging, do you know just what the judge is looking for when you go into the Beginners' Equitation? Well, it says right here in fine print that they keep their eyes on the girl herself most of the time, and judge her on her horsemanship. However, in the Three-gaited Class more attention is paid to the horse and his performance, also the suitability of horse and rider. In each class there's a special feature to look for and these will be most pointedly pointed out on each and every program. This will benefit those non-conformists who won't go to a horse-show because they vow avidly that they don't know one end of the horse from another.

TACK-ROOM TATTLE

Rumors are that Jeanne and M. Verell saw a good time riding in Maryland during Easter. And there certainly are some eager beginners haunting the stables these days. K. T. and J. Snead keep Squealer and Long on the trail just all the time. They'll be experienced before May 18 if we don't look out.

Watch the style notes for the newest in riding gear, but remember that a good riding habit now will be good ten years hence, too. With such a bit of startling sagacity, we'll say "So Long" and

Stay On The Bit!

Loaded Laundry Bags Face Tired S. T C.'ers

By JEAN CAKE

There are some things that have to be done and some things that we just breeze by and look the other way. Eventually though, those socks and blouses must get dunked in the tub. The usual thing is to wait until we have absolutely nothing clean to wear, then tackle the whole laundry bag at once. Grimly we fill up the bath tub and pour in "Quickie Sudsie Wudsies" or "Get-em-Clean Soap Powder." Energetic little girls might crawl in and give 'em a good scrubbing but the most common method is to put the clothes in and leave them all day and lazily wring them out the last thing before lights out. Of course, if you really want to get things done, you can take a bath, shampoo your hair, and do your laundry all at the same time. Complications are likely to set in though with your hair in the "Quickie Sudzie Wudzies" and your clothes in the shampoo.

Once your duds are clean, with the steps of bleaching and starching sadly neglected, it's time to worry about drying them. We wouldn't think of using a nice big line out in the sunshine. No indeed! We must have something complicated, one of the many type of ingenious lil' dryIng racks. You know, the contraptions that unfold and hang on the door, or the kind where you push a button and little "do-things" pop out all sides for the convenience of hanging-uh, stuff, shall we call it. One which requires little space is the wheel type or oversize tie rack. Usually though, after struggling for hours with the mechanism of these devices, we turn to the old fashioned nail and string line. This is often found decorating the windows at S. T. C. or stringing across the room. During the drying process, New Year's resolutions are shockingly broken as wet gym socks caress our faces when we wander about the room. All our efforts and trials aren't in vain though, for we are getting closer to the old saying that cleanliness is next to godliness.

On the Ball

Greetings again Sports fans! Ole Man weather is up to old tricks again—the A. A. field is a bit damp, and the freshly lined courts are even damper—but we'll be out of the rut soon. May Day has kept all of us rather busy these past weeks, and sports have taken a back seat. As soon as May 4th is torn from the calendar, the tourneys for this sports season will really begin in earnest.

MAY DAY

This Saturday brings the long awaited May Day. The spotlight will point with pride Saturday at Longwood. An excellent program will be held for you, the audience. With the able guidance of Miss Emily Kauzlarich, a fine performance is in store for all. The theme is western, and you will spectate an old west brought to life—real Indians, and trappers. Boom town and all. No doubt you have seen the girls limping back to town after an afternoon at Longwood, they have done their part, prove your interest and come to Longwood Saturday afternoon.

TENNIS

If you are around the courts, you will hear a lot of oh's and ah's —service—good, double faults — Let ball; a lot of hard playing will be seen.

Although fall tourney for one player, you see a double treat if you sit on the side line and watch the doubles partners in A-1 condition, lobbing and smashing for the color points. Five points to be exact. So go on out and watch the game if you weren't fortunate enough to get signed up for the event—Good luck!

ARCHERY

Zing—a bulls eye! Well—almost, in the red, or blue, or maybe you just nicked the target. A lot of time spent in practice will bring you a bull's eye. Who knows you may like the feeling so much you will form a habit, and continue to make more bull's eyes. The game may be a minor sport, but it takes perfect form, coordination, power in your arm, and good eyesight. Be a champion in the game, and practice your shots, this is the only way to be outstanding in any sport.

Until next time, get into the swing by playing softball, or be an eager beaver, and try your aces in tennis, or stroll around the pool. You'll have fun!

Be a good sport!

★ SENIOR ★ PERSONALITY ★

SHIRLEY CRUSER

Today we recognize Shirley Cruser as our Senior personality. When we met her our freshman year, we found a unique personality, which we have learned to love.

Her love for her class and her school has been unlimited as has her ability to serve. Early her freshman year her classmates elected her to serve as class secretary. Fulfilling increasing demands, consciously and with perfection, they elected her class treasurer her sophomore and again her junior year; and gave her the greater responsibility of student government her senior year. Due to her untiring efforts, many organizations found her a capable and willing worker. She proved her worth as chairman of the public affairs committee of the "Y", and as a member of the annual staff her sophomore and junior years. Her senior year she became business manager. As well as being a diligent worker, Shirley has proved to be an outstanding student, being a member of Alpha Phi Sigma, the French Circle and Beore Eh Thorn. In her junior year Alpha Kappa Gamma recognized her as a leader, and she served as vice-president this past year of that society. She was one of twelve to be selected for Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

The Farmville spirit of friendliness is exemplified through her personality. Among her many attributes we cannot forget her thoughtfulness and interest in others. Her numerous friends have been amused by her dry humor. Her letter talk has spread, and she is convinced that some day it will become the universal language in this fast moving world. The daily topics of conversation range from Lulu, her o. a. o. to the latest doings of her precious niece, Lee.

To try to sum up Shirley's unusual personality in a few lines can only be a futile attempt to present a "true personality" which we have come to love and admire.

Variety of Colors Found in Sandals

By HELEN WILLIAMS

Remember last spring we had an awful time with shoe rationing. This year we may again have the variety in color, style and materials as before the war.

Even in 1946 girls are still wearing the ancient Greek sandals. They have traveled through the ages, popular in styles, as they are cool and comfortable and always new looking. There is a large variety in this sandal style. They are only a few straps and a sole.

Colors added to the feet brighten every costume. Greens, reds, blues and yellows will be the headlines in stretching the accessory wardrobe. Colored play shoes will be available in linens, leather, cottons and suede.

Have you heard the squeaking foot steps up and down the halls? That is the ever famous Mexican Huaraches back again. Everyone has missed them during the recent scarcity of leather permitted for play shoes. They too will perk up a cotton dress.

If you are not the barefoot type you might like the leather wings with opened or closed back. They, with their flat heels are practical for the busy person and dandy for walking in the spring air.

Or maybe you want to dance around in a pair of ballet slippers. They may be worn for almost any occasion with spring clothes. Plaids stripes, and plain in bright colors, but most popular is the black.

For dressy wear black patent leather is still holding its place in fashion. They are being followed by the latest discovery in science —now we may even have plastic shoes. Both may be worn with almost any spring costume you have or will choose. Sandals and pumps are featured in the dressy shoe. You may like a buckle or bow to detract from the plain line of a pump. Having ornaments detachable, the shoe may be worn for sport or dressy occasions.

cy", they say; and there were a lot of far away looks in the girls' eyes when they came in Monday night. Right off hand we'd say that a diamond looks as good under Easter flowers as it does under mistletoe—anybody agree?

At any rate, when the vacation period was over there were a lot of us glad to get back. After all, it wouldn't be any fun counting the days till June if we were at home.

this time they had such themes for their festivals as fairy tales and folk tales. The themes often dealt with the coming of spring. One year they presented "Alice in Wonderland" and twice they presented cantos from Spencer's "Fairy Queen." Every four years they presented an Old English May Day. Greek and Roman May Day themes were popular during this time also.

Miss Emily Kauzlarich succeeded Mrs. Fitzpatrick as May Day director in 1940. Since that time the themes have varied. With America's advent into the war international themes were stressed. This year's theme is Western.

Dr. Jeffers Named To Advisory Board

Dr. George W. Jeffers, Head of the Department of Biology, has accepted an invitation to serve as a member of the Advisory Board of the North Carolina Fisheries Survey. The survey, similar in all essential respects to the recent survey of the Chesapeake Fisheries directed by Dr. Jeffers, proposes critically to evaluate the status and potentialities of the commercial marine fisheries of North Carolina.

The initial meeting of the advisory board was held at Chapel Hill on May 5.

French Circle Holds Meeting in Library

French Circle met Tuesday after noon, April 30, in the audiovisual room in the library.

The program was made up of recitations from all of the French classes. The girls gave resumes of the work of several famous figures in French literature, and read several of their works along with the English translation.

The meeting was adjourned after the group joined in singing some French songs.

Senior Day Chapel Will Be Held May 24

May 24 has been set for the date of senior class chapel, according to an announcement by Eleanor Bisese, president of the senior class. At this time the honorary class member selected by the junior class will be announced.

The senior class will sing their songs to the school during the program. A brief farewell speech will be made by Eleanor Biese, after which Margaret Eliett, junior class president will make a talk.

Parham Selected New Pan-Hel Head

Kitty Parham, junior from Petersburg, was recently elected president of the Pan-Hellenic Association. Kitty, representing Sigma Sigma Sigma on the council, is replacing Evelyn Grizzard, senior from Drewryville who was Phi Zeta Sigma's representative this past year.

Lee Staples, freshman from Lynchburg who represents Gamma Theta was elected vice-president. Other officers are secretary, Katie Lawrence, Alpha Sigma Alpha; Grace Loyd, treasurer, Mu Omega; program chairman, Margaret Lohr, Pi Kappa Sigma; publicity chairman, Gwen Ackiss, Alpha Sigma Tau; keeper of the records, Mary Frances Vaughan, Theta Sigma Upsilon; and rushing chairman, Nancy Hughes, Phi Zeta Sigma.

These officers were installed Tuesdsay at 5 o'clock in the Student Lounge. This took the place of the regular chapter meetings for next week.

Dr. Fields Succumbs At Nebraska Home

Word has been received in Farmville of the death of Dr. Susan Wilson Fields at her home in Lincoln, Nebraska, on April 15, 1946.

Dr. Fields was resident physician at State Teachers College from 1908 until 1911. Leaving the college that year she accepted a similar position at George Peabody College, Nashville, Tennessee, where she remained for a period of ten years.

In 1921 she returned to Farmville to again become resident physician of the college and served the institution for 14 years, resigning in 1935 because of ill health. Dr. Fields was the first resident physician of the college and also the first woman doctor to serve the institution.

Honor Graduates To Make Address

Dr. John L. Manahan and Rev. Wade H. Bryant will be the speakers for the sixty second commencement exercises which will be held June 2 and 3 this year.

The Reverend Mr. Bryant, pastor of First Baptist Church, Roanoke will deliver the baccalaureate sermon June 2 at 8 o'clock.

Dr. John L. Manahan, dean of Curry Memorial Department of Education of the University of Virginia will deliver the commencement address on June 3 at 10 o'clock in the morning.

Dr. Manahan received his Ph.D. degree from Harvard. He has taught at Harvard, Miami College, Ohio State College and is now associated with the University of Virginia. He also served as state high school inspector in Ohio.

As was previously announced, Carolyn Bobbitt, South Hill, will make the valedictory address and Virginia Treakle, Farmville, will give the salutatory address.

Officers of the graduating class are president, Eleanor Bisese from Norfolk; vice-president, Anne Summers from Hampden-Sydney; secretary, Lillian Elliott from Farmville; and treasurer, Virginia Shackleford from Gloucester.

May Day Festival Held At Longwood

Program Post-poned Because of Weather

S. T. C.'s annual celebration of May Day was held this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock rather than last Saturday, May 4, as a result of the rainy weather. This year's program which centered around the movement westward was reigned over by Ann Carter, senior from Cumberland. Jacqueline Parden served as maid of honor.

As a special feature of May Day Dr. Joseph L. Jarman, retiring president of State Teachers College, was made a part of the festival. Unbeknowing to Dr. Jarman and the audience before time, at the end of the May Day he was presented an armful of red roses from the girls in the court by the May Queen, Anne Carter.

The May Day program was made up of many scenes depicting American life at the time of the westward expansion. The Indian dances, Boom Town scene, Singing School, House Raising, and the square dances were all typical occasions of that day and time. The colorful costumes added to the at-

Chest X-Ray Tests Offered to Students

Chest x-rays for tuberculosis were given Monday, May 6 and Tuesday, May 7. This project was sponsored by the district health department, the local tuberculosis association, and the school board. The tests were made in the Sunday School Department in the Methodist Church.

Dr. Ray A Moore, school physician spoke to the students in chapel last week urging them to take advantage of this opportunity. Approximately 400 students signed up to take the x-ray.

Shackelford, Adams Named Chairmen Of Pan-Hel Dance

Virginia Shackelford and Betty Adams have been named general chaimen of the annual Pan-Hellenic dance which will be held in the college gymnasium Saturday, May 18. The Vagabonds of Lynchburg will provide the music for the dance.

The receiving line will be composed of Miss Ruth Gleaves, Pan-Hellenic adviser; Dean Smith; Dr. J. L. Jarman; Evelyn Grizzard, out-going president; and the different sorority advisers. They are Sigma Sigma Sigma, Miss Pauline Camper; Alpha Sigma Alpha, Miss Virginia Wall; Pi Kappa Sigma, Miss Olive T. Iler; Alpha Sigma Tau, Miss Virginia Bedford; Theta Sigma Upsilon, Miss Lucille Jennings; Gamma Theta, Miss Florence Stubbs; Mu Omega, Miss Leola Wheeler; and Phi Zeta Sigma, Miss Willie London.

Chaperoning the dance will be Dr. and Mrs. Gordon Moss, Miss Patterson, Mrs. Hanford, Dr. and Mrs. Francis Simkins, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Davisson, Mrs. Tabb, Mrs. Warren, Mrs. McCoy. and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Graham.

Mr. French, Mr. Graham, Dr. Moss, and Mr. McCorkle will be at the door.

Serving under Virginia and Betty on the various committees are music, Evelyn Grizzard; floor, Dot Overstreet; invitations, Betty Brothers; publicity, Virginia Treakle; decorations, Anna Headlee and Kitty Maddox; and tickets, Lucy Bowling.

Carper, McKenry Receive KDP Bids

Headlee Announces Names of Girls

Emily Carper and Lucie McKenry were issued bids to Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society in education on Tuesday, May 7. The announcement was made by Anna Headlee recently elected president of the society.

Emily, senior from Rocky Mount, N. C., is a member of Orchesis, a member of Pi Gamma Mu, and a member of the Spanish Club.

Lucie, senior from Manassas, served as president of the Choral Club during the past year. She is also a member of the College Choir and the Spanish Club.

The membership of Kappa Delta Pi consists of students interested in the activities of the teaching profession including all fields. The society is confined to juniors and seniors, whose scholarship ranks in the upper fourth of the student body.

Y.W.C.A. Conference Will Be held May 15

The annual Set-Up Conference of the Y. W. C. A. will be held next Wednesday, May 15, at Longwood. At this time the old and new cabinet members will confer and set up a new program for next year.

The Y Cabinet will go out at 3 o'clock for this business meeting. According to Martha Russel East, newly elected Y president, the student body is invited to come out at 5 o'clock for the summary of next year's plans and light refreshments.

Sparkling Eyes, Gay Laughter Tell Success Story of Dance

By JEAN CAKE

A casual visitor this week end might have thought that S. T. C. was co-ed. The large number of members of the opposite sex haunting the college gave us a big thrill. Such conditions suggested only one thing—a dance. And dance we did—even without the May Day the traditional May Day Dance went on.

After hopefully (and usually successfully) searching the Rotunda for flowers, we retired to our "boudoirs" to dress. We donned our gayest spring gowns and by 8:30 or 9:00 o'clock couples were tripping along the Colonnade to the gym. Inside the door we encountered the receiving line. We forgot our misgivings, though, when we saw it was composed of friends an favorites.

Stopping on the balcony to gaze at the decorations we were amazed at the cleverness of them. Huge portraits of the May Court ladies posed along the walls were framed in green and white streamers.

The orchestra was playing and the music beckoned so we whirled on to the floor to begin a lovely evening. There were just enough stags to keep things lively. The night was bewitched with sparkling eyes, masculine laughter and coy little grins, intercepted by sweet words and soft music.

There were special dances for the juniors the May Court and the Chi members.

After intermission and refreshments the time slipped all too quickly away and we had to begin hunting wraps. Strolling down the Colonnade in the misting rain, we sighed and were thankful for the wonderful things we'd have to remember.

Thank you, juniors for a grand time!

UnwelcomeRainHaltsMayDay To Disappoint Eager Crowd

By MARGARET WILSON

King Mud has stopped armies, by gosh, but only for a certain length of time. And, like armies, May Day will go on, sooner or later. The Heavens can't continue to drip indefinitely, and some nine hundred heads have been turned skyward ever since last Friday. If ever a spot of sunshine was welcomed, it was that first tentative ray that broke through Sunday afternoon.

Everybody seemed to be wandering aimlessly around, with or minus date, chanting the intriguing little rhymn "Well, where's Miss Kay, and what's she say " And nobody appeared to know "nothin' about nothin'."

However, the powers that be wisely decreed that May Day must wait for the damp after effects of Saturday's deluge to completely disappear, and except for disappointed friends and relatives who had come expressly to see the performance, everybody was satisfied. The court just has to look purty, and droopy hair-do's and saggy net skirts could never be said to do much for glamor.

What to do with the dates and relations etc., who were sort of at loose ends come Saturday afternoon, became the problem of the day. As for the men, they had to take their gals complete with bobby pins and rag curlers and like it, because, come flood or fire nobody had any idea of attending the dance looking like an off combination of Gravel Gertie and Cass Daley. Curls are positive essentials to morale, and morale is a positive essential to do full justice to a swish evening dress, and so went the circle. S. T. C. sat in the rec, or wandered down to Shannon's, or rode around town in a car (they were the plutocrats) but all attired in trench coats, hats, boots and the inevitable scarfs. It wasn't so bad after all, 'cause there's always gin rummy. And besides, we still have May Day to look forward to To coin a phrase—"There's always a silver lining"—even in clouds as black as Saturdays!

Appreciation of May Day

Despite the disappointment of having to postpone May Day, the festival was one of the best that has ever been presented at this school. It showed months of preparation and hard work on the part of all who had anything to do with it.

Under the capable direction of Miss Emily Kauzalrich, May Day could not have been better. Miss Kay spent not hours, not days, but weeks and weeks of hard work. We owe her a great deal, and we extend to her our congratulations for her fine direction. Hers was not an easy job.

We also extend our congratulations to Frances Lee and Betty Ellis co-chairmen of May Day, for a job well done. We appreciate their untiring efforts to make May Day what it was. Congratulations go also to Lucy Bralley, who served as business manager of May Day; Nancy Whitehead, dance chairman; Anne Shufflebarger and Doris May, heads of the costuming committee; Kitty Parham, transportation head; and Pat Carter, staging and properties head. Each girl did over and above what was expected of her.

Every girl who had a part in the festival did her part well. May Day could not have been a success, if each one connected with it had not done such a splendid job. We also want to thank the other members, members of the faculty who willingly helped with the May Day. The queen and her court were even lovelier than we had anticipated.

The much anticipated May Day celebration is over. It does not leave us, however, without many pleasant memories. When college days are over we will always remember the western May Day. We will long remember the Near Country and the Far Country. This has been too big a part of our college year to ever forget it.

Thanks again to the May Day Committee, the participants in May Day and Miss Kay for the splendid May Day that they gave us.

An Outstanding Service

We are indeed fortunate in having had the chest x-ray for tuberculosis program sponsored on our campus. Dr. Ray A. Moore, school physician, spoke to the students in chapel urging them to sign up for this service.

Many people never suspect that they might have tuberculosis. This is one dread disease that must be caught in time, or treatments cannot be of much use. Many people die each year because they did not have treatment early enough. The surest way to catch this dread disease in its early stages is by chest x-ray.

We are grateful to the Public Health Department of Farmville and Dr. Moore for bringing this outstanding service to the students. Much time and effort has been put forth by many, and we do appreciate it.

Senior students who are going to teach and are required to have this x-ray, welcomed this opportunity. However, all students appreciated the opportunity.

Dr. Moore said that the results of the tests would be sent to the student's family physician. He, in turn, would notify the student of the results. Some people will argue that they don't want to take the test because they are afraid of the results. How much better it is to know, instead of wondering whether you have the disease or not.

We appreciate the x-ray test program and want to thank all who were connected with it in any way. We recognize this as an outstanding service to the students and the school.

Be A Good Sport

In the spring everyone wants to be out of doors in the nice fresh air and sports again become prominent in everyone's mind. Along with sports we should be remindcd of good sportsmanship and fair play, of what they mean and the importance. In the various contests, everyone wants to win for her team, class, or colors to be sure, but win or lose, she should put good sportsmanship first.

There is nothing like a good class team to promote and build up class spirit. The fun and glory is all lost, however, if you win unfairly or if you win fair and square and the other team takes it poorly. Win or lose, be a sport. Play fair at all timese, accept the decisions of the referee or umpire, and if you lose, smile and congratulate the opposing team. After all, it's not whether you win or lose, but how you play the game that counts.

Good sportsmanship is not important in athletic events only. It could and should be tied up with almost everything we do in our daily lives. At this time, elections are prominent on our campus. Of course it's a great honor to be elected to an office in your organization but everyone can't be officers. The members are just as important because the officers are to do what the majority of the members desire. If you are nominated and aren't elected, give your wholehearted support to the winning candidate. There is a chance to show your good sportsmanship in voting in these elections, too. Don't be prejudiced. It's to your advantage to see that good capable leaders are elected.

Be a good sport in your class work. Good sportsmanship doesn't tolerate unfairness or cheating.

To deserve the title of a good sport, a girl should be straightforward, honest, truthful, and loyal to her class and team. Above all, she should try to do the right thing at all times, take things in the proper spirit, and avoid unfair prejudice. Be honest and truthful with yourself. Work out a good definition of true sportsmanship to meet your individual needs as well as the needs of others and live up to it. Be a good sport!

HEARD AFTER

Bed Check

And the rains came . . . . so May Day was postponed . . . . but did that get us down? Why no! The whole student body made the best of the week-end and had a wonderful time.

Margo took off to Lynchburg with Bill on Friday and we would like to submit the following report, all's well and glowing.

Minnie Lee decided that the rain wasn't going to interfere with her getting engaged to Spencer, so she surprised the whole school with a beautiful ring. Best wishes are in order for her.

Alice Hannah's date, Nat, sure seemed to be having a good time at the dance with all those women.

"Shuffle" was all a dither over seing "Bunny" last week-end. She's still walking around with stars in her eyes.

Betty Ellis sure is the popular girl these days . . . . Sunday there was not one man waiting for her in Junior Parlor, but five and the crowning blow was that she already had a date.

Jackie Parden's Kilby was here this week-end in case everyone is wondering why they didn't see much of the girl. By way of grapevine we heard that a poem had been written about Kilby and V. P. I.

Sure was good to have "Cab" back up here at the old school last week-end. Those melodious strains of boogie sure sounded good.

The Burchetts' brothers have been voted the most popular men on the dance floor at the dance Saturday night. Must have them back again and soon.

For particulars about the picnic out at Bear Creek Lake Sunday see most anyone on second floor Junior.

Dot, Lillian, Tom and Hubba Hubbard must have had a wonderful time in Richmond. All of them came back with huge smiles on their faces and chuckles for all.

If anyone wants to ask Dot Overstreet the $64 queston, just ask her for her Beginner's Driving License. A big, bad policeman did and she quickly came up with her license which expired six years ago.

Pat Carter and Frances Livesy looked happy when they left for the dance Saturday night. Couldn't have been the escorts, could it? . . . . or could it?

That's about all the dope for this week, except that we would like to say we are glad "Corky" appreciates the finer things in life. Bye for this week, see ya next Wednesday.

Y News

By SUE DAVIS

The annual Spring Set-Up Conference of the "Y" will be held next Wednesday, May 15, at Longwood. The old and new cabinets will go out at 3:00 for a business meeting, and the student body is invited to come out at 5:00 for the summary of next year's plans and light refreshments.

Congratulations to the new officers of the church groups, and best wishes for a successful year!

The Baptist Student Union held the installation of its new officers and council on last Sunday night. They are planning a picnic for this Saturday afternoon at Willis' Mountain. Everyone is invited to attend. Rev. George Kiessinger spoke at the Y. W. A. meeting on Tuesday night.

Again the Westminster Fellowship is planning its annual hay ride. It will take place Monday afternoon, May 13th, and the wagons will start leaving at 4:00 from the front of the school to go to Longwood. Everyone is invited to attend.

There was a sub-division meeting of Buckingham and Prince Edward counties at the Methodist Church on Tuesday night at 7:30.

Everyone is invited and urged to attend prayers each night.

Ah, Spring!

Question of the Week

What did you like most about the May - Day Dance?

Jane Taylor: Jennie Sue's next door neighbor.

Tucker Winn: Due to a bum leg I was unable to go.

Alice Wilkins: Richard.

Ethel Harrison: I liked the intermission party.

Jackie Bobbitt: Bill Burchett's dancing.

Boots Bralley: The tux and tails.

Lucille Upshur: It looked mighty good from the balcony.

B. Lee Myers: Ray Baby.

Jennie Lee Cross: So many people there were from Suffolk.

Betty Jane Brockway: The floor wasn't so crowded. (?)

Margaret Whittle: Green and white decorations.

Jean Babb: My date!

Carolyn Bobbitt: Cab.

Mary Lou Feamster: That's one time I went to the gym and didn't have to line up and count off!

Leon Hardy: (Don't know how he got here but it's all right with us!) Silly girl!!

Eleanor Farmer: The aroma of gardenias drifting through the air.

Mary Frances Squire: Dancing with all the cute boys.

Evelyn Patterson: The Chi no-break dance.

Betty Jones: Oh, those lovely men!

Peggy Murray: Love that Carl.

Dot Poarch: Everything in general.

Ginny Bailey: MEN!!

Charlotte Hutter: Dick was here.

Betty Curlee: I liked it all!

Betsy Brown: "After the Ball Was Over".

Cathon Neal: I liked the general atmosphere — everyone seemed to be having such a good time.

Betty Jefferson: I like that tall, dark, and handsome boy that danced so divinely.

Juanita Davis: Does it have to be about the dance? How about afterwards?

Cornelia Davidson: Having a date for once, and getting flowers!

Ginny Hollifield: My date! It was the nearest heaven I've ever been!

Ann Verser: Dick Larry, of course. What a man!

Joan Sterling: The gang we had from The Shore.

Betty Spindler: The moral I learned—never take your roommate's man!

Iris Davis: I liked Joe best but def! Oh-ho!

Nancy Dickinson: The men.

Mary Toales Waldrop: Oookie!

U. S., Humanity Collaborate On Desperate Food Situation

By BETTY LEWIS SHANK

Here is a little conversation which we overheard the other day between Humanity and Uncle Sam, two very old friends. Uncle Sam has taken time out of a very busy day to talk to Humanity who has traveled all the way from Europe to see him.

Humanity: I'm sorry to bother you, Sam. I know you are awfully busy these days with a lot of knotty problems.

Sam: That's right, I am busy, but I'm never too busy to be of service to you, Humanity.

Humanity: I'll come right to the point, Sam. There are a lot of very hungry, starving people over where I came from. I didn't know where else to turn for help so I came to you. I figured that since your people hadn't been hit as hard as they, that maybe you could help. Can you lend me a couple of million loaves of bread, Sam?

Sam: (rubbing his whiskers thoughtfully) Well . . . that sure is a lot of bread, Humanity. I wouldn't hesitate a minute if it was all in my own bread box, but you see, that's not the case. It's spread out all over this vast country of mine. It's in the bread boxes of my 140,000,000 people. It's going to be a big job to get it all together.

Humanity: You've got to help me, Sam. You and your people have never let me down before. Can't you talk to America—make her see the gravity of the situation and the need for haste?

Sam: I'll do what I can, Humanity. I know my people will want to help. It's just that it's going to be hard to impress such a big thing upon them. You see they've never had anything like that to happen to them. If I can just make them see how much they can help!

Humanity: Please try, Sam. Time is growing short. I'm afraid that each minute starvation claims another helpless victim.

Sam: I'll get on the phone right now.—Hello, America? This is your Uncle Sam calling—in behalf of Humanity. He wants to know if you can tighten your belt just a little-so little you won't even know it—in order to save your fellow men over in Europe who are starving. Well, how about it, America?

S.T.C.: Hello, Sam. We are the girls from State Teachers College in Farmville, Virginia. We called to tell you that we overheard your conversation with Humanity and we want you to know that we will back you in the food campaign, we're willing to pull our belts in a notch or two.

Class Softball Tourney Starts Wednesday, May 15

Winning Class Gets Points Toward Cup

According to Mary Evelyn Miles, softball manager, softball games between the classes will begin Wednesday, May 15. The schedule will be made out at a later date.

The class winning the most games in the round robin tournament will gain five points towards the color cup.

Softball has been added to the list of major sports for next year. The ammendment to the constitution was made early this quarter by A. A. executive committee. Next year the class winning the tournament will gain 10 points towards the cup for their colors.

Mary Evelyn Miles, freshman, was recently appointed softball manager for 1946 and 1947. She succeeds Betty Minton, sophomore from Roanoke, in this position.

All class games and matches should be played by May 20.

Monogram Club Bids 3 Students

Alice Ann Abernathy, sophomore from Stoney Creek; Jeanne Bentley, sophomore from Roanoke; and Sue Hundley, junior from Suffolk were issued bids to the Monogram Club yesterday, May 7, according to Margaret Orange, president of the club.

All three of the girls have been active in both class and varsity sports, and are members of the Athletic Association.

Alice Anne was recently elected treasurer of Student Government Association. She has served as a class representative to Student Council both her freshman and sophomore years.

Jeanne was also recently elected to an office, treasurer, on Student Government Association. She served as head of Campus League during the past year, and also as a representative to Student Council for the sophomore class this year.

Sue will serve as editor-in-chief of the 1947 Virginian. She is a member of Alpha Kappa Gamma, Beorc Eh Thorn, and the Spanish Club.

The out going officers of the Monogram Club are Margaret Orange, president; Louise Blane, vice-president; and Phylis Watts, secretary and treasurer.

NW Schedule Changes Cause Mad Confusion

The Norfolk and Western has certainly messed up a lot of girl's "mud pies" when it comes to going home. It was bad enough when one had to dash out of class at 12:30 to make the 1:00 train, but just how many of these feminine "Dagwoods" are going to catch the 12:37 in order to make their connections?

It takes absolutely no "hose" sense and very little imagination to imagine a typical conversation on the hall Saturday just as the week-enders prepare to depart—listen!

"Where's the key to my suitcase? and who borrowed my white sweater? Holy cow, I haven't packed a rag yet and my train leaves seven minutes after I get out of class! If she talks one minute after the bell rings, I'll have to hop a freight to get home before midnight."

(That's truth in them thar words—experience is a good teacher.)

For the benefit of those who would like the schedule for handy reference and those who haven't already seen it on the Post Office door, here it is.

No. 29 will leave here going west at 1:55 a. m. Westbound No. 15 leaves Farmville at 2:45 a. m. Westbound No. 23, the afternoon train, will leave here at 2:20 p. m. No. 3 will go west from here at 6:28 p. m.

For the eastbound trains, No 16 leaves Farmville at 3:50 a. m No. 30 at 4:23 a. m., No. 4 at 12:37 p. m., and No. 28 at 2:40 p. m.

Good luck in catching the train you want and happy hunting after you get there.

LEFT LEAD

TOIL AND TROUBLE

Old sol really failed his worshippers this past week, thereby making lots of people unhappy. A few of the horses were to make their debut in the May Day program and they were sorely disappointed, when the rains came. Eagle, King, and Pony got their soaking along with the girls at Friday's rehearsal, but they didn't get a sniffle. Lady, looking very much her part of an Indian pony, was on hand to be traded for Eagle, the frontiersman's steed. We wonder if the horses didn't steal the show.

The horses didn't seem to mind the ox at all. Their relations were most friendly for the most part which proves that some of earth's creatures can get along without jealousies and quarrels.

INDORA'S BACK

Those that watched Indora struggle so long to heal that shoulder sore will be happy to know she's well. Now and raring to go. Sadly enough she won't be able to jump in the show.

Speaking of the horseshow, we had good news from Amelia this week. Mr. Dickinson told Jeanne that the Amelia horses would be here the 18th, to take any prizes that we don't! He also invited us to the Amelia horseshow June 8.

ALL HAIL, KING!

Yes there is a newcomer among the stablemates that is really called King. We could write an ecstatic paragraph about the way this wonderful beast will rack on and on with ease. His other gaits are so smooth, he's racing with Eagle for popularity. Watch for him on the rail and in the ring.

LINIMENT NEEDED

Have you got any potent remedies for muscles?? soreness? Any amount would be appreciated by Poddy or Martha S. Poddy made her initial journey to Longwood via horse Tuesday, and if you don't tnink she enjoyed it, ask her! And if you need a recommendation for Honey, go to Martha S. because she just loves that horse (like arsenic).

Despite muddy trails Sunday, quite a few enthusiasts hit the trail. Let's start hoping for a clear, cool day for the horseshow right now. Don't uncross your fingers until it's all over.

Remember to work on your committee with all the fervor you can command, and stay on the bit!

SOFTBALL

Does this word have a familiar ring to it—if not, it means you are lagging behind in your practices. You will need those extra hours on the field, once the games get underway. Our understanding is that the games between classes will start soon.

There will be points for the winning teams, so come out and help your team be the lucky point holders. Some of you have an idea that you have to be a professional—no indeed. You may strike out a couple of times, but you eventually will find yourself knocking the base hits, and who knows, a homer may not be far in the future. Keep on trying, in pitching, catching, batting. You will love the game.

TENNIS

Who knows tomorrow may bring snow, but today it is spring. The courts are all lined off, and ready for use. The ole' annual event in doubles still hasn't gotten started. Between showers, go out and watch a match. Follow the court rules when you play. No halters, and wear tennis shoes!

If you are a beginner, find a friend and take to the courts. Do your practice. You may knock a couple of balls over the A.A. field, or through the laundry windows, but don't get discouraged. Marbie took some time also to learn the do and do nots in tennis. Won't you try your luck?

HIKING

You will not find this sport on the calendar of athletics, but you will find it good fun. Some Saturday hit the road, and take along the gang. Head for quiet country lanes, where you can rest by a brook or beneath a cool tree. You'll enjoy your peace. Put on your hiking shoes, and take a long hike.

Westminster Group Sponsors Hay Ride

On Monday, May 13, the Westminster Fellowship will have their annual hay ride and picnic at Longwood. The wagons will leave school at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon.

According to Jane Mantiply, president of the Westminster Fellowship, all Presbyterians are invited to attend. They are also urged to watch the bulletin board for further notices.

Select New Hats For Becomingness

By HELEN WILLIAMS

The first step in choosing your new hat is to be sure it is becoming to you. Lilly Dache, one of America's most famous milliners, once remarked that when he says to you, "That's a silly hat," he means, "Darling, it does not make you as pretty as you are." Men are funny about hats, but they can tell you what becomes you—so don't mistrust their judgement. Hats shoot off in all directions, up, down or out. If your face is long and narrow you wouldn't want a high closely fitting hat but rather a well balanced round style. Leave the tall close fitting one for the round faced person. Select your hat in front of a full length mirror as it should be becoming to more than just your face.

Harmony between lines of hat and garment is also an important point in selecting a hat. Remember to balance the whole effect by the selection of the hat which is suitable to the rest of the outfit whether dressy or sporty.

There are seasons when you can't see the hat for the trimming. Hats this season are just this type: flowers, bows of wide satin and grossgrain ribbons, veils of many colors or just a band across the top of your head. You might like a sailor or a tall "stove pipe" type. The sizes vary from a small skull size to a large wide brim. One of the newest and most attractive hat ideas is the hat which does not have a crown. This is especially found in the wide brim straws and in the tall styles. They can easily be made from the scraps of a dress or crocheted.

The flower hats which are typical of spring vary all the way from a bunch of flowers and swab of veiling with a narrow band to hold it securely over one eye to substantial straws trimmed in big bunches of flowers in the center or symmetrically on each side.

The tailored hat still holds its own and appears in the latest spring colors as well as a white with trim of brown ribbon binding to blend with the brown and white spectators.

Pink, blues, greens, any pastel shade is popular and black and white are used just as much as the many colors. Plaid taffetas to match those plaid shoes are one of the newest harmony tricks. Science has contributed again with its plastics in hats to be worn with the plastic bags and shoes liked by many people this spring.

An interesting and becoming hat has a powerful influence in centering attention on the face. A hat should never, however, be so intricate in detail, so attention-compelling, that it, rather than the face, becomes the center of interest.

On Thursady night, April 30, the seniors were entertained with a coke and nab party by Miss Elizabeth Burger, class sponsor. Before the party they had senior song practice. The party was held in Senior Rec.

★ SENIOR ★ PERSONALITY ★

LILLIAN ELLIOTT

To describe Lillian's personality on paper is indeed a difficult task. However, one need know her only a short while to feel the true significance of her generous, willing, and loyal character.

Although Lillian lived at her home in town the first three years of her college life, she took such keen interest in school activities from the very beginning that we immediately felt her to be a definite asset to S. T. C. During her freshman and sophomore years she worked on the Rotunda staff. In the spring quarter of her freshman year she was elected to serve as class secretary and has faithfully and competently carried out the duties of this office for the past three years. As head of the lighting group of the Dramatic Club, Lillian spent many hours perfecting the intricate lighting arrangements required for various plays. Another direction toward which she bent her efforts and abilities that year was the Virginian staff. Being photographic editor took up even more of her already crowded hours. Hockey and basketball are listed among her favorite sports. That she has excelled in these is shown by the fact that she has been on the class hockey team and the varsity basketball team. It was also during her junior year that Lillian was tapped by Alpha Kappa Gamma, honorary leadership fraternity.

This year we have come to know and to love Lillian even better than before, for she has lived in the building with us. We have seen her hard at work at the difficult and trying task of editing The Virginian, and we have heard her tell of many "crowning blows" (her favorite expression). The fact that she was selected as one of the 12 seniors at Farmville to be represented in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities is further proof of her abilities.

The many characteristics of Lillian which we will never forget are far too numerous to mention here. One of the most unforgettable of these, however, is her consideration for and ever present desire to help others

Dance Orchestra

Pctured above are the Vagabonds from Lynchburg who will furnish the music for the Pan-Hellenic dance which will be held Saturday night in the college gymnasium.

VagabondsSetTempoSaturday For Gala Pan-Hellenic Dance

No Break Dances Will Be Featured

Decorations for the Pan-Hellenic dance which will take place in the gymnasium Saturday, May 18, at 8:30 o'clock will be developed along the lines of the various sorority colors. The Vagabonds of Lynchburg will provide the music for this, one of S. T. C.'s annual closed dances.

A special feature of this dance each year are the no-break dances for each sorority. This year "Don't Forget Tonight, Tomorrow" will be played for Pi Kappa Sigma; "I'm Glad I Waited For You," Alpha Sigma Tau; "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes," Theta Elgma Upsilon; "Day By Day," Gamma Theta; "Always," Phi Zeta Sigma; and "Stardust", Mu Omega. Sigma Sigma Sigma and Alpha Sigma Alpha numbers have not been announced yet.

The receiving line will be composed of Miss Ruth Gleaves, Pan-Hellenic adviser; Dean Smith, Dr. J. L. Jarman, Evelyn Grizzard, out going president; and the different sorority advisers. They are Sigma Sigma Sigma, Miss Pauline Camper; Alpha Sigma Alpha, Miss Virginia Wall; Pi Kappa Sigma, Miss Olive T. Iler; Alpha Sigma Tau, Miss Virginia Bedford; Theta Sigma Upsilon, Miss Lucille Jennings; Gamma Theta, Miss Florence Stubbs; Mu Omega, Miss Leola Wheeler; and Phi Zeta Sigma, Miss Winnie Hiner.

Chaperoning the dance will be Dr. and Mrs. Gordon Moss; Mrs. Zita Hanford, Dr. and Mrs. Francis Simkins, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Davisson, Mrs. Katherine Tabb, Mrs. Eva Warren, Mrs. Mabel McCoy, and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Graham.

Raymond H. French, S. L. Graham, C. G. Moss, and T. A. McCorkle will be at the door.

Virginia Shackelford and Betty Adams will serve as general chairmen of the dance. Working on committees under them are music, Evelyn Grizzard; floor, Dot Overstreet; invitations, Betty Brothers; publicity, Virginia Treakle; decorations, Anna Headlee and Kitty Maddox and tickets, Lucy Bowling.

Y Delgates Attend Area Conference

Five delegates from S. T. C. attended the Inter-racial Area Conference of Colleges in South-Eastern Virginia which met at the First Baptist Church in Richmond on Saturday, May 12. Those attending the conference were Martha Russel East, president of the Y. W. C. A.; Patsy Dale, vice-president; and Evelyn Patterson, Laura Jean Comerford, and Miss Grace Moran.

At this all day meeting, various committees and groups met to discuss plans and problems of the Y. W. C. A. According to Martha Russel East, it was a very interesting and inspirational meeting.

Shiflet Will Head Campus Red Cross

Edgerton to Serve As Vice-Head

Christine Shiflet, junior of Churchville, was elected head of the campus Red Cross unit at a recent student body meeting. Christine has been active in Red Cross work during the time she has been at S. T. C. She is replacing Agnes Stokes, senior from Kenbridge.

Also elected were vice-president, Jean Edgerton, sophomore from Goldsboro, N. C.,; and secretary-treasurer, Sarah Greene, sophomore from Richmond.

The outgoing officers are president, Agnes Stokes; vice-president Margie Hewlett; and secretary-treasurer, Betty Adams.

Spindler To Head French Circle For Coming Year

Betty Spindler, freshman from Blackstone, was recently elected president of the French Circle to succeed Margaret Harvie, senior from Richmond.

Other officers elected are vice president Ellen McMullan, sophomore from Culpepper; secretary, Sara Mangum, freshman from Durham, N. C.; treasurer, Janie

AKC Elects Ellett New President

East, Headlee, Lohr Also Named Officers

New officers of Alpha Kappa Gamma were elected at a meeting held recently. Margaret Ellett, Jennings Ordinary, was elected president to succeed Anne Martin, Suffolk.

Margaret is president of the senior class, a member of Beorc Eh Thorn, and the Spanish Club.

Succeeding Shirley Cruser as vice president is Martha Russell East of South Boston, while Anna Headlee, Norfolk, will succeed Virginia Treakle as secretary. Margaret Lohr, Brightwood, was elected treasurer to succeed Eleanor Bisese.

Alpha Kappa Gamma, national honor society for leadership, was organized in 1928. Alpha Delta Phi, organized in 1925, became the Joan circle of Alpha Kappa Gamma and was one of the charter members of the organization.

Elementary School Exhibits Art Work

Farmville Elementary school's annual art exhibit will be shown this week, May 13 through May 17. It will consist of the work done by the children in their art classes under the direction of Mrs. Janice Lemen and is sponsored by the Parent-Teachers Association.

The exhibit will include work in water color, tempera, chalk, cut and torn paper, and construction and clay work. Some projects represent the correlation of art with subject matter courses. Still other problems have been devoted to design and drawing for accuracy as well as spontaniety.

No effort is made in the elementary art program to attain perfection of results. Rather, all children are guided in the use of art as a means of enjoyment and creative self-expression. This exhibit represents the development of such a program from kindergarten through sixth grade.

The PTA invites guests to attend any time during school hours or from 7 until 9 o'clock Friday night, May 17.

Students Fortify With Food Night Before Exams Begin

By MARGARET WILSON

The time has come, the calendar says, to talk of many things. For example, what happens when a proton (positively charged) meets a neutron (some kind of charged) and why were the Stuarts all the time losing things — like their heads, and what's a double-negative-adjective - subject - complement, and why wasn't Julius Caesar strangled in infancy? The time has come, in a word, to worry. The day of reckoning is upon us, and since, at this late date there isn't much else we can do about it, we can sure enough ease our overworked consciences by staying awake nights and worrying about it. Old hands report that this is a sure-fire method for avoiding last minute work, and anything along that order is worth a trial.

However, in view of the sad fact that there are among us a few who don't even know enough to worry because they don't know more (confusing, isn't it), we have devoted some little time and research to finding a solution to their problem. The most workable answer which has been evolved seems to be this. Keep one, if possible two, eyes open in class for the last two or three weeks. Make an effort to assimilate some small portion of what is being said, Become familiar with those terms which you observe are repeated say five or six times in one hour. Those you will find, usually appear on the front black-board come the exam. Next, learn to spell 'em, or you are likely to find yourself quoted in one of those "Classroom Boner" collections including such games as "There sat Henry VIII with a yawning abess on his knee." Also considered important by those who profess to know is the so-called intelligent expression. This can be rehearsed before a mirror, but must be carefully perfected before being used. It is more difficult to master than is generally supposed.

Last, of course, is the night before. It is well to fortify oneself with cokes,cheese, sandwiches such notes as are available, and a room mate who knows all the answers—this last being most important. If the brown-out is sill in effect, a flash-light might be useful. Conduct yourselves as you see fit, during these last weeks, but, for goodness sakes don't take this advice to heart!

Symposium Honors Retiring Head

Leading Educators Speak at Program

A symposium commemorating the contributions of Dr. Joseph Leonard Jarman, retiring president of State Teachers College, to the advancement of education and public welfare from 1902 to 1946 will be held in the college auditorium Thursday night, May 23, at 8 o'clock. This program will follow a reception and dinner honoring the retiring members of the administration and faculty.

Dr. J. P. Wynne, director of teacher education and head of the department of education and philosophy at S. T. C. will preside over the symposium.

Also speaking will be the Hon. Robert K. Brock, state senator; Dr. John Manahan, president of the Association of Virginia Colleges and dean of the Department of Education at the University of Virginia; Mr. Henry G. Ellis, executive secretary of the Virginia Education Association; Dr. Early L. Fox, Vaughan professor of history and political science, Randolph-Macon College; Blake T. Newton, chairman of the State Board of Education and superintendent of Richmond and Westmoreland County Schools; Dr. J. L. Blair Buck, director of Teacher Education; and Dr. Charles W. Hunt, secretary of the American Association of Teachers Colleges and president of the State Teachers College in Oneonta, New York.

APS to Announce Awards Thursday

In chapel Thursday, May 16, Alpha Phi Sigma, scholastic honor society, will award the scholarship key given each year by the Delta chapter to the student who has maintained the highest average for the longest period of time.

Three degrees of scholastic standing will be recognized by the society at this time also. High school valedictorians and salutorians are invited to enter as novices. The apprentice degree is attained by girls who have held an average of B for two consecutive quarters, and the masters degree is reached when a member makes an average of B plus for two consecutive quarters.

At the regular meeting of Alpha Phi Sigma held Tuesday night, May 14, the new officers of the society were installed. They are president, Jacqueline Bobbitt; first vice president, Mary Ann Adams; second vice president, Sarah Lee Rawles; corresponding secretary, Ann Owen; recording secretary, Ann East; treasurer, Betty Ree Pairet; and reporter, Connie Newman.

6 Students Bid To Pi Gamma Mu In Chapel May 9

Six girls were recognized by Pi Gamma Mu in chapel Thursday, May 9. They were Dorothy Blair, Chatham; Shirley Cruser, Norfolk; Anna Headlee, Norfolk; Martha Frances Morrison, Collierstown; Anne Pullen, Danville; and Connie Ozlin, Chase City.

Pi Gamma Mu is a national social science honor society. The purpose of this society is to further the scientific study of the problems of social science. The Virginia Gamma chapter, the local organization of Pi Gamma Mu, was organized in 1927. In addition to a high standard of general scholarship required for entrance each member must show an outstanding interest in the social sciences and must carry on while a member of the society a piece of original work in some of the social sciences.

Officers of the society are pres-

Pegasus To Sponsor Horse Show Saturday

Jeanne Sauerwine, president of Pegasus, and riding instructor, who is directing the annual horse show.

Dean Smith States Light Restrictions

According to Dean Martha Smith Smith, for an indefinite period of time lights must be out every night at 10:30 o'clock. From 10 to 10:30 girls may have one light on in their rooms, and at 10:30 all lights must go out.

Dates must now leave at 9:55 every night. Seniors may go down town from 9:30 until 10 o'clock. They were formerly allowed to go from 10 until 10:30. Bedcheck will be at 10 o'clock each night in both buildings.

These light restrictions have been made at the request of the state officials to conserve electricity because of the coal strike. Bedcheck was formerly taken at 11 o'clock in both buildings, and lights had to be out at 11 for freshmen and sophomores. Up until this time, juniors and seniors had no light restrictions.

Burger, Cheatwood Will Judge Event

Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Longwood riding ring the S. T. C. riding club, Pegasus, will present the annual horse show. Jeanne Sauerwein, senior from Upper Marlboro, Md. and riding instructor, is general chairman of the show.

There will be 12 classes in the show. Classes one, three, seven, and ten will be closed to all except college students. Those classes are class one, beginners equitation; class three, junior—intermediate equitation. The other classes which will be opened to the public are class two; class four, three gaited; class five, knock down and out; class six, five gaited; class eight, jumping; class nine, pairs of riders; class eleven, old Virginia riders; and class twelve, costume.

Miss Joyce Cheatwood, riding instructor at Randolph Macon Woman's College, and Miss Elizabeth Burger, assistant professor in science here, will be the judges for the contest.

Virginia Military Institute will not participate in the horse show. Horses from Farmville and vicinity and from Amelia will take part. All riding students at the college will ride in the show.

Committee heads for the event will be Margaret Lohr, general assistant to Jeanne Sauerwein; Betty Deuel Cock and Betty Ellis, ribbon committee; Anna Headlee and Betty Deuel Cock, prizes; Sara Youngblood and Thelma Hillier, program; fence, jumps, and parking, Virginia Anderson; food, Margaret Verell; and secretary. Dorothy Gelston.

The trophies will be donated by Farmville merchants. Admission will be 15 cents.

Interested Spectators Witness Western Trek Dramatization

The day was beautiful, with only slight signs of rain. It seemed that everybody was going to Longwood on this particular afternoon. There were rumors that a western caravan would pass through that vicinity about 4:30. Of course no one wanted to miss this spectacular sight. We joined the crowd and soon found a seat on the grassy hillside among the poison ivy and bugs.

In a few minutes the dell was swarming with Indians in brightly colored costumes, who performed a ceremonial dance to the sun. Upon their departure a lone scout appeared, followed by his comrades who skillfully handled their bows and arrows and cunningly placed their traps. We were anxious to know what would happen when the Indians and white men met and soon found out when they gathered for a Pow Wow. The bickering and confusion compared with a bargain sale on Saturday as horses, dogs and corn liquor were exchanged.

The trail having been broken more men followed to stake their claims. The years that followed were hard, particularly for the women. Their sadness and despair, effectively expressed, made us realize their hardships, and we sympathized with the brave pioneer women.

Happier times came though. Surveyors appeared to platt the site and from over the hill the long caravan trudged. Every kind of burden bearing animal and conveyance passed by our wondering eyes. Many trudged wearily on foot, singing to hasten the miles. Even a little calf poked along at the end of the procession.

The people settled and the little town boomed. One night we dropped in at the bar. The lawless and reckless people were having a gay ole time whistling at the girls and applauding the dancers, when the parson walked in swinging his six-shooter and carrying his Bible. His accusing words were disputed only once. When they saw he meant business, they heeded his words and "passsed the hat."

A less rowdy gathering was the Singin' School. It was good to hear the old songs sung again by such enthusiastic voices.

Something seemed to tell us that the climax was about to arrive. Neighbors came in from miles around to help "run up" the new cabin. In a moment the ladies of the court came up a shady path and one by one gracefully circled the dell. They formed a semi-circle to await the coming of the bride and her cousin. Each girl seemed more beautiful than the other. After an interval of suspense the beautiful bride and her attendant made their entrance. There were "oh's and ah's" of admiration and delight. The stately queen advanced and came to rest while her ladies brought roses to fill her

Conserve Electricity

Because of unfortunate circumstances we have been asked to conserve electricity. Our lights are now supposed to be off by 10:30 o'clock. This means only 30 minutes less light time for freshmen and sophomores, but a great deal less light time for juniors and seniors. How long these condition will last we do not know.

We use much more electricity than we need to use. We can cut down a great deal and still get our work done. It will not hurt any of us to be in bed at 10:30 every night. In fact it will be good for all of us. When our days are crowded with our many activities and with studying, we need eight and one half hours of sleep.

Many of us in the past have been so careless as to go off on a nice long visit and leave all of the lights and the radio on in our rooms. No one is using the lights, and all of that electricity, consequently the coal is going to waste. All business and amusement centers have been drastically cut in their use of electricity. It is not fair for them to suffer and for us to go on in our careless way. We must do our part to help. We will help not only ourselves, but also our community and our country.

Several girls have been thoughtless enough to try to get around this and suggest that we study by candle light. This would endanger the lives of all of the girls at school. One small candle, being used with all harmless intentions, could very easily take the lives of many of us. We must not be selfish, and put ourself first all of the time.

If we budget our time, there will be no need to try to get around lights out. There will still be a time for play and a time for study. However, when study time comes we will have to study hard and the same applies to play. It might mean one less bridge game, but this is a very little to have to give up. If ye use our time wisely, there will be no great strain on any of us.

We urge you to think about this seriously and do your part to help relieve the electricity shortage in every way you can. It is up to us to help.

Do Not Waste Food

If the American people do not respond quickly to the voluntary food conservation program of our government, millions of people will starve to death within the next few months. Those who are in charge of food distribution throughout the world have what is known as a "Starvation Timetable". For instance, they know that the famine has already begun in China, will soon begin in India, and unless immediate help is given 150,000,000 people are in danger of starvation in Europe. This does not take into account the millions of children who will start out in life handicapped by rickets and T. B.

Americans are still living "high". The average American eats a meal of 3,500 calories a day. In Europe the average meal consists of 1,500 calories. In Asia millions are trying to keep body and soul together on less than a 1,000.

We can't eat our cake and have it too. We can eat a 3,500 calorie meal by substituting plentiful foods, and thereby making essential foods available to starving people. There is a great shortage of wheat and canned milk throughout the world. And in the face of the world's greatest famine, Americans are eating 15 per cent more wheat in 1946 than in 1945, and our ice cream consumption is the greatest in our history. While we can buy "double-deckers", babies are crying for milk. It took a prominent Frenchman six weeks to find one can of milk for a child recovering from a serious attack of flu.

S.T.C. students should be proud of the fact that they have already started on a food conservation program. Our little bit, joined with what others can do, will keep millions from starving. The program is very simple, EAT LESS WHEAT BREAD. DO NOT WASTE FOOD. What we save will keep others alive. The critical time is between now and June 30.

Awaken To World Problems

Today's young people should be aware of what is happening in the world, because we will make or break our country's future. Each of us will play a part, whether as teachers or parents in our government.

There are so many things happening right now that the newspapers are filled with facts about every situation. It is our duty to see things clearly and to try to understand them. If we can't understand some things, why not have a discussion with someone else.

Most of us glance at the news, but never give it a serious thought. We can quote a few obvious facts, but we are embarrassed if anyone starts asking questions. Perhaps we feel that the news is boring, but news is exciting and it always makes a good conversation.

How can we afford to go out as teachers and not have some knowledge of world affairs? After all, we will vote in the near future and we should vote for what we feel is right.

Let's give some serious thought to world affairs and show that we are interested in what is going on in the world. Each of us can play our small part in the future, and we want to be certain that we do our part well.

HEARD AFTER

Bed Check

If you want a concoction that really brings results for a good time take a spring evening in May, a few dozen S. T. C. femme fatales, an even number of Hampden Sydney Lochinvars and add a dash of Whiffenpoo to make the moon shine seem brighter. There you have the PiKA picnic, but only in a nutshell. It takes the Pikers to teach you how to appreciate nature and aven the unhoped for rain failed to dampen or dilute the party's spirits.

The redheads kept the picnic in full swing. "Red on the Head" and Lou saw that everyone joined in the evening's entertainment!

"Ting Ling" Beal, Kemper Lorraine, Randy Trice, Fred Young and Russel Beebo came back for a reunion and to help things get back to "ole' times".

For Nellie and Bing the picnic seemed "out of this world". Remember, Nellie?

As of Saturday night Bev Peebies is the queen of practical jokes. The Oliver brothers now know how to play "Pinch Winchy".

Neal and "Rusty" and Hilda and her "unknown quantity" managed to put in a late appearance.

Believe it or not there were some who created their own excitement elsewhere. If you have never seen the Randolph Macon KA house when the sun comes up, Mary Jane can give you a vivid mental picture.

Bessie said Bob was here this past week end. You don't have to prove it to us. Just look at that toothy grin she's wearing.

Virginia Terrel, Betty Lou Hayward, and Si came back with news of the outside world. Seems like married life is still what we're all waiting for according to Si.

Senorita Ellett, Lohr, Anna, Elby and Barbara Lee took to the mountains for their week end of week ends. Have you ever roasted hot dogs at 4 A. M.? They say they've had it all now.

Minetree went home to start getting everything in readiness for June week at the Point. You have to get a head start when you have to impress Chuck's father too, huh Minnie?

Ask Kitty Parham what happen to her shoes on the hayride Monday night. What were you trying to prove, Kitty?

See Mary Helmer for a report on her trip back from Longwood, especially the episode in front of the Rotunda Monday night. Mary you should be more careful. Don't you know people get hurt that

Y News

By SUE DAVIS

The "Y" Council is really getting their plans for next year lined up. Last Saturday, May 11, Miss Moran, Martha Russell East, Patsy Dale, Evelyn Patterson and Laura Jean Comerford, attended an Inter-Racial area meeting of the colleges of Southeast Virginia, held in Richmond. Those attending enjoyed it very much. Then this afternoon the Y. W. C. A. held their annual Spring Setup Conference at which time plans were made for the coming year. The old as well as the new cabinet members attended and we are looking forward to a very successful year.

Rev. Plummen Smith, returned missionary from Africa, made a very delightful talk at Westminster Fellowship last Sunday night.

In spite of the rain it seems as if the 50 girls who went on the Baptist hayride to Willis Mountain Saturday had a wonderful time. Also, the Westminster Fellowship had their annual hayride to Longwood Monday afternoon. A wonderful time was had by the whole crowd.

Baptist girls, don't forget the Y. W. A. Methods course taught by the former B. S. U. president, Virginia Pilcher Provence, May 20 and 21, at the Student Center. Everyone is cordially invited.

Prayers will be held in the Episcopal Church this week and think for a few moments about these topics, "Patience," "Brotherhood," and "Thanks to God."

"I complained because I had no shoes—
Until I met a man who had no feet!"

Voice of the Students

Dear Editor,

We've been asked to cooperate in the drive to save electricity. When 10:30 rolls around, I say we have almost 100 per cent blackout, but what about during the day? When there is no clock to remind us to cut the lights off, do we? How about that iron that we connect up every few hours because we couldn't or wouldn't do all of it at one time? And how about the bathroom light that is sometimes left accidently burning? Girls, what do you say that we be more thoughtful? And really there's no reason at all for burning lights during the day. We can raise our shades higher and take the blotters from the transoms!

Just remember that the more we save electricity now, the more we'll have later on. No one likes to be deprived of the opportunity of electric lights, but if the people of Virginia will go on a rationing of lights for a short while, we can stir up enough sentiment in the county so that the government will do something about the coal strikes. Without this sentiment, it hesitates to use forceful measures.

If we are going to use candles or kerosene lights, we must be very careful. You should never put a candle near a curtain or leave any paper around that might catch on fire. If you insist upon using the candles, a good thing to do is to light the candle and let a little of the melted wax drip into the glass. Then place the candle in the soft wax and it will stand more firmly.

Daydreams Put Gleam in Eyes of Students

It's almost here—summer! How do we know? Many things point in that direction. Faces are beginning to take on a healthy tan; the tennis courts are full each afternoon; hockey is giving up its honored place to softball; and there are dozens of other heralds of summertime.

A little harder to detect but one of the most promising evidences of the gay old season is the gleam to be seen in many eyes. It's a far-away look that lights up just any old time and in any old place—the classroom, no exception. Many a professor has probably wondered why it is that the subject he is teaching has suddenly put an intelligent twinkle in the eyes of his students.

In just as many cases the sparkle comes from a daydream—a daydream about last summer—a lake, a picnic, a party. Is it really true that this wonderful season is almost upon again? Often the "look" is accompanied by a deep sigh of complete happiness!

Along with the inevitable last quarter has come the inevitable summer daydream.

Question of the Week

How has the brownout affected you?

Becky Williams: Thirty minutes more sleep!

Jean Moran: Oil lamps and my man, who could ask for anything more!

Violet Richie: Get too much sleep!

Josephine Black: More sleep—wonderful!!!

Mary Jane King: I'm in the dark!

Anne Ford: I love the sleep, but it causes a lot of hurrying around!

Malan Dudley: One night of movies.

Betsy Brown: Less letter writing!

"Doofy" Ramage: I can't see to eat? ?

Anne Marie Smith: I like the dark!

Martha Ann White: I have to.

Rachel Thomas: I get to bed too early!

Lucia King: It made me cut my finger.

Bobbie Graham: The question should be, "How's it going to affect those exams?

Teddie Diggs: I'm knocking my eyes out playing bridge in the hall!

Judy Rieck: I'm always getting caught with my hair half up.

Evelyn Mahanes: I had to move the vic from the middle of the floor. Somebody was always tripping over it.

Anonymous: More time to worry over not studying.

What Is Spring Fever?

Bill Balas—A listless feeling of mixed emotions.

Mac Downs—Thoughts of things that you haven't been doing all winter.

Collins—Laziness.

Hodges—When a young man's fancy turns to what a girl has been thinking all year.

S. Nininger—Quote: "No, I'm sorry I just can't help you any at all".

Bluford—Chemical composition of blood.

Art Stevens—Sap rises in a man as well as in trees.

Frank Flora—I don't know what it is, but I've got it.

Jerry Jarvis—I decline to comment.

Roscoe Werder—Excuse for not doing work.

Joe Halligan—I'm a living memorial to it.

Freshmen, Juniors Play Softball Game Thursday

Dudley, Miles, Head Teams

First softball game of the season between classes will be played on Thursday, May 16. This game between the freshmen and the juniors, will start at 3:50 p. m.

Mary Evelyn Miles will act as captain of the freshman team and Beanie Dudley will act as captain of the junior team.

On Tuesday, May 21 the sophomores will play the juniors at 3:50 p. m. Betty Minton will captain the sophomores. On Thursday, May 23 the sophomores will play the freshmen at 3:50 p. m.

Due to the lack of practices on the part of the seniors they will not have a team. This means that all of the games will be played between the freshmen, sophomores, and juniors. It has been decided that some of the senior students who got their practices in will act as umpires for the games.

Five points will be given to the color winning toward the color cup.

We hear Cathon Neal really dazzled the boys in Covington. Did you have fun, gal?

Attending an out of town fraternity party were "Corn'" Davidson and Juanita Davis. We hear "Corn" is going back his week end. Cute girl! She really must like those Washington and Lee men.

Who is that cute boy from Buckingham that Linnie Noblin has been dating?

By the way Caterine Mosteller, when is that good looking soldier coming home?

Lee Ewing had two dates here to see her Sunday night. Popular girl! But, Lee, do you really think that is fair?

From all reports Edith Pemberton must have had quite a week end. How about it, Ede?

Agnes Miliner surely was excited over that letter from Bert this week. It must have contained good news.

All in all the week end was mos' too much, maybe by next Saturday we'll all be ready again. Who said "maybe"? Ain't you' hubba boy coming to Pan Hel?

In the first round of the tourney Phyllis Watts and Frances Lee will play Sue Hundley and Nellie Smith. Betty Minton and Lois Steppe will play Mary Jane King and Beannie Dudley. Jane Burchett and Jeanne Bentley will play together in the tournament.

Receipt Written By Feature Writer For Straight A's

By BETTY SPINDLER

Of all the success stories and the treatises on how to study there is not one to our certain knowledge on "How to Make A's." Therefore, at this time, examinations being near, we feel that it might be very beneficial to pass on to you a formula perfected by an expert which until this publication was a deep secret. Do not mistake this article for a method on apple-polishing it is not that at all. It is mainly addressed to those people who do not do their best because they love knowledge but not studying to gain it. All ye who would benefit by these words take heed.

"WAY'S TO MAKE A'S"

1. "Be orginal—Relieve the teacher's boredom by casting a little new light."

2. "If you can't be original be dull and thorough. Make her wish she"d never asked you to read that book. Swamp her with facts and figures."

3. "Find out the teacher's hop-by-horse and get on behind her. If she likes Tennyson, memorize Ulysses and quote it to her on all occasions. Ask her to explain hard passages. Get stars in your eyes."

4. "In any case do (or seem to do) a little more than the routine requirements. Quotations are very impressive on exam papers, even short ones. Like "Of the War between the states," Prof. I. Q. Caution has written, 'There was much to be said on both sides.' Understand?"

With this system in mind we hope that S. T. C. will be very productive of A students on exams. Good luck to you all!

Photographs of Mars

Much valuable work has been done with the great Lick refractor in planetary observations. At the last close approach of Mars 32 drawings of the planet and about 1,500 photographs were obtained, many of these with the aid of specially dyed plates. These are of great value in interpreting the nature of the changes that are continually taking place on the surface of the planet.

LEFT LEAD

MAY KING SOL REIGN

Pegasus fans are welcoming every little ray of sunshine with open arms because nobody wants mud in their eyes on May 18. The ring will have to be dry and firm to take the pounding it will get during the horse show. The trails this week have been somewhat gooey, but we hope for drier days. There's lots of ring work to be rung (to coin a phrase so "keep on hoping for the sun to shine". If the weather is very hot, the cold drinks will be most welcome.

The cool weather Sunday morning invited several girls out that seldom had gone before. Ann T. and Squealer got along, fine, but the relations were not quite so friendly when Kitty W. mounted him later. Failing off a horse does have its compensations, now doesn't it, Kitty? Particularly if there's a dashing Cassanova to pick you up the moment you hit the ground. Would that more accidents would end that way!

PRACTICE AND PROGRESS

Rainy weather is giving those that would like to practice a hard time, but they carry on somehow. Jeanne has been working with Mr. Padgett's colt, who promises to make a good showing. King needs a little more working on to accustom him to the ring. As a whole the showing is shaping up well.

If the prizes were shown, you'd all want to win first in every single class. for the merchants have been most generous with their prize donations. They are worth working for, and you will be proud of them, as well as the ribbons.

A STITCH IN TIME

Here are some pointers that experienced riders should review, and beginners remember forever. They are particularly applicable to the trail rides we have in and around Farmville.

Always warm up slowly. Never continue in the same gait too long, change from one to the other to rest both horse and rider.

Let your horse plck his way in rough places. Keep your weight well forward both up and down steep inclines. You free your horses hind quarters by so doing, put the weight where it is easiest for him to carry it, and in case of downhill travel, make it easier for him to dig in his toes.

Don't trot or canter on hard pavements. This is one important rule we are prone to ignore.

If your horse goes lame, get off and investigate the cause at once. If a stone is wedged tightly between the frog and shoe, you will probably be able to knock it loose with another stone. if a shoe comes half off, pull it the rest of the way. The easiest way is to step on the protruding part and have the horse move forward.

If two horses start fighting with their heels, swing their heads together.

That's enough to absorb these facts at once, and if you do absorb these facts well your trail ride will be more pleasant.

Until we see you at the horse show, stay on the bit!

May Offers Picnics With Insects, Rain

May was made for picnics. And bugs and ants and poison oak were also made for picnics, but who said anything about rain being conducive to a good time? Everyone breathed a sigh of relief when 'April Showers" were over thinking that the organizations could start givin those wonderful picnics that spring naturally means but no, ole man weather still had some rain clouds left over from last month that he just had to get rid of. Rain does wet a lot of things—hair, clothes, food, etc., but never let it be said that it ever dampens the spirit when everyone is having a good time. Just ask any girl who went on the PiKA picnic and she'll immediately tell you how much rain adds to such an outing (?).

The church organizations have started on their round of entertainment, The B. S. U. at Willis' Mountain complete with poison oak rain and fun; and the Westminister Fellowship hayride—with real hay—to Longmood, done up to the nth. degree from softball and badminton to cokes and potato salad. There's still the Wesley Foundation picnic at that wonderful place, Bear Creek Lake, to be looked formard to, and the Spanish and French Clubs are planning their share in the revelry.

"When a young man's fancy turns to what a girl has been thinking all year" (a man said that so don't blame us for the paraphrase) it usually means that some long-suffering girl gets an invitation to one of those famous "frat" picnics. Last week end the Pikers were host to a large crowd who took traffic tickets for being in a hurry to get there, and an hour of rain in its stride, and had a hilarious time; moreover, according to our friend "The Tiger" (which is the only way we can get anything out of what goes on in that near-but-oh-so-far institution), three fraternities are pooling their resources to give "a big one" at Bear Creek. Take a tip, girls, and be on your sweetest for the next week—the big lug probably needs a dressing down, but you'd better save it awhile, if you'd be among those leaving here May 25.

Now the question arises—how is one going to get in on all the fun, conserve electricity by cutting out lights early and still study for those big black days that loom ahead? You answer it, sister. Eversharp pays 64 dollars, but "make hay while the sun shines" is a good maxim either way you interpret it!

On the Ball

Now is the time for the minor sports to be played off on campus. If you have seen the A. A. bulletin board lately, you will see the unique poster for softball. Next question in line, have you gotten in your practices? That is the one requirement you will need to play in the class games. The games are scheduled for May 15. Why not come down to the field and watch the games, if you are not participating?

TENNIS

Round one of the annual doubles tennis tournament has been played. These games will prove interesting for those who enjoy watching from the side lines. Come out and pull for your teams. Good spectators help make good games. You will follow the players around the courts, and have your fingers crossed on their service shots, or close net shots that drop over, or you'll watch a smash shot down the ailey. Some red and white or green and white will try their luck at lobs. Come on down and watch all games.

SWIMMING

Splash! Have you been down to the pool lately to watch or swim during recreational swimming hour? Put on your tank suit and hit the water. This hour is a good time to practice your strokes and you should take advantage of the hours.

Until next week, we'll see you on the A. A. field cheering your team to victory.

Since there is only approximately three more weeks of school, many of you should wander down to the vicinity of the swimming pool and work that swimming test off. If you can swim at all, try the test because it is necessary to pass it before your junior year or take swimming 210.

HORSE SHOW

STC's annual horse show will take piace in the ring at Longwood this Saturday afternoon. The girls have always displayed excellent riding and horsemanship and those who don't ride enjoy spectating. Hike out and take it in.

JUNIOR ORIGINALS

Evening Dresses Typed for Spring

By HELEN WILLIAMS

Pan-Hel dance will be an exciting occasion, but the first necessity is an evening dress that you will enjoy wearing and others will enjoy seeing.

This year spring is really spring in fashion of evening dresses as well as others. Necklines are lower, off shoulder, waists slim-hugging and skirts large and swirling as before the war. You'll love the flattery and thrill in colors which are gay and bright.

Crisp as a lettuce leaf, cool as a soda, gay and light as a balloon —Yes! You guessed it, the ever famous for summer, a cotton evening dress. Just the thing for a crowded dance floor as it can be easily laundered and made to look like new again. Girls love the off shoulder neckline with a wide ruffle to top it off, also one at the bottom of the swirling skirt. Try a gingham, pique, chambray or print. They are tops on the fashion hits for the summer.

Perhaps you might like a taffeta better. The rustling will blend beautifully with the music. They are cute and attractive with a checked or plaid skirt with a plain colored rayon jersey bodice.

If you are the sophisticated type you are just the one to wear a sleek rayon jersey. High necks, capped sleeves, tight fitted waist with a wide belt, and a straight skirt (sometimes a slash front). This is the style found mostly in a material of this kind.

Surely you will be able to find your type of material in a stripe, polka dot, plaid or even large flowered designs. All are popular for your spring and summer evening dress.

Davidson to Speak In Chapel Tuesday

Reverend John Davidson of Staunton will speak to the student body in chapel Tuesday, May 21. He will also preach at the Methodist Church Sunday morning and each night through Friday at 8 o'clock.

The Reverend Davidson's topic for Sunday morning will be "Is Your Faith Enough." Sunday night he will speak on "Christianity Credentials". The entire student body is invited to attend each of the services.

Officers of Wesley Foundation are president, Charlotte Grizzard; vice-president, Katherine Rainey; secretary, Louise Harrell; and treasurer, Elizabeth Watts.

Methodists to Have Fish Fry Friday

Wesley Foundation will sponsor a fish fry for all Methodist students Friday, May 17, at 4 o'clock at Bear Creek Lake, according to an announcement made by Charlotte Grizzard, recently elected president of the group.

All girls that are planning to go must sign on the bulletin board across from the post office.

Saintly Barrister

The Cathedral of Treguier, France, was presented with a stained glass window on May 19, 1936, by the legal profession of the United States in honor of St. Ives who is buried in this church. He is the patron saint of lawyers who was canonized in the 14th century because he was "a lawyer and not a thief, a marvel to the people."

Indian Cobras

Although Indian cobras kill several thousand people a year, the natives of India often regard cobras with so much superstitious reverence that no attempt is made to destroy the snakes.

★ SENIOR ★ PERSONALITY ★

FRANCES LEE

The epitome of good sportsmanship, not only on the Athletic field but in her everyday contacts as well, Frances has made the year of 1945-46 a valuable one for the A. A. She has faithfully served and lead the council through one of its most successful years. Her efforts have not been confined to only one phase of college work, for her unlimited abilities have led her into many other fields. She was elected president of the freshman class and was a member of the Freshman Commission. During her sophomore year she became a member of the A. A. Council, was president of the sophomore commission and was elected to Student Standards. A true leader, Frances was recognized by A. K. G. her junior year and was chairman of the circus this year. She has been chairman of the college calendar for two years and was elected president of the A. A. her senior year. She is the only girl who has been on the May Court for four years, and she was an attendant on Mardi Gras court her freshman year.

Noted for her interest in others and her charming personality, Frances is certainly an "ideal Farmville girl." Her main interests are business education and the "AA", but with all that she still takes time out nightly to write to that Stoneburner boy who seems to spend most of his time in the Pacific. As to her favorite sports, tennis takes the lead with swimming next. She surely excels in both of them.

Her winning smile and friendly words, have won the hearts of all who meet and know her. We can truthfully say, that Farmville is a better place for her having been here.

Dean Entertains At Longwood

Dean Smith and Miss Alpha Lee Garnett gave a picnic at Longwood Thursday evening, May 9, from 5 to 7 p. m. for the Student Government, Y. W. C. A., A. A. and House Council presidents and officers. The Senior Class officers and the editors of the Rotunda, Virginian, and Colonnade were invited also.

Only Distant Howls Break Silent Night

It's 10:30 and all's quiet. Only the croaks of the frogs in the distance and an occasional howl of a lonely cat are to be heard.

Let's follow one of these lonely cats. Poor lil' grey thing is pitty pattin' around the silent halls of S. T. C. with a very bewildered look on his furry face.

"Purrowwwww" (which translated means) "I wonder where everybody is? What happened to that long line of screaming girls that forms every night at 10:00? Think I'll browse over to the building and see if anything's doing over there."

Ah, yes. This sudden stillness is very puzzling to our feline friends. After all, they've never heard of a coal shortage.

GT's Celebrate At Longwood

Gamma Theta celebrated its thirty fifth anniversary with a reunion at Longwood, Saturday, May 11. The members and returning alumnae were entertained at a banquet and the invited guest included Dr. J. L. Jarman, Dean Martha Smith Smith, Miss Ruth Gleaves and Miss Grace Mix. The members spent the night in the cabin.

basket. The beautiful bouquet was presented to Dr. Jarman as a token of our love.

To add glamour to the occasion, the dandies strode out to claim their ladies and all joined in the grand march. As a climax to the house warmin' the jolly caller came dashing out to call his square dances. The musicians gave their best and the dancers "dosey doed" and "double trotted" 'til they had to flop.

After the finale we were abruptly brought back to the twentieth century by the milling crowds. Our pioneer dream was over. S. T. C. May Day was a huge success. We are proud of our girls and faculty for working so hard to present "The Plainsman."

Women in Aviation

Women are not new to aviation or aviation to women. Napoleon had a woman minister of air, Madame Marie Blanchard, when there was much experimentation going on with balloons. A woman who flew a balloon seven months before the Wright brothers' airplane flight in 1903, lives in New York today. She's Mrs. Henry Breckinridge, the former Aida de Acosta, who went aloft near Paris.

Rotunda Rated First Class Paper In Annual Contest

Critics Commend Editing, Writing

The Rotunda has been rated First Class, Excellent by the Associated Collegiate Press according to an announcement received this week by Virginia Treakle, editor of the paper for 1945 and 1946. Those papers that were judged were those issued from January through March.

The paper was judged on news values and sources; news writing and editing; headlines, typography, and makeup; and department pages and special features. The total number of points received was 870. The paper was rated First Class, Excellent for the papers issued during the fall quarter, also.

Associated Collegiate Press service provides an agency by which staffs may be aided in giving their schools a significant publication, and to help the staffs in the solution of their problems. The system of rating strives to create within the school a year-to-year effort to improve the quality of the school publications.

Under news values and sources the paper was rated excellent on originality with special comment on good faculty interviews. All phases of news writing and editing were graded excellent. The judges also rated headlines, typography, and front page make up as excellent.

Heads of the staff which published the papers that were judged in this critical service are Virginia Treakle, editor-in-chief; Shirley Slaughter, managing editor; and Ruth Brooks Soyars, business manager.

Senior Chapel Set For 11 A. M. Friday

Senior Chapel which will be held Friday, May 25, will begin by the seniors marching in to the auditorium to the Alma Mater. The Reverend Philip A. Roberts, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, will speak to the graduates.

Immediately following his address, the seniors will sing their songs, Dr. J. L. Jarman will sing "Keep on Hoping." A brief farewell speech will be given by Eleanor Bisese, class president with Margaret Ellett, junior class president, responding.

Margaret Ellett will announce the name of the member of the senior class who will be honorary member of next year's senior class. Whoever is elected will return to assist the senior class president with the figure at the senior dance next year.

The program will be brought to a close by the marching out of the seniors to Red and White. They will form an arch and the juniors will march under the arch to the Alma Mater.

Choral Groups Give Program of Music at Episcopal Church

Special music was furnished by the Choral Club and the Intermediate and Junior A'capella groups at the morning service of the Episcopal church Sunday, May 19. Alfred H. Strick, professor of Music, directed.

Elaine Holder sang "I Come to Thee", Roma; Jean Button sang "The Twenty-Third Psalm", Mollotte; Martha Ellen Jones sang "My Task", Ashford; and Esther Shevick sang "The Lord's Prayer", Mallotte.

The Choral Club sang "Holy, Holy, Holy", "Faith of Our Fathers", "O Master, Let Me Walk", and "A Mighty Fortress". The Intermediate A'capella sang "Ave Maria", Schubert; and the Junior A'capella sang "God So Loved the World", Stainer.

Officers of the Choral Club are president Mary Ellen Hoge; secretary, Betty Ellis, and treasurer, Carolyn Booth.

Myers New Head Of Cotillion Club

Officers Elected At Meeting May 21

Barbara Lee Myers, junior from Danville, was elected president of the Cotillion Club at a meeting held last night, May 21, in the small auditorium. She will succeed Anne Summers, Hampden-Sydney.

Jane Johnson, junior from Stuart was elected secretary-treasurer to succeed Nancy Pitts, Norfolk. Doris Rose Ramsey, junior from Petersburg, will succeed Peggy T. Ross, Onley, as business manager. The new figure leader will be Nancy Whitehead, junior from Richmond. She will succeed Nancy Pitts, Norfolk, in this position.

Barbara Lee Myers was recently appointed business manager of the Colonnade and before her appointment to this position served as business assistant on the magazine staff.

The Cotillion Club is an organization with a membership of 250 students whose primary aim is the promotion of good dancing. The club sponsors two major dances each year, one in the fall and one in the spring.

The club re-elected M. Boyd Coyner, head of the psycology department, as adviser for the coming year.

Summer Session To Begin June 17

S. M. Holton, Jr., director of personel has announced that the summer quarter will begin June 17 and end August 24. The first term begins June 17 and ends July 20. Second term will begin July 22 and end August 24.

The courses in instruction will be the same as those given in previous years, with the exception of two courses. A course in workshop conservation will be taught during two weeks in August. Raymond H. French and A. L. Wingo will be in charge of this workshop. Only those who have been recommended by their division superintendent will be able to take this course.

In the art department there will be two teachers instructing the first part of the summer. These teachers are Miss Virginia Bedford and Mrs. Janie Lemen.

Enrollment is expected to be approximately the same as it has been for the past several summers.

Students from Hampden-Sydney College will attend the track bright. "Here's mud in your eye" was a literal saying though it wasn't made in the slang meaning — anyone who dared to lean over the fence had to watch out when a horse passed because the flying hoofs really threw up the mud.

King Mud may have discouraged some of the riders from entering the jumping class but Jeanne on "Indora" and Betty Ellis on "Pony" took the jumps in the finest of style to finish second and third respectively. The show might have gone off a little better if the ring had been firm enough to let the horses show off to full advantage; however, it can't be denied by anyone that it was a success, and ask anyone who rode and they'll tell you that they had a grand time.

Congratulations to Pegasus for putting on such a good show, orchids to the winners, three cheers for all who rode, love and kisses to the judges, extra corn and a lump of sugar to the horses, and last but not least NUTZ to the weather man!! It was a grand show, really and truly!

'Here's Mud In Your Eye' Becomes Horse Show Slogan

"Rain, rain, go away and come again some other day" was the theme song of the Horse Show to no avail. The weather man was bent on raining the crowd out but didn't succeed until he sent his "donder and blitzen" to scare the brave souls in. Several of the classes were ridden in the sprinkle but only the costume class was entirely rained out.

The show, in spite of the weather, was really one after a horse-lover's heart and there were some beauties in the competition. Our own Eagle and King, Spud, Honey, Squealer and the ever popular and versatile Pony, did their showing off and took ribbons. Perhaps it is stealing "Pegasus" thunder to say something here about Red Fox, but it was a sad moment when he was disqualified by his lameness. Needless to say he's a favorite at the stable and almost any of the girls is willing to forego some of the rougher paces just to get to ride him.

Every cloud has its lining tho', and the beaming faces of the winners plus the smiling crowd when an S. T. C. rider took prizes made

Seniors to Have Class Day June 1

Daisy Chain Follows Auditorium Program

Class day exercises will be held June 1 in the college auditorium at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, according to an announcement by Eleanor Bisese, president of the senior class.

The welcome will be given by Eleanor Bisese, after which the class song will be presented. Mildred Altice will give the class history. Next on the program will be presentation of the symbol of office. Betty Adams will be in charge of presentation of gifts. After the farewell song, the seniors and their little sisters will take part in the daisy chain which will be presented on the campus lawn.

The Baccalaureate sermon will be preached by Reverend Wade H. Bryant, pastor of First Baptist Church, Roanoke June 2, at 8 o'clock in the auditorium.

Dr. John L. Manahan will deliver the commencement address on June 3 at 10 o'clock in the morning. The valedictory will be given by Carolyn Bobbitt. Virginia Treakle will make the salutatory address.

Final Colonnade Honors President

New Staff Edits College Magazine

Final issue of the Colonnade will appear sometmes next week according to Margaret Wilson, new editor-in-chief of the college magazine.

This issue will be dedicated to Dr. Joseph L. Jarman, retiring president of the college. Along with the dedication there will appear a message from Dr. Jarman.

As a special feature there will be several articles in the magazine by the alumnae. Betty Deuel Cock senior from Hampton, has written a history of the school publications which will appear at this time. Carolyn Bobbitt, South Hill and Virginia Treakle, Farmville have written articles on their four years in college and what their hopes for the future are. Carolyn and Virginia are top honor graduates in this year's graduating class.

The poem which won second place in the annual poetry contest sponsored by the Colonnade will be published at this time. The poem by Anne Mottley, sophomore from Danville, is entitled "Night". There will be short stories by Betty Deuel Cock, Anne Willis, and Naomi Piercy.

This issue of the Colonnade will be the first to be published under the new staff. Margaret Wilson, junior from Washington, is editor-in-chief and Barbara Lee Myers, junior from Danville, is business manager.

Methodist Minister Speaks in Chapel

Reverend John H. Davidson, pastor of the Central Church Staunton, spoke in chapel yesterday morning, May 21. He is speaking each night this week at the Methodist Church.

Mr. Davidson's topic was "The Art of Living". He told the student body of the letter that Paul wrote to his friends in which he said, "I have learned to be content wherever I am". He reminded the students that Jesus learned that he must find the valuable things in life and pay for them.

The speaker went on to say that we learn from observation and from experiences. Those who have attained most in life are not necessarily those who have the greatest endowments.

He concluded by saying that if you want to have faith, practice faith until it becomes a reality to you.

Faculty, Family, Educators Invited

Retiring Professor Will Be Honored

As part of a program planned to commemorate the contributions of Dr. Joseph Leonard Jarman, retiring president of State Teachers College, Farmville, to the advancement of education and public welfare, a formal dinner will be held Thursday, May 23 at 6 o'clock in the main recreation hall. At this time, the four other retiring members of the faculty and administration, Miss Willie London, Miss Lila London, Miss Ida Penny, and Miss Minnie Rice, will also be honored.

This banquet is being given by the faculty, administration, and home department and all those formerly connected with State Teachers College, Dr. Jarman's family, the State Board of Education, and Governor William Tuck have been invited, although not all will be able to attend James M. Grainger, head of the English department will be toast master for the occasion.

Following the banquet, a symposium will be held in the college auditorium at 8 o'clock with Dr. J. P. Wynne, director of teacher education and head of the department of education and philosophy presiding.

Taking part on this program will be the honorable Robert K. Brock, state senator, who will speak on "Development of the Civic Educational, and Religious Life of the Community"; Dr. John L. Manahan, president of the Association of Virginia Colleges and dean of the department of education at the University of Virginia will speak on "Cooperation of Virginia Colleges"; Henry C. Ellis, executive secretary of the Virginia Education Association will deal with the "Activities of the Virginia Education Association"; and Dr. Early L. Fox, Vaughan professor of history and political science at Randolph-Macon College will talk on "Activities of the Co-operative Education Association".

Three Cheers Given For Red and White

This week another color cup was awarded to the sister classes winning the most athletic meets during this year. Our congratulations go to Red and White, the winning team. Congratulations are in order for Green and White also for they, too, showed good sportsmanship.

Another clash between the classes has ended. The battle will begin early next fall with a new class to join in the fun. During the year each team has fought while the game was going on; when the final whistle blew the fight was over, the teams shook hands, the winners were congratulated by the losers, and we were best friends again. Our race each year to put the colors on the cup has been a clean one. We have had the true Farmville spirit in our annual contest.

We have pulled hard for our class all through the year and remained true to our side. When the time came for us to pull together we proved that we had as much spirit in body as we did when we were across the field from each other yelling back and forth. Not only is our class spirit outstanding but also our school spirit.

Congratulations go especially to those girls who have entered into these games. They showed fair play on the hockey field, on the basketball court, on the tennis court, and on the softball field. We are proud that we can have such a fair, clean contest full of fun as the color cup clash.

Not to be forgotten are the cheering spectators for they, too, did their part. They did a fine job, and could always be counted on when their team was in a pinch to back them up with a good yell. Sometimes it looked as if the cheerleaders and the cheerers worked as hard as those on the field. They wouldn't give up. They never lost faith in their team no matter what the odds were.

Congratulations to the color cup winners of 1946.

Review But Don't Cram For Final Examinations

Once more we draw near to the end of the quarter, and that means examinations. The purpose of examinations is to reorganize the material covered in that quarter and, of course, they help determine the grade for the quarter.

This is the time that we should work the hardest. But what we want to say here is that there is no point in cramming. Cramming usually results in confusion when the examination begins.

Examinations are of more benefit to the student than to the teacher. The teacher has other material to grade the student on. The student should consider examinations not a drudge but a chance to show what they can do.

One thing we must remember during exams is to be honest. By copying someone's paper, we harm only ourselves. Then too, it isn't fair to put our name to another person's work. We all signed the honor code, let's remember that especially during exams.

We want to be considerate of our fellow students during exam week by being quiet. Just because we don't have an exam one day doesn't mean that another person doesn't. Cooperate with the hall presidents by helping to keep the halls quiet so that students will not be interrupted. It is most disconcerting to have any loud noise during study hour.

For many students, it will be their last college exams. For others, it will be their first. Regardless of whether it's the first or last, let's do our best on exams.

Examinations have many affects on students. Some face them with nonchalance saying that what they haven't learned in class, they can't learn now. Others cram the night before the exam in hope that they can learn all they missed when they slept through or cut a class. Some face them with fear and dread. Really, we shouldn't feel that exams are bad and that there is no sense in having them. We should be able to face them confident that we will do better than usual.

A person who can take an exam with ease has really accomplished something. We should set this as our objective. Exams are the time to prove to ourselves that we are really familiar with a subject.

Examinations are only one minor obstacle in life that we have to face. We can successfully pass examinations, if we try. All that's called for is a little effort. Not especially effort put forth at the last of the quarter, but effort during the entire quarter.

Are You One of These?

Do YOU run around starting or repeating malicious gossip about other people? If you do, then take a good look at yourself.

According to our famous psychiatrists there are certain fundamental characteristics in such people either lacking in normal development, or which have become unbalanced by a consciousness of inferiority, envy, jealousy and dishonesty.

The malicious gossipmonger constantly displays his or her littleness of character and a warped viciousness of mentality. The human vultures who feed their ego by trying to destroy the integrity and reputation of others, are always in fear of losing their own. Truly it can be said that: "People who throw mud always have the dirtiest hands."

Remember when you are whispering malicious gossip about, you are describing your OWN characteristics—littleness, jealously, envy, and a warped, vicious mentality.

HEARD AFTER

Bed Check

The last dance of the school year has passed by and we are now turning our thoughts to the more serious things in life—exams! Let the fond memories of the dance linger in our minds and maybe they'll hold out until May 31.

Margie Miller was seen floating over the dance floor with her cute Navy man. That's one memory that will hold her through.

"Shuffle" and "Beanie" came back from "Tech" all aglow. Sounded like a big time to us. How 'bout it girls?

Barbara Lee sure was excited over the week end cause Ray Baby was here and after all she doesn't see him every week end, just every other week end.

You never know what's going to happen. Just ask Minnie Rose, Agnes, Betty, and Mary Virginia about their week end. It's a lu-lu.

Sue and Joe looked quite natural on the dance floor Saturday night. Glad to see old Joe back in circulation.

Edith and Peggy seem to be walking around on clouds ever since they went to V. P. I. Sounded like fun to us.

Sure was good to see all those old girls back here with us, namely Betty Mitchell, Betty Harville, and Anne Kingdon. The reason is plain to see why Kingdon is back. Just look in Shannon's.

We can't exactly find out just what it is that attracted all those people to Hampton this week end, but we think it may start with "b."

Hilda and Dot were seen scurrying about Saturday hunting for dates for the boys from home. Those cute girls already had dates. Must be nice. Grace hasn't quite settled down from that call from Harry yet. You'd better ask him to stop calling until after exams anyway.

Loving's date sure does get around these days. But isn't he the cute one. Everyone is still wondering what his hidden powers are.

Just mention the name Tom around a certain girl we know and she is off in a trance. Hmmmmm. Must be nice.

If anyone wants to know how to give a fraternity pin back just ask Nellie . . . . she still has it, and a sharp sport jacket to boot. Just think what this means, girls. Wouldn't you like a jacket, too?

The place to go on a picnic these days is Bear Creek Lake. Fun Fun! and more Fun!

Margie Davis was last seen taking off for that big time date—George Williams. We don't blame her.

Kitty Sue was all a dither over the four gardenias. But who wouldn't be. It's not every day that people get four, they usually come in two's.

Time to cut this off and pull out the books for exams. Best of luck to everyone of you and here's hoping we'll all make A's. Joke! We can dream can't we.

Prayers will be held this week in the Episcopal Church. The topic is "Steps Toward Heaven".

If Jesus had walked through our streets yesterday he would have passed the humble people, heard their sad and needy cries for help. He would have seen people in need, people troubled and perplexed, people lonely, and children starving and without homes. His presence, a comfort, would have given them new hope.

We must walk with and for Jesus, bringing good tidings of joy, strength, and courage to the down hearted. These little needs are the steps toward heaven.

"Little feet be careful
Where you take me to.
Anything for Jesus—
Only let me do."

'Don't Forget the Deadline' Cry Editors Continually

Now take the word "deadline". Some say that it is the most obnoxious word ever thought up by whoever thought up the English language. Then, there are those who look upon the deadline as a necessary evil, which must, at all costs, be met. Next we have the "oh- shucks,- it- doesn't- mean-a- thing- it's- just- something-the- editor- or-somebody-thought -up- to- be- annoying" school. Whatever the definition of the word, and regardless of the various interpretations pisced upon it by those who find themselves its slaves, the sad fact remains that it is a word which is continuously popping up when we least desire to see it. Just let us breathe a long luxurious sigh, saying in effect "that's all, by gosh! Four term papers, a few thousand pages of parallel, that other term paper, that audio-visual unit-and all-everyone-in on time. The Deadlines have been met!" Are we through? Well, anyway, we can dream for maybe fifteen, maybe twenty minutes, before we're off again. Here comes the Rotunda—"Where, where, dawgone it, where! is that story? Where's that feature? The Deadline! It must be met! (Sound of trumpets and violins while the editor gnashes her teeth in the background.) So the nice soft bed is abandoned, the movie that's so-o good is put off til the next day, and the typewriter is knocked out getting stuff like this written on it. And all because —we forgot the deadline! But that's not all! The annual still has to have attention, the Colonnade's a little behind schedule, and all is not well with the world.

There's no doubt about it—the deadline is the boss, but just try to get away from it. There is tearing of hair, and biting of fingernails, not to mention the weeping and wailing and threats of homicide, but there's fun and the most wonderful feeling in the world when everything is "in" and there are smiling faces and complete collapses followed by nightmares about typewriters and mis-spelled words.

Probably the most often and bitteriy abused word in the vocabulary of S. T. C. publications is that simple, harmless looking little eight letter affair—deadline, but without it the Rotunda, the Colonnade, and the Virginian would never, never see the light of day. So be it resolved for the umtieth time this year—The Deadline Will Be Met. We might even manage to get a few little things done a couple of hours before hand. Well, it doesn't hurt to dream!

Packing Time Rolls Around Once More

By Betty Lewis Shank

It's time to get in shape, girls! The training season for the biggest sport of the year begins today! Nope—it's not softball. Why it's packing, of course—packing to go home.

However, most difficult of all is the temperamental trunk. You have tried everything. Alas—not even the help of your roommate and your next door neighbor and her roommate were to any avail. You're desperate. You only have so long to make that train. What to do?

There is a rare book called "How to Pack" by a Mr. I. Nohow. Chapter three on closing trunks says, "—if this does not work, pretend to give up. Start doing something else. Trunks are very sensitive—this will probably have your trunk curious. Just don't pay any attention to it for awhile. Then—

But, as you can see, one must be in the peak of physical condition to perform this last feat. So get started, girls. Eat your wheaties, get at least five hours sleep every night, and do your daily exercises. Remember, the big season begins just nine days from today.!

Orange Receives White STC Blazer In Chapel Today

5 Students Receive Blue Blazer Awards

Margaret Orange, Richmond was awarned a white blazer in chapel today by Frances Lee, retiring president of the Athletic Association. The blazer was awarded for outstanding sportsmanship and participation in more than one sport.

Margaret served as vice-president of the Athletic Association this year and as president of the Monogram Club. She is a member of the varsity basketball and hockey teams, and has been active in class sports since her freshman year.

MARGARET ORANGE

Girls receiving blue blazers are Louise Blane, Alton; Lillian Elliott, Farmville; Lucille Jones, Staunton; Frances Lee. Richmond; and Phyllis Watts, Lynchburg. The blue blazers signify participation in one sport particularly.

Blazers are awarded annually to the seniors who have received points in sports and show a definite interest in the spirit of Farmville.

Frances Lee made the awards, after which Betty Parrish, newly elected president of the A. A. presented Frances Lee with her blue blazer.

Alpha Phi Sigma is a national honorary scholastic fraternity, whose purpose is to instill within each member a love for learning by association with others who have won high scholastic honors and who still strive continually to maintain them. Entrance to Alpha Phi Sigma is on the basis of scholastic standing. It is determined by college records, excepting in the case of high school valedictorians and salutorians who are automatically eligible to membership in the Novice degree upon their entrance at State Teachers College.

Any other student who, after two terms in college, has an average of at least B and who has met the requirements of the membership committee is eligible to membership in the Apprentice degree.

Officers for Alpha Phi Sigma for next year are president, Jackie Bobbitt; first vice-president, Mary Anne Adams; second vice-president, Sara Lee Rawles; recording secretary, Anne East; corresponding secretary, Ann Owen; treasurer, Betty Pairet and reporter, Connie Newman.

LEFT LEAD

PINCH-HITTER

Tally-ho! May we sneak back in on this column after having graduated from the staff completely? Seems as if the big week end B. Bibb took off and left her a little the weak side when it comes to punching keys, so with your permission, we'll take over for one more effort at enlightening you on the most recent round-stable discussion. Which is, of course, the Horse Show last Saturday.

WEATHER-WEARY

Someone asked us whether or not the storm broke up the show. Our only reply was, "Which storm?" It was a disheartened bunch of gals who saw the gray sky burst into a drown-pour just about noon on Saturday, but hope never died completely, and the skies cleared just in time! Midst mud and muck and trails that were literally running streams, horses found their way to Longwood, and the first class was in the ring at the scheduled time. When the rains came, the spectators took to their automobiles and the judges took to rain-hoods, and the riders kept right on around the track and took the ribbons as if nothing out of the ordinary was taking place. (But then, nothing out of the ordinary was!) And before long, people began poking their heads up under umbrellas and saying to the pessimists thereunder, "Pardon me, but the sun is showing" . . . and so life went on. It was the electric storm at 5:30 and not the minor showers, that finally broke up the day and caused the last class, the Costume event, to be scratched from the program. (We weren't riding seahorses!) Good sportsmanship, on the part of both spectators and participants, really made a fine show in itself, and as for the horses . . . they never uttered a word of complaint!

THE WINNERS

Congratulations are in order for each and every ribbon-winner who walked, trotted, or cantered around the track in any class. Most proud of the blue-winners was Martha Sours; most surprised of any winners was Mary Goode! Most drenched were the good sports who rode the horses back to the stables in the midst of that hardest storm. Most independent was Indora, who was led out peacefully enough, but who led the way home all by herself, and never a false turn anywhere!

Orchids go, of course to Jeanne Sauerwein and her faithful committees. Her family weren't the only ones proud of her for the success she made of Saturday. And our hearty thanks to the town merchants who contributed those super trophies, and our thanks, too, to Joyce and Miss Burger for the fine job of judging and to the local horse-owners who took such an interest in the Pegasus show, and helped make it the usual long-to-be-remembered event that it always is.

TRAIL TALK

And now look to your extra rides on the trail with nothing to think about but the beauties of nature (namely those luscious-looking mud-puddles) and the length of your stirrups, and the fact that you're lucky enough to be riding Eagle or somebody, and enjoy life from now on.

Nice to have seen you again . . . best luck next year . . . and Stay on the Bit . . .

Pegasus.

Whitehead Chosen Orchesis President

Nancy Whitehead, junior from Kecoughtan, was elected president of Orchesis for next year. She is succeeding Betty Ellis, senior from Coral Gables, Florida.

NANCY WHITEHEAD

Other officers elected were secretary, Heidi Lacy, Richmond; treasurer, Corinne Baker, Richmond; historian, Doris Rose Ramsey, Petersburg; and costume chairman, Virginia Marshall, Richmond.

Outgoing officers are president, Betty Ellis, Coral Gables, Florida; secretary, Emily Carper, Rocky Mount; treasurer, Esther Shevick, Richmond; historian, Frances Lee, Richmond; and costume chairman Nancy Whitehead, Kecoughtan.

Orchesis is an honorary dance group organized on the campus in May, 1933. The group creates its own dances and usually sponsors a dance program in the winter and helps with the May Day in the spring. Members are selected from those who have taken at least two quarters of Modern Dance.

Bridgforth to Head Monogram Club For Coming Year

Kitty Sue Bridgforth, junior from Kenbridge was elected president of the Monogram Club at a meeting held Monday night, May 20. Kitty Sue succeeds Margaret Orange, Richmond.

Other officers elected at this time are vice-president, Jeanne Bentley, sophomore from Roanoke, and secretary-treasurer, Sue Hundley, junior from Suffolk.

The new members of the club were initiated at the same meeting. They are Sue Hundley, Jeanne Bentley, and Alice Abernathy.

The five cent pieces coined during the war contained 4 cents worth of silver stiffened with a little copper and manganese.

On the Ball

Do you think this will ever take the place of "Sunny South"? It does seem that Farmville has had record rain fall these past weeks. As a result of the rain the courts have been ankle deep in water, and the A. A. field damp. If the sun does shine the games will be played as scheduled. Tennis matches will restard between the participants, and inter-class games in softball will be played. There will be more excitement for all who love softball, if you have been attending the games. Come down and watch your team play; those base hits, and home runs will lead you to cheer. If your interests are more in the line of tennis, you should plan to attend the matches that are being played. A good spectator stimulates a player to play a better tennis game. You should try to find spare time in your daily schedule to watch both tennis and softball games.

There will be some warm days ahead of us before exams get underway, and naturally your thoughts will be toward the pool. You will enjoy your cool dips and recreation hours spent in the pool.

Until next week watch the sports and be on hand for the coming games.

Horse Show Ribbon Winners Announced At Ring on Saturday

Saturday afternoon, May 18, the S. T. C. Riding Club, presented the annual horse show at Longwood. Chairman of the committee was Jeanne Sauerwein. The judges were Miss Elizabeth Burger, science instructor at S. T. C. and Miss Joyce Cheatwood, riding instructor at Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

Newton, chairman of the State Board of Education and superintendent of Richmond and Westmoreland county schools will speak on "Development of Education in Virginia" after which Dr. J. L. Blair Buck, director of teacher education of the State Department of Education will talk on "Teacher Education in Virginia".

Concluding the program, Dr. Charles W. Hunt, secretary of the American Association of Teachers Colleges and president of the State Teachers College in Oneonta, New York will deliver an address on "Thirty Years of Teacher Education in the United States".

Dr. Jarman was born in Charlottesville on November 18, 1867. He became president at Farmville, January 1902. He has held many national, state, and local offices of great prestige, during his educational career.

Dr. Jarman served on the National Council of Normal School presidents and was vice-president of this group in 1916; he was a member of the American Association of Teachers Colleges and was vice-president of this in 1926 and 1927; he was also a member of the National Education Association and served as state director for Virginia in 1902; under the State Education, he was a director in 1908, president of the Normal School system in 1908, and belonged to the Teachers Colleges Section in 1915; and he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Omicron Delta Kappa, Kappa Delta Pi, Phi Delta Kappa and Pi Gamma Mu, all outstanding honorary fraternities.

He was also prominent in state educational movements and was a teacher at Miller School from 1889-1890; professor of chemistry and physics at Emory and Henry College, president of Virginia State Teachers College at Farmville from 1902 until 1946; served on the Virginia State Board of Education from 1908 to 1916; Virginia Educational Commission from 1915 to 1919; president of the Virginia Educational Association in 1916 and was made a Life Member in November 1945; Association of Virginia Colleges serving as president from 1922 to 1926 acting president of Virginia Association of Schools and Colleges for girls in 1915 and vice-president of the Virginia Association of Schools and Colleges for Men in 1916; Virginia Cooperative Education Association; and the Virginia Historical Society.

Locally, Dr. Jarman was one of the organizers and first president of the Lions Club in 1923-1924; president of the Prince Edward Public Health Association; president of the Southside Community Hospital in 1927 to 1930; member of the official board of the Farmville Methodist Church for 44 years and chairman since 1918; head of the YMCA, Red Cross, and United War Workers drive during World War I; and head of the drive for the Woodrow Wilson Foundation following the war.

Dr. J. L. Jarman's resignation becomes effective July 1, 1946. After that time he will be replaced by Dr. Dabney S. Lancaster and will serve as "President Emeritus".

★ SENIOR ★ ★ PERSONALITY ★

JACKIE PARDEN

The few words written in this column can not begin to describe the personality in this week's Rotunda.

Since the first day Jackie entered S .T. C. she has definitely been one of its outstanding students. Her gleaming red hair and pleasant smile were among the first characteristics that attracted us. Her abilities have appeared unlimited. Jackie was elected to serve as a government representative her junior year, and she was president of Student Government her senior year, the duties of this office diligently performed. She was elected to Student Standards her sophomore year and also on the committee her senior year. Jackie was a perfect hostess for the many U. S. O. dances she attended as she served on the U. S. O. Committee her four years in college and acted as chairman her junior year. Choir has also claimed her four years and Senior A'-Cappella two years. Her services have been received by the Y. W. C. A., and she was on the cabinet her last year. She was elected to F. T. A. her third year. Alpha Kappa Gamma recognized Jackie's leadership her junior year, and she is listed among Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities for 1945-46. Being beautiful as well as wise, Jackie has been Maid of Honor on Mardi Gras Court, a member of May Court, and also Maid of Honor on May Court.

Besides working faithfully here at the college Jackie was president of the Southern Intercolligete Association of Student Government.

We shall also remember Jackie for her charm, dauntless outlook on life, and most of all her unselfishness, also willing to help and give yet never asking anything for herself. We can truly say that she will always be remembered as one of Farmville's outstanding girls.

Outside of her school activities her main interest has been "that sweet boy", Kilby, who has something to do with her getting her Mrs. in June.

Bright Swim Suits Become Prominent

By Helen Williams

Girls, it won't be long now before you can store those grassy green and "tattle-tale grey" tank suits and get a more colorful bathing suit.

Since Americans began swimming about 50 years ago there has been a rapid change in styles of bathing dress. Each year they have become a little less. The 1946 suits are more conservative and more feminine looking than they have been during the past five years. Lines are looser and more flowing, copied from the Hindu.

Let's not forget that one-piece suits are still in style even though two-piecers are seen more. The one-piece suit has been found to be the more comfortable for swimming by professional swimmers. They are also more becoming to most women.

Have you seen the latest suit that Caltex is featuring? It is a one-piece suit with a peek-a-boo-midriff. The suit is made of a wool jersey featured in plain pastel colors.

The two-piece suits are found in a large variety of styles, colors and materials. Colors are quieter, with simple stripes and plaids replacing loud prints. Prints aren't as popular as they have been in years past.

Shirring, drapes, and gathers are found on the shorts as well as on the bras. Another cute idea is the laces on each side and plain in the back.

Bloomer girl is also back again after many years behind the screen. They are much shorter than they were in grandmother's time.

Gaberdines, cotton and rayon jerseys, seersuckers, chambrays—bathing suits are made of most any kind of material now. One of the favorites is the ever glazed chintz, they are cute, made with a gathered skirt over cotton knitted pants. You may even make that yourself.

Here's hoping you will have fashionable swims until you have to drag out those tank suits again next fall.

Bryant Delivers Sermon to Seniors On June 3 at 8 p. m.

Pastor Gives Challenging Talk

"Make you the world a bit better and more beautiful because you have lived in it," was the timely and challenging motto delivered by the Rev. Wade H. Bryant, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Roanoke at the baccalaureate service held yesterday, June 3 at 8 o'clock in the college auditorium.

Mr. Bryant said this motto is carved over the mantlepiece in the study of Edward Bok in the beautiful singing tower of Florida, which Mr. Bok gave the American people as an expression of his gratitude for what America had meant to him.

"Humanity is both sick in body and in spirit, and what it needs is not a critic with a condemning tongue, but a friend with a helping hand. Self-styled saviors promised to lead the people into the promised land of power and plenty. Instead they lead into defeat and want. Now we face the task of bringing peace and order out of chaos."

Mr. Bryant said, "The task is a gigantic one, and it can be accomplished only by all of us doing our part towards making the world better." He told of hearing Dr. Frank Laubach recently. Dr. Laubach said, "I speak for the one billion three hundred million people of the world who can not speak for themselves."

"It is God's will that we not only have life but that we have it more abundant," the minister continued. "Therefore we must make the world a bit more beautiful. It may be by a smile, or a song, or a kindly word, or a friendly handclasp. Judah pled eloquently for his younger brother, Benjamin. Ruth, the Moabitess, refused to leave Naomi. Raphael painted the Sistine Madonna, Handel composed the 'Hallelujah Chorus.'"

Mr. Bryant concluded his message by saying, "An educated person is one who makes the world a bit better and more beautiful because he has lived in it."

Plaque Presented By War Council In Chapel Thursday
